TO THE RIGHT
HONOURABLE, OLIVER LORD St. IOHN, Baron of Bletſo, his very good Lord, Grace and Peace.

THE ſacred Scriptures (Right Honourable) are ſtyled by the Spirit of truth, to be all and wholly [a] righteous, [b] perfect, and [c] pure, yea moſt [d] pure, that it muſt needes ſauour of the ſpirit of Antichriſt, to iudge any part thereof (as the Papiſts doe) vnmeete for Gods people to be acquainted withall. And yet I doubt not but that on our behalfe for ſome reſpects, a kinde of preheminence may bee yeilded to ſome parcells of Scripture aboue others, without any derogation therefrom: elſe the [e] Apoſtles ſhould haue wronged Moſes and the Prophets, by preferring the Goſpel farre before them in glorie and euidence. And therefore as Paul gaue a ſpeciall charge to [f] Timothie of his parchments aboue his bookes, as beeing, though not for matter more pretious, yet for preſent vſe at leaſt, more expedient: ſo may our hearts, embracing with reuerence the whole truth of God as pure and perfect, in regard of fitneſſe to our peculiar eſtate, cleaue more nearely to ſome portion thereof then vnto others: for ſeeing herein is both milke and ſtrong meate, who will doubt, but that according to our age and growth in Chriſt we ſhould affect? But I may not here dilate of this difference of Scripture, and therefore will come directly to that portion of it, Chriſts Sermon in the Mount, which is here explaned in this Commentarie; endeauouring briefly to ſhew ſome notes of eminence in theſe three Chapters, for which they deſerue among all the Lords Worthies to haue the name of the firſt three. And to omit the Author hereof, though Ieſus Chriſt the Sonne of God, becauſe the [g] whole Scripture was giuen by inſpiration from the ſame ſpirit; as alſo his preparation hereunto (though extraordinarie) by [h] prayer to God the whole night before, which muſt needes import ſome conſequence of great importance; I will onely point at the manner of penning this Sermon, and the matter which it containeth.

For the firſt: when the beloued Apoſtle ſaith of Chriſts ſayings and doings, that many things were not written, and yet ſome things were written for the ground and confirmation of our faith, none (I hope) will denie, but theſe things which were written, were by the holy Ghoſt iudged more behoouefull for the Church, then thoſe which were omitted. Whence by good collection it will follow, that things more largely penned were alſo deemed the more expedient: for why ſhould the holy Ghoſt in penning bee more copious, vnleſſe the things propounded were (to vs at leaſt) more pretious? Now ſearch the holy records of Chriſt throughout, and ſee what Sermon is ſo fully regiſtred as this is; vnleſſe it were his [i] conſolation vttered to his Diſciples, with his prayer vnto his Father a little before his paſſion: This being his welcome to them into their Apoſtleſhip, and That, his farewell at his death.

Apoſtles, to whome it was principally intended, vpon their calling to that office, although I dare not ſay, particularly to be applied part to perſon, but rather generally the whole to euery one; vnleſſe it may bee, in the laſt parcell by the great ruine of the houſe vpon the ſands, Chriſt had a ſpeciall ayme at the fearefull fall of Iudas that betraied him. Now the firſt of theſe concerneth mans cheefe good in true happineſſe, which is here ſo plainely declared in eight ſeuerall rules, as they lead euery man hereto, and giue the child of God moſt

Now all and euery one of theſe (Right Honourable) are of that importance in the life of a Chriſtian, that none of them can be neglected of him that with comfort and ſafetie would liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus. For the better euidence whereof, I muſt re-Prou.20.9. ferre your Honour, with the Chriſtian Reader, to this godly and learned Expoſition enſuing; wherein the reuerent Author, of bleſſed memorie, hath faithfully laboured vpon ſound interpretation of the Text, to lay downe wholeſome inſtructions for the obedience of faith. My paines herein hath beene chiefly this, as neere as I could, out of mine owne and others notes, to commend vnto the publike viewe, the Authors faithfull labours in his owne meaning. Onely I haue here and there vpon good occaſion (though priuie to my ſelfe) added ſome references in the margent vnto claſſicall Popiſh writers, for ſuch opinions as are herein charged vpon them. Mine intereſt for the publiſhing of this worke, I hope I ſhall approoue vnto any gaineſayer. Now whatſoeuer it is, in all bounden dutie and ſeruice, I humbly commend it vnto your Lordſhip, and vnder your honourable protection, to the houſhold of faith. And becauſe I doubt not of your diligence in the faithfull and frequent peruſall of it, I will turne my perſwaſions towards you this way, into prayer to the Almightie for you, that by the edifying of your faith, and other graces of God herein, you may more and more abound in the fruits of righteouſneſſe, inioying here much true honour, with long and happie daies, in the peace of our Syon, and the proſperitie of your family, and in the end eternall life through Ieſus Chriſt. Maie. 1608.

AN ADVERTISEMENT TO THE CHRISTIAN Reader, concerning the Workes of M. W. PERKINS.

BEcauſe the Title of this Booke (Good Reader) importeth a conſummation and finiſhing of the long expected labours of our godly and learned Diuine, M. W. PERKINS; and yet in this Catalogue prefixed, beſide the two former Volumes, thou wanteſt ſome particulars that heretofore were promiſed, (as his Expoſition of the 32. and 110. Pſalmes, The Confutation of Caniſius Catechiſme, with other Sermons;) I thought good to acquaint thee with ſome reaſons, whereby his Executors haue beene perſwaded to make a finall ſtay and ſuppreſſing of them.

1. They were of the firſt fruit of his labours, which if he had intended for the preſſe, he would no doubt haue reuiſed long ſince, as he did ſome other things, which then he handled and publiſhed for thy good.

2. Beſide that the Church of God enioyeth the benefit of other mens labours of the ſame [a] kind (whereto our reuerend Author had due [b] reſpect,) the truth is, that the moſt materiall points contained in theſe ſuppreſſed lectures, are more largely and exactly handled in his Workes alreadie publiſhed. To inſtance in ſome: The whole argument of the 110. Pſalme, (to vſe our Authors owne diuiſion) containeth either Chriſts kingdome, or his Prieſthood: both which points thou ſhalt finde particularly handled in the golden Chaine, Chap. 18. and more at large in the Creede: His kingdome, in theſe words, [He ſitteth at the right hand of God,] and his Prieſthood, in [c] handling Chriſts Sacrifice. And for the 32. Pſalme, the points of largeſt diſcourſe, are The knowledge of remiſſion of ſinne, with aſſurance of ſaluation, vpon the firſt verſe; which is far more fully diſcuſſed, in the [d] Treatiſe of Conſcience: [e] Caſes of Conſcience, and [f] Reformed Catholike: And vpon the ſecond verſe, the point of Iuſtification by imputed righteouſneſſe, and not by workes: which to thy full content are cleared, in the [g] golden Chaine, and [h] Reformed Catholike, beſide many other places which I purpoſely omit. And for the confutation of Caniſius, what materiall point of controuerſie can be expected, which is not either in his golden Chaine, The Reformed Catholike, The Idolatrie of the laſt times, The treatiſe of Gods free grace, and mans free will, or in his Probleme? Nay, I am perſwaded it would not be any difficult thing, to note out in particular, the ſeuerall points of theſe forenamed Sermons, in ſome one place or other of his publiſhed Workes; whereby it is plaine that the ſuppreſſing of them is neither preiudiciall to the Author, or to the Reader.

Theſe things well conſidered, and withall the great quantitie and price whereto his Workes are alreadie riſen, I hope thou wilt approoue of their aduiſe that deliberately wiſhed their finall ſtay. It may bee ſome will thinke it vnmeete, that any thing of this reuerend Diuine ſhould be ſuppreſſed; But let ſuch conſider well, what the beloued Apoſtle ſaith of the bleſſed workes of our Sauiour Chriſt, to wit, that [k] many of them, yea the greateſt number of them, were omitted, and thoſe things onely written which were neceſſarie for the ground and confirmation of our faith: There needes no application, ſeeing our times are more like to ſurfet with abundance, thē ſtarue for want of printed bookes. Wherefore I hope this may ſuffice, to perſwade thoſe that haue vnprinted copies in their hāds, to vſe them for their owne priuate benefit: But if any reſt not ſatisfied herewith, I would yet intreate thus much of them, that before they put hand to worke for the preſſe, they would acquaint M. Perkins Executors with their reaſons that mooue them thereunto: from whom I doubt not, but they ſhall receiue either ſufficient ſatisfaction for their ſtay, or good leaue to proceede in their intended courſe. Which thing I do the rather aduiſe becauſe the Executors haue a generall Inhibition out of his Maieſties Court of high Commiſſion, prohibiting the publiſhing of any of his workes without their conſent. Now the God of all grace, who is Lord of the harueſt, ſend forth daily ſuch faithfull workemen, and bleſſe theſe and their labours for the beautie and wealth of Sion. Amen.

Thine in Chriſt Ieſus.

Thomas Pierſon.

A GODLY AND LEARNED EXPOSITION OF CHRISTS Sermon in the Mount.

Matth. 5.1. And when hee ſaw the multitude, hee went vp into a Mountaine: and when hee was ſet, his Diſciples came to him.

2. And hee opened his mouth, and taught them, ſaying, &c.

IN this Chapter and the two next, is contained Chriſts Sermon in the Mount, preached to his Diſciples, and others that were conuerted vnto him among the multitude. Hereof I haue choſen to intreat, becauſe it is a moſt diuine and learned Sermon; and may not vnfitly be called the Key of the whole Bible: for here Chriſt openeth the ſumme of the Old and New Teſtament.

Before we come to the parts of this Sermon, three generall points are to be ſcanned, for the clearing of the doctrine following. Firſt, the Time when this Sermon was preached; to wit, in the ſecond yeare of CHRISTS miniſterie, vpon this occaſion: when Chriſt [a] had wrought a miracle, in curing the man with the withered hand, vpon the Sabbath day, the Scribes and Phariſies went about to kill him; whereupon he departed from among them, and went into a Mount, where hee ſpent the whole night in prayer. And when it was day, hee choſe the twelue Apoſtles: which done, he came downe into a plaine place neare to the Mount, where he wrought many miracles; but becauſe the people thronged about him to touch him (for there went vertue out of him which cured them) therefore hee withdrew himſelfe out of the throng into the Mountaine againe, and there preached this Sermon vnto his Diſciples ſoone after their election; no doubt for this ende, to teach them his will, and alſo to frame & inſtruct them ſo as they might become profitable teachers vnto others.

a Luk. 6.7.

II. Point. The ſcope and drift of this large Sermon: namely, to teach his Diſciples, with all that beleeue in him, to lead a godly, an holy, and bleſſed life. Although this be euident in the text, yet the Popiſh Teachers haue depraued this ende and ſcope; ſaying, that Chriſt herein propoundeth a new Law, farre more perfect then the Law of Moſes; and alſo deliuereth new diuine counſell to his Diſciples, which was not giuen in the Law, or in the Prophets. But they erre and are deceiued: for Chriſts intent is to cleare the true meaning of Moſes and the Prophets, which was corrupted by the falſe gloſſe of the Iewiſh teachers; and not to adde any new Law or counſell thereunto, as [b] afterward will plainely appeare. Againe, there cannot be giuen vnto man a more perfect rule then Moſes Law, the ſumme and ſcope whereof is, To loue God with all the heart, with all the ſoule, and with all the ſtrength; then which there cannot be greater perfection in a creature. We therefore vpon the conſideration of this worthie ende, muſt labour to ſhew the greater care and conſcience, to learne and doe the things propounded in this Sermon.

2 Scope. Ianſen. comment. in concord. Euang. cap. 40. Bellar. l. 4. de iuſtif. c. 3.

b chap. 5.17. and 7.12.

III. Point. Whether is this Sermon the ſame, with that which is ſet downe by S. Luke, Chap. 6. v. 20. This queſtion is neceſſarie: for if they be the ſame Sermon, then will the one giue great light vnto the other. Men indeed differ in iudgement touching this point; ſome ſay they are diuers Sermons; others ſay they are one and the ſame: and that opinion is moſt likely. For firſt, they haue one beginning and one matter, the ſame order of preaching, and the ſame concluſion, as the comparing of them together will plainely declare. Secondly, this Sermon recorded by them both, was made vpon the election of Chriſts twelue Apoſtles, a little after the curing of the man with the withered hand. This is plaine in S. Luke, and may well be gathered from the doctrine of this Sermon recorded by [c] Matthew, wherein Chriſt inſtructeth his Apoſtles particularly in their office and calling: which hee would not haue done, if he had not formerly called them thereunto. If it be ſaid, that S. Matthew recordeth their election afterward in the 10.

c chap. 5. v. 13, 14, 15, 16.

Chap. Anſ. In the writings of the Euangeliſts there be certaine Anticipations; that is, ſome things are ſet downe after, which were done before, and ſome things are ſet downe before, which were done after, as might eaſily be proued by ſundry examples, and in the point in hand is euident: for the election of the Apoſtles is ſet downe by S. Matthew in his tenth chap. vpon occaſion of his recording their commiſſion to preach: ſo that this circumſtance of the Apoſtles election, doth notably prooue theſe Sermons to be one, S. Matthew ſetting downe the ſame more largely, and Luke more briefly.

Their Reaſons who hold them to be two diſtinct Sermons, are of no moment. They ſay, that the Sermon recorded by S. Luke was made on the plaine; this of Matthew in the Mountaine: that of Luke was made by Chriſt ſtanding; this of Matthew as he ſat downe. Anſw. But Luke ſaith not, that it was made by Chriſt in a plaine, or ſtanding: onely this he ſaith, that Chriſt comming from the Mountaine ſtood in a plaine place, and there wrought certaine miracles, and then preached: now all this might be done, and yet Chriſt might preach this Sermon in the Mount ſitting, as S. Matthew ſaith: for the order of this ſtorie is this. Chriſt beeing maligned of the Iewes, went into a Mount, and there praied; after long prayer, he choſe the twelue Apoſtles, and then came downe into a plaine and wrought Miracles; but by reaſon of the throng which preſſed about him to touch him, he went into the mountaine againe, and there preached this Sermon to his Apoſtles, and others that followed him.

Parts of this Sermon.

Thus much in generall. Now we come to the Sermon it ſelfe: which containeth three parts. A Preface; the Matter of the Sermon; and the Concluſion.

1. Preface.

1. Circumſtance: Author.

The Preface or preparation is contained in the two firſt verſes of this Chapter, wherein are ſet downe diuers circumſtances pertaining to the Sermon. As firſt and principally, the Author of it, to wit, IESVS CHRIST the Redeemer and Mediatour of mankinde, who in the making of this Sermon, muſt be conſidered two waies, euen as hee is a Prophet: firſt, as the Minister of Circumciſion for the truth of God, as the Apoſtle [d] ſpeaketh: whereby thus much is ſignified, that Ieſus Chriſt as hee was man, borne among the Iewes, was vnto them a Prophet and miniſter in his owne perſon, and with his owne mouth was to teach them the will of his Father: which thing was requiſite for the accompliſhing of Gods word, who had promiſed before to his auncient people by Moſes, that hee would raiſe vp vnto them a Prophet like vnto Moſes, [e] whome they ſhould heare in all things that hee ſhould ſpeake vnto them: which propheſie was verified in this Sermon: wherein he manifeſted himſelfe to be the Miniſter of Circumciſion vnto them. Secondly, here we muſt conſider Chriſt as a A Prophet like vnto Elijah, and Eliſha, who were as Fathers and Maſters to the reſt of the Prophets: for herein he doth not onely teach beleeuers among the multitude, but his owne Diſciples alſo, who were afterward to make Diſciples vnto Chriſt, and to build vp further them that did beleeue: yea, this inſtruction of his Diſciples, is the chiefe ſcope of this Sermon.

2. Circumſtance: Place.

Secondly, here is noted the Place where this Sermon was made, to wit, a Mountaine in Galile: He went vp into a Mountaine. This place he choſe for two cauſes: Firſt, to avoide the throng that preſſed about him, while he ſtood on the plaine, to ſee him and to touch him, B becauſe [f] there went vertue out of him. Secondly, that he might haue a fit place, both for himſelfe to ſit and teach, and for his Diſciples and the multitude attentiuely and orderly to heare and learne that wholſome doctrine which he deliuered.

1 The vſes.

In this choice of the place, Firſt, he ſheweth great care and wiſdome to maintaine outward order in the diſpenſation of his word: whereby he teacheth vs, that in all holy miniſtrations, outward order is to be kept, and conuenient places choſen, where the word of God may be reuerently and profitably both ſpoken and heard. Secondly, herein he ſheweth ſpeciall care

C to diſpence his Fathers will when occaſion was offered; yea, hee declareth his diligence herein; ſo as it is true, it was [g] meate and drinke vnto him, thus by teaching the people to doe his Fathers will. And this his practiſe muſt be a preſident and example to all Gods Miniſters. They muſt not preach by conſtraint, but of a willing minde; yea, they muſt reioyce and be glad when occaſion is offered, that they may diſpenſe the will of God vnto his people. This Paul meant in his ſtraite charge to Timothie, that [h] hee ſhould be inſtant, and teach in ſeaſon, and out of ſeaſon: that is, take all occaſions to teach the word; following the example of Chriſt, who ſtaied not til he came to Ieruſalem, or to ſome Synagogue, but hauing good occaſion offered, taught the multitude in this D Mountaine.

h 2.Tim.4.1,2.

3. Circumſtance: Geſture.

Thirdly, here is noted that bodily geſture, which Chriſt vſeth in this Sermon; hee taught them, not ſtanding, but ſitting; when he was ſet: ſo when he preached in Nazaret, [i] hee ſtoode vp and read his text, and then ſat downe, and preached vnto them. And when his father and mother ſought him at the feaſt, [k] they found him in the Temple (ſitting) among the Doctors, & asking them queſtions: and being apprehended, he ſaid to the multitude, [l] I ſate daily with you in the temple teaching. Now Chriſt vſed to preach ſitting, becauſe it was the manner and cuſtome of that Church ſo to doe: The Scribes and Phariſes (ſaith [m] Chriſt) ſit in Moſes chaire: where he noteth their geſture in teaching and expounding the Law. Whereby we are taught to be carefull in obſeruing all ſeemely, commendable, mendable, and conuenient geſtures, which are vſed in that Church, whereof we are members. If any ſhall aske, whether we may not preach ſitting, as Chriſt did? I anſwer: if it were the cuſtome of our Church, we might lawfully do it; for theſe geſtures be indifferent in themſelues: but we doe it not, becauſe our cuſtome is otherwiſe. And ſo we may ſay of preaching with the head couered, which is the manner vſed by the Miniſters of the French Churches; but we vſe it not, because we haue no ſuch cuſtome in our Church.

4. Circumſtance: Hearers.

Fourthly, here are noted the parties whom Chriſt taught, namely his Diſciples; for though he ſpake in the audience of the multitude, yet herein he chiefly intended to inſtruct his diſciples: that is, all thoſe whom he had conuerted by his former Miniſterie, & among them principally the twelue Apoſtles, whom hee had newely choſen to become teachers of others. This circumſtance muſt be well obſerued, for as it helpeth to cleare ſome points in the doctrin following; ſo it ſerueth notably, to proue and iuſtifie the Schooles of the Prophets, wherein ſome teach, & others heare and learn, for this ende, to furniſh themſelues with gifts, that afterward they may become good and able teachers in Gods Church: for what is this but to follow the example of Chriſt, who in this place deliuereth doctrine and inſtruction to his twelue Apoſtles, the better to inable them to the faithfull diſcharge of their holy Miniſterie.

5. Circumſtance. Chriſts manner of ſpeaking.

Laſtly, in this Preface is noted Chriſts manner of ſpeaking, in theſe words: And hee opened his mouth and taught them, ſaying: which ſome doe take to ſignifie nothing elſe, but a full and euident kind of ſpeach; as if the holy Ghoſt had ſaid, hee ſpake with his mouth: as we vſe to ſay in Engliſh, I heard it with mine eares. But this phraſe hath a further meaning, for as Paul willing the Epheſians, [n] to pray to God for him that a doore of vtterance may be giuen him, that hee might open his mouth boldly to publiſh the ſecrets of the Goſpel, doth there make that opening of his mouth, a more ſpeciall kind of ſpeaking, and of a farre more waightie matter, then his ordinary communication; and as Elihu ſaying, [o] I will open my lippes, and will anſwer, doth thereby import, that his ſpeech ſhould be vpon due conſideration, and ſound knowledge: ſo the Euangeliſt ſaying, Chriſt opened his mouth, doth thereby meane, that vpon ſerious meditation vpon ſundry points of heauenly doctrine, hee began to ſpeake with libertie & authority, and to deliuer vnto them deepe matter of waight and great importance: that this is the meaning, may appeare by the concluſion of this Sermon, where it is ſaid, [p] the people wondred at his doctrine, becauſe hee taught as one hauing authoritie.

6 The vſes. 1.

Doth Chriſt here open his mouth, and vtter waightie points of doctrine in this Sermon? then it ſtandeth all Churches and people in hand, to open their eares, and apply their hearts to heare, learne, receiue, beleeue, and obey the ſame: this is that Prophet foretold by Moſes, who muſt bee heard [q] in all things that hee ſhall ſpeake: yea, whoſoeuer will not heare his voice, muſt be cut off from among Gods people: and great reaſon, for if the word ſpoken by Angells ſtood ſteadfaſt, and euery tranſgreſſion receiued a iuſt recompence of reward; [r] how ſhall wee eſcape, if we neglect ſo great ſaluation preached vnto vs by Chriſt?

2. Vſe.

Secondly, hereby all Gods Miniſters are taught, by all godly diligence to ſeeke to furniſh themſelues for their holy Miniſterie, that they may bring ſerious and waightie matter vnto Gods people, and deliuer the ſame with that conuenient boldneſſe and authority, which beſeemeth Gods word.

3. Vſe.

Thirdly, in Chriſts addreſſing of himſelfe to ſpeak, all perſons muſt learne to mak conſcience both of ſilence and of ſpeach: this we ſhall doe, if by ſilence we cloſe vp our lippes, till we haue iuſt matter to ſpeake of, tending to the glorie of God, or the good of our brethren: and beeing ſo prepared, vpon fit occaſion, and in due time, we may vtter our minde: we muſt remember that Chriſt left himſelfe an example, that we ſhould follow his ſteppes: and alſo conſider, that of euery idle word that wee ſhall ſpeake, wee muſt render account vnto God. If this were knowne and beleeued, there would not be ſo many ſinnes in words, by curſing, ſwearing, vaine and idle ſpeaking, as there be.

The matter of Chriſts Sermon.

Thus much of the Preface. Now we come to the matter of this Sermon, beginning at the third verſe of this Chapter, and ſo continuing to the 28. verſe of the 7. Chapter. And it may be diuided into 12. heads or places of doctrine:

1. Part of happineſſe.

The firſt whereof, concerneth true happineſſe or bleſſedneſſe: from the 2. verſe of this Chapter, to the 13. wherein are propounded ſundry rules directing men to attaine thereunto. The ſcope of them all muſt be conſidered, which in generall is this: Our Sauiour Chriſt had now preached two yeares among the people, and thereby had wonne many to become his Diſciples; and among the reſt, his 12. Apoſtles: to all whom hee promiſed happineſſe and life euerlaſting, if they would continue in the faith and obedience of his word. Now though they beleeued in him, yet they ſtill remained in the ſame ſtate for outward things, and became more ſubiect to outward miſeries then before; ſo as if they iudged of happineſſe by their preſent outward eſtate, they might eaſily ſuſpect the truth of Chriſts doctrine, and think he had deceiued them, becauſe he promiſed them happineſſe, and yet for outward things, their caſe was farre worſe, then before they knew him. This our Sauiour Chriſt conſidering, doth here goe about to remooue this falſe conceit out of their minds; and for this purpoſe deliuereth this doctrine vnto them, in the firſt generall head of his Sermon; that true happineſſe before God, is euer ioyned, yea couered ma- many times, with the croſſe in this world. Whereby hee ſtrikes at the roote of their carnall conceit, who placed true happineſſe in outward things, and looked for outward peace and proſperitie vpon the receiuing of the Goſpel.

1 The vſe.

As this is the ſcope of the doctrine following, ſo it ſtands vs in hand to learne the ſame, and to finde experience hereof in our owne hearts, that true comfort and felicity is accompanied with manifold miſeries in this life. Indeede carnall wiſdome deemeth them happie that enioy outward peace, wealth, & pleaſure: but this conceit muſt be remooued, and Chriſts doctrine embraced, who ioyneth true happineſſe with the croſſe. 2 Secondly, this ſerueth to teach vs patience in affliction; for it is Gods will to temper happines and the croſſe together: now this puts life into an afflicted ſoule, to think that Chriſt will haue his felicitie inioyed and felt in outward miſerie. Thus much of this head of doctrine in generall, now we come to the branches thereof.

v.3. Bleſſed are the poore in ſpirit: for theirs is the kingdome of heauen.

1. Rule of happineſſe.

Here is Chriſts firſt Rule concerning happineſſe; wherein obſerue two points: firſt, the parties bleſſed, the poore in ſpirit: ſecondly, wherein this bleſſedneſſe conſiſts, for theirs is the kingdome of heauen. Before we come to theſe parts ſeuerally, note in a word, the forme of ſpeach here vſed; they that are ledde by humane reaſon will rather ſay, bleſſed are the rich, for theirs are the kingdomes of the world: But Chriſt here ſpeaks the flat contrary; ſaying, bleſſed are the poore, for theirs is the kingdome of heauen, which is infinitely better then all the kingdomes of the world: whereby we may ſee that the wiſdome of this world is fooliſhneſſe with God, and the ordinarie conceit of man, flat oppoſite to the ſauing doctrine taught by Chriſt.

1. Part. Πτωχοὶ.

Bleſſed are the poore in ſpirit. The word tranſlated poore, doth properly ſignifie a begger, one that hath no outward neceſſaries, but by gift from others: but here it is more largely taken, not onely betokening thoſe that want outward riches, (for [f] S. Luke oppoſeth theſe poore to the rich in this world) but alſo thoſe that are any way miſerable, wanting inward or outward comfort: and ſuch an one was Lazarus, [g] that lay begging at Dives gates. What is meant by poore in ſpirit, is plainely expounded Iſa.66. 2. where the Lord ſaith, I will looke to him that is poore, and of a contrite ſpirit, and that trembleth at my words. Chriſts meaning then is this, that thoſe poore are bleſſed, who by meanes of their diſtreſſe, through want of outward comforts, are brought to ſee their ſinnes, and their miſeries thereby; ſo as finding no goodneſſe in their hearts, they deſpaire in themſelues, and flie wholly to the mercy of God in Chriſt, for grace and comfort, as Lazarus did to Dives gates for outward releefe.

[g] Luk.16.20.21.

Vſe. 1. Triall of our pouertie.

Seeing Chriſt doth thus ſet out the perſon that is truely bleſſed, let vs ſee whether we be in the number of theſe poore ones. Indeed we haue many poore among vs, ſome that by exceſſe and ryot haue ſpent their ſubſtance, and others that through idleneſſe increaſe their want; as the wandring beggers, a ſinnefull and diſordered people, who ioyne themſelues to no Church: but none of theſe can by their pouertie make iuſt claime to true felicitie. The bleſſed poore, are poore in ſpirit, and this pouertie we muſt finde in our hearts, if we would knowe our ſelues to bee truely happie: but after triall, this will be found much wanting: for firſt, if men liue outwardly ciuill, and keep themſelues from groſſe ſinnes, this thought of pride takes place in their hearts, that they are righteous, and they perſwade themſelues with the [u] young man in the Goſpel, that they can keepe Gods commaundements. Secondly, let worldly wants befall men, in body, goods, or name, and they are grieued; yea, their ſoules are full of ſorrow: but for ſpirituall wants, as blindneſſe of minde, hardneſſe of heart, vnbeliefe, and diſobedience, their hearts are neuer touched. Now whence comes this, but from that pride of heart, whereby they bleſſe themſelues in their eſtate, and thinke all is well with them in reſpect of their ſoules? ſo that true it is, pouertie of ſpirit is hard to be found. Wee therefore muſt ſearch our ſelues, and labour to feele our ſpirituall wants; and looke how Lazarus lay for his bodie, at Dives gates; ſo muſt we lie at Gods mercie gate in Chriſt, for our ſoules, abandoning this pride of heart, and acknowledging that there is no goodneſſe in vs of our ſelues; for the ſtraite gate of heauen cannot receiue a ſwelling heart that is puffed vp with prid. And to induce vs vnto this good dutie, let vs conſider the gratious promiſes made to them that be poore in ſpirit; [x] they are called Gods poore: [y] hee thinketh on them: though heauen be Gods throne, and the earth his footſtoole, yet will hee [z] looke to him that is poore and of a contrite ſpirit: yea, the Lord will [a] dwell with him that is of a contrite and broken heart: [b] Chriſt came to preach the glad tidings of the Goſpel to the poore: yea, [c] the Lord filleth the hungrie (that is, the poore and hungrie ſoule) with good things, but the rich hee ſends emptie away. Let theſe and many ſuch fauours with God, which they enioy, prouoke vs to become poore in ſpirit.

2. Poore mens dutie.

Secondly, are they bleſſed that be poore in ſpirit? then here all poore and wretched perſons in the world, may learne to make good vſe of their wants and diſtreſſes; they muſt conſider them as the hand of God vpon them, and thereby be ledde to the viewe of their ſinnes: and by the conſideration of their ſinnes, be brought to ſee their miſerie in themſelues, the true ground of this ſpirituall pouertie. Now, when they are once poore in ſpirit, they are in a bleſſed ſtate in the iudgement of Chriſt. If a man bleed dangerouſly at the noſe, the beſt way to ſaue his life, is to to let him blood elſewhere, and ſo turne the courſe of the blood another way: euen ſo, when a man is oppreſſed with worldly calamities, hee cannot finde any comfort in them, for in themſelues they are Gods curſes; yet if thereby he can be brought to ſee his ſpirituall pouertie, then of curſes they become bleſſings vnto him: and therefore when we are in any diſtreſſe, we muſt not onely fixe our eies vpon the outward croſſe, but by meanes of that, labour to ſee the pouertie of our ſoules; and ſo will the croſſe lead vs to happineſſe.

3. Rich mens dutie.

Thirdly, they that abound with worldly wealth, muſt hereby learne to become poore if they will be ſaued: Poore I ſay, not in goods, but in ſpirit: this indeede is hard to fleſh and blood, for naturally euery rich man bleſſeth himſelfe in his outward eſtate, & perſwads himſelfe that God loues him, becauſe he giues him wealth: but ſuch conceits muſt hee ſtriue againſt, and learne of God to reioyce in this, that he is made lowe: Iam. 1. 10.

4. Againſt the vowe of pouertie. Bellarm. de Monach. l. 2. cap. 20.

Fourthly, on this ſaying of Chriſt, that the poore are bleſſed, the Popiſh teachers (obſeruing the word tranſlated poore, to betoken outward pouertie) goe about to builde their vowe of voluntarie pouertie, whereby men renouncing their wealth and poſſeſſions of this world, doe betake themſelues to ſome Monaſterie, there to liue a poore and ſolitarie life. But their voluntarie pouertie wil not agree with this text; for Chriſts poore here pronounced bleſſed, are ſuch, as by reaſon of their pouertie, are miſerable and wretched, wanting outward comforts, as we ſhewed out of Luke, [d] where Chriſt oppoſeth them to the rich, who abound with all worldly delights: but to vndergoe the Popiſh vow of voluntarie pouerty, is no eſtate of miſerie or diſtreſſe; for who do liue in greater eaſe, or enioy more freedome from the croſſes and vexations of this life, then their begging Friers? Againe, if their vowed pouertie had any ground in this text, then Chriſt ſhould pronounce ſuch poore bleſſed, as made themſelues poore; but that he doth not, for then in the next verſe he ſhould pronounce ſuch mourners bleſſed, as voluntarily cauſe themſelues to mourne: for that verſe dependeth on this, as a more full explanation of this firſt rule: But no man will ſay that they that mourne without a cauſe, are there called bleſſed; and therefore Popiſh vowed pouertie hath no ground on this place. And thus much of the perſons.

Kingdom of heauen.

II. Point. Wherein the bleſſedneſſe of theſe poore conſiſts; namely, in hauing a right to the kingdome of heauen, For theirs is the kingdome of heauen. By kingdome of heauen (for the better conceiuing of this bleſſedneſſe) we muſt vnderſtand a ſtate or condition of man, whereby he is in gods fauour, and hath fellowſhip with God. The truth of this deſcription is euident by the tenour of the new Teſtament. Now this eſtate of man is called a Kingdome, becauſe herein God rules as King, and man obeyes as Gods ſubiect: for no man can be in Gods fauour, nor enioy his fellowſhip, vnleſſe God be his king, ruling in his heart by his word and ſpirit, and he Gods ſubiect reſigning himſelfe to be ruled by him: for this happie eſtate conſiſts in Gods gracious ruling of man, and mans holy ſubiection vnto God. Indeed few do ſee any great happineſſe in this eſtate, but the truth is, mans whole felicitie ſtands herein; Rom. 14. 17. The kingdome of God is not meate and drinke, but righteouſneſſe, peace, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt. Here the Apoſtle teacheth vs three things: namely, that when Gods ſpirit rules in a mans heart, then firſt, hee is iuſtified, there is righteouſneſſe: ſecondly, he hath peace with God, euen that peace of conſcience which paſſeth all vnderſtanding: thirdly, the ioy of the H. Ghoſt, which is an vnſpeakable comfort, paſſing al worldly ioy whatſoeuer. And theſe three doe notably ſet out the ſtate of an happie man: which will yet more plainely appeare by their contraries in Iudas, who being a wretched ſinner, vnrighteouſly betraied his maſter, and thereupon fell into the miſerie of a guiltie accuſing conſcience, which was the cauſe of his deſperate death, and alſo that his bodie burſt aſunder, and his bowels guſhed out: Now if an euill conſcience be ſo fearefull, then how bleſſed an eſtate is the peace and ioy of a good conſcience? which a man then hath, when God by his word and ſpirit ruleth in his heart. Againe, this eſtate is called the kingdome of heauen, becauſe that man in whom Chriſt ruleth by his word and ſpirit, is alreadie himſelfe in heauen, though in bodie he be yet on earth: for heauen is like a citie with two gates, through both which a man muſt paſſe, before he obtaine the full ioyes thereof: now ſo ſoone as God by his word and ſpirit rules in any mans heart, hee is alreadie entred the ſtate of grace, which is the firſt gate; the other remaines to be paſſed through at the time of death, which is the gate of glorie, and then he is in full poſſeſſion.

The vſe. 1.

The error of the world touching happines.

Doth true happineſſe conſiſt in this eſtate, where Chriſt ruleth and man obeyes? then here behold the errour of all Philoſophers and wiſe men of this world touching happineſſe: for ſome haue placed it in pleaſure, ſome in wealth, and others in ciuill vertues, and ſome in all theſe. But the truth is, it ſtands in none of theſe. A naturall man may haue all theſe, and yet be condemned: for the ciuill vertues of the heathen, were in them but glorious ſinnes. Our Sauiour Chriſt hath here reuealed more vnto vs, then all the wiſe men of the world did euer know: & hereby we haue iuſt occaſion to

A magnifie the bookes of Scripture, farre aboue all humane writings, becauſe they doe fully ſet out vnto vs the nature and eſtate of true felicitie, which no humane worke could euer doe: we muſt therefore account of them, not as the word of man, but of the euerliving God: yea, this muſt perſwade vs to maintaine the bookes of Scripture againſt all deuilliſh Atheiſts, that denie the ſame to be the word of God.

2 Pray for Gods kingdome.

Secondly, hereby we are taught, from the bottome of our hearts, to make that petition for our ſelues, which Chriſt teacheth in his holy prayer; namely, that hee would let his kingdome come: that is, not ſuffer ſinne, Satan, or the world to raigne in vs, but by his word and ſpirit to rule in our hearts, giuing vs grace to B be guided thereby in all our waies. We affect nothing more then happines, and therefore we muſt oftentimes moſt ſeriouſly make this requeſt to God, preferring this eſtate with God, before all pleaſures and happines in this world, and vſe all good meanes to feele in our hearts the power of Chriſts kingdome.

3 Heare Gods word.

Thirdly, this ſhould mooue vs to heare Gods word with all feare and reuerence; for by this meanes, the kingdome of Chriſt is erected in vs: when the word of Chriſt takes place in our hearts by faith, and brings forth in our liues the fruits of righteouſneſſe, and true repentance, then may we truely ſay, the kingdome of heauen is in vs.

4 Conſolation to the poore

C Laſtly, Chriſt aſcribing this happie title of his heauenly kingdome to them that be poore, and of a contrite heart, doth herein miniſter a ſoueraigne remedie againſt all temptations, from outward pouertie and diſtreſſe: Doubtleſſe pouertie is a grieuous croſſe, not onely in regard of the want of bodily comforts; but eſpecially becauſe of that contempt and reproach, which in this world doth hang vpon it: whereupon many doe eſteeme their pouerty, as a ſigne of Gods wrath againſt them, and thereby take occaſion to deſpaire, thinking the kingdome of darkeneſſe belongeth vnto them. But here conſider you poore, this ſentence of Chriſt, where hee plainely teacheth, D that if a man in outward diſtreſſe, can be brought to feele his ſpirituall pouertie, and the wretchedneſſe of his ſoule, by reaſon of his ſinnes; then he is ſo farre from hauing iuſt cauſe to deſpaire of Gods fauour, by reaſon of his pouertie, that on the contrarie, he may gather to his ſoule a moſt comfortable aſſurance, from the mouth of him that cãnot lie, that the kingdome of heauen belongs vnto him.

V. 4. Bleſſed are they that mourne: for they ſhall be comforted.

2. Rule.

Here is Chriſts ſecond rule touching bleſſedneſſe: wherein conſider two points; firſt, the parties who are bleſſed, they that mourne: A ſecondly, wherein their bleſſedneſſe conſiſts, namely, in receiuing comfort. For the firſt: by mourners, we muſt not vnderſtand euery one that is any way grieued, but ſuch as haue iuſt and waightie cauſes of griefe, and doe therefore mourne: for the words import an exceeding meaſure of griefe, ſuch as is expreſſed by crying and weeping, as is plaine by Saint Luke, who thus relateth Chriſts ſaying; bleſſed are yee that now weepe. And yet euery one is not bleſſed, that mourneth vnder grieuous diſtres; for Caine, Saul, Achitophel, and Iudas were all deepely affected in ſoule with their moſt woefull eſtates, though farre from this bleſſednes. This rule then, muſt thus be vnderſtood; that they are bleſſed, who with their mourning B for waightie cauſes of griefe, doe withall mourne for their ſinnes: for ſo was the former Rule to be vnderſtood, of thoſe that with the ſenſe of their outward diſtreſſe, had adioyned an inward feeling of their ſpirituall wants: and this verſe is but a more full explication thereof, as if he ſhould haue ſaid, they are bleſſed that are poore in ſpirit: Yea, put caſe a man be diſtreſſed for moſt waightie cauſes of griefe, ſo as hee howle and crie vnder the burthen of them: yet if withall, he can vnfainedly mourne and waile in heart for his ſinnes, notwithſtanding all his pouertie and diſtreſſe, he is truely bleſſed.

Luk 6 21. κλαίοντες.

Vſes. Conſolations. 1

This bleſſed ſentence vpon them that mourne, ſerues ſundry waies for a ſoueraigne C ſalue to the conſcience of a Chriſtian. As firſt; put the caſe a man were diſtreſſed with grieuous calamities, and withall were ouertaken with ſome hainous ſinne, whereupon not onely his body is afflicted, but his conſcience alſo wounded, and ſo he is caſt into the gulfe of deſperation: yea ſay further, that by reaſon of the terrour of his conſcience, his fleſh were withered, and his marrowe conſumed in his bones; were not this a cauſe of exceeding mourning? yet loe, our moſt bleſſed Phyſition Chriſt Ieſus, hath made a plaiſter for his ſore; for if this man of diſtreſſes, can withall truely mourne for offending God through his tranſgreſſions, he is vndoubtedly bleſſed; for Chriſt D hath ſaid it, whoſe word ſhall neuer faile though heauen and earth come to nothing. A bleſſed text, which beeing well applied, will not onely ſupport the heart in great diſtreſſe; but recouer the conſcience from vnder deepe deſpaire. 2 Secondly, put caſe a man were grieuouſly ſick, and that he felt the very pangs of death without all eaſe to ſeaze vpon him, ſo as both ſpeach and ſight, with all outward comforts began to faile him; this ſtate were lamentable: yet if in his ſoule hee can truely mourne for his offences, euen in this extremity, he is bleſſed. 3 Thirdly, put caſe a man were taken of his enemies, and his wife and children ſlaine before his face, hauing their braines daſhed out vpon the ſtones, afterward himſelfe put to a moſt woefull racke and torment: this were an eſtate more woefull then death: yet

herein

A herein a man muſt not iudge himſelfe a caſt-a-way, but with mourning for this miſerie, he muſt labour to be ſorrowfull for his ſinnes, and then he neede not feare what fleſh can doe vnto him; for he is bleſſed. Chriſts word muſt ſtand, let thy diſtreſſe be what it will, if vnder it thou mourne for thy ſinnes, bleſſed art thou. We cannot conceiue while we enioy peace, of the worth of this rule in the euill day: neither doe we know how neere the time is, wherein we ſhall haue neede thereof; and therefore we muſt now learne this neuer to be forgotten, to ſeaſon all other mourning with godly ſorrowe for our ſinnes.

B II. Point. Wherein this bleſſedneſſe conſiſts; namely, in that their mourning ſhall haue an ende, and be turned into true comfort. That this is true happines will appeare by the contrarie: for the woe and ſorrowe that is here begunne, and continued in the world to come, is the puniſhment of the damned ſpirits, and the portion of the Reprobate, which is endles miſerie: and therefore vnto them that mourne, it is true happines, that they ſhall receiue comfort.

Foure waies of comfort.

This promiſe of Comfort is accōpliſhed foure waies. 1 Firſt, when God tempers and delaies the ſorrowes and afflictions of them that mourne, according to the meaſure of their ſtrength: 1. Cor. 10. 13. God is faithfull, and will not ſuffer you to bee tempted aboue that you are able to beare. This was promiſed to Dauid and his ſeede, that if they did ſinne, he would correct C them with the rodde of men: but not take his mercie quite from them, 2. Sam. 7. 14. 2 Secondly, when God remooues the griefe with the cauſes thereof: thus hee comforted Manaſſes, who for his abhominable Idolatries and witchcrafts, was carried captiue into Babylon, and there laid in priſon, fettered in chaines of yron; yet when he did mourne vnder that affliction, and withall humbled himſelfe vnto God for his ſinnes, the Lord comforted him, by bringing him out of this captiuitie and priſon, to Ieruſalem into his owne kingdome. 2.Chr.33.13. 3 Thirdly, when God giues inward comfort to the heart and conſcience, by his word and ſpirit. In this caſe Paul ſaith, we reioyce in afflictions, knowing that the loue of God D is ſhedde abroad in our hearts by the holy Ghoſt, which is giuen vnto vs: Rom.5.3. yea, when he was exceedingly afflicted aboue his ſtrength, ſo as he receiued the ſentence of death in himſelfe, hauing no hope of life, yet euen then he profeſſeth, that as the ſufferings of Chriſt abounded toward him, ſo his conſolations through Chriſt abounded in him. 2.Cor.1.8. with v.4,5. 4 Fourthly, when God by death puts an end to all their miſeries, and brings their ſoules to eternall life. Thus was Lazarus comforted, as Abraham ſaith vnto Diues, Luk. 16. 25. and thus doth Chriſt comfort the Theefe vpon the croſſe (who with his bodily torment for his leud life, was vndoubtedly touched in conſcience for his ſinnes, and therefore deſires Chriſt to remember him when he came into his kingdome) by telling him, that that day he ſhould be with him in Paradiſe. Luk.23.43.

Vſe. 1

Here then we haue a notable remedie againſt the immoderate feare of death, whether naturall or violent, and of any other iudgement of God: for when death is ſelfe, or any other miſerie whatſoeuer, ſhall befall vs, if we can therewith bewaile our tranſgreſſions, we need not feare, ſtill holding faſt this promiſe by faith in our hearts, that we ſhall be comforted. 2 Secondly, this promiſe well obſerued, may teach vs to avoide the perill of this falſe conceit; That true faith doth alwaies miniſter preſent comfort. Many doe herewith perplexe themſelues, meaſuring their eſtate towards God, by that which they feele in themſelues, ſo as if in time of trouble they find not preſent comfort, they iudge themſelues voide of faith, and caſt out of Gods fauour: but herein they greatly wrong themſelues; for though the apprehenſion of comfort from God in diſtreſſe, be a fruit and worke of faith, yet a man may haue true faith, that wants this ſenſe and feeling of preſent comfort. Doubtleſſe none are bleſſed that want faith, yet many are bleſſed that want feeling: for here it is ſaide, they that mourne for ſinne are now bleſſed: and yet it is not ſaid, they are now comforted, but they ſhall be comforted; meaning afterward, in Gods good time.

verſ. 5. Bleſſed are the meeke: for they ſhall inherit the earth.

This is the Third rule of Chriſt touching happineſſe: which as the former, containeth two parts: firſt, the parties bleſſed: ſecondly, wherein this bleſſedneſſe conſiſts. For the firſt: The parties bleſſed, be the meeke. That wee may know aright who be meeke, I will ſomewhat lay open the nature of meekeneſſe, and briefly handle theſe fowre points: firſt, what Meekeneſſe is: ſecondly, what be the fruits thereof: thirdly, wherein it muſt bee ſhewed: fourthly, the cauſe and ground thereof.

Foure points touching meeknes.

What meeknes is.

I. Point. Meekenes is a gift of Gods ſpirit, whereby a man doth moderate his affection of anger, and bridle in himſelfe impatience, hatred, and deſire of reuenge.

The fruit of it.

II. Point. The fruits of meekeneſſe are principally two: 1 Firſt, it makes a man with a quiet and patient heart, to beare Gods iudgements: which is a worthy grace of God, and the greateſt fruit of meekeneſſe. Leuit. 10. 3. when Aarons two ſonnes Nadab and Abihu were burned with fire from heauen, which was a grieuous iudgement, he went to Moſes to know the cauſe thereof, who told him, that God would be glorified in all that came neere him; which when Aaron heard, hee helde his peace, and was not mooued with grudging or impatience: So Dauid being in great diſtreſſe through the hand of God vpon him, a Psal. 39. 9.

doth notably ſhewe forth this grace, ſaying, [a] I was dumbe, and opened not my mouth, becauſe Lord thou diddeſt it. Secondly, meekeneſſe cauſeth one with a quiet minde to beare the iniuries men doe vnto him: yea, to forgiue and forget them, and to requite good for euill, referring all reuenge to God that iudgeth righteouſly. When [b] Dauids enemies laid ſnares for his life, vttered ſorrowes, and imagined deceit againſt him continually; yet by this vertue hee ſuffred all patiently, beeing as a deafe man that heareth not, and as the dumbe which openeth not his mouth: ſo farre was he from priuate reuenge. And our Sauiour Chriſt ſets forth himſelfe a patterne of this vertue; ſaying, [c] Learne of me, that I am meeke and lowly in heart: herein he left himſelfe an example that we ſhould follow his ſteppes, [d] who when he was reuiled, he reuiled not againe; when he was buffeted, hee threatened not; but referred all to the iudgement of him that iudgeth righteouſly: yea, [e] he prayed for them that crucified him. So did Stephen, Act. 7. 60. Lord, lay not this ſinne to their charge. So Zachariah the ſonne of Iehoiada, beeing ſtoned, ſaide onely this: The Lord will ſee and require it at your hands. 2. Chron. 24. 22.

c Math. 11. 29.

d 1. Pet. 2. 23.

e Luk. 23. 34.

Wherein meekneſſe muſt be ſhewed.

f Exod. 32. 19. 27.

III. Point. Wherein muſt this meekeneſſe be ſhewed? Anſw. Not in the matters of God, when his glorie is impeached: for therein we muſt haue zeale as hote as fire: but in the wrongs and iniuries that concerne our ſelues. Moſes was the meekeſt man vpon the earth in his time, Numb. 12. 3. and yet when the Iſraelites had made a golden calfe, in zeale to Gods glorie, [f] he brake the two tables of ſtone; & put to the ſword that ſame day, three thouſand men, of them who had ſo diſhonoured God. Dauid also that held his tongue at his owne wrongs, did conſume away with zeale againſt his enemies that forgat Gods word, Pſal. 119. 139. And our Sauiour Chriſt, who as a lambe before the ſhearer opened not his mouth for the wrongs done vnto himſelfe; did yet in reſcue of his fathers glorie, make a whippe of cordes, and driue the buyers out of the Temple, who made his Fathers houſe a denne of theeues: Matth. 21. 12.

Ground of meeknes.

IV. Point. The cauſe and ground of this meekeneſſe, is affliction and pouertie of ſpirit, as the order of theſe rules declareth, where it is placed after pouertie of ſpirit, and mourning: and therefore, Pſal. 37. 11. whence theſe words are borrowed, the meeke perſon is called by a name that ſignifieth one afflicted, to teach vs, that hee that is meeke indeede, is one who by affliction and diſtreſſe, hath beene brought to mourne for his offences: for hardly can he bee meeke and patient in ſpirit, that hath not been acquainted with the croſſe, Lamen. 3. 27, 28, 29. The Church commendeth this bearing of the croſſe in youth, becauſe it maketh a man to ſit quietly alone, to put his mouth into the duſt, & to giue his cheeke vnto the ſmiter.

The vſe.

Doth bleſſedneſſe belong to meeke perſons?

Moderation of affections.

hereby then wee are admoniſhed to labour for the moderation of all our affections, eſpecially of anger hatred, and reuenge; and to beware of all hinderances to this bleſſed vertue, as choller, haſtineſſe, grudging, impatience vnder wrongs, with all rayling, reuiling, chiding and brawling, and all ſuch threatning ſpeaches, which come too oft in practiſe, that wee may forgiue, but wee will neuer forget: yea, in Action we muſt avoide all quarrelling, fighting, contending, and going to lawe on euery light occaſion; for true meekneſſe admits none of all theſe to take place with Gods children.

Motiues to meeknes.

And to induce vs herunto, conſider firſt Chriſts precept and example, bidding vs [g] learne of him, for hee is meeke and lowly. Againe, conſider Gods owne dealing with vs, wee daiely wrong him by our offences, and yet he beares with vs; ſhall we then bee ſo vnlike our heauenly Father, that we will ſtraight reuenge the wrongs that others doe vnto vs? See Coloſſ. 3. 12, 13. As the elect of God, holy and beloued, put on the bowels of mercie, gentleneſſe, lowlineſſe of minde, meekeneſſe, long ſuffering, forbearing one an other, and forgiuing one another, if any man haue a quarrell againſt an other; euen as God for Chriſts ſake forgaue you, ſo doe yee. Laſtly, the fruition and practiſe of this grace hath the promiſe of bleſſedneſſe belonging to it; and therefore as we would bee happie, ſo we muſt get the ſpirit of meekeneſſe into our hearts, and expreſſe the vertue and power thereof in our liues.

Obiect. I. Here ſome will ſay, If I put vp all iniuries, I ſhall be counted a daſtard and a foole. Anſ. In this caſe learne of Paul, to paſſe little for mens iudgement: but be carefull to get and practiſe this grace of meekeneſſe, and then Chriſt will pronoũce thee bleſſed, which ought more to preuaile with thee, then all mens eſtimation in the world; and ſo it will, vnleſſe thou loue the praiſe of men more then the praiſe of God: Ioh. 12. 43.

Obiect. II. Againe, it will be ſaid, The more I vſe to put vp wrongs, the more ſhall I haue ſtill done vnto me. Anſ. That is onely ſo with wicked men; for [h] who elſe will wrong thee, if thou followe that which is good? Yea ſay they doe, thy [i] patient ſuffering is praiſe-worthy with God: and [k] hee will take the matter into his hand: yea Chriſt Ieſus, who iudgeth not by the ſight of the eie, [l] hee will rebuke aright, for all the meeke of the earth.

Obiect. III. But yet thou ſaiſt, this is the way to looſe all that a man hath, and to bee thruſt out of houſe and harbour. Anſ. Nothing leſſe: for Chriſt here ſaith, the meeke ſhall inherit the earth; doubt not but Chriſt will make good his word: and therefore if thou reſpect theſe outward things, labour to get and exerciſe the ſpirit of meekeneſſe.

VI. Point. Wherein doth this bleſſedneſſe of the meeke conſiſt? namely, in their inheriting of the earth. And this is a great happineſſe, for a man

A to be Lord of the whole earth. But how can this be true? ſith many of Gods deareſt ſeruants, haue beene ſtrangers on this earth, thruſt out of houſe and land, and conſtrained to wander in mountaines, and deſarts, afflicted and miſerable, yea deſtitute of conuenient foode and How the meeke inherit the earth. raiment, Heb. 11. 37. 38. Anſw. The meeke are here called Inheritors of the earth, not for that they alwaies haue the poſſeſſion thereof;
1 but firſt, becauſe God giues a meete and conuenient portion of the earth, either to them or to their poſteritie: thus he dealt with Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, they had ſufficient for themſelues, and a promiſe of great poſſeſſi-B ons, which their poſteritie did enioy. Secondly,
2 if it fall out, that meeke perſons die in want, or baniſhment; yet God giues them contentation, which is fully anſwerable to the inheritance of the earth; ſo Paul ſaith of himſelfe, and other Apoſtles, [m] *they were as men hauing
m 2.Cor.6.10. nothing, and yet poſſeſſed all things*: meaning through contentation, with the peace of a 3 good conſcience. Thirdly, the meeke haue this inheritance, in regard of right, beeing the members of Chriſt, who is Lord of all. Hence n 1.Cor.3.21.22. Paul ſaith to the beleeuing Corinthians, [n] all things are yours, whether it be Paul, or Cephas, or the world, things preſent, or things to come, 4 all are yours, and yee Chriſts. Fourthly, the meeke are made Kings by Chriſt, and after the laſt iudgement, they ſhall rule and reigne with him for euermore, Reu. 5. 10. And in theſe two C laſt reſpects, the meeke are more properly ſaid to be the inheritors of the earth. Obiect. Yet here it will be ſaid againe, that wicked and carnall men are oftentimes the greateſt Lords of the earth, as Nimrod in his time, and the A twofold right to earthly things. Turke at this day. Anſw. The right vnto the earth is two-fold; Ciuill and Spirituall: Ciuill 1 Ciuill. right is that, which ſtands good before men, by their lawes and cuſtomes; and in regard thereof, men are called Lords of ſuch lands, as they haue right vnto in the Courts of men: and ſo the Turke at this day, is a mightie Lord 2 Spirituall. of a great part of the whole world. Spirituall right is that, which is warrantable and approoued with God himſelfe, and ſuch right and ti-D tle had Adam to all the world, before his fall, which he loſt by his ſinne, both from himſelfe, and all his poſteritie; but yet in Chriſt, the ſame is recouered to all the elect. And of this right, Chriſt here ſpeaketh, when hee calleth the meeke inheritors of the earth: in regard whereof, the Turke, and all vnbeleeuers and vngodly perſons, are vſurpers of thoſe things which otherwiſe ciuilly they doe lawfully poſſeſſe.

Vſes.
1 The common error in ſeeking wealth. Here then is an excellent priuiledge of all the true members of Chriſt, that in him they be Lords of the earth; whereby firſt, we may ſee how farre moſt men doe ouerſhoote themſelues in ſeeking earthly poſſeſſions; for the manner is, without all regard of Chriſt, to hunt after the world: but this is a prepoſterous courſe, theſe men ſet the Cart before the horſes; for ſeeing all our right to the earth was loſt by Adam, and is onely recouered by Chriſt, doubtleſſe till we haue part in Chriſt, we cannot with the comfort of a good conſci-ence, either purchaſe, or poſſeſſe any inheritance vpon earth. In regard of certaintie, men deſire to hold their lands in capite, that is, in the Prince, as beeing the beſt tenure; but if we would haue a ſure title, and hold aright in capite, we muſt labour to become true members of Chriſt, and hold our right in him, for he is the [o] Prince of the Kings of the earth, and Lord o Rev.1.5. of all the world; and till we be in Chriſt, we ſhall neuer haue an holy and ſanctified right to any worldly poſſeſſions.

2 Secondly, this ſerues for a bridle againſt all immoderate care for the world; for if we be members of Chriſt, and meeke perſons, then the inheritance of the earth is ours: what need haue we then to carke and care ſo much for worldly pelfe, as moſt men doe, who neuer thinke they haue enough?

3 Thirdly, this ſerues for a iuſt rebuke of all thoſe that ſeeke to enrich themſelues by cruel-tie, lying, fraud, and oppreſſion: for if thou be in Chriſt, thou haſt right to the whole world; what neede then haſt thou to vſe vn-lawfull meanes to get that which is thine owne? But ſure it is, thou haſt no part in Chriſt, while thou giueſt thy ſelfe to theſe courſes;
for if thou haddeſt, thou wouldeſt be content, with whatſoeuer God ſends in the vſe of law-full meanes. Philip. 4. 11.

4 Laſtly, hence all Gods children may learne to comfort their hearts againſt the feare of any puniſhment for the name of Chriſt: for keepe Chriſt ſure, and whither ſoeuer thou art ſent, thou art vpon thine owne ground: for the whole earth is thine, and in Chriſt one day thou ſhalt poſſeſſe it, when all Tyrants ſhall be baniſhed into hell. Now beeing on thine own ground, what need haſt thou to feare?

verſ. 6. Bleſſed are they which hunger and thirſt after righteouſnes: for they ſhall be filled.

4. Rule. Here is the fourth Rule touching bleſſedneſſe, which is alſo mentioned by Saint Luke, yet ſome thing different from this of Matthew:
for according to Luke, Chriſt directeth his ſpeech to his Diſciples, and ſpeakes of bodily Luk. 6. 21. hunger, ſaying; Bleſſed are ye that hunger now, for yee ſhall be ſatisfied: as if he ſhould ſay, You my Diſciples doe now ſuffer hunger and thirſt, but this ſhall not preiudice your happie eſtate, for hereafter you ſhall be ſatisfied. Now Matthew goeth a degree further, and laieth downe a cauſe and Reaſon, why they beeing hungrie are bleſſed; not ſimply, for that they were pinched with bodily hunger, but becauſe withall, they did further ſpiritually in their ſoules hunger after righteouſneſſe. Thus then the two Euangeliſts doe agree; S. Luke laies downe this Rule generally, but Matthew propounds therein the reaſon of this bleſſedneſſe.

Diuers expoſitions. 1. 2. 3. The right meaning.

A This Rule, as the former, conteines two parts: firſt, who are bleſſed: ſecondly, wherein this bleſſedneſſe doth conſiſt. For the firſt, the parties bleſſed are ſuch, as hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſſe. The expoſition of theſe words is diuers: Some giue this ſence: Bleſſed are thoſe that are grieued with the iniquities that abound in the world, and withall doe in heart and ſoule, long for the amendment and reformation thereof. Others expound the words thus. Bleſſed are thoſe that B by wrongs and iniuries are depriued of their right in this world, and ſo are conſtrained to hunger and thirſt after that which is their owne, wayting by patience to obtaine the ſame. But there is a third expoſition which doth more fully open vnto vs the meaning of Chriſt; to wit, by righteouſneſſe we may well vnderſtand in the firſt place, the righteouſneſſe of faith, whereby a ſinner is iuſtified through grace in Chriſt, and ſo ſtands righteous before God, hauing the pardon of all his ſinnes: beſides this, we may here alſo vnderſtand inward righteouſneſſe, whereby a man is ſanctified and made holy, hauing Gods image renued in him by the ſpirit of grace, which was loſt by the C fall of our firſt parents. And that this imputed and renued righteouſneſſe may here be vnderſtood, will appeare by theſe reaſons: Firſt, in ſuch places of Scripture where like ſentences are repeated, we muſt vnderſtand not Ciuill righteouſneſſe, but iuſtification, ſanctification, regeneration: as Iſa. 55. 1. Hoe, euery one that thirſteth, come to the waters, and buie without ſiluer; and, Ioh. 7. 37. If any man thirſt, let him come vnto mee and drinke: and, Reuel. 21. 6. I will giue to him that is athirſt, to drinke of the waters of life freely: all which places are one in ſubſtance: for by waters, we muſt vnderſtand righteouſnes, which is that ſpirituall grace of God, the fountaine of all bleſſings, whereby ſinners are iuſtified and ſanctified. Secondly, D that which is moſt of all to be deſired, muſt needes be the moſt excellent righteouſnes: but this righteouſneſſe here mentioned is moſt to be deſired; for Chriſt ſaith, men ſhall hunger and thirſt after it, thereby expreſſing a moſt earneſt and vehement deſire: and therefore by righteouſneſſe, we muſt vnderſtand Gods grace and mercie in Chriſt, abſoluing a ſinner from the guilt and puniſhment of his ſinnes, with ſanctification the fruit thereof, whereby he is purged from corruption.

Spirituall hunger and thirſt.

Secondly, by hungering and thirſting, we muſt vnderſtand two things: firſt, a ſorrow and griefe of heart in regard of a mans owne ſinnes, and vnrighteouſnes: ſecondly, an earneſt and conſtant deſire of the righteouſnes of God, that is, of iuſtification and ſanctification in Chriſt. Anſwerable to A theſe two things which are in bodily hunger and thirſt, to wit, firſt a paine in the bottome of the ſtomacke for want of meate and drinke; ſecondly, an earneſt deſire and appetite after meate and drink, to be ſatisfied therewith. And bleſſed is he that is ſo grieued for his owne vnrighteouſneſſe, and withall hath an earneſt deſire after reconciliation with God in Chriſt, and after true regeneration and ſanctification by the holy Ghoſt: for this is true ſpirituall hunger and thirſt, whereto belongs this gracious promiſe, that in due time hee ſhall be ſatisfied and filled with plentie of Gods mercie and grace, wherein this happineſſe doth conſiſt, which is the ſecond branch of this Rule. B This I take to be the true and proper meaning of theſe words, whereupon the two former expoſitions depend: for he that is thus ſpiritually an hungred, is oft depriued of his owne right among men, and ſo is ſaid to hunger and thirſt after that which is his owne in this world. Againe, ſuch a man doth vnfainedly grieue at the iniquities that be in the world, and withall his heart doth moſt earneſtly deſire reformation thereof, both in himſelfe and others.

The vſe. Comfort in Temptation. 1. from want of faith.

First, this ſentence muſt be remembred, as a ſtorehouſe of true comfort in all grieuous temptations, but eſpecially againſt theſe three; the want of faith; the ſmallneſſe of ſanctification, and deſpaire. For the firſt, many in Gods C Church haue a true care to pleaſe God in all things, and to liue in no ſinne againſt their conſcience; and yet they finde in themſelues much diſtruſt and deſpaire of Gods mercie, they feele more doubting then faith: whereupon they are brought to doubt of their election, and ſtate of grace before God. Now how may ſuch be releeued, and be well perſwaded of their good eſtate? Anſwer. The way is laid downe by our Sauiour Chriſt in this Rule; Bleſſed are they that hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſſe. For here he teacheth, that thoſe are bleſſed, who are diſpleaſed with their own doubting and vnbeleefe, if they haue a true earneſt deſire to be purged from this diſtruſt, and to beleeue in God through Chriſt. Indeed this deſire of faith, and to beleeue, is not true D faith in nature, but in Gods acceptance; for God reſpects them for this true deſire, as if they had faith. And they are bleſſed, becauſe they ſhall haue plentie of faith, and aſſurance of grace and fauour with God in Chriſt; for it is mercie and grace with God, to hunger after grace and mercie, when the heart feeles the want thereof: But yet ſuch perſons muſt be admoniſhed, that they ſhew the truth of this deſire, by a conſtant endeauouring in the meanes which God hath ſanctified for the obtaining of a true and liuely faith in Chriſt, wherewith they may be ſatisfied.

2. from want of ſanctification.

The ſecond temptation is, from the ſmallneſſe of ſanctification. Many there be that endeauour to pleaſe God, making conſcience of all ſinne, and yet they finde in them-ſelues an exceeding meaſure of rebllious corruption, much ignorance in their mindes, peruerſeneſſe in their wills, and frowardneſſe in their affections; yea, a continuall proneneſſe vnto all manner of ſinne; and one the contrarie, they can perceiue but ſmall fruits of ſanctification; the olde man they feele ruſhing in them like a mightie Gyant, but the new man ſo weake and feeble, that they can hardly diſcerne any ſpirituall life: and hereupon they are ſore troubled with temptations, yea oftentimes driuen to doubt, whether they haue any grace at all: This cannot but be a heauie caſe, and yet here is true comfort for them; for Chriſt calleth them bleſſed (not that are filled with righteouſneſſe) but who hunger and thirſt after it; that is, who feeling the want of righteouſneſſe in themſelues, doe earneſtly deſire it in their ſoules. Theſe perſons therefore, that feele in themſelues a ſea of corruption, and ſcarce a drop of ſanctification, muſt truely examine their owne hearts, how they ſtand affected to theſe things; for if they be truely grieued for their corruption and rebellion, and withall doe earneſtly deſire grace and ſanctification, vſing the meanes conſtantly, whereby they may be freed from the one, and indued with the other; then they haue wherewith they may comfort their hearts, for Chriſt calles them bleſſed: and ſo they are, for in due time they ſhall be ſatisfied: and in the meane time, their will and deſire is accepted of God in Chriſt for the deed it ſelfe.

The third temptation is, to deſpaire; when a man after the breach of conſcience by ſome grieuous ſinne, is plunged into this gulfe, that hee thinkes verily hell is prepared for him, and he muſt needs be damned: what remedie now in ſuch a caſe? Anſw. Some thinke the onely way is to propound vnto him the grounds of vniuerſall grace; as that, becauſe he is a man, Chriſt died for him, for Chriſt died for all: but this is a ſlender comfort, for the deſpairing conſcience will thus replie; God indeed hath done his part, but I refuſed Gods grace, when it was offered. Therefore another way of comfort muſt bee ſought; which is, by prouing vnto him out of Gods word, that hee is within the couenant, and that the promiſes of grace and life doe belong vnto him: for the effecting wherof, one main ground is here propounded; to wit, that though a man want all righteouſneſſe, yet if he truely hunger after it, he is bleſſed: and the right applying of this ground, is this; ſearch muſt be made, whether the partie thus deſpairing, hath in him any ſparke of true grace, or no; and this will be knowne by theſe two demaunds: firſt, whether hee diſlike his ſinnes, becauſe they are ſinnes? ſecondly, whether hee truely deſire to be reconciled vnto God, to repent and beleeue in Chriſt? Now if his conſcience tell him, that theſe things be in him indeede, then he is brought within the compaſſe of this bleſſedneſſe here pronounced by Chriſt, and hath title to this promiſe, that hee ſhall be ſatisfied: for he that is grieued for his ſinne, becauſe thereby hee hath offended God, and withall hath an earneſt deſire of mercie and grace, to repent and beleeue, is truely bleſſed. And therefore it may be ſaid vnto him, ſeeing thou findeſt in thy heart this griefe for ſinne, and deſire of grace, thou art bleſſed, and ſhalt be ſatisfied. Thus may the diſtreſſed ſoule receiue comfort: but as for them that liue in ſinne, here is no comfort, for they haue no true diſlike of ſinne, no purpoſe or deſire to repent thereof.

The miſerie of the full.

Secondly, as this rule of Chriſt miniſtreth comfort to ſome, ſo it declareth the miſerable eſtate of others: to wit, of all thoſe that want this ſpirituall hunger after righteouſneſſe, for they haue no title to the promiſe of heauenly ſatisfaction by Gods mercie in Chriſt. And yet generally this is the ſtate of men euery where: for after riches, pleaſures, honours, and preferments men hunger and thirſt, as the drought in ſummer doth after raine; but rare it is to find a man that ſauoureth the things of God, and thirſteth after his righteouſnes, and yet ſuch onely are bleſſed.

How to know who are happie.

Thirdly, this rule of Chriſt ſerues for ſure direction, whereby we may know our eſtate before God, in regard of true happines: if we hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſſe, we are ſurely bleſſed: for the mouth of the Lord hath ſpoken it. Now this ſpirituall hunger is known by two things: firſt, by an vnfained heartie ſorrow and griefe for ſinne paſt; where this is wanting, true ſpiritual hunger and thirſt is not: ſecondly, by an earneſt deſire of Gods mercie in Chriſt, for the pardon of ſinne, and for ſanctification, teſtified by a conſtant endeauour in the vſe of meanes to come thereby: he that hath theſe things in him, may aſſure himſelfe that he is bleſſed; for theſe be the motions of Gods ſpirit, and the true pledges of his grace. Hereby then we muſt trie our eſtate, if theſe things be in vs, we haue wherein we may reioyce; but if our hearts be dead, and hard, ſo as we haue no touch for our ſinnes, no hungering after the blood of Chriſt, nor deſire of ſanctification, then are we voide of grace, and ſo moſt miſerable: for the ſmalleſt meaſure of true grace, that can be, is to hunger after grace in the want thereof.

Labour for ſpirituall hunger.

Laſtly, this rule of bleſſednes muſt admoniſh vs, as we tender our ſaluation, ſo to labour for this ſpirituall hunger in our ſoules, after reconciliation with God in Chriſt for all our ſinnes paſt, and for the ſanctification of our hearts and liues by his word and ſpirit: we may heare, read, and talke of Gods word, and yet all to no ende, vnleſſe we be in heauineſſe for our owne vnrighteouſneſſe, and from our hearts do ſende forth ſighes and grones after mercie and grace in Chriſt. For what auaileth it to haue wit and learning, honour and riches, if the ſoule be voide of mercie and grace in Chriſt? Which doubtles it is, while this ſpirituall hunger is wãting in the heart. And to moue vs to labour for this hunger, the reaſon annexed is very effectuall, namely, the Lords promiſe that they ſhal be filled, which alſo ſhewes wherein this bleſſedneſſe doth conſiſt. Now they that thus hunger are filled, partly in this life, by receiuing the teſtimonie of the ſpirit, touching reconciliation with God in Chriſt, and ſome fruits of ſanctification, whereby the old man is mortified, and the new man renued in them; but principally at the end of this life, when they ſhall be fully iuſtified and ſanctified, and haue Gods image perfectly renued in them.

V. 7. Bleſſed are the mercifull: for they ſhall obtaine mercie.

5. Rule.

This verſe containeth the fift Rule or precept of our Sauiour Chriſt touching true happineſſe, in which obſerue two points; firſt, who be bleſſed: ſecondly, wherein this bleſſedneſſe conſiſts. For the firſt: the parties bleſſed be the mercifull. And that we may the better know them, I will ſpeake ſomething of this vertue: firſt, ſhewing what mercie is: then, what be the chiefe duties thereof.

Mercie deſcribed.

First, Mercie is an holy compaſſion of heart, whereby a man is mooued to helpe an other in his miſerie. First, I call it a compaſſion of heart, becauſe it makes one man to put on the perſon of another, & to be grieued for the miſeries of an other, as if they were his own; and therefore it is called [a] the bowells of compaſſion, becauſe when a mans heart is touched therewith, his very liuer and entralls doe ſtirre in his bodie, and are rouled within him, as the [b] Prophet ſpeaketh: and he is affected, as though the bowells of him that is in miſerie were in his bodie. Secondly, I call it an (Holy) compaſſion, to diſtinguiſh it from fooliſh pitie, whereby a man doth vnlawfully tender him that is in deſerued miſerie; ſuch was [c] Ahabs mercie to Benhadad, and [d] Sauls in ſparing Agag, whereas the expreſſe commandement of God was to the contrarie: but ſuch mercie and compaſſion as God approoueth, is a fruit of his ſpirit, and a vertue cõmended and commanded in the word of God. Thirdly, this vertue of mercie ſtirreth and mooueth the heart to helpe an other that is in miſerie: for helpe in miſerie is a notable fruit of true compaſſion, neither can theſe be ſeuered: for in the compaſſion of the heart, and in the act of releiſe, ſtands true mercie: and therefore [e] Iohn ſaith, Hee that ſeeth his brother in neede, and ſhutteth vp his cõpaſſion from him, how dwelleth the loue of God in him? whereby alſo we may ſee, that no worke of mercie is ſhewed to any man in miſerie, but that which commeth from compaſſion, and thus we ſee what mercie is.

The duties of mercie.

Secõdly, the duties of mercie are anſwerable

A to mans miſerie: Now mans miſerie is either in his ſoule, or in his bodie. The greateſt miſeries of man are in his ſoule; as ignorance, impenitencie, and trouble of conſcience: mans bodily miſeries are ſickneſſe, thirſt, nakedneſſe, &c. and to theſe the works of mercie are anſwerable. Some therefore concerne the ſoule, and ſome the bodie. Mercie towards the ſoule is, when a man is carefull for the ſaluation of an other, vſing meanes to bring a man from ſpirituall darkneſſe, vnto light, frõ the power of Satan, vnto God, from the ſtate of ſinne and the danger of hell fire, to the ſtate of grace in true faith and repentance, and ſo to life eternall. And looke how farre the ſoule is more excellent then the bodie, ſo farre doth this worke exceede any worke of mercie that concernes B the bodie: Mercie towards the bodie is called Almes or Releefe, whereby a mans outward neceſſitie, for foode, raiment, or ſuch like, is ſupplied: that this is a worke of mercie, is maniſeſt, Iſay, 58.10. where the Releeuing of the hungrie, is the powring out of the ſoule vnto him: and S. Iohn maketh the not releeuing of our brother in neede, to be the ſhutting of the doore of compaſſion from him.

A mercifull man.

Now by this which hath beene ſaid concerning mercie, and the workes thereof, we may ſee who is a mercifull man; namely, ſuch a one as hath his heart touched with compaſſion towards the miſerie of another, and thereby is mooued to helpe and releeue him in ſoule and bodie, according to his eſtate: and ſuch a man is bleſſed by the teſtimonie of Chriſt himſelfe, howſoeuer C in the world he may be deſpiſed.

The vſe. The miſerie of the vnmercifull, & their nũber.

First, here we haue to conſider, what a number of miſerable and curſed perſons doe liue, euen in the boſome of Gods Church; for if this Rule of Chriſt be true, then vnmercifull men are accurſed. Now ſuch are common among vs: The Richer ſort which abound in outward bleſſings, thinke themſelues happie; but if they be vnmercifull, they are wretched, and ſuch are all thoſe, that for the maintenance of their outward pompe and brauerie, ſpoile the poore that liue vnder them, by incloſing of commons, racking of rents, vnreaſonable fines, &c. or for the ſatiſfying of their vaine pleaſure and delight, beſtows more vpon hawkes D and hounds, then on the poore: Such a wretched perſon alſo is the Corne-monger, who hath his barnes full, and his garners full, and yet ſuffereth the poore to want bread, waiting ſtill for a dearer time: Such alſo are our common vſurers, ingroſſers, and fore-ſtallers of needefull commodities whatſoeuer: all theſe ſeeke themſelues, and haue no mercie on them that are in miſerie: yea, ſuch likewiſe are thoſe houſhoulders, who ſpend their time & wealth in ſome diſordered courſe, as whoring, gaming drinking, or ſuch like, & ſo neglect their family; theſe [f] denie the faith, and are worſe then Iewes and Turkes, nay then bruit beaſts, for they are mercifull towards their owne. It were an eaſie thing thus to ſhew through all eſtates, the great multitude of miſerable perſons: for now the common prouerb is become the common practiſe, Euery man for himſelfe, and God for vs all.

Motiues to mercie.

Secondly, ſeeing the mercifull man is bleſſed, we muſt learne to put on tender mercie, or the bowels of compaſſion towards thoſe that be in miſerie. And to mooue vs hereunto, let vs mark theſe things: 1 First, the ſtate of the mercifull is here pronounced bleſſed of Chriſt. 2 Secondly, mercie is a gift of the ſpirit, and the grace of [g] Gods elect, which alwaies accompanieth the happie eſtate of thoſe that be in Chriſt: for the power of grace doth change their carnall nature, Iſa.11.6,7. 3 Thirdly, hereby we become like vnto God our heauenly Father, who is the [h] father of mercies. 4 Fourthly, hereby we are made inſtruments of Gods mercie to them that be in miſerie; for God conuaies his bleſſings vnto his poore creatures ordinarily by meanes. We count it an high honour and a great fauour to be the Kings Almner; oh then, how great is this dignitie, to be Almner to the God of heauen, to diſperſe his goodnes and mercies among the children of men? and hereto we are aduanced, if we help the poore that be in miſerie. 5 Fiftly, the exerciſe of mercie commendeth our Religion, not onely before men, but vnto God: for [i] pure Religion and vndefiled before God is this, to viſit the fatherleſſe and widdowes in their diſtreſſe: and, [k] God will haue mercie, and not ſacrifice: therefore the Apoſtle bids, [l] to doe good and to diſtribute, forget not, for with ſuch ſacrifice God is pleaſed. This is the faſt [m] which God requires, to looſe the bands of wickedneſſe, to take off the heauie burthen, and to let the oppreſſed go free, to take off euery yoke: and on the other ſide, to break thy bread vnto the hungrie, to bring the poore that wanders into thine houſe, and to couer the naked, &c.

Rules for the exercise of mercie.
1.Rule.

And becauſe this dutie is ſo neceſſarie and excellent, I will propound certaine Rules to be obſerued for our furtherance herein. First, we muſt exerciſe three of our ſenſes; ſeeing, hearing, and feeling, in other mens miſeries: for ſeeing, [n] we muſt be verie warie it grieue vs not to looke vpon our poore brother, but wee muſt ſee and behold his miſerie and diſtreſſe, whether it be in ſoule or bodie. This is the Lords practiſe. Iſrael is oppreſſed in Egypt, & the Lord ſaith, [o] I haue ſurely ſeene the trouble of my people, and the oppreſſion wherewith the Egyptians oppreſſe them. And we muſt be followers of God, as deare children, and learne to viſit them that be in miſerie, either through ſickeneſſe, impriſonment, pouertie, or ſuch like; for ſight will ſtirre vp in a man a ſenſe and compaſſion of others miſeries. Hence it is ſaid, that [p] when Ieſus ſaw a great multitude, he was mooued with compaſſion towards them. And who can ſee a poore diſtreſſed perſon to lie in ſtraw, or on the ground without needefull releefe, as many a one would not ſuffer his dogge to lie, and not be mooued with compaſſion? Secondly, if we cannot come to ſee a mans miſerie, then we muſt be content to heare of it, and giue heede and credit to the true reports that others make thereof vnto vs. Thus did Nehemiah, hearing of the affliction of the reſidue of the captiuitie, [q] hee wept and mourned, faſted and prayed, and ſought for releefe for them at the Kings hands. Thirdly, for feeling, if the Lord ſhall afflict our bodies with ſickeneſſe, or our ſoules with temptations, we muſt be willing to ſuffer the ſame patiently, that thereby we may be fitted to take more compaſſion vpon others in like caſe, and to comfort them the better. Paul ſaith of himſelfe and Timothie, that in [r] Aſia they were preſſed with affliction aboue meaſure paſſing ſtrength, ſo as they altogether doubted of life: and yet (he ſaith) the Lord dealt mercifully with them; that they might be able to comfort others which were in any affliction, with the ſame comfort wherewith God had comforted them.

2.Rule.
How to exerciſe mercy in our callings.

Secondly, we muſt make our particular callings wherein we liue, the inſtruments of mercie, and in doing the duties thereof ſhew forth compaſſion towards others. This Rule is of great vſe, and therefore it will not be amiſſe, to ſhew the practiſe of it in particular. The Magiſtrate muſt rule and gouerne in mercie: and the Miniſter muſt preach in mercie: euerie ſermon muſt be a worke of compaſſion towards the people, not onely for the matter which it containeth, but for the manner of his deliuerie, and in the ſcope and drift which he aimeth at: hee which preacheth otherwaies doth barre himſelfe of all mercie, euen then, when he entreats of mercie vnto others. There is a carnall and humane kind of preaching, which now a dayes takes place, wherein nothing is ſo much regarded as the vaunting of wit, memorie, and learning, by fine contriued ſentences, multiplicitie of quotatiós, varietie of allegations of Fathers, Shoole-men, and other learning: but herein is no mercie nor compaſſion to the poore ſoule. It is ſaid indeede, that none condemne this kinde of preaching, but they that cannot attaine vnto it. But the truth is, God will haue his word deliuered, [s] not in the enticing ſpeach of mans wiſedome, but in the plaine euidence of the ſpirit, and of power: and therefore a man cannot with good conſcience apply himſelfe to ſuch a kinde of preaching, elſe no doubt a man of meane gifts might finde it more eaſie to attaine vnto, then to the true preaching of Chriſt crucified. Thirdly, euery priuate man muſt make the duties of his calling, workes of mercie: the rich man muſt knowe himſelfe to bee, not a Lord, but a ſteward of Gods bleſſings, and therefore muſt imploy and diſpence the ſame in mercie, by giuing and lending vnto the poore freely, as God ſhall miniſter vnto him iuſt occaſion. The trades man muſt buy and ſell in mercie, dealing iuſtly with the rich, and ſhewing liberalitie to the poore. The maſter muſt thus in mercie vſe the labour of his ſeruant; and the ſeruant thus in mercie doe ſeruice to his maſter, for conſcience towardes God. And happie were it with all eſtates, if this rule of mercie were obſerued: the want whereof, is the bane of all ſocieties.

3. Rule.

Thirdly, for the more chearefull practiſe of mercie, we muſt lay aſide ſome part of our goods for the releefe of them that be in miſerie. The Iewes were commanded to ſet apart the firſt fruits of their corne and cattel, for the Lords altar: but in the newe Teſtament the altar is ceaſed, & the poore come in ſtead therof; and therefore we muſt now bequeath ſomething for their releefe. Many are giuen to great exceſſe in fare, and in attire; but they may doe well to abate ſome part thereof, and beſtow it on the poore, for hereby will the reſt bee ſanctified to their more free and comfortable vſe: nay, in caſe of neceſſitie, we ought to ſequeſter ſome part of our owne neceſſaries, for the refreſhing of the poore; ſo did the Church of Macedonia [t], euen beyond their power, giue to the releefe of the afflicted brethren. Men are exceeding cold in charitie, and one maine cauſe thereof, is want of obſeruing this Rule, in ſetting a part ſome thing, according as God ſhall bleſſe vs in our callings, for the releefe of the poore.

The vſe. 1. Againſt mẽs merits.

The ſecond point to be conſidered in this Rule is, wherein this bleſſedneſſe doth conſiſt, namely, in the obtaining of mercie: hee that ſhewes mercie, ſhall finde mercie, both with God and man. Where firſt, we may ſee the errour of the Church of Rome in their doctrine of merits: for they make a ſpeciall part of humane ſatisfaction, to conſiſt in Almeſ-deedes and relieuing of the poore, teaching that a man may hereby merit eternall life: but they erre groſſely; for then Crhiſt would not haue ſaid, bleſſed are the mercifull, for they ſhall finde mercie: but rather thus; they ſhall find iuſtice: for that which comes of merit, is due by right.

Secondly, hereby we may ſee what to thinke of our Church, & Nation, in reſpect of the true Title to Gods mercie, for onely the mercifull ſhall finde mercie. Now it were eaſie to goe through all orders and conditions of men among vs, and therin to ſhew abundance of vnmercifulnes and crueltie; ſo as we may be iuſtly called a cruell people, and therefore cannot looke for mercie at Gods hands: for to [u] the mercileſſe ſhall bee iudgement without mercie. This is euident by the Lords dealing with his people: for all their ſacrifices and duties of religiõ were [x] abhominations vnto the Lord, becauſe their hands were full of blood: and becauſe they had no mercie, therefore they were lead into captiuitie, as we may ſee at large, Ier.5.28. Ezek.9.9, 10. and Zach.9.12. Now we beeing in the ſame caſe with them for vnmercifulnes & crueltie, haue no doubt deſerued long ſince the ſame puniſhment; euen that the Enemie ſhould depriue vs both of Goſpel and peace, and of all our proſperitie and wealth: what then ſhall we doe? ſurely we muſt humble our ſelues by praier and faſting vnto the Lord, if not publikly, yet priuately; euery man and euerie family apart, euen for this one ſinne of vnmercifulnes: and withall in this humiliation, begin to practiſe mercy, by beſtowing that vpon the poore, which we ſpare from our bodies in the day of our faſt.

x Iſa.1.11.12.15.

v. 8. Bleſſed are the pure in heart: for they ſhall ſee God.

6. Rule.

These words containe the ſixt Rule of Chriſt, touching true happines; wherein, as in the former, obſerue two points: the perſons bleſſed, and wherein their bleſſedneſſe conſiſts. The perſons bleſſed, are thus qualified; they are pure in heart. This is diuerſly expounded: By pure in heart, ſome vnderſtand thoſe that are chaſte; others, thoſe that are ſimple hearted, voide of guile and deceit. But the words will beare a more generall ſenſe, and betoken ſuch as are holy in heart, hauing their hearts purged from the defilement of their ſinnes, and be in part renued and ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt: and that they are ſo to be taken, may appeare, Pſal. 24. 4. whence theſe wordes are borrowed; where alſo the Prophet expoundeth the pure in heart to be ſuch, as haue not lift vp their mind to vaine things: to which purpoſe, the Author to the Hebrewes ſaith, Followe peace with all men, and holyneſſe, without which no man can ſee God. Againe, the intent of our Sauiour Chriſt in this place, was no doubt to croſſe the Phariſaicall conceit of thoſe times, whereby men did content themſelues with outward holyneſſe, as ſufficient to true happineſſe; and therefore hee ſaith, Bleſſed are the pure, not outwardly, but inwardly in heart. Further, by heart we are to vnderſtand the ſoule, with the parts and faculties thereof; that is, the minde, the conſcience, the will, and affections. And that wee may yet conceiue more clearely of this point, we are to ſearch out two things; firſt, in what manner, then in what meaſure the heart is made pure.

Who be pure in hart.

Chap.12.14.

The manner of purifying the heart.

For the firſt, the purifying of the heart is by a two-fold Action of the holy Ghoſt; firſt, by creating in the minde a ſauing faith, which vnites a man vnto Chriſt, and as an hand applyeth Chriſts puritie, that is, his obedience, to the heart: ſo Peter ſpeaketh of the Gentiles, in the Councell at Ieruſalem, that by faith the Lord purified their hearts. Secondly, when a man is in Chriſt, the holy Ghoſt purgeth and ſanctifieth the heart inwardly, by mortifying all the corruptions in the mind, will, and affections, and by putting into it inward holineſſe, whereby the image of Chriſt is renued therein. And this our Sauiour Chriſt expreſſeth, Ioh.15.2. when he ſaith, that the father purgeth euery one that bringeth forth fruit in him. Now vnto theſe the holy Ghoſt addeth an excellent grace of Chriſtian Reſolution, whereby a man hath a conſtant purpoſe not to ſinne againſt God any way, either in thought, word, or deede; but in all things to pleaſe God continually; ſo as if at any time he ſinne, it is againſt his holy reſolution.

The meaſure of purification.

A Now for the meaſure of this purification, it is only in part in this life; for the grace of ſanctification is not perfect till death, as the Apoſtle ſaith, [z] we receiue but the firſt fruits of the ſpirit: that is, not the Tenths, but as an handfull of corne to a whole field: the ſoule is freed from the puniſhment and guilt of ſinne, and in ſome ſort purged from corruption; but not wholly.

[z] Rom.8.23.

This we muſt obſerue the more diligently, becauſe the Papiſts teach otherwiſe; to wit, that after Baptiſme and regeneration, ſinne is ſo taken away, that there is in man nothing that God can hate:

Concil.Trid. ſeſſ.5.ſect.5.

B but experience in euery child of God, ſhewes this to be falſe. The cheife groūd of their opinion is this, that if ſinne properly called, ſhould remaine in the regenerate, then God ſhould repute a man to be iuſt, which is a ſinner. But we anſwer, that God neuer reputeth an impenitent ſinner iuſt, but onely the repentant, & regenerate, which are by faith in Chriſt, and ſo in effect are no ſinners, becauſe though corruption remaine in them in part, yet it is not imputed to their perſōs: Beſides, in the act of their conuerſion, corruption hath receiued that deadly wound, whereof it ſhal neuer recouer, but daily die, till it be quite aboliſhed, and therefore doth it not raigne in them.

Pure in heart deſcribed.

C And thus we ſee in what manner and meaſure the heart is purified, whereby the pure in heart may be thus deſcribed: They are ſuch, as beleeue the pardon of their ſinnes in Chriſt, and be in part renued in their ſoules by the holy Ghoſt; hauing their naturall corruptions mortified and aboliſhed in ſome meaſure, and the graces of Gods image repaired in them, and a godly reſolution wrought in their hearts, not to ſinne againſt God in any thing.

Vſe. 1.

Conſidering that the pure in heart bee bleſſed, we muſt ſearch our ſelues, and ſee whether our hearts be qualified with this grace: As in former times; ſo at this day inward puritie is much neglected. The auncient Iewes ſtood vpon their legall puritie and righteouſneſſe, and the Phariſies after them, relyed vpon their outward holyneſſe;

D and the holy Ghoſt foretold, that in [a] the latter dayes ſhould come perilous times, by reaſon of ſundrie ſinnes, whereof this is one, that men ſhould content themſelues with a ſhadowe and ſhewe of godlineſſe, and in truth denie the power thereof.

[a] 2.Tim.3.5.

And doth not experience ſhewe this to be true among vs? for the pure heart is ſo little regarded, that the ſeeking after it is turned to a by-word, and a matter of reproach: Who are ſo much branded with vile tearmes of Puritans and Preſitians, as thoſe, that moſt indeauour to get & keepe the puritie of heart in a good conſcience? Againe, the generall ignorance that euerie where abounds, doth plainely argue the want of this grace; for what can bee in the heart but impuritie and iniquity, where there is no knowledge of the wil of God in the minde? And for ſuch as haue more knowledge then the reſt, generally they are not anſwerable vnto it in practiſe; for take a viewe of all the markets in the land, and you ſhall hardly find a man that is to ſell his graine, that will bee brought to abate one iot of the higheſt price, no not vnto the poore that ſtand in extreame need; which as it argueth a bloody and cruell heart, ſo it ſheweth our times to be euill dayes, wherein men profeſſe much, and doe nought: which ſinne will draw Gods iudgement vpon vs, and cauſe the Goſpel to be remooued, and giuen to a nation, that with profeſſion, will ioyne the power of godlineſſe in heart and life. What befell the [b] figge-tree whereon Chriſt ſought fruite, and found nothing but leaues, was it not accurſed? and how ſhall we thinke to eſcape, if we be like vnto it? [c] for the earth that drinketh in the raine that falleth oft vpon it, and yet bringeth forth briers and thornes, is verie neere vnto curſing, whoſe ende is to be burned.

[c] Heb.6.7,8.

Secondly, if the pure in heart be bleſſed, then we muſt labour to practiſe the counſell of the Prophet, [d] Waſh you, make you cleane; and [e] ſanctifie the Lord in your hearts: yea as the Apoſtle ſaith, [f] Let vs purge our ſelves from all filthineſſe of the fleſh and ſpirit: Indeede it is the [g] work of God to purifie the heart: man of himſelfe can no more doe it then a Blacke-moore can change his skinne; but yet euery one that would feele in himſelfe this worke of God, muſt vſe the meanes wherein the ſpirit doth purge the heart; firſt therfore we muſt humble our ſelues vnfainedly for all the ſinnes and corruptions of our life alreadie paſt, and for the time to come, growe to a reſolute purpoſe, not to ſinne againſt God in any thing: which we muſt teſtifie by a godly endeauour to obey him in all things; for a pure heart, and a purpoſe to liue in any one ſinne, cannot ſtand together: but this conſtant purpoſe not to ſinn, is a notable grace, and an infallible token of a renued & ſanctified heart.

[g] Act.15.9.

The ſecond point in this Rule is, wherein this bleſſedneſſe conſiſts; namely, in this, that they ſhall ſee God: for the vnderſtanding hereof, two points muſt be handled. Firſt, how God may be ſeene; ſecondly, how the ſeeing of God is true happines. For the firſt, the Apoſtle ſaith, [h] no man hath ſeene God at any time: yea further, Paul calleth him, [i] King of Kings, whom neuer man ſaw, neither can ſee. We muſt therefore know, that there is a twofold ſight in man, the ſight of the eie, and of the minde; by the ſight of the eie no man can ſee God in his eſſence & ſubſtance, which is moſt ſpirituall, and ſo inuiſible, for the eie ſeeth nothing but things corporall and viſible: a man by his eie cannot ſee his owne ſoule, and much leſſe the ſubſtance of God.

They ſawe him not in his nature and ſubſtance, but in certaine created images and ſimilitudes, wherein God for that time did teſtifie his preſence vnto them: ſome indeed ſay that though a man cannot ſee God in this life, yet in the life to come he ſhall ſee him with his bodily eyes. But this opinion is not true: for though the bodie ſhall then be perfectly ſanctified, and the eye ſanctified, yea glorified, yet ſtill it remaines a true bodie, and a true eye, and therefore cannot ſee the eſſence of God, which is inviſible to the eye of fleſh.

Obiect. II. I ſhall ſee God in my fleſh (ſaith Iob) and myne eyes ſhall behold him. Anſ. He ſpeaketh there of God his Redeemer, who is not God ſimply, but God incarnate; for the word tranſlated Redeemer, ſignifieth one allied vnto vs in blood: now no man doubteth, but God in Chriſt may be ſeene, as Ioh. 14. 9. Hee that hath ſeene me, hath ſeene my father.

Obiect. III. 1. Cor. 13. 12. We ſhall ſee him face to face. Anſ. God hath no face, and therefore that cannot be vnderſtood litterally; but thereby is ſignified, that we ſhal haue plentifull knowledge of God, as we haue of him whome we ſee face to face.

Obiect. IV. If we ſhall not ſee God with our eyes, then they ſerue to no vſe in heauen. Anſ. God forbid: for beſides the glorious companie of all the Saints, we ſhall therewith behold our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, who redeemed vs by his blood, and made vs Kings and Prieſts vnto our God, to whome we ſhall ſing praiſe, and honour, and glorie, for euermore, Reu. 5. 12.

The ſecond kind of ſight, is of the minde, which is nothing but the knowledge or vnderſtanding of the minde, and that is two-fold; imperfect in this life, and perfect in the life to come. In this life, the minde knowes not Gods eſſence or ſubſtance, but onely by the effects; as by his word and Sacraments, and by his creatures: and indeede, the ſpeciall ſight we haue of God in this life, is by theſe his effects to conceiue in our minds how God is affected to vs; as that God is our Father, and Chriſt our Redeemer, and the holy Ghoſt our ſanctifier. The perfect viſion of God, is reſerued to the life to come, where Gods elect ſhall ſee him in regard of his ſubſtance: for [m] we ſhall ſee him as hee is. Yet that we be not deceiued herein, wee muſt know that perfect ſight is two-fold, ſimple, and comprehenſiue: Simple perfect ſight is, when man ſees a thing wholly as it is in it ſelfe; and thus God is not ſeene by the minde of man. Comprehenſiue ſight is, when the Creature ſeeth God, ſo farre forth as it is capable of his knowledge; and thus ſhall men ſee God in the world to come perfectly, and be filled therewith, though they know him not wholly, as he is in himſelfe: euen as a veſſel caſt into the ſea may be perfectly ful of water, though it receiue not all the water in the ſea. But ſome wil aske, how ſhall the minde ſee God? Anſ. The manner is ſuch, as neither eye hath ſeene, nor eare heard, neither can any man tell, but they onely that haue the fruition of it in heauen: yet certenly ſuch it is, as ſhal giue full contentment to euery one that doth enioy it. But it ſhall be far beter for vs, to ſeeke for a pure heart, whereby we may be aſſured of this bleſſed ſight of God, then curiouſly to ſearch how we ſhall ſee him: for to them that be of a pure heart, God will reueale himſelfe perfectly, to their ioy vnſpeakable and glorious.

How the ſeeing of God is happines.

The ſecond point is, how this ſeeing of God can be true happineſſe. Anſw. A man that hath beene blinde, will count himſelfe happy, when he receiues his ſight; and he that hath long laien in a darke dungeon, will count it a bleſſed thing, to be brought out to ſee the light of the ſunne: now if this bodily light be ſo comfortable, how endleſſe is the ioy of that heauenly light, which commeth from God himſelfe? The [n] Queene of Sheba counted thoſe ſeruants bleſſed, that ſtood before Salomon to heare his wiſedome; then doubtleſſe the ſonnes of God muſt needes be happie, that ſtand before the Lord, hearing his wiſedom and beholding his glorie: [o] for in his preſence is fulneſſe of ioy, and at his right hand are pleaſures for euermore. Moſes is renowned with all poſteritie for this prerogatiue, that God vouchſafed [p] to let him ſee his backe parts: and Chriſts Diſciples were ſo rauiſhed with a glimpſe of Gods glorie in his transfiguration, that they would needes [q] abide there ſtill. Oh then, what glorie is it to ſee him as he is? doubtleſſe this ſight of God is true happineſſe. But then (will ſome man ſay) the Deuills ſhall be happie, for they ſhall ſee him at the laſt day. Anſw. Their ſight ſhall be their ſorrowe, for they ſhall ſee him as a terrible iudge, not as a Sauiour, with apprehenſion and approbation of his loue and mercy, which is the ſight here meant: as the Apoſtle ſaith, [r] Wee ſhall ſee face to face, and know as we are knowne. So then the meaning of theſe wordes is this, they ſhall ſee God by his effects in this life, and perfectly in the world to come, with approbation of his loue and mercie.

The vſes. 1. Comfort againſt reproach.

This gracious promiſe muſt be obſerued as a ground of ſpeciall comfort to all Gods children: for they that endeauour after puritie of heart, ſhall ſuffer much contempt and reproach in the world, but they muſt not bee diſmaied, for God will looke vpon them, and ſhew himſelfe fauourably vnto them: [ſ] Hee will appeare to their ioy, and their aduerſaries ſhall be aſhamed: therefore they may ſay with Dauid, [t] I will not feare what man can doe vnto me.

Secondly, is it true happineſſe to ſee God? then in this world wee muſt ſtriue to come as neere vnto God, as poſſibly we can; for the nearer we come vnto him, the more wee ſee him, and the nearer we are to our perfect happines. Now that we may come neer vnto God, we muſt ſee God alwaies before our eyes; that is, whereſoeuer we are, and whatſoeuer we do, we muſt perſwade our hearts that we are in his preſence: this was Dauids practiſe, Pſal. 16.8. I haue ſet the Lord alwaies before mee: this perſwaſion will make vs to walke with God, as Enoch did, who for this is ſaid a to pleaſe God.

a Heb.11.5

Thirdly, this muſt allure our hearts towards all thoſe meanes wherein God ſhewes himſelfe vnto his children: the Lord reuealed himſelfe in his ſanctuarie vnto his people, and hereupon Dauid was rauiſhed with deſire to gods courts; ſee Pſal. 27.4. and Pſal. 48.1.2. And the like affection muſt we haue to Gods word and Sacraments, therein he ſhewes his beautie, as in his ſanctuarie; and therefore we muſt labour therein to ſee the goodneſſe and mercy of God towards vs, vſing them as pledges of his grace and loue in Chriſt: yea, we muſt endeauour to ſee him in all his creatures, as his wiſdom, power, and goodneſſe to vs wards: this is a notable ſteppe to our prefect bliſſe.

V. 9. Bleſſed are the peace-makers: for they ſhall be called the children of God.

9. Rule.

Here is the ſeauenth Rule and precept of Chriſt touching true happineſſe; wherein obſerue firſt, who are bleſſed, ſecondly, wherein this bleſſednes conſiſts. The parties bleſſed are Peace-makers. By peace we muſt vnderſtand concord and agreement betweene man and man. Now peace is twofold, Good, or Euill. Good peace, is that which ſtands with good conſcience and true religion. This was among the conuerts in the Primitiue Church, x who liued together, and were all of one heart, and one ſoule. Euill peace, is an agreement and concord in euill, as in the Practiſe of any ſinne againſt Gods commandements; in a word, euill peace is ſuch, as cannot ſtand with true Religion and good conſcience. Hereof Chriſt ſpake, ſaying, y I came not to ſend peace, but the ſword: that is, diuiſion by meanes of the doctrine of the Goſpel. Now in this place, good peace is the qualitie of thoſe parties that be bleſſed. Further, by Peace-makers, two ſorts of men are to be vnderſtood: firſt, all ſuch as haue care, ſo much as in them lieth, to haue peace with all men, good and bad: ſecondly, ſuch as not onely themſelues be at peace with others, but alſo do labour to reconcile parties at variance, and to make peace betweene man and man; both theſe ſorts are bleſſed, that is, they are in a happie ſtate and condition, becauſe this gift of Peace-making, is a grace of Gods ſpirit in them alone who are bleſſed: for where Gods ſpirit worketh peace of cõſcience towards God in Chriſt, there the ſame ſpirit doth moue the partie to ſeeke peace with all men; as alſo to make peace betweene thoſe that are at variance, ſo farre forth as it may ſtand with Religion and a good conſcience. Yet here are certaine queſtions to be ſcanned touching peace, which will giue great light to the better vnderſtanding of this Rule.

x Act.4.32.

y Matth.10.34

Queſt. I. Seeing Peace-makers are bleſſed, why ſhould they be blamed which ſeeke to make peace betweene Papiſts and Proteſtants, by reconciling theſe two religions? Anſwer. Becauſe this is not good peace, for there is no more concord betweene theſe two religions, then is betweene light and darkneſſe. Whereas it is ſaid, they differ not in ſubſtance, but in circumſtances, both hauing the ſame word, the ſame Creede, and Sacraments; we muſt know, that notwithſtanding all this, yet by neceſſarie conſequent of their doctrine and religion, they doe quite ouerturne the foundation of the Bible, of the Creede, and Sacraments; as in the points of Iuſtification by workes, of humane ſatisfaction, of worſhipping Saints and Images, and their maſſing ſacrifice and Prieſthood, may ſoone appeare. But they haue the ſame Baptiſme with vs? Anſw. Baptiſme ſeuered from the true preaching of the word, is no ſufficient note of a true Church; for the Samaritans had circumciſion, and yet the Lord ſaith, z they were not his people. Againe, they hold the outward forme of Baptiſme, but they ouerturne the inward power by denying Iuſtification by faith alone in Ieſus Chriſt. Thirdly, Baptiſme is preſerued in the Church of Rome, not for their ſakes, but for the hid Church which God hath kept to himſelfe, euen in the middeſt of all Poperie; ſo that if they returne to vs, we ſhal accord: otherwiſe we may not goe to them, leaſt we forſake the Lord.

z Hos.1.9

Queſt. II. If Peace-makers be bleſſed, how can any Nation with good conſcience make warre? Anſw. The Lords commandement to haue peace with all men, doth not binde men ſimply, but with this condition, a if it be poſſible, and as much as in vs lieth: but when there is no hope of maintaining peace, then the Lord alloweth a lawfull warre, ſuch as is for iuſt defence, or claime of our needfull due and right: for herein the caſe ſtandeth with the bodie politicke, as it doth with the naturall bodie: while there is hope of health and ſafetie, the Phyſitian vſeth gentle meanes; but when the caſe is deſperate, thē he vſeth deſperate meanes, and ſometimes giues ranke poyſon, to trie if by any meanes life may be ſaued. And ſo may the ſafetie of a State be ſought by warre, when Motions of peace will not take place.

a Rom.12.18.

Queſt. III. How can ſuit in law be maintained with good cõſcience, ſeeing it can hardly ſtand with this bleſſed peace? Anſw. So long as meanes of agreement other waies may be had betweene man and man, ſuits in law ſhould not be taken vp; for Paul blameth the Corinthians, not onely b for going to law vnder heathen Iudges, but becauſe they lawed for light matters vpon ſmall occaſions: c why rather (ſaith he) ſuffer yee not harme? But if by priuate meanes we cannot get or hold our right, we may vſe the helpe of law.

Queſt. IV. How farre forth may one man, or on people be at peace with another? League or ſocietie betweene man and man, people and people, is twofold; either of concord, or of amitie. The league of concord is, when men bind themſelues in peace one with another; and this may be had betweene all men, beleeuers or vnbeleeuers, good or bad; d haue peace with all men (ſaith the Apoſtle.) League of amitie is, when men or people bind themſelues one to another in ſpeciall loue, beſide their outward concord: and this kind of peace ought onely to be had with true beleeuers. Good king Ieboſaphat is greatly blamed of the Lord, for making this ſpeciall league with wicked Ahab, e Wouldeſt thou helpe the wicked (ſaith the Prophet) and loue them that hate the Lord? for this thing the Lords wrath is vpon thee.

Vſes. 1.

Whereas Peace-makers are bleſſed, we are to be admoniſhed, if it be poſſible to haue peace with all men, as much as in vs lieth, and within the compaſſe of our callings, to auoid all occaſions of contention and ſtrife: Saint Pauls exhortation muſt here take place, f one muſt hold the vnitie of the ſpirit in the bond of peace. To the effecting whereof, three vertues are there propounded for our practiſe: Humilitie, Meekeneſſe, and Long ſuffering. Humilitie is a vertue, whereby one man thinkes better of another then of himſelfe; for this makes a man thinke baſely of himſelfe in regard of his owne ſinnes and corruptions, whereupon he is content to giue place vnto others, and to yeeld of his own right, for the maintaining of peace: whereas on the other ſide, pride cauſeth men to ſeeke for more then their due, & ſo cauſeth contentions: as Salomon ſaith, g onely by pride doth man make contention. Meekeneſſe is a vertue, whereby a man is gentle in behauiour towards euery perſon, good or bad: this cauſeth a man to put vp iniuries, and to forbeare wrongs, when occaſion of reuenge is giuen him. Long ſuffering is a vertue, whereby a man doth beare with other mens wants, as moroſitie, and haſtineſſe, and in bearing yeelds of his owne right, for the maintenance of peace: thus dealt h Abraham with Lot, when their heardmen were at variance, though he were the ſuperiour both for age and place; yet for peace ſake, he put Lot to chooſe the place of his abode, whether on the right hand or on the left. Beſides theſe, there are many other vertues propounded in the writings of the Apoſtles, for the maintaining of peace; to wit, Humanitie, when a man can ſo carrie himſelfe towards all others, that he can take well all indifferent ſayings & doings, and conſtrue them to the beſt part, if it be poſſible: This is a moſt needfull vertue for Chriſtian peace, which we muſt follow, and hereunto frame our nature and affections, which are crooked and rebellious of themſelues, that ſo farre as is poſſible, we may haue peace with all men: for peace is the bond of euery ſocietie, of families, townes, & common wealths, without which no ſtate can endure; and Chriſtian religion commends the ſame vnto vs, Iam. 3. 17. The wiſedome which is from aboue, is pure, gentle, peaceable, full of mercie, and good fruits.

Secondly, if Peace-makers betweene man & man be bleſſed, then much more happie are they, who make peace betweene God and man; and theſe are the faithfull miniſters of the Goſpell, which ſet themſelues wholly to reconcile men vnto God: ſo Paul (ſpeaking as a Peace-maker) ſaith, i we beſeech you as Embaſſadours of Chriſt, that ye be reconciled to God: and therefore all thoſe, that by Gods grace are ſet apart for this work, muſt in ſinceritie ſet their hearts, and imploy themſelues diligently for this ende, to reconcile men vnto God, and to bring them to peace with God; and in their owne conſcience, this ſhall be a ſeale of the Lords mercie towards them, whereby they may aſſure themſelues that they be bleſſed: for howſoeuer vnto ſome, their miniſterie may be the ſauour of death, yet they are alwaies a ſweet ſauour vnto God in Chriſt.

i 2.Cor.5.20

Thirdly, hereby wee may ſee, what a bleſſed thing it is, in the day of Gods wrath againſt his people, to ſtand in the breach, and by earneſt praier to ſtaie his hand, and ſo to make peace betweene God and his people by praier. This was Moſes practiſe many a time, for which hee is renowned with all poſteritie, Pſal. 106. 23. Exod. 32. 10. 11. And ſo did Aaron, Num. 16. 47. 48. Dauid, 2. Sam. 24. 17. and many others. This dutie concerneth vs, for God hath a controuerſie with our Land, for the innumerable crying ſinnes hereof, as blaſphemie, oppreſſion, contempt of Religion, adulteries, and ſuch like: now when we ſee the great mortalitie of our brethren, or heare of treaſons and conſpiracies, and rumors of warres by enemies who threaten our ouerthrowe; then muſt we knowe that God ſhakes his rod at vs, and then eſpecially is euery one to intreat the Lord more earneſtly for mercie and reconciliation; for this is a bleſſed worke of peace, to ſtaie the Lord from the deſtruction of his people. Read Iſay k, Ieremie l, Ezekiel m, ſundrie times God complaines of the want of ſuch, as ſhould ſtand in the breach before him for the Land, that hee ſhould not deſtroie it. Behold the waight and worth of this dutie, in Abrahams interceſſion for Sodome, for he ſo farre preuailed with the Lord, n that if there had beene tenne righteous perſons in Sodome, the whole citie had beene ſpared for their ſakes: but becauſe there were none, ſo ſoone as righteous Lot was got out, it was burned with fire and brimſtone from heauen, Gen. 19. 23. 24.

n Gen.18.32

Laſtly, if Peace-makers be bleſſed, the Peace-breakers are curſed: many there be of this ſort, but aboue all, they are moſt notorious who diſturbe the peace of the Land, which by Gods mercie we haue for many yeares enioyed. It may be thought wee haue none ſuch among vs, but onely traitors, and ſuch as plot with forraine enemies; but the truth is, all thoſe doe diſturbe our peace, that walke after their hearts luſts in ſinne and wickedneſſe, as idolaters, blaſphemers, oppreſſours, drunkards, and ſuch like; theſe are peace-breakers, who cauſe the Lord to take away the bleſſing of peace: ſee Ierem. 16. 5. the Lord ſaith, He hath taken his peace from his people: the reaſon is, v. 12. becauſe euery one walked after the ſtubbornneſſe of his wicked heart, and would not heare him: and, Leuit. 26. 25. The ſword of the enemie is ſent of God, to auenge the quarrell of his couenant. It is then our tranſgreſſion and rebellion againſt God, that will bring warre and rebellion into our Land; if this were not, our peace would continue for euer: for [a] the worke of iuſtice ſhall be peace, euen quietneſſe, and aſſurance for euer: And againe, [b] in righteouſneſſe ſhalt thou be eſtabliſhed, and be farre from oppreſſion. This therefore ſhould mooue all vngodly perſons to repent, and to breake off the courſe of their ſinnes, vnleſſe they will continue profeſſed enemies to the peace of the ſtate, vnder which they liue.

b Iſa.54.14.

The ſecond point, wherein this bleſſednes of Peace-makers conſiſts, namely, in that they ſhall be called the children of God: that is, they ſhall be eſteemed and reputed for Gods children in this world, of God himſelfe, and all good men; and in the world to come, fully manifeſted ſo to be. That this is true happineſſe will ſoone appeare, by the view of the ſtate of euery child of God, for they are vnited vnto Chriſt by the ſpirit of grace, by which they are regenerate, and in Chriſt they are adopted for ſonnes and daughters, and ſo enioy Gods ſpeciall grace and fauour. Now hereupon they are Kings children, hauing God for their Father, who loues them more tenderly, then any earthly Parents can loue their owne children: ſecondly, they haue Chriſt for their brother, and ſo are heires annexed with him, hauing heauen and earth for their poſſeſſions: [q] In him they are made Kings and Prieſts vnto God: and ſhall be [r] iudges of the world at the laſt day: yea, they haue the [ſ] holy Angels for miniſtring ſpirits to attend vpon their perſons, for their defence from the power of the enemie, which farre ſurpaſſeth the dignity of any guard of men on earth whatſoeuer: all things worke together for the beſt vnto them; their croſſes and afflictions are no curſes, but fatherly trialls and chaſtiſements; yea, their ſinnes are turned to their good; to them death is no death, but a ſweet ſleepe vnto their bodies, and a ſtrait paſſage for their ſoules into eternall glory; yea in the act of death, they haue the comfort of life in the ioy of the ſpirit, and the Angels readie, when breath departeth, to carrie their ſoules to heauen.

q Reu.1.5.
ſ Heb.1.14.

1 If this be their happineſſe, to be called Gods children; then they that liue after their owne wicked luſts, voide of all care to keepe a good conſcience, are miſerable and accurſed; for they are the children of the diuill, ſeruing him in the workes of ſinne, and expreſſing his image in vngodlineſſe and worldly luſts. It ſtands them therefore in hand, if they haue any care of true happineſſe, to labour after regeneration; whereby, forſaking the luſts & courſes of their former ignorance, and embracing and obeying ſincerely the word of life, they may become Gods children, and ſo happie.

2 Secondly, haſt thou receiued this grace of Gods ſpirit, whereby thou art inclined to haue peace with all men, and to ſeeke for peace betweene God and thine owne conſcience, yea betweene the Lord and others? then comfort thy ſelfe, thou art the child of God, theſe motions comes from grace, fleſh and blood brings forth no ſuch fruits: labour therefore to maintaine theſe good motions, with all other pledges of thine adoption, and ſo ſhalt thou grow fully aſſured of thine owne happineſſe. In this age men make much adoe to get good aſſurance of earthly purchaſes; but what madneſſe is this, ſo greatly to regard momentanie things, and to haue no care, in compariſon, of our eternall inheritance, which we ſhall haue aſſured vnto vs, when we become the children of God.

V. 10. Bleſſed are they which ſuffer perſecution for righteouſneſſe ſake: for theirs is the kingdome of heauen.

11. Bleſſed are ye when men reuile you, and perſecute you, and ſay all manner of euill againſt you for my ſake, falſly.

12. Reioyce and be glad, for great is your reward in heauen: for ſo perſecuted they the Prophets which were before you.

8. Rule.

Here Chriſt propounds his eight Rule touching happineſſe, which he handles more largely then the former: for hauing laid downe the Rule, v. 10. he expounds the ſame in a ſpeciall application of it to his Diſciples in the 11. and 12. verſes. In the rule it ſelfe, note two points, firſt, the parties bleſſed: ſecondly, wherein their bleſſednes conſiſts. The parties bleſſed, are they which ſuffer perſecution for righteouſneſſe ſake. Perſecution properly ſignifieth purſuit, ſuch as one enemie maketh after an other; but here the word muſt be taken generally, for all kind of perſecution whatſoeuer. Now becauſe it is a paradoxe & abſurd in humane reaſon, to thinke him bleſſed, that for any cauſe is perſecuted; therefore Chriſt to verifie the truth hereof, repeats the ſame Rule in the next verſe, where alſo he expounds euery parcell thereof, wherewith I will content my ſelfe, becauſe Chriſt is the beſt interpreter of his owne words.

In the 11. verſe therefore Chriſt ſets downe three things, all pertaining to the true expoſition of this Rule: 1 Firſt, he explaines more particularly the parties that be bleſſed, ſaying to his Diſciples, Bleſſed are yee. In the beginning of the Chapter, we heard that hee caſt his eies vpon them and ſpake vnto them; and now here he doth the like againe; and therefore this Rule muſt not be vnderſtood of all men in the world that ſuffer, but of all Chriſts true Diſciples; and generally it is not true, for the heathen and infidels, doe often ſuffer for good cauſes, and yet remaine infidels, without the true God, and ſo are not bleſſed. Againe, a Chriſtian profeſſour may giue vp his life in a good cauſe, yet not of loue to God or his truth, but vpon ambition; and ſo not be bleſſed: for a though I giue my bodie to be burned, yet wanting loue, it profiteth mee nothing. 2 Secondly, Chriſt expoundeth particularly, what hee meaneth by perſecution, naming three parts thereof: firſt, ſlandering and reuiling, which is the perſecution of the tongue: Thus the Iewes perſecuted the Apoſtles, ſaying b they were drunke, or full of ſweete wine: Thus c Feſtus perſecuted Paul, ſaying he was madde, or beſide himſelfe. Secondly, perſecution, meaning hereby (as the word doth properly ſignifie) firſt, purſuing, ſuch as one enemie makes after another, when he ſeekes to ſpoile him of his goods, or of his life, or els, ſecondly, the bringing a man vnto the Barre, and there of malice to accuſe and arraigne him: thirdly, euill ſpeaking with lying, when as men of purpoſe be without cauſe maliciouſly carried thereunto, as when the Iewes called d Chriſt a Samaritane, that had a deuill: and ſaid that e he caſt out deuils by Belzebub the prince of deuils: and thus were the Chriſtians in the Primitiue church perſecuted, being maliciouſly accuſed for killing their owne children, for worſhipping the head of an aſſe, for inceſt, and ſuch like. To theſe three kinds of perſecutions, S. Luke chap.6.22. addes a fourth, namely, hatred: and a fifth, called ſeparation, whereby men were excommunicated, and caſt out of the Temple and Synagogues for Chriſts ſake & his Goſpels. Theſe are the ſeuerall kinds of that perſecution, for the enduring whereof, Chriſt pronounceth men bleſſed, verſ.10. whereof Hatred is the root and the reſt are branches. Thirdly, Chriſt laies down the cauſe, for which this perſecution ſhall be inflicted; namely, for my ſake; or as S. Luke ſaith, for the ſonne of mans ſake; which expoundeth this phraſe, for Righteouſneſſe ſake, verſ.10. to wit, for profeſſing, beleeuing & maintaining the doctrine of the Goſpel taught by Chriſt, touching remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting, to them that beleeue.

Tertul. apol. cap.9. & 16.

The vſes in generall. We ſee that Chriſt vrgeth this Rule of bleſſedneſſe more largely then the former: this he doth for ſpeciall cauſes: firſt, hereby hee would teach his Diſciples, and vs in them, that it is the will of God, his Church in this world ſhould be vnder the croſſe, in ſuch affliction and perſecution, as their blood ſhould be ſought for the maintenance of the faith. And this hee will haue to be the ſtate of his Church for ſpeciall cauſes: Firſt, that the members thereof, by their affliction, may be acquainted with their owne wants and infirmities, which they would not much regard, if they were freed from the croſſe. Secondly, that by affliction they may be kept from many grieuous ſinnes, into which they would fall, if they liued in peace. Thirdly, that others ſeeing the correction of the Church for ſinne, might learne thereby to hate and auoide ſinne: and laſtly, that the Church might glorifie God, in a conſtant and couragious maintenance of his truth vnto death: for euen in perſecution is Gods truth preſerued againſt the reaſon of mans wiſdome, by ſome ſuffering for the truth, being faithfull witneſſes bearing thereunto.

God's church muſt be afflicted.

Secondly, Chriſt had newly called the Twelue out of all his Diſciples, to be Apoſtles; whereupon they might thinke that they ſhould be aduanced to ſome outward honour, eaſe, & peace: but Chriſt hereby calles them from that conceit, and puts them in mind of affliction, which ſhould befall them in time to come, that when it came, they might the better endure it. And thus he prepares all Churches to ſuffer afflictions; yea, and we our ſelues, muſt hereby learne in time of peace, to prepare our ſelues againſt the day of triall: becauſe his will is, that whoſoeuer would liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus, muſt ſuffer affliction.

Luk.6.13.

Thirdly, hereby Chriſt intends to lay a groūd of comfort to his diſciples in their perſecution, by a plaine and full declaration of their happineſſe that ſuffer for righteouſneſſe ſake, in that they haue ſure title to the kingdom of heauen; out of which eſtate no ſound comfort can be had. And this ſame muſt we lay vp in ſtore, againſt the time to come; for we liue now in peace by Gods mercie, but we know not how long it will continue; we haue beene threatned and dangerouſly aſſaulted by our enemies many a time, beſides the rodde of God ſhaken with his owne hand againſt vs: and we may not think our peace will laſt alwaies, but ſeeing our ſinnes increaſe, we may be ſure our ioy & peace will one day be turned into ſorrow: and therefore it will be good to haue this Rule engrauen in our hearts, that they are bleſſed which ſuffer for righteouſneſſe ſake. If therefore tribulation come for the defence of the Goſpel, we muſt haue recourſe to this promiſe of bleſſedneſſe, and that will be our comfort.

More particularly. In the words of this Rule, Bleſſed are they, &c. Chriſt would let vs ſee that deadly hatred, which the world beareth vnto Gods Church; for ſo much the word (perſecution) importeth. The reaſons of this hatred they be theſe: 1 Firſt, the Church of God in the miniſterie of the Goſpel, ſeekes the ruine of the deuils kingdome, who is the Prince of the world; the deuill therefore rageth, and inflames the hearts of his instruments, with malice againſt Gods Church, that they may perſecute and quite deſtroy it if it were poſſible. 2 Secondly, Gods Church is a peculiar people ſeuered from the world in profeſſion, doctrine, and conuerſation, and therefore the world hates them, Ioh. 15. 16. And this verie point may ſerue to ſtay our hearts, when we ſhall be perſecuted for the profeſſion and embracing of the Goſpel of Chriſt; for the world doth hate Gods Church, and will doe to the end: there muſt be enmitie betweene the ſeede of the ſerpent, and the ſeed of the woman, Gen.3. as then he that was borne of the fleſh, perſecuted him that was borne after the ſpirit, ſo is it now, Gal.4.29.

Secondly obſerue, that this hatred of the world, is not onely againſt the members of Gods Church, but euen againſt Chriſts holy religion; ſo Chriſt ſaith, for my ſake, or for my Religions ſake. This is to be marked as a moſt excellent argument to perſwade our conſciences, that the Goſpell of Chriſt which we profeſſe, is the true and bleſſed doctrine of God, becauſe the wicked world doth alwaies hate it; yea, it hateth vs alſo for the Goſpels ſake: now if it were a doctrine of men, it would fit their natures well, & they would loue it, for the world doth loue his owne. Ioh.15.19.

Thirdly, if they be bleſſed that ſuffer perſecution, then how may any man lawfully flie in perſecution? Anſw. A man may flie in perſecution with a good conſcience, 2. Caueats about flight in perſecution. theſe two things obſerued: firſt, that he be not hindered by his particular calling: ſecondly, that he hath liberty offred by gods prouidence to eſcape the hands of his enemies. The intent of this verſe, is not to forbid flight, but to comfort ſuch as are in perſecution, and cannot eſcape: for the word ſignifieth ſuch perſecution, as is by purſuit and oppreſſion, which cannot be avoided.

Laſtly, ſeeing they are bleſſed that ſuffer for righteouſneſſe ſake, Whether are they alwaies curſed that ſuffer deſeruedly for an euill cauſe, for the cōtrary reaſon is in cōtraries? Anſ. They are alwaies accurſed, ſaue in one caſe; to wit, vnles they repent for their vnrighteouſnes, for which they are afflicted; but by true repentāce they become bleſſed. The theife vpō the croſſe had liued in theft, and was therefore attached, condemned, and crucified, and ſo he ſuffered for vnrighteouſneſſe; but yet he was ſaued, becauſe he repented, and beleeued in Chriſt.

It is added, for righteouſneſſe ſake. In this clauſe we are taught a ſpeciall leſſon; namely, that when God ſhall lay vpon vs any affliction or perſecution; as impriſonment, baniſhment, loſſe of goods, or of life it ſelfe; we muſt alwaies looke that the cauſe be good, and then ſuffer willingly. This is a neceſſarie Rule, for wee muſt ſuffer affliction either publikely or priuately if we will liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus. Now it is not the puniſhment, but the cauſe that makes a Martyr: and to this purpoſe Peter ſaith, 1.Pet.4.15. Let none of you ſuffer as a Murtherer, a Theife, or a buſie-bodie; but if any man ſuffer as a Chriſtian, let him not be aſhamed, but glorifie God in this behalfe: and therefore we muſt be ſure the cauſe be good; yea this we muſt looke vnto in our particular priuate croſſes.

Verſe 11. Bleſſed are yee when men reuile you, and perſecute you, &c. In handling the former verſe, we ſhewed the meaning of theſe words, and how they ſerue to expound the former Rule. The point here to be obſerued is this, That to reuile and ſlander, yea (as Luke ſaith Luk.6.22. to hate a man for a good cauſe, eſpecially for religion, in perſecution: which ſhewes how fearefull the common ſinne of the age is, whereby men reuile their brethren, with baſe and odious tearmes, becauſe they ſhewe ſome care to pleaſe God, and to adorne their profeſſion by a godly life. But thou art a perſecutor whoſoeuer thou art that vſeſt this, and therefore repent and leaue it, for it is a preparation to a greater ſinne in this kinde, and moſt odious in Gods ſight, as the puniſhment hereof declares, Gen.21.9,10. with Gal.4.29,30.

S. Luke addes a ſecond word, And when they ſeparate you, whereby is meant excommunication out of the Temple and Synagogue; a puniſhment which Chriſt foretold ſhould befall his diſciples. This cenſure was put in execution in their Synagogues: for beſides the adminiſtration of ciuill Iuſtice, Eccleſiaſticall matters were there handled. Now marke what Chriſt ſaith, Though excommunication bee mine owne ordinance; yet bleſſed are you when men excommunicate you out of the Temple and Synagogues, for my names ſake: where hee maketh excommunication a kinde of perſecution, when it is denounced againſt men for righteouſneſſe ſake.

Here then we may learne, what to thinke of the Popes Bulls, whereby he excommunicates Kings and Queenes, and particular Churches, for denying ſubiection to his chaire: namely, that they are the deuills inſtruments, wherewith Gods children are perſecuted; and that all ſuch as are thus excommunicated, for defending the truth of the Goſpel, are bleſſed: for excommunication is not the inſtrument of 1 a curſe to them that ſuffer it for a good cauſe. 2 Secondly, hence we learne, that excommunication abuſed againſt Gods word, is no powerfull cenſure, though in it ſelfe, beeing vſed according to Gods ordinance, it be a moſt terrible thunderbolt, excluding a man in part, frō the Church, and from the kingdom of heauen: and therefore all Churches muſt ſee, that this cenſure be not abuſed, for the abuſers of it incurre the danger of the curſe, and not they againſt whom it is vniuſtly pronounced.

ver. 12. Reioyce and be glad, for great is your reward in heauen: for ſo perſecuted they the Prophets which were before you.

Here Chriſt drawes a concluſion from the former Rule; for hauing ſaid in generall, that they which ſuffer for righteouſneſſe ſake are bleſſed, ver. 10. and applyed it in particular to his Diſciples, ver. 11. hereupon he inferres, that they muſt reioyce in affliction, euen then, or as (Luke[g] ſaith) in that day: yea they muſt bee glad; which word ſignifieth exceeding ioy, ſuch as we vſe to expreſſe by outward ſignes in the bodie; as skipping and dauncing; ſuch as [h] David vſed to teſtifie his ioy, for the returne of the Arke of God to his citie. This is a moſt worthy concluſion, often vrged and commended vnto vs in Scripture: Iames 1. 2. Brethren, count it exceeding great ioy, when yee fall into diuerſe temptations. Rom. 5. 3. Wee reioyce in tribulation, knowing that tribulation bringeth forth patience; and, Acts, 5. 41. The Diſciples reioyced, that they were counted worthie to ſuffer rebuke for the name of Chriſt.

g Luk.6.23. [illegible]

h 2.Sam.6. 14.16.

Here wee learne then, that Gods Church and people, that ſuffer in a good cauſe muſt reioyce and bee glad: This muſt be remembred, for we haue beene many times in great danger of our enemies for the Goſpels ſake: and it may pleaſe God to leaue vs in their hands, for our manifold ſinnes, and great abuſe of his heauenly bleſſings: which if he doe, what muſt bee our behauiour? muſt we be ſwallowed vp with ſorrowe and griefe? no, but humbling our ſelues for our ſinnes, wee muſt remember for what we doe ſuffer, and reioyce and bee glad in that behalfe; for though our outward man periſh, yet the inner man ſhall be reuiued.

Now becauſe it is a hard thing to reioyce in grieuous afflictions, therefore Chriſt doth giue two reaſons to mooue them hereunto; firſt, from the Recompenſe of reward after this life, in theſe words, for great is your reward in heauen. This point I haue handled heretofore, and therefore I will here onely ſhewe how the Papiſts abuſe this text, to prooue the merits of mans workes of grace; for hence they reaſon thus, Where there is a reward, there is merit: But in heauen there is a reward for mans workes of grace: and therefore in this life, there is merit by them. To this it is anſwered diuers wayes: I will touch the heads of the principall. 1 Firſt, the word reward muſt not be vnderſtood properly, but figuratiuely; for Chriſts ſpeach is borrowed from labourers, who after they haue done their worke, doe receiue their wages, which is the reward thereof: euen ſo, after Chriſts diſciples and ſeruants haue ſuffered afflictions for the name of Chriſt, at the end of this life they ſhall receiue life euerlaſting. 2 Secondly, when we reade of wages and reward in Scripture, we muſt not dreame of any thing due by right of debt and merit, but conceiue thereby, that which is giuen by promiſe, and of meere mercie; like as when an earthly Father promiſeth to his ſonne, to giue him this or that thing, if hee will learne; now the Fathers gift is not meritted by the child, but is freely giuen, the more to incite the childe to learne his booke. 3 Thirdly, if wee vnderſtand reward properly; then we muſt referre it, not to our ſufferings, but to the ſufferings of Chriſt: for there is no proportion betweene our ſufferings, and life eternall: the afflictions of this preſent life are not worthy of the glory which ſhal be ſhewed vnto vs. Rom. 8. 18.

Rhemiſts on this verſe.

The ſecond reaſon is take from the example of the auncient Prophets; for ſo perſecuted they the Prophets which were before you. In this Reaſon, Chriſt intendeth two things; Firſt, to teach his Diſciples and vs, that perſecution for good cauſes, is no new or ſtrāge thing: Secondly, to comfort his Diſciples & ſeruants in their ſufferings; for that thereby, they ſhould be made conformable to the ancient worthy Prophets, who were of old renowned among men, and are now glorified of God in heauen. Hereto we muſt compare the words of Luke ſpoken to the ſame purpoſe: [i] for after this manner did the Fathers to the Prophets. By Fathers we muſt needs meane the auncient people of the Iewes, for here he ſpeaketh to his Diſciples & others that were Iewes by nation. Now hence obſerue a ſtrange point; to wit, that the auncient Prophets, who were moſt worthy men of God, were perſecuted in their times, not ſo much by forrainers and enemies to religion, as by thoſe that were outwardly members of the Church of God, and profeſſors of religion. This may ſeeme ſtrange, that men liuing in Gods church, ſhould growe to this height of impietie, to become perſecutors of Gods Saints: but Saint Stephen giueth the reaſon hereof; namely, their [k] hard hearts, whereby they reſiſted the holy Ghoſt in the miniſterie of the word; for which God left them to themſelues, ſo as they ran headlong to this height of impietie, to perſecute Gods deereſt ſeruants. The like we may ſee in theſe our dayes; ſome that haue beene profeſſors, after long hearing, breake forth into open Atheiſme, calling this into queſtion, whether there be a God: and among others there is alſo to be ſeen as vile crueltie and oppreſſion in their particular dealings, and as abhominable filthineſſe, as is to be found amōg the heathen, and idolaters: al which, and many other enormous ſinnes proceed from this; that though men profeſſe religion, yet they denie ſubiection to the Goſpel preached, ſo as it is not in them a word of power: for which cauſe, God in his iuſtice giues them vp to hardneſſe of heart, to commit ſinne without remorſe. And therefore if we would eſcape the fearefull iudgement of a reprobate ſenſe, let vs labour with feare and trembling, to become obedient to the word which we heare; for if we doe not glorifie God in the meanes wherein he offers grace and mercie, God will be ſure to glorifie himſelfe in our deſerued cōfuſion.

i Luk.6.23.

k Act.7.51.

V. 13. Ye are the ſalt of the earth: but if the ſalt hath loſt his ſauour, &c.

In this verſe and the reſt, to the 16. Chriſt propoundeth the ſecond branch of this Sermon, touching the office of the Apoſtles, and in them of all Miniſters; wherein, his intent is to mooue them to diligence in preaching the will of God to all people.

The Coherence of this part with the former, ſtandeth thus: Chriſt had ſhewed before in diuers precepts, that many are bleſſed, whereupon ſome might aske, how they ſhould attaine to this happineſſe, and to thoſe graces of the Spirit, which make them fit for that eſtate? Chriſt here anſwers, that the preaching of the Goſpel is the principall meanes to worke in their hearts thoſe graces, to which true happineſſe is promiſed. And becauſe it is an excellent priuiledge to bring men to this eſtate, therefore hee exciteth his diſciples to diligence in this Miniſterie by two Reaſons, drawne from the properties of this worke, and propounded in two ſimilitudes: The firſt is taken from ſalt, in theſe words: yee are the ſalt of the earth: and amplyfied in the words following, to the end of the verſe. The ſecond is drawne from light, ver. 14.15.

For the firſt: yee are the ſalt of the earth: yee, that is, you whom I haue called to be Apoſtles, and ſet apart for the worke of the Miniſterie, are ſalt; not properly, but by reſemblance; yet not in regard of their perſons, but of their miniſterie; becauſe hereby they were to ſeaſon men for God, and to make them ſauourie both in heart and life: of the earth; not of Iudea only, but of the whole world, as may appeare by their commiſſion, Math. 28.19. Goe therefore and teach all Nations.

Miniſters muſt ſeeke to expreſſe the properties of ſalt.

Frõ this deſcription, both Miniſters & people, may learne their dutie. Firſt for Miniſters; by this title of ſalt here giuen vnto them, Chriſt would teach them, firſt, how they ought to diſpenſe the word of God, both Lawe and Goſpel; namely, ſo as they labour therein to expreſſe the properties of ſalt, whereto Chriſt alludeth in his Title: Now the properties of ſalt, applyed to rawe fleſh, or freſh wounds are principally three; Firſt, it wil bite and fret, beeing of nature hot and drie: Secondly, it makes meats ſauourie vnto our taſte: Thirdly, it preſerueth meats from putrifaction, by drawing out of them ſuperfluous moiſtneſſe. The Apoſtles therefore and other Miniſters beeing ſalt, muſt not only in generall deliuer the word of God vnto the people; but withall apply the ſame particularly vnto mens hearts & conſciences, as ſalt is applyed vnto meat: And that for three endes; firſt the Law muſt be applyed, to rip vp mens hearts, to make them ſee their ſinnes; it muſt fret and bite them by the curſe thereof, to cauſe them to renounce themſelues, and to crie with the Iewes, [l] Men and brethren what ſhall we doe? Secondly, the Goſpel muſt be preached, that men feeling their corruption like rottenneſſe in their ſoules, may by the bleſſing of the ſpirit bee thereby ſeaſoned with grace, and ſo reconciled vnto God, and made ſauourie in his ſight. This is the end of the Miniſterie, 2. Cor. 5. 20. We are Embaſſadours for Chriſt, as though God did beſeech you through vs, wee pray you in Chriſts ſteed, that you be reconciled vnto God. Thirdly, both the Lawe and the Goſpel muſt bee continually diſpenſed, that thereby ſinne and corruption may be daily mortified and conſumed both in heart and life; euen as ſuperfluous humors are dried vp by ſalt; And this is the right diſpenſing of Gods word: for euery diſcourſe vpon a text of Scripture is not preaching, but he that ſo expoundeth and applyeth the word, that his miniſterie may be ſalt vnto his hearers, he it is that preacheth the word indeede.

Secondly, Chriſt calling his Diſciples ſalt, teacheth them and all miniſters, that they themſelues ought firſt to be ſeaſoned by the word: for how can they fitly ſeaſon others by applying this ſalt vnto their conſciences, who neuer felt the biting of it vpon their owne? He that is vnſeaſoned himſelfe may ſpeake Gods word, which God may bleſſe to the good of others: but yet in reſpect of himſelfe, it is a riddle which cannot be vnderſtood.

Thirdly, this Title giueth good direction to euery Miniſter for his manner of preaching: for if the word of God alone be that ſauoury ſalt, wherewith mans heart is ſeaſoned for the Lord, then it ought to be diſpenſed purely and ſincerely, without the mixture of humane inuentions. This was Pauls care, [m] my word and my preaching (ſaith he) ſtood not in the entiſing ſpeach of mans wiſedome, but in plaine euidence of the ſpirit and of power, that your faith ſhould not be in the wiſedome of men, but in the power of God. Experience teacheth vs, that ſalt by mixture with other things looſeth of his ſauor: and ſo it is with the word: Indeede there is a place for Arts and tongues, and humane learning with euery diſpenſer of the word, wherein he may vſe them with great commendation, to witte, in his priuate preparation: but not in the publique diſpenſation whereby hee ſeaſoneth mens hearts vnto God; that the word of God alone muſt doe, for to it alone belongs the promiſe of the ſpirit, *Iſa.*59.21. And therefore hee muſt vſe great diſcretion in this miniſterie, and labour ſo to ſpeake that the ſpirit may take delight to accompany the ſame.

Fourthly, this Title teacheth all Gods Miniſters by patience to poſſeſſe their ſoules, when the wicked doe fret and fume againſt them for their miniſterie; for this is a teſtimonie that their miniſterie is ſalt, and bites their corrupt conſciences, as it ought to doe: therefore they are to goe on with cheerefulneſſe, endeauouring more & more to ſeaſon their hearts herewith.

[m] 1.Cor.2.4.5.

Secondly, the people of God that heare his word, may learne good inſtruction from this Title: firſt, hereby euery one may ſee what hee is by nature, namely, like vnto fleſh ſubiect to corruption, nay, as vnſauory fleſh, & ſtinking carion in the noſtrels of God; for els what needed this ſalt? This therefore muſt mooue vs to lay aſide all pride of heart, whereby we thinke highly of our ſelues: yea, we muſt become baſe and lowely in our owne eies, in regard of the vnſauourie taſt of our naturall corruption, elſe we ſhall neuer feele the ſeaſoning vertue of Gods holy Miniſterie.

Secondly, euerie one muſt hereby learne to ſuffer the word of reproofe, whereby his heart and conſcience may be ripped vp, and his ſores of ſinne diſcouered; when we haue a cut or a wound in our fleſh, we can be content to put ſalt vpon it, to drie vp the noyſome humours, that otherwiſe would corrupt; now can wee endure the ſmart of ſalt for the health of our bodies, and ſhall we not much more ſuffer the word of God to rippe vp our ſinnes, and to mortifie the ſame, for the ſaluation of our ſoules?

Thirdly, euery one muſt giue all diligence to be ſeaſoned throughout, with this heauenly ſalt, that the thoughts of his heart, the words of his mouth, and the actions of his life, may bee all ſauourie and acceptable vnto God in Chriſt; yea, in his conuerſation with men, hee muſt labour to ſhewe the power of this ſeaſoning: Coloſſ. 4. 6. Let your ſpeech bee gratious alwaies and powdred with ſalt: that is, ſeaſoned by the word, that it may ſauour of grace, to thoſe that heare vs. If we liue vnder the Miniſterie of the word, and be not ſeaſoned therwith, our caſe is dangerous; for therein it is of the nature of ſalt, which cauſeth barrenneſſe, where it ſeaſoneth not: as we may ſee in the practiſe of Abimelech, who ſowed [n] ſalt in Shechem, to make the ground barren, and the place deſpiſed.

[n] Iudg.9.45.

But if the ſalt haue loſt his ſauour, wherewith ſhall it be ſalted: it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be caſt out, and troden vnder the foot of men. Here Chriſt amplifieth the former reaſon, whereby he mooued his Apoſtles to fidelitie and diligence in their miniſterie, by the danger of the contrarie infidelitie, which is as vnſauourie ſalt, incurable and vnprofitable, and ſo ſubiect to a fearefull curſe; and therefore (ſaith Chriſt) you had neede to be faithfull in ſeaſoning the world by your Miniſterie. In this amplification we may obſerue foure points: Firſt, the ordinarie ſinne that doth accompanie the calling of the Miniſterie. Secondly, the danger of this ſinne. Thirdly, the vnprofitableneſſe of ſuch a Miniſterie. Fourthly, the iudgement of God due vnto it.

I. Point. As other callings haue their ſeuerall faults, ſo hath the calling of a Miniſter, noted in theſe words; if the ſalt haue loſt his ſauour, &c. Salt is ſaid to be become vnſauourie, when it looſeth that vertue and acrimonie, which it hath in ſeaſoning that fleſh on which it is caſt. Now Miniſters are as vnſauourie ſalt, when they become vnprofitable in their Miniſterie, and either doe not, or cannot diſpenſe Gods word, for the ſeaſoning of mens ſoules, that they may be acceptable to God, and reconciled vnto him in Chriſt. In this calling there be eſpecially foure kinds of vnſauourie ſalt; First, the blind watch-men that haue not knowledge; [o] and dumbe dogges that cannot barke: that is, ſuch as either cannot, or if they can, will not diſpenſe Gods word, for the ſaluation of mens ſoules. Secondly, Hereticall Teachers, who preach falſe and damnable doctrine, ſuch as doth not ſeaſon, but poiſon and deſtroy the ſoule: ſuch were the falſe Prophets among the Iewes, who enticed to Idolatrie: Deut. 30. 1, 2. and the falſe Apoſtles, and Heretikes in the Primitiue Church, [p] whoſe words did fret as a canker, and deſtroyed the faith of many. And ſuch are the Romiſh teachers at this day, and the Ieſuits and Seminaries among vs, who though they be qualified with many good gifts of learning, yet by mingling the word of God with their owne inuentions, and humane traditions, they raſe the foundation, they become vnſauourie ſalt, and hereticall Teachers. And here by the way, who cannot but wonder, that ſtudents in Diuinitie, ſhould ſo much affect the Poſtils and Comments of Friers and Popiſh writers, as they doe? doubtleſſe it argueth that the word of God hath not ſeaſoned their hearts; for where ſuch vnſauourie ſalt hath reliſh, the wholeſome doctrine of Gods word hath neuer ſeaſoned. Thirdly, they are vnſauourie ſalt, who teach true doctrine, but yet miſapply the ſame. Many ſuch were in the Church of the Iewes in the dayes of [q] Ieremie, and [r] Ezechiel, who much complaine of ſowing pillowes vnder the elbowes of the wicked, by preaching peace vnto them, when they ſhould haue called to repentãce by the diſcouerie of their ſinnes, and denunciation of Gods iudgements: as alſo, for making ſadde the hearts of thoſe, whome God had not made ſad. And ſuch are thoſe at this day, who haue ſmooth tongues, in reſpect of ſinne, and yet are full of bitter inuectiues againſt the better ſort. By this meanes the word of God looſeth his acrimonie and ſharpenes, whereby the wicked ſhould be awaked out of their ſlumber of ſecuritie, and the godly further ſeaſoned, and made more acceptable vnto God. Fourthly, they are vnſauourie ſalt, who though they teach the truth, and generally apply it well, doe yet lead vngodly and ſcandalous liues: for an offenſiue and vnſauoury conuerſation in the Teacher, doth hinder the ſeaſoning vertue of the word of his Miniſterie in the hearts of the people; and his doctrine cannot ſo much edifie, as his courſe of life deſtroyeth, because naturall men regard not ſo much what is ſaide, as what is done. This being ſo, all Gods Miniſters, ſters, and thoſe alſo that deſtinate themſelues to this calling, muſt haue ſpeciall care, ſo to be qualified for this worke, and ſo to preach the word of God, that it may be ſauourie in the hearts and conſciences of them that heare it. This is a matter of great importance, as well in reſpect of the Miniſter, as of the people; and thus ſhall it appeare, that they are not onely no vnſauourie ſalt, but euen ſuch as doe ſeaſon others.

II. Point. The danger of this ſinne, in beeing vnſauourie ſalt (that is vnfaithfull in the Miniſterie) is very great, noted in theſe words; wherewith ſhall it be ſalted? Some referre this ſalting to the earth, as if Chriſt had ſaid, wherewith ſhall the earth be ſalted; but it doth more truely belong to the ſalt it ſelfe, as Mark. 9.5. Salt is good, but if the ſalt be vnſauourie, wherewith ſhall it, that is, the ſalt it ſelfe, be ſeaſoned? Againe, the interrogation wherewith, imports a vehement deniall; as if Chriſt ſhould ſay, If ſalt once looſe his naturall propertie of ſaltneſſe, it can neuer be recouered: now vnfaithfull and vnprofitable Miniſters, are vnſauourie ſalt; and therefore their danger is exceeding great. And yet the compariſon muſt not ſo be vrged, as thereby to prooue the ſtate of Miniſters to be incurable, if they once become vnfaithfull: but Chriſts meaning is, to ſhewe that vnprofitable Miniſters are very hardly, or ſeldom euer made ſauourie againe; at leaſt, if formerly they haue beene faithfull, and after haue fallen from it. That this is the true meaning, may thus appeare; for notes of negation in [*] Scripture, doe not alwaies import an abſolute deniall, but ſometime they are put to expreſſe great difficultie, and to ſhew things that ſeldome come to paſſe, Matth. 23.33. O generation of vipers, how ſhould you eſcape the damnation of hell? that is, very hardly: And ſo where it is ſaid, that Dauid did not decline from the way of the Lord, ſaue in the matter of Vriah: that is, very ſeldome: for he ſinned grieuouſly in [f] numbring the people. So Matth. 13.57. A Prophet is not without honour (that is, very ſeldome) ſaue in his owne countrie; for ſometime hee may be diſhonoured elſewhere; and ſometime alſo, haue honour in his owne countrie: So in this place, this reſemblance of incurableneſſe in vnfaithful Miniſters, muſt be vnderſtood, of great hardneſſe and difficultie, not of an impoſſibilitie, as experience alſo teacheth: for King Salomon was a Prophet of God, who by his adulteries and idolatrie, became wonderfull vnſauourie; and yet no doubt, he afterward recouered, and became ſauourie againe by true repentance, whereupon he penned the booke of Eccleſiaſtes: ſo Peter by his deniall of Chriſt, became vnſauourie; yet by Gods mercie, vpon his repentance, he was ſeaſoned againe.

This then is the danger, that Miniſters declining from fidelitie, doe ſeldome or hardly recouer: the reaſon is; Firſt, becauſe they want teachers to inſtruct them, as they inſtruct the people. Secondly, the word in them is vnſauourie which ſhould ſeaſon them, and ſo there is no other meanes to recouer them ordinarily. Goe through all ages, and obſerue the examples of falſe prophets in the old Teſtament, of falſe Apoſtles in the new, and of Archheretikes in the primitiue Church, and hardly ſhall you find any that repented: yea, marke ſuch Miniſters as in our age incline to Poperie, and for the moſt part they become incurable. Hereby then euery miniſter is taught to learne and practiſe Pauls leſſon to Timothie, To take heed vnto himſelfe, and vnto learning, continuing therein, fighting a good fight, hauing faith and a good conſcience. Theſe things Paul doth notably vrge in that Epiſtle, giuing good direction to attaine thereunto: 1. Tim. 4.13. 14. 16. and 6. 11, 12.

III. Point. The vnprofitableneſſe of vnfaithfull Miniſters, expreſſed in theſe words; It is thenceforth good for nothing: that is, as vnſauourie ſalt, becomming vnfit to ſeaſon meate, is good for nothing; (for caſt it on the ground, it makes it barren; nay, caſt it on the dung-hill, and it hurts that alſo which otherwiſe ſerues for good vſe:) ſo is it with Miniſters that become vnfaithfull, they are of all other moſt noiſome both to the Church and commonwealth; for Gods curſe is vpon them, and they are good for no ſocietie. This might be declared by many examples, of ſuch as hauing fallen to Poperie, from our Miniſterie, haue after prooued, not onely deadly enemies to our Church, and to the truth, but the rankeſt Rebels and Traitors vnto our Prince and State, of all others.

Queſtion. Whether may ſuch Miniſters, as become vnſauourie ſalt, by making Apoſtacie from the truth (as if a Proteſtant Miniſter become a Maſſe-prieſt) be reſtored againe into the Miniſterie of Gods Church, vpon their repentance? Anſwer. Some be of minde, that they may not be receiued at all into the Miniſterie, after ſuch apoſtacie: but I finde nothing in the Scripture, which ſhould hinder their reſtitution, if their conuerſion vnto God, and to his truth, may appeare to be true & vnfained. It is alledged, that the Prieſts vnder the law, falling to Idolatrie, [t] were for euer debarred from the Prieſts office? Anſwer, That was for ſpeciall cauſe; for the Prieſts were types of Chriſt, and their outward holineſſe ſhadowed out the perfect integritie & holines of our Sauiour Chriſt, for which cauſe there was none choſen to the Prieſts office, who had any blemiſh in his bodie. Now by ſuch open Idolatrie, they diſabled themſelues from beeing figures of Chriſt, and therefore were reiected. Againe, we finde that inferiour officers, were not debarred from their office in the Sanctuarie, though they committed idolatrie, as the Prieſts did. It is ſaid againe, that a Miniſter muſt be vnblameable; but a Maſſe-prieſt cannot be vnblameable. Anſw. Without true repentance none is vnblameable; but by true repentance, euen a Maſſe-prieſt may become vnblameable. But ſuch as fall away, become vnſauoury ſalt, which cannot be made ſauourie againe? Anſ. By the power of God it may; and ſo may an vnfaithfull Miniſter through Gods mercie be renued by repentance, and become profitable in the Church.

[t] Ezek.44. 12,13.

IV. Point. The curſe, and puniſhment of vnſauourie ſalt: It is caſt out, and troden vnder foote of men: whereby Chriſt ſignifieth, that vnfaithfull and vnprofitable miniſters, ſhall be condemned both of God and man: Hoſ.4.6. Becauſe thou haſt deſpiſed knowledge, therefore alſo will I deſpiſe thee. Mal.2.9. Therefore haue I made you to be deſpiſed and vile, before all the people; becauſe ye kept not my way, but haue beene partiall in the Law. See the ſigne of the Lords contempt, in his fearefull iudgements vpon them; as on Nadab and Abihu, Levit. 10.1,2. Hophni & Phinehas, 1. Sam. 2.34. And though they may eſcape his hand in this life, yet will Chriſt at his comming, [u] cut them off, and giue them their portion with Hypocrites, where is nothing but weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.

The conſideration whereof, muſt mooue all Miniſters to beware of vnfaithfulneſſe in their calling, leaſt the curſe of vnſauourie ſalt light vpon them. The Carpenters who builded Noahs Arke, were themſelues drowned in the flood; becauſe neither Noahs preaching, nor their owne working did mooue them to repentance: And the like iudgement will befall vnfaithfull Miniſters; though they haue the name of ſuch as ſhould ſeaſon others, yet becauſe of their vnfaithfulneſſe, they become vnſauourie; God himſelfe at length will caſt them out, and tread them vnder foote. If this were laid to heart, as it ought to be, it would driue many from their idleneſſe, vanitie, and couetouſneſſe, wherby they become vnſauoury vnto God.

V. 14. Ye are the light of the world: a Citie that is ſet on a hill, cannot be hid.

15. Neither doe men light a candle, and put it vnder a buſhell, but on a candleſticke: and it giueth light to all that are in the houſe.

16. Let your light ſo ſhine before men, &c.

Here Chriſt laieth downe the ſecond reaſon, to induce his Diſciples, and in them all Miniſters, to preach the word of God faithfully; as if he ſhould ſay, By calling you are the light of the world, and your condition is ſuch, that all your ſayings and doings are open to the eyes of men: therefore be carefull that ye glorifie God therein. The firſt part of this reaſon, is in theſe words; Ye are the light of the world: the ſecond is expreſſed by two compariſons, in the words following; A Citie that is ſet on a hill, &c. the concluſion in the 16.v.

For the firſt part: Ye are the light of the world. If Miniſters be lights, why ſaith the Scripture, that Iohn Baptiſt was not the light of the world? Ioh.1.8. Anſ. There be two kinds of lights, Originall, and Deriued. Originall is that, which is the cauſe of all light; and ſo Chriſt alone is the light of the world; and in this ſenſe doth the Scripture denie Iohn Baptiſt to be that light. Deriued light, is that which ſhineth forth, but yet is receiued from another; and ſo [x] Iohn Baptiſt was a burning and a ſhining lampe: ſo were the Apoſtles lights; [y] for God that cauſed the light to ſhine out of darkeneſſe, ſhined into their hearts, to enable them to giue the light of knowledge in the face of Ieſus Chriſt. And ſo muſt theſe words be vnderſtood, that whereas the world naturally ſits in darkneſſe, and in the ſhadow of death, the Apoſtles by the light of their miniſterie were to ſhine vnto them.

The vſe. Firſt, this title of light giuen to Miniſters, ſheweth the right vſe of the Miniſterie of the word. The whole world lieth in darkeneſſe, that is, in ignorance vnder ſinne, and ſo ſubiect to damnation by nature; now God hath ordained the Miniſterie of the word to be a light, whereby this ignorance may be expelled, and they brought to the knowledge of their ſinnes, and of the way that leadeth vnto life: Act. 26.18. Paul muſt preach, that both Iewes and Gentiles may come from darknes vnto light.

Secondly, by this Title, Chriſt ſheweth how his word is to be handled; namely, ſo as it may be a light vnto mens minds and conſciences, to make them ſee their ſinnes, and their great miſerie thereby; then, to let them ſee the remedy from that miſerie, which is Ieſus Chriſt: and laſtly, to ſhew them that ſtrait way of obedience in all good duties to God and man, which God requireth in the life of a Chriſtian. Men may make long diſcourſes vpon a text of Scripture; but that onely is true preaching, which giues this light of knowledge to the mind and conſcience, which leadeth men to God.

Againe, the hearers of the word muſt be admoniſhed of their duties from this title. Firſt, if Miniſters be lights in regard of their Miniſterie, then euery hearer muſt ſo applie his heart vnto the preaching of the word, that it may inlighten his conſcience with the knowledge of his ſinnes, and of his miſerie by reaſon of them; as alſo, with the true knowledge of Chriſt, and of the will of God, which may guide him in obedience: otherwiſe, this holy ordinance, turneth to his deeper condemnation.

Secondly, euery hearer muſt learne Pauls leſſon, Eph.5.8. Ye were once darkneſſe, but nowe ye are light in the Lord, walke as children of the [y] 2.Cor.4.6.

A light: that is, looke what the word teacheth, which is this light, that doe. When the time is darke, wherein we walke, we vſe torches and candles, that ſo we may ſee the right path: behold, the world is darkneſſe, we therefore muſt labour to haue the word of God to be a light vnto our feete, in all the ſteppes of our callings wherein we liue; for hee that walketh in the dark, knoweth not whither he goeth, Ioh.12.35.

Laſtly, there be many that liue in ignorance, as blind, as though they had neuer heard of Chriſt; and though they heare the word preached, yet ſtill they remaine in darkeneſſe: but they muſt know, that their caſe is fearefull, for the Miniſterie of the word is light: B they therefore hauing the benefit thereof, ought to be children of the light: and becauſe they are not enlightened, vndoubtedly a moſt fearefull iudgement of God is vpon them; for marke what Paul ſaith, [a] If our Goſpel be hid, it is hid to thoſe that periſh, in whō the god of this world hath blinded the eies of their mind: and therefore, ſuch perſons muſt labour to know and practiſe the ſpeciall grounds and duties of true religion, that ſo in conſcience they may be truly aſſured, that the word of God is becom their light.

a 2.Cor.4.3.4.

The ſecond part of this reaſon, is this; Your condition is ſuch, in regard of your calling, that all your ſayings and doings are ſeene of men: and it is expreſſed by two ſimilitudes: Firſt, of a citie ſet on a hill, which cannot be hid: Secondly, of candle put on a candleſticke, verſ. 15. C And thus it dependeth on the former part: Whereas Chriſt had called his Diſciples the light of the world, they might take it for a matter of ſome outward renowne: Chriſt therefore tels them, that his intent herein, is not to giue them titles of praiſe, but to make thē acquainted with their hard condition, in which they were like to bee, by reaſon of their great and waightie calling; wherein they ſhould become ſpectacles to all the world: for thus hee ſaith, A Citie that is ſet on a hill, cannot be hid, but all that paſſe by may ſee it: and a Candle lighted and ſet on a candleſticke, giueth light to all that are in the houſe; euen ſo, you mine Apoſtles, by reaſon of your publicke calling, ſhall haue D all your ſayings and doings manifeſt to the eies of the whole world.

Becauſe both theſe ſimilitudes ſerue to expreſſe the ſame thing, therefore the points of inſtruction, which ſpecially concerne Gods Miniſters, ſhall be propounded from the ioynt ſcope of them both. 1 Firſt, whereas the condition of Gods miniſters is ſuch, to haue their whole conuerſation open and manifeſt to the eies of the world; therefore they eſpecially, aboue all others, (though it concerne euery man in his place) muſt haue care that their liues and conuerſations, both for ſayings and doings, be holy and blameles: for their place is ſuch, that by their well doing, they win many vnto the Lord; but by their bad conuerſation, they cary many a ſoule with them to deſtruction. 2. Hereby they muſt learne, not to thinke it ſtrange, if they lie open to manifold reproaches, and abuſes, more then any other ſort of men: for they, of all other, lie moſt open to the world; and if their conuerſation be godly, it is the more diſtaſtfull to the world: as Cain hated Abel for his good workes, 1.Ioh.3.12. 3. Hence it appeareth, that men in this calling, cannot without great ſinne, hide the gifts and talents which God hath giuen them: for they are as lighted candles, which muſt not be put vnder a buſhell. Sundrie men haue heretofore offended this way, as thoſe in the Primitiue Church, who beeing godly men, and well qualified for the Miniſterie, did yet withdraw thēſelues from publike ſocieties, to liue in ſolitary places: for by their gifts they were excellent lights, and therefore they ought to haue ſhined forth to others. And at this day, they offend this way, that will not abaſe themſelues in their Miniſterie, to ſpeake plainely, to the meane capacitie of the ſimple: yea, they alſo put the light vnder a buſhell, who beeing fit for this Miniſterie, do ſpend their daies wholly in the Vniuerſities, except it be that they want a calling into the Church, and haue a lawfull calling for their ſtay in the Vniuerſities: and though men haue not ſuch meanes of calling forth, as were to be wiſhed, yet they that liue in Schooles of learning, ought to ſhew themſelues willing to become lights abroad in the Church; ſaying with the Prophet Iſaie, when his lipps were touched with a cole from the Altar, [a] Here am I, Lord, ſend me. In a word, all perſons in this calling, that any way hide their gifts, are here blamed: for they are lights which ſhould not be hid.

a Iſa.6.8.

From theſe compariſons, wherein Chriſt ſets out the open ſtate of his Apoſtles to the viewe of the world, the Papiſts doe gather, that the Church of God cannot be hid, and therefore viſibilitie muſt needs be a note of a true Church. But we muſt know, that Gods Church may ſometime lie hid, in regard of the word, and the miniſterie thereof; as it did in the dayes of [b] Elias, and in the time when Poperie ſpread it ſelfe ouer theſe Weſterne parts. Neither doth this place make ought againſt vs, for Chriſt here ſpeakes of his Apoſtles, and of their miniſterie properly, which could not be hid; and not of euery ordinarie miniſter, who are not lights of all the world, as the Apoſtles were, but only in their particular ſtanding. Secondly, the miniſterie is a light, yet not alwaies ſhining to the whole world: and therefore it is added in the ſecond ſimilitude, that it giueth light to them that are in the houſe: that is, in the Church of God. And ſo in the darkeneſſe of Poperie, the miniſterie of the Goſpel was hidde from the world, and yet it gaue ſome light to the hidden Church, the houſe of God, to ſhew them their calling, and the meanes of ſaluation.

Rhemiſts on this place.

b 1.king.19.10.

Now, as theſe ſimilitudes concerne the miniſters, ſo they may well be enlarged to euery ſtian in this place: for in this regard the Miniſter is a patterne to his people, and many times in Scripture others beſides the Miniſters are called lights, 2. Sam. 21.17. David is called the light of Iſrael; not onely for the comfort of his Regiment, but alſo as hee was a King, by his vpright life he gaue light to the people, whereof he was a gouernour; and ſo anſwerably, all Superiours in their places muſt be lights: the publike Magiſtrate, to the Commonwealth; the maſter, to his ſeruants; parents, to their children; and euery Chriſtian to his brother: Philip. 2.15. Shine as lights in the world, in the middeſt of a naughtie and crooked nation. This therefore is our duty, if we be Chriſtians: as we muſt labour to get the knowledge of Gods will into our hearts, ſo muſt we cauſe the power thereof to ſhine forth in the example of a good life, whereby others way be directed in the darkeneſſe of the world. But alas, herein the caſe of many is lamentable, who thorough ignorance and diſobedience, be yet in darkeneſſe: theſe muſt be taken out of their places, as darke candles, and troden vnder foote, and ſo caſt into eternall darkeneſſe, where they ſhall flame in woe for euermore.

v.16. Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good workes, and glorifie your father which is in heauen.

This is the concluſion of this reaſon; where, by ſhining, is meant miniſteriall teaching, whereby they make knowne Gods will vnto his people: wherewith, he alſo requireth anſwerable practiſe in a godly life: as if he ſhould ſay, Seeing by your calling you are ſo conſpicuous to the world, therefore looke to the euidence of your Miniſterie, and to the holineſſe of your liues, that ſo the people may not onely heare your doctrine, but alſo ſee your good workes, and thereby be mooued to follow the ſame, & ſo to glorifie God in heauen.

2. Parts of a Miniſters office.

A moſt worthie concluſion, wherein obſerue two points touching the miniſtery of the word. First, in what manner Miniſters muſt teach the word. Secondly, the end of all teaching. For the firſt: Gods word muſt firſt be preached, that men may heare it: ſecondly, wherewith muſt goe an vnblameable conuerſation, bringing forth good workes, that men therein may ſee the will of God. Here then are two parts of a Miniſters office, Doctrine, and good life: and they muſt goe together in him that is a good Miniſter. He that teacheth to write, will firſt giue rules of writing to his ſchollers, and then ſet them copies to follow: and ſo doth euery maſter in his Art: there is no learning of any thing, vnleſſe examples goe with rules. Againe, God will haue men to learne his will two waies: by Hearing, and Seeing: the Miniſter

A therefore that is to teach Gods will, muſt not onely by doctrine inſtruct the eare, but by a godly life exemplifie his doctrine vnto the eie: 1. Tim. 4.12. Be vnto them that beleeue, an example in word, and in conuerſation.

Vſe.

In regard of this double charge, that lies on euery Miniſter, the people for their parts, muſt remember, in all their praiers to craue of God, that the Miniſters may be enabled to teach Gods will, both in doctrine and life. The Apoſtle Paul doth ſundrie times require the Churches to whom he writ, to pray for him in regard of his [c] Miniſterie. Now if ſo worthie an Apoſtle had need to be praied for, much more hath euery ordinarie Miniſter in Gods church. B And great reaſon it ſhould be ſo, for the deuill ſtands at [d] Iehoſhuahs right hand to reſiſt him: [e] he hindred Paul from comming to the Theſſalonians. Though he maligne euery beleeuer, yet he aimes eſpecially at the Miniſter, that he may cauſe him to faile, if not in teaching, yet at leaſt, in the exemplifying of his doctrine, by a ſincere and godly conuerſation.

Of good workes.

Now, becauſe Chriſt requires of euery Miniſter, beſides teaching, the euidence of good workes in a godly life, therfore here I will handle this point of good workes: and firſt ſhew what a good worke is: ſecondly, the differences of good works: and then obſerue the neceſſity, the dignitie, and vſe of good workes.

A good worke deſcribed.

C I. Point. A good worke, is a worke commanded of God, and done by a man regenerate in faith, for the glorie of God in mans good. Firſt (I ſay) it is a worke commanded of God, for Gods will is goodneſſe it ſelfe, and the Rule of all goodneſſe in the creature; & euery good thing is therefore good, becauſe it is anſwerable to the will of God: no worke therefore can be good, vnleſſe it be appointed, ordained, and commanded of God: men indeede may inuent and doe many good works, but they ſhall haue no goodneſſe in them, vnleſſe they doe accord with Gods will. Againe, good workes muſt be done in obedience to God: now, vnleſſe God appoint them, the doing of them cannot be any obedience to his will. Thirdly, will-worſhip, whereby men thruſt vpon God their owne D inuentions for his ſeruice, is euery where [f] condemned: and of like nature be all thoſe actions, wherein men of themſelues doe faſten goodneſſe, without the will and appointment of God. This point muſt be remembred, becauſe the Church of Rome doth teach the contrarie, That a man may doe good works, not required or appointed by God: but the former Reaſons ſhew this to be falſ; & the argumēts which they bring for their opiniō, are nothing but abuſe of Scripture, as in theſe few may plainly appeare.

Obiect. 1.

Firſt, they ſay, the Iewes [g] had free-will offerings, which were not commāded in the word, and yet were acceptable vnto God; and ſo do many now adaies many good workes acceptable to God, though not commanded. Anſw. Their free-wil offrings were ordained of God, and therefore were acceptable: they were onely free, in regard in the time of offering them; but for the manner how, and the place where they must be offered; both these were appointed of God.

Obiect. 2. h Psal. 106. 30. Againe, they say, Phinees h slewe Zimri and Cosbie with Gods approbation, though he was no Magistrate: and therefore works not commanded of God, may be acceptable vnto him. Answ. Though Phinees had not any outward commandement, yet hee had that which was answerable thereto; to wit, an extraordinarie instinct by the spirit, whereby he was caried to doe that fact, which was as much, as if God had giuen him an expresse commandement. And so we may say of the Ministerie of sundrie ancient Prophets, who by extraordinarie instinct were mooued thereunto: and vpon this ground did i Elijah slay Baals Prophets.

i 1.King.18.40.

Obiect. 3. k Mat.26.7. Thirdly, Maries fact (say they) in k powring a boxe of costly ointment on the head of our Sauiour Christ, was a good worke; and yet there was no commandement for it in Gods word. Ans. Maries fact was a worke of confession, whereby shee testified her faith in Christ, and so was generally commanded, though not in particular. Againe, shee was caried thereto by a speciall instinct of the spirit, for l she did it to burie him (as Christ himselfe testifieth) because his buriall was so speedie after his death, in regard of the approaching of the Sabbaoth, that they could not embalme him, as the manner of the Iewes was; now euerie instinct of Gods spirit in the conscience of the doer, hath the force of a particular commandement.

Obiect. 4. Fourthly, the spirit of God (say they) mooues euery man to any good worke that is done, and therefore men neede not a particular commandement for euerie work; for those that are caried by the spirit, cannot but doe well. Ans. True it is, the spirit moouеth men to good workes freely, but yet this motion of the spirit, is in and by the word of God: and at this day, those instincts which are besides the word, are mens owne fancies, or illusions of the deuill. Many other reasons they alleadge to this purpose, for the iustifying their vowes of Chastitie, of regular obedience, pilgrimages, trentalls, and such like: but they are like to these, and notwithstanding them all, the truth is this: that for substance, a good worke is such a one, as is ordained, appointed, and commanded by God. And here by the way we may obserue, that they are farre deceiued, who so much commend the times of Poperie for good works: for the truth is, that all their oblations to Images, to Monasteries, and to Churches, for Masses, Pardons, and such like, were no good works, but onely in their owne opinion; for God commanded them not: Now it is the Lords reuealed will, that must giue the goodnesse to mans worke: Mich. 6. 8. Hee hath shewed thee, O man, what is good, and what the Lord requireth of thee.

Next I adde: Done of a regenerate person. A The Author of a good worke, is not euery one in the world, but that man or woman that is a member of Christ, borne a newe by the holy Ghost: so Christ here saith, Let your light, &c. restraining his speech to the persons of his disciples. True it is, that among Turkes and Infidels, many a ciuill man will doe workes of mercie, of ciuill iustice, and liberalitie, and will abstaine from outward sinnes, and liue orderly; now these, and such like, though in themselues they be good works, so farre forth as they are required by the lawe of nature, or commanded by Gods word; yet in an infidel, or an vnregenerate person, they are sinnes: for first they proceede from an heart which is corrupt with originall sinne, and with vnbeleefe B (for the m heart is the fountaine of all actions) and also they are practised by the members of the bodie, which are weapons of vnrighteousnesse; and therefore must needes be like vnto water springing from a corrupt fountaine, and running through a filthy channell. Secondly, these workes are not done for Gods glorie, and the good of men. Thirdly, they are not done in obedience to God, according to the Rule of goodnesse, the will and word of God, and therefore cannot be good workes. And this must teach euery one that would do good, to labour for regeneration by the holy Ghost, that so his person may be good, and then shall his works of obedience be good in Gods sight: for such as the tree is, such will be the C fruit: An euill tree cannot bring forth good fruit, nor a good euill fruite, Matth. 7. 18. Wee must therefore labour to bee engrafted into Christ, for without him, we can doe no good thing: but beeing partakers of his grace, we shall abound with the fruits of righteousnes, which are by Iesus Christ, vnto the praise and glorie of God, Phil. 1. 11.

m Mat.12.35.

Thirdly, I adde: that good workes must bee done in faith: for faith is the cause of euery good worke, and without faith it is impossible to doe any good worke. Now, in the doing of a good worke, there is a twofold faith required: First, a generall faith, whereby a man is perswaded that God requires of him, the doing of that worke which he takes in hand: as when a D man giueth almes he must be perswaded it is Gods will he should giue almes; and so for other good workes: for n whatsoeuer is not of faith, is sinne: that is, whatsoeur proceedeth not from this perswasion in the conscience, that it is Gods wil that such a thing should be done, or should not be done, is sinne: for he that doubteth of the thing he doth, sinneth therein, though the thing done be good in it selfe. Secondly, herein is required Iustifying faith, wherby a man is perswaded in his conscience, of his owne reconciliation with God in Christ: of this it is saide, Heb. 11. 6. Without faith it is impossible to please God. This Iustifying faith hath a double vse in the causing of a good worke: First, it giues the beginning to a good worke; for by iuſtifying faith, Chriſt with his merits is apprehended, and applyed to the perſon of the worker, and he thereby is vnited to Chriſt, who renueth the minde, will, and affections of the worker, from whence the worke proceedeth; and ſo it is as pure water, comming from a clenſed fountaine. Secondly, faith couereth the wants that be in good workes, (for the beſt worke done by man in this life, hath its wants:) now faith apprehendeth Chriſt and his merits, and applyeth the ſame vnto the worker, whereby his perſon is accepted, and the imperfectiō of his work couered in the ſight of God; and this muſt prouoke vs to labour for faith.

Laſtly, I adde, the ende of a good worke: namely, Gods glorie in mans good. The honour of God muſt bee the principall ende of euery good worke: now Gods honour ſtands in reuerence, obedience, and thankefulneſſe; ſo that when we doe any good worke, we muſt doe it in reuerence vnto God, in obedience vnto his commandements, and in token of our thankefulneſſe vnto him, for his manifold mercies. The good of man muſt herein alſo be reſpected; the Apoſtle ſaith, [a] The Law is fulfilled in one word, Thou ſhalt loue thy neighbour as thy ſelfe: how can this be, ſeeing to loue the Lord our God is the great commandement of the Law? It muſt therefore thus be vnderſtood; that the law of God muſt bee practiſed in the loue of our neighbour, and not apart by it ſelfe. Againe, the ende of a mans life, and of all his actions, is to ſerue God, in ſeruing of man, and by ſeruing of man, to ſerue God; as when we pray (which is a good work) we muſt not onely reſpect our ſelues, but pray for others; as for the Church of God, and for our brethren, as well as for our ſelues: yea, and for our enemies. So wee muſt heare the word, and receiue the Sacraments, that thereby we may bee better able to further our brethren in the way of ſaluation: this our Sauiour doth here expreſſe, ſaying, [that they may ſee your good works, and glorifie your Father in heauen:] as if he ſhould ſay, Glorifie you God, and alſo cauſe others to doe the ſame.

[a] Gal.5.14.

The vſe.

Firſt, here we may ſee what to iudge of the works done by Papiſts: It is commōly thought that they abound with good workes, but it is not ſo; their beſt workes are ſinnes before God, for they faile principally in the maine end of well-doing, which is to glorifie God, in the good of men: for a Papiſt doing a good worke, according to the Rules of their religion, doth it to ſatisfie Gods iuſtice, for the temporall puniſhment of his ſinnes, and to merit heauen by it; and ſo erreth quite from the right ende of a good worke, reſpecting therein, his owne good, and nothing at all the good of others.

Tollet.inſtruct.ſacer. lib.6.cap.21.

Secondly, hereby we may ſee, for our ſelues, how farre we come ſhort in our good workes, for commonly we faile in the maine ende thereof: men ſpend their daies and ſtrength in labour and toile, but al is for themſelues, for their owne pleaſure, their owne profit and preferment, without reſpect to the good of their brethren: now all ſuch actions wherein men ſeeke themſelues onely, and not Gods glorie in the good of others, be ſinnefull in the doer, though otherwiſe good in themſelues. And therefore we muſt learne, in all our actions, to aime at the glorie of God in the good of men.

II. Point. Thus we ſee what a good worke is: now follow the differences of good works. Good works be of two ſorts: Firſt, thoſe which God in his word hath directly commanded, as parts of his worſhip; ſuch as are prayer, thankſgiuing, receiuing the Sacraments, hearing the word, and releeuing the poore; and theſe are the more principall kinds of good works. The ſecond ſort are actions indifferent, ſanctified by the word and praier, & done to Gods glorie; as to eat, to drinke, and ſuch like; for howſoeuer in themſelues they be neither good nor euill, beeing things neither commanded nor forbidden; & therefore in reſpect of the things themſelues, may with good conſcience be either vſed, or refuſed: yet becauſe God hath cōmanded the manner how they muſt bee vſed, namely, by beeing ſanctified by the word of God, and prayer; and the end thereof, to wit, Gods glorie; therefore when they are ſo vſed, they become good workes.

1.Tim.4.5.

Vpon this difference of good works, obſerue the largeneſſe thereof, how farre they extend. There be three eſtates ordained of God; the Church, the Commonwealth, and the Familie; and for the preſeruation of them, there be ſundrie callings required; ſome whereof are preſcribed of God, and others left to be appointed by men; as all trades, and ſuch like; now not onely the callings appointed by God, and the duties thereof are good workes; but euen all inferior callings, appointed by mē, for the good of theſe three eſtates; and the duties thereof, be they neuer ſo baſe, if they be ſanctified by praier, and done to Gods glorie, are good works. Example. A man is called to be a ſheepheard, & doth willingly accept thereof; now, though the calling be but baſe and mean, yet the works thereof beeing done in obedience to God, for the good of his maſter, are good works, yea, as good in their kind, as the beſt workes of the higheſt callings; and the ſame may be ſaide of all lawfull callings, and the workes thereof, be they neuer ſo baſe: for God iudgeth not the goodneſſe of the worke, by the excellencie of the matter whereabout it is occupied, but by the heart of the doer. This point muſt bee learned, for the Papiſts conceit doth ſticke faſt in mens hearts, That there are no good works, but the building of Churches, & Hoſpitals, the mending of high wayes, giuing of large almes, &c. but we muſt learne, that euery action of a mans lawfull calling, done in obedience to God, for the good of men is a good worke before God: and therefore we muſt ſo walke euerie one of vs in our callings, that the duties thereof may be acceptable to God. Againe, this will hence follow, that in these our dayes, we may as well abound in such works as be good indeed, as the Papiſts did in their ſuperſtitious. Thus much of the differences of good works.

1. Neceſſitie of good works.

III. Point. Now more particularly, in the text are further ſet downe three points touching good workes: the neceſſitie, the Dignitie, and the Vſe of good workes. The neceſſitie of them appeareth by Chriſts commanding of them, ſaying, Let your light ſo ſhine, &c. for hereby he bindeth all Chriſtians, after the example of his Diſciples, to walke in good workes. If it be ſaid: that Chriſt hath freed vs from the law, and therefore we are not bound to doe good works? I anſwer, Chriſt hath freed B vs from the lawe in regard of the curſe and rigour thereof; but not as it is a rule of Chriſtian obedience.

Bellar. de Iuſtific. l.4.c.7.

Queſt. How farre forth are good works neceſſarie to ſaluation, or to vs that doe them? Anſ. There bee three opinions touching the neceſſitie of good workes; Firſt, of the Papiſts, who hold them neceſſarie, as cauſes of our ſaluation and iuſtification; but this we haue confuted heretofore. Secondly, of ſome Proteſtants; who hold them neceſſarie, though not as principall cauſes (for they ſay, we are onely iuſtified and ſaued by Chriſt) yet as conſeruant cauſes of our ſaluation: but the truth is, they are no cauſes of ſaluation, neither efficient, principall, nor conſeruant; nor yet materiall, formall, or finall, as hath elſewhere beene C ſhewed. The third opinion is the truth, that good workes are neceſſarie, not as cauſes of ſaluation, or iuſtification; but as inſeparable conſequents of ſauing faith in Chriſt, whereby we are iuſtified and ſaued; or as a way is neceſſary to the going to a place.

2. The dignitie of good works.

The dignity of good workes is expreſſed in this, that they are called good: now they are good onely in part, not perfectly, as I ſhew thus: Such as the tree is, ſuch is the fruite; but euery one regenerate, is partly ſpirit, and partly fleſh: that is, in part regenerate, and in part naturall and corrupt: this is true of his minde, will, and affections, which are the fountaine of all his actions; and therefore the workes that proceed thence muſt needes bee D anſwerable; that is, in part corrupt, as they come from nature; and yet good in part, as they come from grace.

Queſt. But how can God approoue of them, if they be euill? Anſ. We muſt conſider good workes two wayes: Firſt, in themſelues, as they are compared with the lawe, and the rigour thereof, and ſo they are ſinnes, because they anſwer not to that perfection, which the lawe requireth: for their be two degrees of ſinnes: Rebellions, which are actions flatly againſt the lawe: and Defects, when a man doth thoſe things that the lawe commandeth, but yet faileth in the manner of doing, and ſo are mans very beſt workes ſinnes. Secondly, conſider good workes, as done by a perſon regenerate, and reconciled to God in Chriſt, and ſo God A accepts of them; for in Chriſt the wants thereof are couered. But here we muſt take heede of the Romiſh doctrine, which teacheth that good workes are ſo farre forth good, that there is no ſinne in them; their reaſons are many to prooue this point, but they haue beene heretofore confuted: Firſt, they ſay, good workes haue God for their Author, and therefore are perfectly good? Anſw. This were true, if he alone were the author of them; but man is an other author thereof, from whom they take their imperfection. They ſay againe, that here they are called good, but if they had any ſinne in them, they ſhould be called euil; for euerie ſinne is perfectB ly euill? Anſ. Where ſinne is vnremitted, it is perfectly euill; but when it is pardoned in our Sauiour Chriſt, it is as though it were not. Thirdly, they obiect, that if good works be ſinnefull, then they muſt not be done; & hereupon they ſay, that by our doctrine men are bound to abſtaine from all good workes. Anſ. That which is euill muſt not be done, ſo farre forth as it is euill: now good workes are not ſimply and abſolutely euill; they are good in themſelues, and in vs in part, comming from grace; and therefore they muſt be done, becauſe God requires them at our hands; and for the imperfection of them, we muſt pray for pardon to our Sauiour Chriſt. And hereby the way we may iuſtly taxe the proud doctrine of the Papiſts, who teach, that men may be iuſtified by good workes: when as the beſt workes of any C man in this life, are tainted with ſinne, and are farre vnanſwerable to that perfection, which the lawe requireth: we muſt be of a farre other minde: namely, that for our beſt workes, God may iuſtly condemne vs; becauſe we haue not done them as we ought; therefore Chriſt bids vs ſay of our ſelues, that when we haue done all that we can, we are vnprofitable ſeruants.

Iſa.6.4.6.

The vſe of good works.

The vſe of good workes is here ſet downe by our Sauiour Chriſt, to glorifie God: this is not the whole ende of good workes; and therefore I wil propound the ſame more fully out of other places of Scripture; for Chriſt here onely propoundeth that end of good works, which concerned his intended purpoſe.

Three-fold. 1. Concerning God.

D The vſe and ende of good workes is threefold; either concerning God, our ſelues, or our brethren. As good workes concerne God, they haue three vſes: First, they ſerue as meanes whereby we giue vnto God teſtimonie of our 1 homage, and obedience vnto his commandements; for by creation, preſeruation, & redemption, he is our Lord and our God, and preſcribeth lawes for vs to keepe: in which regard, we owe homage vnto him; which, that we may ſhew forth and teſtifie, we muſt walke in good workes, as he in his word hath commanded vs. Secondly, they ſerue to be tokens of our thankfulneſſe vnto God, for our creation, redemptiō, 2 and manifold preſeruations, both in ſoule and bodie. Thankefulneſſe indeede, is ſhewed in word; but yet true thankefulnes ſtands in obedience: and our obedience is ſhewed by doing good workes. And therefore the Apoſtle Paul exhorts vs, to giue vp our bodies, as holy and acceptable ſacrifices vnto God, Rom.12.1. 3 Thirdly, they ſerue to make vs followers of God: we are commaunded to be holy, as he is holy, 1.Pet.1.15. and to put in practiſe the duties of loue one towards another, [r] as the Lord loued vs: and therefore we muſt walke in the duties of the Morall law, that therein we may imitate God: 1.Ioh.3.3. He which hath this hope purgeth himſelfe, as he is pure.

2. Concerning our ſelues.

Secondly, the vſe of good workes in regard of our ſelues, is fourefold eſpecially: 1 Firſt, they ſerue to bee outward teſtimonies of the truth of our faith & profeſſion; prouing that the grace of our hearts is not in hypocriſie, but in truth and ſinceritie. And for this cauſe, [s] Abraham is ſaide to haue beene iuſtified by workes: becauſe his workes did teſtifie that his faith was true and ſincere: for where the fire of grace is, there it cannot but burne; and where the water of life is, it cannot but flowe and ſend out the ſtreames thereof, in good works.

s Iam.2.21.

2 Secondly, they ſerue to be ſignes and pledges of our election, iuſtification, ſanctification, and of our future glorification: as wee know a tree to liue, by the fruite and budde which it bringeth forth; ſo by keeping a continuall courſe in good workes, a man is knowne to be in Chriſt, and to haue true titles to all his benefits; and therefore when the Apoſtle willeth men, to [t] giue all diligence to make their calling & election ſure, he propoundeth certaine vertues, wherein they ought to walke, as beeing the moſt euident tokens of election, that we haue in this life.

t 2.Pet.1.5.6

3 Thirdly, they ſerue to make vs anſwerable to our holy calling: for euery one that profeſſeth the Goſpel, is called to be a member of Chriſt, and a newe creature, whoſe dutie is to bring forth good workes, Epheſ.4.1, 2. Walke worthy of the vocation whereunto you are called, with all humbleneſſe of minde, meekeneſſe, &c. and Epheſ.2.10. Ye are the workemanſhip of God, created in Chriſt Ieſus vnto good workes, which God hath ordained that we ſhould walke in them. Now this is a moſt excellent thing, for a man to be anſwerable to his calling: When David was a ſhepheard, he kept his fathers ſheepe, and liued as a ſhepheard; but when he was called to be a King, he behaued himſelfe like a King, [u] in gouerning Gods people: and ſo euery Chriſtian ought to doe; beeing a new creature, he muſt walke as Gods child, and teſtifie his vocation by ſhewing forth the vertues of him that hath called him, 1.Pet.2.9.

u Pſal.78.72

4 Fourthly, good workes ſerue to be a way, in which we are to walke, that ſo we may receiue the mercies of God, promiſed to his children, and eſcape the iudgements threatened againſt ſinners: for gods word is ful of moſt ſweet promiſes vnto the obedient, & of terrible threatnings againſt rebellion and iniquitie. Now a man by walking in good works eſchewes the paths of wickedneſſe, wherein [x] Gods iudgements light: and holds the waies of righteouſneſſe, wherein Gods bleſſings are ſcattered, Prou.3.17.

x Rom.3.16.

3. Concerning our brethren.

Thirdly, the ende of good workes, in regard of our brethren, is principally this; that by our example in well doing, wee may winne ſome vnto God, and keepe others in the obedience of the truth, and preuent offences, whereby many are drawne backe. The contagion of a badde example, eſpecially in men of ſuperiour place, is ſuch, that it will not onely caſt their owne ſoules to hell, but alſo draw many with them. When Ieroboam the King ſinned, he cauſed Iſrael to ſinne: 1.Kin.15.34. And therefore we muſt carefully looke to all our waies, in regard of others, and ſo liue according to Chriſts commandment in this place, that others ſeeing our good works, may bee wonne to the truth, & ſo glorifie God which is in heauen. And thus we ſee the endes of good works.

Now conſidering good workes bee of ſuch excellent vſe, we are hereby admoniſhed to exercise our ſelues therein, with all diligence; for hereby we benefit our brethren, we helpe our ſelues, and we glorifie God: neither muſt any mans pouertie hinder him from this dutie; for not onely almes deeds, and large gifts to Churches, and high waies, are good works; but alſo the ſpeciall duties of euery mans lawfull calling, done in faith, to the glorie of God, & the good of men, be the calling neuer ſo baſe; by the doing whereof, in faith and obedience, he may get ſure teſtimonie of his electiō. This exhortation is moſt needfull, for ſo ſoone as men haue occaſion to commit any ſinne, then they ſhake off the yoake of all obedience, as there were no way of good workes to be walked in. The Papiſts indeed make the merit of iuſtification, & life euerlaſting, the end of good works; but that hath bin ſufficietly cōfuted heretofore.

Hitherto we haue ſpoken of the firſt point in this cōcluſiō, touching the maner of teaching.

Ende of teaching.

The ſecond point herein contained, is the ende of all teaching; namely, to turne men vnto God, and thereby to bring them to glorifie God, That men may ſee your good workes, and glorifie your Father which is in heauen: that is, ſo teach that men may ſee your good workes, and be wonne thereby to the faith, and ſo glorifie God. Our Sauiour Chriſt in his Commiſſion giuen to his Diſciples before his aſcenſiō, bids them, [y] Goe make all nations my Diſciples: and Paul ſaith, that [z] he became all things to all men, that by all meanes he might not onely inſtruct, but ſaue ſome.

z 1.Cor.9.22

Hereby then all Miniſters, and all thoſe that ſet themſelues apart for this calling, muſt learn to propound this dutie vnto themſelues, as the maine ende of all their ſtudies and labours; namely, to turne men vnto God, that beeing conuerted they may glorifie God. Againe, the ſame ende of the Miniſterie admoniſheth the ſame ende of the Miniſterie admoniſheth all hearers ſo to yeeld themſelues obedient to the Miniſterie of the word, that it may take place in their heartes, to turne them vnto God, that after their conuerſion they may glorifie God. This the people ought the rather to yeeld vnto, becauſe it is the maine comfort that the Miniſter hath of all his labours, to ſee his hearers conuerted, and ſo inabled to glorifie God. And to moue them hereunto, they are further to knowe, that if they heare, and be not thereby conuerted, that ſo they may praiſe and glorifie God, by their obedience; then this Miniſterie will be a bill of Inditement againſt them, for their deeper condemnation at the laſt daie. See Matthew, 11. 21. 24.

Verſe 17. Thinke not that I am come to deſtroie the Law, or The Prophets: I am not come to deſtroie them, but to fulfill them.

The third part of Chriſts Sermon.

In this verſe, and the reſt which follow, to the ende of this Chapter, is contained the Third part of Chriſts Sermon; wherein he goes about to reſtore the Morall law to his true ſenſe and meaning, which was much corrupted by the Iewiſh teachers. And to the ende the ſame might be the better accepted, hee makes way thereto by a notable Preface, verſe 17. 18, 19, 20. Wherein hee ſeekes, as well to preuent and to remooue, the falſe opinion which the Iewes had conceiued of him, in reſpect of the Law; as alſo to procure all reuerence and loyaltie to be ſhewed thereunto: For the Iewiſh teachers ſeeing our Sauiour Chriſt condemne & neglect the traditions of the Elders, and not ſo much to reſpect the ceremonies of the Law, as they thought hee ſhould, did thereupon iudge him to be a deceiuer, and one that went about to ouerturne the whole law of Moſes. This opinion Chriſt confuteth by three arguments: Firſt, from the ende of his comming, in this verſe: The ſecond, from the nature of the law, in the 18. verſe; whereupon he inſerts two notable concluſions, to procure reuerence thereunto, verſe 19. And thirdly, from the ſcope of the Miniſterie, verſe 20.

For the firſt: The Expoſition. Thinke not that I am come, &c.] This comming of Chriſt, muſt be vnderſtood of the manifeſtation of the Godhead in our nature: for otherwiſe, his Godhead beeing euery where, cannot be ſaide to come properly: and as for his manhood, it had not beene in heauen. To deſtroie the law] The

The law in generall.

Law in generall, is that part of Gods word, which commands things iuſt, honeſt, and godly: and beeing thus conceiued, it is threefold; Ceremoniall, Iudiciall, and Morall. The Ceremonial.

Ceremoniall law, is that part of Gods word, which preſcribed to the Iewes, ceremonies, rites, and A orders, to be performed in the worſhip of God: this law is laid downe in the bookes of Moſes, eſpecially in Leuiticus. The Iudiciall.

Iudiciall law, is that part of Gods word, which preſcribed ordinances for the gouernment of the Iewes commonwealth, and the ciuill puniſhment of offenders. The Ceremoniall law concerned the Iewes onely: the Iudiciall law did indeed principally concerne them; but yet ſo farre forth as it tendeth to the eſtabliſhing of the Morall law, hauing in it common equitie, it concerneth all people, in all times and places.

Morall.

What the Morall law is, I will deſcribe in three points: Firſt, 1 It is that part of Gods word, concerning righteouſneſſe and godlineſſe, which was written in Adams B minde by the gift of creation, and the remnants of it be in euery man by the light of nature; in regard whereof, it bindes all men. Secondly, 2 it commandeth perfect obedience, both inward, in thought and affection; & outward, in ſpeach and action. Thirdly, 3 it bindeth to the curſe and puniſhment, euery one that faileth in the leaſt dutie thereof, though but once, and that in thought onely: Galat. 3. 10. Curſed is euery one that continueth not in all things that are written in the Law, to doe them. The ſumme of the Morall law is propounded in the Decalogue or ten Commandements, which many can repeat, but few doe vnderſtand.

Difference between the Law and the Goſpel.

That we may further conceiue aright the Moral law, we muſt make a difference between C it and the Goſpel: for the Goſpel is that part of the word which promiſeth righteouſneſſe and life euerlaſting to al that beleeue in Chriſt: the difference betweene them ſtands eſpecially in fiue things.

1 Firſt, the Law is naturall, and was in mans nature before the fall; but the Goſpel is ſpirituall, reuealed after the fall, in the couenant of grace.

2 Secondly, the law ſets forth Gods iuſtice, in rigour, without mercie; but the Goſpel ſets out iuſtice and mercie, vnited in Chriſt.

3 Thirdly, the Law requireth a perfect righteouſneſſe within vs; but the Goſpel reuealeth our acceptance with God, by imputed righteouſneſſe.

D 4 Fourthly, the Law threatneth iudgement without mercie, and therefore is called [a] the Miniſterie of condemnation, and of death; but the Goſpel ſhewes mercy to mans ſinne, in and by Chriſt, if we repent and beleeue.

5 Laſtly, the Law promiſeth life to the worker and doer of it; [b] Doe this, and thou ſhalt liue: but the Goſpel offereth ſaluation to him that worketh not; [c] but beleeueth in him that iuſtifieth the vngodly: not conſidering faith, as a worke, but as an inſtrument apprehending Chriſt, by whom we are made righteous.

The Church of Rome in a manner confound the Law, and the Goſpel, ſaying that the Goſpel, which is the new Law, reuealeth Chriſt more clearely then Moſes Law did, which they call the old Law. But this is a wicked opinion, which ouerturnes all religion, beeing the cauſe of many groſſe points in Poperie, which could not ſtand, if they would acknowledge a true diſtinction betweene the Law and the Goſpel.

Bellarm. de Iuſtif. l.4.c.3.
They ſay for their defence, that the precepts of both, are the ſame in ſubſtance: that both require righteouſneſſe, both promiſe life, and threaten death; both command faith, repentāce and obedience; and therefore they are the ſame.
1 Law & Goſpel differ in precepts.
Anſwer. Firſt, the lawes and precepts of the Law and Goſpel are not the ſame; for Adam in his innocencie knew the Law, but he knew nothing then of beleeuing in Chriſt: and though both require righteouſneſſe, promiſe life, and threaten death, yet the maner is farre differing; as before was noted: So likewiſe they differ in the commanding of faith; for the Goſpel commandeth faith, not as a worke done, as the law doth; but as an inſtrumēt laying hold on Chriſt.
2 Againe, the Law commands faith generally; as to beleeue in God, and to beleeue his word to be true: but beſides this, the Goſpel requires a particular faith in Chriſt the Redeemer, whō the law neuer knewe.
3 Thirdly, the Law commandeth not repentance, for the knowledge of the Law was in Adams heart, when he needed no repentance: true repentance therefore is a ſauing grace, wrought and commanded onely by the Goſpel.
4 And fourthly, for obedience, though it be cōmanded both by the Law and the Goſpel; yet not in the ſame manner: The Law commandeth obedience euery way perfect, both in parts, & in degrees, and alloweth none other: but the Goſpel commandeth, and in Chriſt approoueth imperfect obedience; that is, an indeauour in all things, to obey and pleaſe God: if it be without hypocriſie. Again, the law commandeth obedience, as a worke to be done, for the obtaining of ſaluation: but the Goſpel requires obedience, only to teſtifie our faith and thankefulnes vnto God. The Church of Rome therefore erreth groſly, in confounding the Law and the Goſpel, which indeede are farre differing; and ſo we muſt beleeue, if we would come into, and hold the right way that leadeth vnto life.

Now whereas Chriſt ſaith, Thinke not that I came to deſtroie the Law; by Law hee meaneth principally the Morall Law, and in the ſecond place, the Ceremoniall Law alſo: Next obſerue the oppoſition that Chriſt maketh betweene the Law and the Prophets; thereby ſignifying vnto vs, that by the Law, hee meaneth that part of Gods word, concerning Righteouſneſſe, and Iuſtice, which Moſes penned by Gods commandement: and by the Prophets, he meaneth that part of Gods word, which is contained in the writings of al the Prophets, in the old Teſtament, after Moſes; which books of the Prophets, contained in them, either an interpretation of Moſes Law, or predictiōs of the ſtate of the Church in the new Teſtament. Againe, by deſtroying the Law, we muſt not vnderſtand a breach of the Law, ſuch as is made A by mans ſinne; but ſuch a diſſolution, as taketh from it all vertue and power, whereby it is a Law: and ſo to deſtroie the Prophets, is to put an ende vnto them, ſo as they ſhould nothing auaile, either to the interpretation of the Law, or to the foretelling of the ſtate of Gods Church vnder the Goſpel. But to fulfill them.]
Chriſt fulfilleth the law 3.waies.
Chriſt fulfilleth the Law three waies; by his doctrine, in his perſon, and in men.
1 By his doctrine he fulfilleth the Law, two waies; both by reſtoring vnto it his proper meaning and true vſe, as we ſhall ſee afterward, where he correcteth the corrupt interpretations thereof by the Phariſies; as alſo, by reuealing the right way, whereby the Law may be fulfilled.
2 B Secondly, in his perſon he fulfilleth the Law two waies: Firſt, by becomming accurſed to the Law, in ſuffering death vpon the croſſe for vs: Secondly, by performing perfect obedience vnto the Law, doing all that the Law required, for the loue of God, or of his neighbour; in which reſpect he was ſaide, [d] to haue beene vnder the Law.
3 Thirdly, Chriſt fulfilled the Law in men: Men be of two ſorts, Elect, and Reprobates. In the Elect he fulfilleth the Law two waies: Firſt, by creating faith in their hearts, whereby they lay hold on Chriſt, who for them fulfilled it: Secondly, by giuing them his owne ſpirit, which maketh them endeauour to fulfill the Law; which in Chriſt C is accepted for perfect obedience in this life, and in the life to come is perfect indeede. In vnbeleeuers Chriſt fulfilled the Law, when he executeth the curſe of the Law vpon them: for that is a part of the Law, and the execution and enduring of the curſe, is a fulfilling of the Law. And thus doth Chriſt fulfill the Law, ſo that the meaning of the words is this: Whereas you thinke that I came to deſtroie the Law and the Prophets, by making them of none effect, you are deceiued: nay, on the other ſide, know, that the ende of my manifeſtation in the fleſh, was to fulfill the law, both in my doctrine and perſon: and alſo, in the perſons of men both good and bad.

In this Apologie of Chriſt, for his behauiour towards the law: obſerue, what malice ſome of D the Iewes, eſpecially the Scribes and Phariſies, bare vnto him: for Chriſt was the Author of the law, and yet they maliciouſly ſuſpect and charge him with abrogation thereof; ſo as he is faine to cleare himſelfe in this behalfe.

The like hath beene the malice of wicked men in all ages, againſt the deereſt ſeruants of God: Act. 6. 14. Stephen is accuſed to ſpeake blaſphemous words againſt the Law: Act. 21. 28. Paul is charged with the ſame crime. And ſuch is the malice of the Papiſts, againſt all Euangelicall reformed Churches: becauſe we denie Iuſtification by workes, therefore they condemne vs for enemies to good workes: and in many other points, they faſten vpon vs notes of reproach, for holding the truth. Yea, among our ſelues, the like malice doth appeare in thoſe

appeare in thoſe that brand their bretheren with odious names, becauſe they ſhewe forth more care then others, of their dutie to God: but let all Gods children beware of this Phariſaicall practiſe.

Vſe 2.

Againe, obſerue the Titles, vnder which he comprehendeth the whole Scriptures of the olde Teſtament; The Lawe and the Prophets: Luk. 16. 31. they are called Moſes and the Prophets. Luke. 24. 27. Chriſt beganne at Moſes, & at all the Prophets, and interpreted vnto them in all the Scriptures: there Moſes and the Prophets containe all the Scriptures of the olde Teſtament.

A propertie of the old Teſtament.

Here then we may note a propertie of the bookes of the olde Teſtament; namely, that euery one of them was written either by Moſes or ſome other of the Prophets. And by this we may knowe the Canonicall bookes of the olde Teſtament, and diſtinguiſh them from the books called Apocrypha: for the Apochrypha bookes were not penned by any of the Prophets, who ſpake and writte in the Hebrewe tongue, the natiue language of the Iewes; but by ſome other in the Greeke tongue, which was not the language of the olde Prophets. Theſe bookes may be regarded in ſundrie reſpects, as containing many worthy Rules touching manners; in which regard, we may preferre them before other writings of men, ſo farre forth as they are conſonant with the Scripture: and ſo the Church of God hath of long time reuerenced thẽ; but yet they are no part of the Lawe, nor of the Prophets. And therefore the Church of Rome doth notably wrong and abuſe the world, in ſtyling theſe Apochryphall bookes, for Canonicall Scripture.

Concil. Trid. ſeſſ. 4. decr. 1.

Conſent of the Law and Goſpel.

Thirdly, Chriſt in this his Apologie, ſheweth a ſweet conſent betweene the Law and the Goſpel: They are not contrarie one to the other; for Chriſt, who is the ſubſtance of the Goſpel, came to fulfill the Law: and therefore Paul ſaith, that [e] by faith we eſtabliſh the Lawe: and Hebrewes 9. 19, 20. &c. When Moſes had giuen the Lawe vnto the people, offered ſacrifices, and ſprinkled the blood thereof vpon the booke and vpon the people, which was a type of the ſhedding of Chriſts blood, as it is [f] there expounded; which did notably ſignifie this conſent betweene the Law and the Goſpel, in ſo much, as without Chriſt, the Law could not ſtand.

Now this conſent betweene them ſtandeth herein; The Law requireth perfect obedience, and threatneth death to the leaſt breach thereof, not propounding any way for the fulfilling thereof out of our ſelues; but the Goſpell directeth vs to Chriſt, who as our ſuretie hath fulfilled the Lawe for vs: for which cauſe, Chriſt is called, [g] the ende of the Lawe for righteouſneſſe to euery one that beleeueth. And through Chriſt it is, that the [h] righteouſneſſe of the Law is fulfilled in vs, which walke not after the fleſh, but after A the ſpirit.

[g] Rom. 10. 8.

[h] Rom. 8. 4.

v. 18. For truely I ſay vnto you, till heauen and earth periſh, one iot or one title of the Law ſhall not eſcape, till all things bee fulfilled.

Here our Sauiour Chriſt propoundeth the ſecond argument for the clearing of himſelfe from their falſe imputation of deſtroying the Lawe, and it is drawne from the nature of the Lawe, which is immutable.

The Expoſition. For: This ſheweth the de-
B pendance of this verſe vpon the former. Truely I ſay vnto you: This is a forme of ſpeech which our Sauiour vſed, when he would ſolemnly auouch any weightie truth: and propounding this in his owne name; herein he ſheweth himſelfe to be the Doctour of his Church, who we muſt heare in all things, for he ſpeaketh as one that cannot lie. The thing he ſaith is this: Till heauen and earth periſh, one iot, or title of the Lawe ſhall not paſſe. In which words hee ſetteth down the ſtability and the vnchangeableneſſe of the Lawe; and that he might fully expreſſe his mind, he borroweth a phraſe frõ the Hebrew Alphabet, wherein Iod is the leaſt letter: One iot; ſignifying, that not ſo much as this little letter Iod, ſhall paſſe out of the Law.

Againe, by title ſome thinke is meant the C Hebrew vowels; but properly it ſignifieth a line bent crooked, or the toppe of an horne; ſo that here it properly ſignifieth the bending or bowing that is in the top of ſome Hebrew letters; inſinuating, that not ſo much as the leaſt part of a letter in the law ſhould paſſe away. Now theſe things muſt not be taken properly, for it hath beene and may be, that in the Hebrewe copies of the old Teſtamẽt, ſome letters ſhould be changed, as may appeare by the diuers reading in ſundry copies, for that may be without the loſſe of any ſentence: but Chriſts meaning is this; That not the leaſt parcel or ſentence in the Lawe ſhall paſſe away; making parts in the Law, to bee as titles in the Alphabet. Till heauen and earth periſh: that is neuer; ſo much D this phraſe inſinuateth: for though heauen & earth ſhall be changed in regard of their qualities, yet the ſubſtance of them ſhall neuer paſſe to nothing: and in this ſenſe is the word Til vſed elſe-where, 1. Sam. 15. 35. Samuel came no more to ſee Saul, till the day of his death: that is, neuer. Till all things bee fulfilled: that is, till euerie thing commanded in the Lawe bee done, ſo as it ſhall no more vrge a man to any obedience: which ſhall neuer bee, for it muſt eternally bee fulfilled; ſo that this phraſe hath the like ſenſe with the former; importing thus much, euen for euer and euer: ſo that this is the meaning of this verſe; That the Lawe of God is vnchangeable, not only in the whole, but for euerie part thereof; and the fulfilling thereof ſhall neuer haue an end. Chriſts reaſon then ſtands thus; If the lawe be immutable, and for obſeruation eternall, then I came not to deſtroy it: but the Lawe is immutable and eternall; and therefore I came not to deſtroy it.

Gods law is perpetuall.

[i] Heb.7.12.

First here obſerue, that the Lawe of God is made perpetuall and vnchangeable: If any man aske how this can bee, ſeeing the Apoſtle ſaith, [i] The Lawe is changed? Anſwer. The Lawe is threefold; Ceremoniall, Iudiciall, and Morall, as hath beene ſaid: now that place is principally to be vnderſtood of the Ceremoniall lawe, which indeede is abrogated, in regard of the obſeruatiõ of it in Gods worſhip; but in the ſcope and ſubſtance of it, which is Chriſt crucified with his benefits, whom it ſhadoweth out, it remaineth ſtill, and is now more plaine then euer it was. As for the Iudiciall law, though it be abrogated vnto vs, ſo farre forth as it was peculiar to the Iewes; yet, as [k] it agrees with common equitie, & ſerues directly to eſtabliſh the precepts of the Morall law, it is perpetuall. If it be ſaide, that Chriſt changed the Morall law, in changing the Sabbath day, from the ſeauenth day to the eight: I anſwer, Chriſt did ſo indeede by his Apoſtles, but that is no change of the ſubſtance, but of the ceremonie of the Sabbath: for the ſubſtance of that lawe, is the inioyning of a ſeauẽth daies reſt vnto the Lord. Now though the ſeuenth day from the creatiõ be not kept, yet a ſeauenth day is kept ſtill. If it be further ſaid, that the Lawe it ſelfe is abrogated; for that euerie one that breaketh the Law is not accurſed, according to the ſentence thereof, Deut.27.26. Anſwer. We muſt know that the Law is but one part of Gods word, and the goſpel another, reuealing another part of Gods will, beſides that which the Law made known; for it addes a qualification to the Law, moderating the rigour thereof, after this manner: He is accurſed (ſaith the Lawe) that faileth in any commandement, except (ſaith the Goſpel) hee bee reconciled againe in Chriſt, and in him haue the pardon of his tranſgreſſions. And yet the morall law remaines for euer a rule of obedience to every child of God, though he be not bound to bring the ſame obedience for his iuſtification before God.

[k] See Treatiſe of Cõſc. cap 2.ſect.5.

Of the chãge of the Sabbath day.

Againe, this property of the Law, in beeing vnchangeable, & for euer to be kept, ſheweth, that no creatures may diſpenſe with the Lawe of God. Mens lawes may bee abrogated and changed, but Gods Law euen in the leaſt parts thereof, muſt ſtand for euer, till it be accompliſhed to the full: but if it might bee deſpenſed with, then not iots and titles thereof, but whole lawes might be abrogated. This ſhewes the blaſphemous impietie of the Popes of Rome, who in their [l] Canõs be authorized to diſpenſe with the lawes of God: yea, in the laſt [m] Councell of Trent, hee is priuiledged to diſpenſe with ſome of the lawes of Conſanguinitie, againſt nature, flatly forbidden in the [n] word of God; which is moſt horrible rebellion, and a great diſgrace vnto God.

No creature may diſpenſe with Gods law.

Thirdly, from this propertie of the Law, we may obſerue, that it is not likly that any whole booke of Canonicall Scripture is loſt; for not one ſentence of the Lawe ſhall paſſe till all be fulfilled; much leſſe then can whole books periſh. Sundrie men doe thinke that whole books be loſt; but that opinion cals into queſtion the fidelitie of the Church, and Gods owne prouidence, in preſeruing his word: neither can it ſtand well with this text, that ſaith no title thereof ſhall faile. Thoſe that ſeeme to be loſt, were either humane writings, as bookes of lawes & Chronicles, ſuch as our bookes of ſtatutes or Chronicles be, or bookes of Philoſophie, ſuch as Salomon writ: or els ſome of them are in the Canonicall Scripture; for the bookes of Samuel & the Kings, were written by diuers Prophets: and therefore we may more ſafely hold, that no part of holy Scripture is loſt, neither ſhall euer faile. For howſoeuer after the laſt iudgement the vſe of the word written ſhall ceaſe, yet the ſubſtance thereof ſhall remaine in mens hearts, and be kept for euer.

No booke of Scripture is loſt.

Fourthly, this immutabilitie of the Law, cõtaines a matter of great terrour & woe vnto all impenitẽt ſinners; for howſoeuer they may flatter thẽſelues with a preſumption of Gods mercie, yet the curſe of the Lawe which is againſt thẽ, ſhall ſtand for euer: & therefore while they goe one in ſinne, they haue iuſt cauſe to houle and crie; for Gods iuſtice in that his law is inuiolable: neither will [o] gold or ſiluer pacifie Gods wrath; for though a man by his power & wealth were able to ouerturne heauen and earth, yet that would not helpe him: though heauen and earth be brought to nothing, yet euerie part of Gods Law muſt ſtand for euer, and be fulfilled. And therefore whoſoeuer doe lie in any ſinne muſt in time repent, humble themſelues, forſake their ſinnes, and betake themſelues vnto Chriſt, that he may fulfill the Law for them; or elſe the curſe thereof ſhall certenly be fulfilled in them, & they ſhall lie howling vnder it eternally, where is nothing but weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.

A terrour to the wicked, moouing to repentance.

[o] Pro.11.4.

Fiftly, this immutabilitie of the Law, and ſo proportionably of euery part of Gods word, as it prooueth the Scriptures to be the word of God, ſo it is a moſt excellent ground of comfort for all Gods ſeruants to ſtabliſh their hearts in the aſſurance of all his promiſes. A Chriſtian heart is ſubiect to receiue many doubtings of the truth of Gods promiſes, eſpecially in the time of triall and temptation; but this muſt be remembred for euer, that the whole word of God is immutable; though mans promiſes may faile and their waies be abrogated, yet no iot or part of Gods word ſhall paſſe vnfulfilled: and therefore they muſt conſtantly waite for the accompliſhment thereof, for in due time it ſhall be fulfilled.

A comfort to the godly.

Sixtly,

A ground of patience.

Sixtly, we are hereby taught to put on patience in afflictions: for they come by the ſpeciall appointmẽt of our God, who ſaith in his word, [p] That thorough many afflictions we muſt enter into the kingdome of heauen: now euery part of Gods word muſt be accompliſhed; and therefore Chriſt bad Peter to put vp his ſword, when he would haue reſcued his apprehenſion: for (ſaith he) I could praie to my father, and hee would ſend more then twelue legions of Angels to helpe mee: but how ſhould the Scriptures be fulfilled, which ſay, It muſt be ſo? Matth. 26. 52. 53, 54.

The integritie of the Law.

Seauenthly, our Sauiour Chriſt in this propertie of immutabilitie, giueth vnto the whole Law, and vnto euery ſillable and letter thereof, his proper force, vertue, and ſenſe; ſo as there is nothing in it, not ſo much as one letter vaine or idle: for euery commandement reueales the perfect iuſtice of God, and euery letter ſerues to expreſſe the ſame commandement. And herein the Law of God differeth from mens lawes: for in them be many vaine and idle words, yea oftentimes whole ſentences; but in the law of God it is not ſo: Prov. 8. 8. All the words of my mouth are righteous, there is no lewdneſſe nor frowardneſſe in them: yea, the Law of the Lord [q] is perfect, his ſtatutes are right, and his iudgements true and righteous altogether.

[q] Pſ.19.7,8.

Diligent ſtudie of the Scripture.

Now the conſideration of this integritie and perfection of the law, and word of God, muſt mooue vs to ſtudie the Scriptures with great diligence: ſo ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt, [r] Search the Scriptures: that is, ſhake and ſift them (as the word ſignifieth) ſearch narrowly, till the true force and meaning of euery ſentence, yea of euery word and ſillable; nay, of euery letter and iotte therein, be knowne and vnderſtood: conferre place with place, the ſcope of one place with another, things going before with things that come after; yea compare word with word, letter with letter, and ſearch it thoroughly. This manner of ſtudying the Scripture is moſt neceſſarie, as beeing the thing indeede, which preſerueth & vpholdeth the Church of God, and the puritie of religion: for about foure or fiue hundred yeares agone, men left off to ſtudie the Bible, after this ſort, and betooke themſelues to the writings of men, occupying their wittes wholly in vaine quiddities in Philoſophie, and in hid myſteries of Diuinitie; by which meanes it came to paſſe, that Poperie and Apoſtacie from the truth, ſpread it ſelfe ouer the world, for many hundred yeares together. Afterward, God of his meere mercie, put into the hearts of ſome men, to be carefull ſearchers in the word of God, by which meanes the truth appeared, as light out of darkeneſſe. Thus God ſtirred vp Luther, about the yeare of our Lord, 1517. who by diligent ſearch in the Scripture, and eſpecially by ſerious meditation, with praier, vpon theſe words of the Apoſtle, Rom. 3. 21. That now by the Goſpel, without the Law, the Iuſtice of God is made manifeſt: did finde that by the perfect obedience of Chriſt, our iuſtification was wrought; and thereupon, began to maintaine and profeſſe Iuſtification before God to be free, through and by faith in Chriſt onely; without helpe from the workes of the law, againſt the doctrine of the Church of Rome; and ſo by further diligence and induſtrie in the Scripture, the truth of God ſhone forth more and more. Let all men, but eſpecially Students in diuinitie, conſider this effect, of ſearching out the Scripture, as a ſpurre to diligence, in this behalfe. By this meanes alſo, errors and hereſies are auoided and ſuppreſſed; and the will of God is plainely reuealed. And here by the way, we may ſee how profitable and neceſſarie the gift of Interpretation is; it is a moſt excellent gift of the ſpirit, pertaining to the miniſterie; and therefore moſt commendable and neceſſarie is the vſe thereof in Schooles of Learning.

The meanes of Luthers conuerſion.

Magiſtrates muſt be keepers of the Law.

Eightly, this immutabilitie aſcribed to Gods law, that euery part thereof ſhall be accompliſhed to the full, teacheth all Princes and Magiſtrates, not onely to be keepers of Moſes law in their owne perſons; but alſo within their rule and dominions, to doe their beſt indeauour, that the ſame be fulfilled and kept by others. For this cauſe did the Lord command, that the Prince of his people ſhould haue the Law [ſ] written before him in a booke, to reade vpon continually, that hee may learne to feare God, and to keepe all the words of the Law to doe them: and that which is their enioyned vnto Princes, belongeth alſo vnto al Magiſtrates, Maſters, and Parents; within their places and charges, they muſt be carefull to ſee the whole law of God practiſed, and obeyed, both in their owne perſons, and of thoſe that are vnder them.

[ſ] Deut.17. 18,19.

What it is to keepe the Law.

Laſtly, by this immutabilitie aſcribed to the Law, we may learne, what it is to fulfill the law; namely, to keepe and obſerue to the full, euery particular thing which the law commands vs: and vpon this we may ground two concluſions againſt the Papiſts; Firſt, that no man can come to life euerlaſting by his owne righteouſneſſe and obedience; for he that would come to heauẽ by his own righteouſnes, muſt be able to fulfill the whole law perfectly in euery reſpect: but ſince Adams fall, no man could keepe the lawe in all things ſauing our Sauiour Chriſt, both God and man. Secondly, that our fulfilling of the law, muſt be in the obedience of Chriſt, for he only was anſwerable to the whole law in all things; and therefore if we would come to heauen, wee muſt not come in our owne righteouſnes, but in his; as Paul wiſheth to be found of God, Phil. 3. 8. 9.

V. 19. Whoſoeuer therefore ſhall breake one of theſe leaſt commandements, and teach men ſo, hee ſhall bee called leaſt in the kingdome of heauen: but whoſoeuer ſhall obſerue and teach them, the ſame ſhall be called great in the kingdome of heauen.

Our Sauiour Chriſt hauing plainely propounded in his Apologie for himſelfe, the ſtabilitie and eternitie of the whole law; doth here laie downe two notable concluſions, for the vpholding thereof: 1. Becauſe the Law is immutable and eternall, therefore he that breaketh one of the leaſt of the commandements, and teacheth men ſo, ſhall be called leaſt in the kingdome of heauen: 2. Becauſe the Law is eternall, therefore hee that keepes the commandements, and teacheth men ſo, ſhall be called great in the kingdome of heauen.

How ſome commandements are little.

For the firſt; by leaſt commandement, hee meaneth the precepts of the Morall lawe, though in the former verſe, by [Law] he vnderſtood the whole law in three parts; Iudiciall, Morall, and Ceremoniall. And he calleth them little, not ſimply in regard of themſelues, as though they were ſo indeed; for in it ſelfe euery commandement of God is great and waightie: but he ſpeaketh according to the opinion of the Iewes, for the Scribes and Phariſies had ordained certaine rites and ceremonies, according to the tradition of their Fathers; the obſeruation whereof, they made a greater matter of conſcience, then the keeping of ſome of Gods commandements: and ſo eſteemed them little. Again, ſaying theſe leaſt commandements, he pointeth out what particular commandements of the Morall law, the Iewes eſteemed leſſe then the traditions of men; namely, thoſe which afterward he expoundeth in this Chapter, touching Murther, Adulterie, Swearing, and the reſt; for they eſteemed not all the commandements of the law leſſer then their traditions.

Puniſhment of a falſe Prophet.

Shall be called leaſt in the kingdome of heauen:] Here Chriſt ſets downe the puniſhment of a falſe Prophet, which breakes Gods commandement, & teacheth men ſo; to wit, his baſe eſteeme in the Church of God: for the kingdome of God is twofold, the kingdom of grace, and the kingdome of glorie. The kingdome of grace, is the ſocietie and companie of Gods faithful ſeruants here on earth: The kingdome of glorie, is the bleſſed eſtate of all the Saints in heauen. Now hereby the kingdome of heauen, he meaneth the kingdome of grace, which is the militant Church on earth: and ſo Iohn Baptiſt calleth it, Matth. 3.2. Repent and amend, for the kingdome of heauen is at hand: that is, the Church of the old Teſtament is now aboliſhed; and the Church of the new Teſtament is readie to take place by Chriſts comming: and therefore repent and amend: and, Matth. 11.12. From the time of Iohn hitherto, the kingdome of heauen ſuffereth violence. So then the meaning of this firſt concluſion is this, Whoſoeuer breaketh one of theſe leaſt commandements of the Morall law (which afterward I ſhall expound) and teacheth men ſo to doe, he ſhall be contemned, and not counted worthie to be a member of the Church of God in the new Teſtament.

The meaning.

The corruptiõs of hypocrites reſpecting Gods word.

In this concluſion, in the practiſe of the Iewes, Chriſt ſetteth forth two notable corruptions of an hollow heart, towards God: The firſt, ſo ſet little by the commandements of God, eſteeming no more of them, nay leſſe, then of mens lawes and traditions: but Saint Iames [t] ſaith, he that breaketh one commandement, be it neuer ſo little, is guiltie of all, though he make ſhew of keeping all; ſo likewiſe, he that maketh light and baſe account of one commandement, contemneth all; though he ſeeme to honour the reſt neuer ſo much. Though Herod heard Iohn gladly, and obeied his doctrine in many things, and ſo ſeemed to make ſome account of ſome commandements; yet becauſe he would needs liue in inceſt, againſt the ſeauenth commandement, he did in effect contemne and breake them al: ſo at this day, there are many who profeſſe religion, and giue teſtimonie thereof, by hearing the word, and receiuing the Sacraments; and hereupon they would be counted louers of Gods law: yet in the courſe of their liues, and in their particular callings, they will not ſticke to oppreſſe the poore, and to deale vniuſtly for their aduantage; to prophane the Sabbath for a little profit or pleaſure, and to ſweare, and curſe, when they are a little prouoked. Now howſoeuer ſuch perſons may make a glorious ſhew of profeſſion outwardly, yet by theſe & ſuch like particular actions, they ſhew plainely that they haue but Phariſaicall hearts, which indeede make little or no account of Gods commandements. Let vs therefore euery one looke into our waies, and ſearch in our hearts, whether this corruption be in vs, or no: and if it be, let vs repent and forſake it, and labour to become like [u] Dauid, who had reſpect vnto all Gods commandements: and ſo ſhall we not be deſpiſed in the Church of God.

2. Corruption.

The ſecond corruption of an hollow heart, noted likewiſe of Chriſt, in theſe Iewes, is to place the ceremonies, rites, and traditions of men, aboue the commandements of the Morall law: Herewith he doth expreſſely charge the Iewiſh teachers, Matth. 15.3. Why doe yee tranſgreſſe the commandements of God, by your traditions? And this is alſo the practiſe of the Church of Rome at this day, they account [x] eating of fleſh in Lent, and on their faſting daies, a deadly ſinne: and yet they will [y] diſpenſe with treaſons, and murthers of Chriſtian Princes: they [z] allow of Stues, they permit and pardon

Sodomie; and yet [a] vtterly forbid mariage in some estate, which the holy Ghost [b] calleth honourable among all men. In these and many moe, they preferre their owne traditions before the most holy commandements of God: yea, many ignorant persons among vs, are tainted with this corruption: for bee not some feast daies, appointed by the Church, as Christs natiuitie, all Saints, and such like, obserued by the with greater conscience & reuerence then the Lords owne Sabbath? Though the memorie of Christs natiuitie may be celebrated, yet the Lords day should haue the speciall honour. Now for the reforming of this corruption, wee must labour to haue the same minde that was in Dauid, who grewe into admiration with Gods commandements, and thereupon inured himselfe to the obseruation of them. We must therefore labour to haue an high estimation of the lawes of God, and this will bee a notable meanes to drawe vs to a reuerend feare and obedience towards the same: one cause why men do not so highly aduance the law of God, as they ought, is because they do not sufficiently waigh the dignitie thereof. In euery commandement therefore, wee must first deeply consider the waight thereof; then labour to vnderstand it aright: thirdly, learne to admire the wisdome and iustice of God therein: & lastly, endeauour to yeeld loyaltie and obedience thereunto.

A ground of obedience.

Secondly, in this Rule our Sauiour Christ puts a difference betweene a false Prophet, and a true: The false Prophet breakes the commandements of God in his owne person, and also by his doctrine teacheth others to do the like: But the true Prophet & seruant of God, in the Ministerie, endeauoureth the aduancement of Gods glorie, as well by integritie of life, as by soundnesse of doctrine.

Difference betweene a false prophet and a true.

Thirdly, in the punishment of a false Prophet here set downe, we haue good direction for our iudgement, touching the present Church of Rome; namely, that she is not worthy to be esteemed a part of Christs Church on earth, by the sentence of our Sauiour Christ; because shee breakes Gods commandements, and teacheth men so: for whereas the second commandement forbiddeth the worshipping of Images, yea and the making of Images to resemble God; the Church of Rome doth not onely allowe the contrarie, against this commandement; but teacheth others so to doe: saying, that it is lawfull [a] to resemble the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost in Images, either painted or carued, and to worshippe them therein; yea, and to worship [b] the very Images of Christ, and of Saints, as also the [c] Saints themselues with religious worship.

Rome no part of Christs Church: and why.

Againe, they plainely breake the tenth commandement, which forbiddeth the first motions vnto sinne with delight, though without consent of will, by teaching [d] that concupiscence after baptisme, is no sinne. And as they deale with the commandements, so deale they with the Prophets, who giue testimonie vnto Christ: for first they destroy his manhood, by their forged transubstantiation: secondly, they ouerturne his kingly office, by making the Pope the [e] head of the Church, and giuing him power [f] to make lawes to bind the conscience. Thirdly, they ouerturne the priesthood, by their massing Priesthood, wherein [g] they daily offer vp an vnbloudie sacrifice, for the sinnes of the quicke and the dead. Fourthly, they rob him of his propheticall office, in giuing liberty to the [h] Pope, to make new Lawes, and [i] to expound the Scriptures, as supreame iudge: these things they teach; and therefore that Church is not worthy to bee counted a member of Christs Church. But seeing God in great mercie hath vouchsafed vs this fauour, in this land, that we should receiue and embrace his holy word, to publish and teach the same, and so esteemeth vs worthy to be accounted a member of his Church: we are therefore to reioyce in this mercie, and to praise God vnfainedly for this vnspeakeable blessing; and to shewe forth our thankefulnesse; not onely by teaching and receiuing the truth of his word, but also by yeelding obedience in all things thereunto: yea, our earnest and daily prayer must be, because it is so great a blessing, to be counted worthy of his kingdome, that God would continue the truth of his will to vs, and to our posteritie for euer.

The second Conclusion: whosoeuer shall keepe them, and teach men so, the same shall bee called great in the kingdome of heauen; that is, he shall bee honoured in the Church of God, and esteemed a worthy member thereof, because by this meanes, he endeauoureth to keep the law vnchangeable for euer. In this conclusion two points are to be considered; the office of a faithfull Teacher, and his reward: his office is two-fold; First, in his owne person hee must be a doer of Gods commandements: Secondly, in his publike Ministerie hee must teach men so to doe.

The office of a faithfull Teacher.

Here first obserue the order of these duties; Doing must goe before Teaching: This order Christ propounds, and that doubtlesse on speciall grounds; First, because a man cannot with ioy and comfort fitly teach others, before himselfe be a doer of the thing hee teacheth; for if a man teach others, from the instruction of the spirit, he shall finde his owne heart inclined by the same spirit, to the obedience of the word he teacheth.

Doe, and teach.

Againe, the experience of the fruite and efficacie of the word, in his owne person, is the best Commentarie a man can haue, for the opening of it vnto others: The writings of men, with the knowledge of arts and tongues, are excellent helpes; yet if a man want the spirit of God, framing his heart to beleeue, and obey the word he teacheth, whereby he should become a doer of it; doubtlesse the word will ſeeme but a dreame or riddle vnto him, neither can he fitly apply the ſame vnto others, hauing neuer had experience of it in his owne ſoule. This then ſhould mooue all Miniſters, and ſuch as ſet themſelues to this calling, firſt and chiefly, to labour to become doers of the word themſelues; other helpes of learning are to be ſought for with all diligence, to make them fit and able Miniſters of ſo great myſteries; but eſpecially, they muſt labour for the ſpirit of grace, to frame their hearts to embrace, and their liues to obey the word which they teach, that ſo they may be fitted, according to our Sauiour Chriſts direction. Now this ſpirit is attained, by knocking at heauen gates by prayer, Luk.11.13, & by opening the doores of our hearts, when our Sauiour Chriſt knocketh thereat by his word, Reuel.3.20.

A comfort to faithfull Miniſters, in their peoples vntowardnes.

Secondly, in laying downe this dutie, our Sauiour Chriſt propoundeth a ſingular cōfort to ſuch faithfull Miniſters, as be grieued with the vntowardneſſe of their people; hee propoundeth not the conuerſion of the people, as a propertie of a faithfull Teacher, but the doing and teaching of the will and word of God. And doubtleſſe a man may bee a faithfull Teacher, and yet not conuert many vnto God; hence the Prophet complaines, that hee had [k] laboured in vaine, and ſpent his ſtrength in vaine: nay, the ſame Prophet is ſent [l] to blinde the eyes of his people, to make them dull of hearing, and to harden their hearts by his Miniſterie: which was a heauie caſe: but yet that ſaying of the Apoſtle Paul, muſt be remembred, that howſoeuer vnto ſome, his Miniſterie was the ſauour of death; yet, [m] vnto God it was alwaies the ſweete ſauour of Chriſt: So that a Miniſter mourning truely for his people, to ſee their hardneſſe of heart, may comfort himſelfe with this; that in a good conſcience hee endeauoureth to obey the word of God, and to teach men ſo.

The reward of a faithfull Miniſter.

II. Point. The reward of a faithfull Teacher is this; hee ſhall bee counted great in the kingdome of heauen: that is, hee ſhall be honoured, and counted worthie to bee a member of Chriſts church, both in this life, and in the life to come. This muſt be remembred, to incite all Miniſters to become faithfull Teachers, both in life and doctrine. To get reſpect in Princes courts, is much ſought after on earth: O then, how ſhould this high reſpect with God, preuaile in our hearts, to incite vs to be faithfull in this calling.

V. 20. For I ſay vnto you, except your righteouſneſſe exceede the righteouſneſſe of the Scribes and Phariſies, you cannot enter into the kingdome of heauen.

Scope.

Theſe words are commonly taken to bee a Reaſon of the former verſe, by way of anſwer to a ſecret obiection, which the Iewes might frame there-from, to this effect; Thou ſaieſt, whoſoeuer breaketh one of theſe leaſt commandements, and teach men ſo, ſhall be called the leaſt in the kingdome of heauen: But our Teachers the Scribes and Phariſies, looke to haue cheife place in the kingdome of heauen; and yet (if thy doctrine be true,) they breake Gods commandements, and teach others ſo to doe. Now hereto Chriſt ſhould anſwer thus; I ſay vnto you, except your righteouſneſſe exceede theirs, ye cannot enter into the kingdome of heauen. But if wee marke well, the words may more fitly bee referred to the 17. verſe, as a third reaſon, to prooue that Chriſt came not to deſtroy the Lawe, or the Prophets, but to fulfill them; becauſe he exacts at euery mans hands, a more perfect and exact righteouſneſſe, then that which the Scribes and Phariſies either haue in themſelues, or require in others; without which, no man can enter into the kingdome of heauen.

In this verſe are three points to be handled: Firſt, what theſe Scribes and Phariſies were; Secondly, what was their Righteouſneſſe: and thirdly, what is that true Righteouſneſſe, whereby a man may enter into the kingdome of heauen, and ſtand iuſt before God.

A Scribe.

1. Ciuill.

2. Eccleſiaſticall.

For the firſt: a Scribe is a name of office, whereof there were two ſorts among the Iewes; Ciuill, who as Publike Notaries, did regiſter the affaires of Princes, & ſuch a one was Shimſhai, Ezra 4.8. And Eccleſiaſticall, who were imployed in the expoūding of the Scripture: ſuch a one was Ezra, Ezra, 7.1,5,6. And thoſe of whom our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, Matth.13.52. Euery Scribe taught vnto the kingdome of heauen is like a houſholder: and Matthew. 23. 2. the Scribes and Phariſies ſit in Moſes chaire: that is, they are expounders of the law of Moſes. And ſuch Scribes are meant in this place: to wit, men in Eccleſiaſticall office, deſcending from the tribe of Leui, who expounded the Lawe vnto the people; and theſe were all one with the Prieſts and Leuites vnder the Law: and therefore Ezra is called both a Scribe and a Prieſt, Nehem.8.1,2.

3. Sects.

1. Eſſees.

2. Sadduces

3. Phariſies.

The name Phariſe betokeneth a ſect, not an office; for there were three ſpeciall ſects among the Iewes: The Eſſenes, the Sadduces, and the Phariſies. The Eſſenes were like Popiſh Monkes and Friers, which did ſeparate themſelues from the people, vowing and dedicating themſelues to liue in perpetuall ſanctitie. The Sadduces were a ſect that did expound the lawe, according to the letter and ſyllable, and withall denied the reſurrection and the immortallitie of the ſoule, as is plaine, Acts.23.8. The Phariſies were ſuch as did forſake the common expoſition of the Scribes, and taught and framed a more exact & ſtrict expoſition of the Lawe, according to the traditions of the Fathers; and they were moſt holy outwardly, and of chiefe account among the Iewes: and therefore the Apoſtle Paul saith, n that after the most strait sect of their religion, he liued a Pharisie, and that he was o a Pharisie, the sonne of a Pharisie. Yet besides these, there were another sect, called Herodians, who (as some thinke) were courtiers, which held & taught that Herod was the Messias. And thus we see what the Scribes & Pharisies were, whō Christ here ioyneth together for amplification sake, vnderstanding thereby such Teachers among the Iewes, Priests and Leuites, as liued after the most strait custome of the Pharisies: for the Pharisies were by office Scribes, as we may plainly see by comparing together, Ioh. 1.19. with v. 24. where the Priests and Leuites (who were Scribes as we haue shewed) are called Pharisies.

B II. Point. What was the righteousnesse of the Scribes and Pharisies, which is here so debased, as beeing vnable to bring a man to heauen? By the tenour of Scripture it will appeare, that it was p an externall righteousnesse onely, standing in the outward obseruation of the law: for they were carefull to abstaine from actuall grosse sinnes: as whoredome, theft, murther, idolatrie, and such like; and they were very forward in q fasting, praying, and giuing almes openly, and in r keeping the traditions and ceremonies of the Elders, and in all things to carrie themselues in shew s conformable to the law: but the inward righteousnesse of the heart they nothing regarded, thinking that perfect righteousnesse consisted in outward obedience, & by that they looked to be saued; as it is said, Rom. 10. 3. neglecting vtterly the righteousnesse of God.

C In these Scribes and Pharisies we may obserue, what is the naturall perswasion of man touching righteousnes: to wit, that an outward righteousnes wil serue the turne: and therefore euery man naturally contents himselfe therewith: and hence it is that men will bring their bodies vsually to the place of Gods worship to pray, to heare the word, and receiue the Sacraments: but few haue care to bring their hearts with them, that they may inwardly worship God in spirit and truth: so likewise, many are content to rest from their ordinarie labours on the Sabbath day, but few are carefull to consecrate their rest vnto God: men be carefull to abstaine from actuall murther, but few make D conscience of malice, hatred, reuiling, and quarrelling: many hate theft, that yet will not sticke to robbe their neighbours of their good name, by vile reports: many are ashamed to robbe openly, that make no bones to deceiue by false weights and measures, by glosses, and such like: and yet all these will blesse themselues with their outward righteousnesse, and think all is well; not doubting but they shall be saued by it, though they haue no more: but this is Pharisaicall pride and folly: for all such outward righteousnes is here condemned, as vnable to saue the soule.

Mans naturall conceit of righteousnes.

Againe, here we may see the palpable and A grosse opinion of all worldly men, euen of those who commonly are called honest men: if they be told of their sinnes, and of the danger of damnation, except they repent: their answer is, they are no theeues, no murtherers, nor grosse sinners, and therefore they hope God will saue them, for they liue orderly, and doe no man wrong: but let all such take heed, least they deceiue their owne soules, for this ciuill honestie was the righteousnesse of the Scribes and Pharisies, which could neither bring them, nor any other in the kingdome of heauen, as Christ the God of truth saith expressely in this place. To giue almes, to fast, to praie, and to deale vprightly with men, be very good things; but yet wee must labour for more then these, if euer we meane to come to heauen: B we must get another righteousnesse of the heart, renouncing vtterly our owne righteousnesse, in the matter of Iustification, and condemne our selues for our best actions, that so we may be fit to receiue that true righteousnesse, which will commend vs vnto God.

Ciuill honestie insufficient for the soule.

III. Point. What is that true righteousnesse which will bring a man to heauen? Answ. It is the righteousnesse of Christ, 1. Cor. 1. 30. for Christ is made vnto vs of God, wisedome, righteousnesse; yea, t he was made sinne for vs, that we might be made the righteousnesse of God in him. This is that righteousnesse, which exceeds the righteousnesse of the Scribes and Pharisies, and whereby a sinner doth stand iust before God: for whereas by Adams fall we all became guiltie of sinne, and thereby subiect to the curse C of God, and to eternall condemnation, from which we could neuer haue deliuered our selues; then it pleased Christ to come from the bosome of his father, and to become our suretie and Sauiour, who in his life became obedient to the law for vs, & in his death vpon the crosse, suffered whatsoeuer was due to our sinnes; which obedience and satisfaction being made by him that was both God and man, is made all-sufficient, both to free vs from the curse of the Law, and also to iustifie vs before God: and this righteousnesse of Christ, is that which exceedeth the righteousnes of the Scribes and Pharisies, and is able to bring a man to heauen. Yea further for our Iustification, Christs D righteousnesse hath three parts: the puritie of his humane nature, the integritie and obedience of his life, and the merit of his sufferings vpon the crosse; and all these must be ours, to answer for our corrupt nature, and sinfull life, deseruing accursed death.

t 2.Cor.5.21
Parts of Christs righteousnesse.

Here some make question, how Christs righteousnesse can be ours? and how one mans righteousnesse can saue so many thousands? Answ. Christs righteousnesse is not the righteousnesse of a meere man (for then it could saue but one at the most) but it is the righteousnesse of that person, who is both God and man; and therefore it is an infinite righteousnesse, of merit sufficient to ſaue a thouſand worlds. But ſome here ſaie, If Chriſts righteouſnes be ours, then we are as righteous as Chriſt? Anſw. The ſame righteouſneſſe that is in Chriſt, is ours, but not in the ſame manner or meaſure: for Chriſt hath it by merit and action of himſelfe, we haue it onely by mercie and imputation: it is in Chriſt as a roote and fountaine, in vs by reception and application; like the light in the Moone, and in the Starres, which is not in them originally, but receiued from the Sunne, the fountaine thereof. Thirdly, it is ſaid, If we by Chriſts righteouſneſſe be iuſtified, and made the ſonnes of God, then is Chriſt by our ſinnes made vniuſt, and ſo the child of the deuill? Anſw. We may ſafely ſay, that Chriſt was made a ſinner by our ſinnes, not actually, but by imputation: now hence it will not follow, that he ſhould be the child of the deuill, for that commeth by the act and habit of ſinning, after ſinnefull conception, all which, our Sauiour Chriſt was free from: for at the very time when he bare our ſinnes, he was in himſelfe more holy, then all men, and all Angels. Fourthly, it is ſaid, that if Chriſts righteouſneſſe be made ours, then we are made Sauiours? Anſ. It followeth not: for Chriſts merit and righteouſneſſe are conuaied and applied vnto men, not as they are in Chriſts perſon, in whome they are ſufficient to ſaue ten thouſand worlds; but as they ſerue to ſaue and iuſtifie that particular perſon onely, to whome they are imputed: ſo that this remaines an vndoubted truth, that this righteouſneſſe which brings ſaluation, is Chriſts righteouſneſſe onely.

Obiect. 3.

Here ſome may ſay, How is Chriſts righteouſneſſe made ours, and we aſſured of it? Anſw. It is made ours by ſauing faith, which the holy Ghoſt createth in the heart and ſoule, as an hand whereby we may lay hold on Chriſt, and applie his righteouſneſſe vnto our ſelues, as he is offered vnto vs in the promiſes of the Goſpell. Some obiect, that if Chriſts righteouſneſſe be made ours, by our beleeuing it to be ours, then if a man beleeue his neighbours houſe to be his, it is his alſo; and ſo for any other thing? Anſw. There is not the like reaſon in theſe things: for this is a meere fanſie and imagination for a man to beleeue his neighbours houſe to be his, hauing no ground for it, beſides his owne conceit: but when a man beleeueth Chriſts righteouſneſſe to be his, he hath Gods commandement and promiſe, for his warrant and aſſurance, that it ſhall be imputed vnto him; and withall, that faith ſo grounded, maketh Chriſts righteouſneſſe as truly his, as any thing a man hath is his owne, being giuen him of another. Now this ſauing faith, laying hold on Chriſts righteouſneſſe, for mans iuſtification, is neuer ſeuered from ſanctification by the ſpirit, with the fruits thereof, whereby the old man being mortified, and the new man in Chriſt renued, according to his image, in knowledge, righteouſneſſe, and true holineſſe, the whole perſon is turned vnto God, and made carefull to pleaſe him, both in thought, word, and deed: and hereby doe we receiue aſſurance of our iuſtification; for true ſanctification is the earneſt of the ſpirit of adoption in our hearts, whereby we are ſealed vnto the day of our redemption.

Chriſts righteouſneſſe is made ours by faith.

Doth that righteouſneſſe, whereby we muſt be iuſtified and ſaued in the day of our Lord, come from Chriſt onely, and not from our ſelues? then we ſee what iuſt cauſe we haue to humble our ſelues, and to acknowledge our great vnrighteouſneſſe, and want of all goodneſſe in our ſelues: and when we can doe this vnfainedly, we haue gone one ſtep in the way to true happineſſe. Secondly, we alſo muſt hereby learne, to eſteeme all things as droſſe and dongue, with the a Apoſtle, in reſpect of Chriſt Ieſus, and his righteouſneſſe: for he it is that brings vs to heauen, and therefore we muſt honour him aboue all, and value his righteouſneſſe, as that moſt precious iewell, which when a man hath found, he will ſell all that he hath, to get and keepe it, Matth. 13. 46. Thirdly, we muſt hunger and thirſt after Chriſt, and his righteouſnes, for it is the fountaine of all bleſſedneſſe, and without it we are moſt miſerable; yea, though we had all the world beſide, yet without it we looſe our ſaluation. Now what will it profit a man to winne all the world, if he looſe his ſoule? Fourthly, ſeeing Chriſts righteouſneſſe is made ours by faith, and we made aſſured of it, by ſanctification of heart and life; we muſt labour for true faith, whereby our hearts may be inwardly renued: we muſt not content our ſelues with an outward holineſſe, for that will neuer bring a man to heauen; but our endeauour muſt be for inward holineſſe, whereby we ſhal be preferred with God, aboue all the Phariſies in the world, and get aſſurance of eternall happineſſe. And this faith we muſt ſhew forth in all holy exerciſes; as when we heare the word, we muſt lend the inward eare of the heart, with the bodily eare; and when we fall downe to praier, we muſt bow the knees of our hearts; and in faſting from meate, we muſt abſtaine from ſinne; yea, in all things we muſt be carefull to ſerue God, in ſpirit and truth: for which cauſe, we muſt pray with Dauid, Lord renue a right ſpirit within mee, that ſo feeling Chriſt to liue in vs by grace, we may be aſſured that Chriſts righteouſneſſe ſhall bring vs vnto glorie.

V. 21. Ye haue heard that it was ſaid of old, Thou ſhalt not kill, for whoſoeuer killeth, ſhall be culpable of iudgement.

Our Sauiour Chriſt hauing laid downe his Preface, doth here begin his interpretation of the Law, being indeede the onely true Doctor of his Church; and herein eſpecially he doth meddle with the ſecond Table, beginning firſt of all with the ſixt Commandement, touching Murther. In the handling whereof, he obſerueth this order; Firſt, he ſetteth downe the falſe interpretation of this law, by the Scribes and Phariſies, in this verſe. Secondly, he ſheweth the true meaning of it, v. 22. And laſtly, he propoundeth rules of cōcord & agreement betweene thoſe that be at variāce, v. 23. 24. 25. 26.

For the firſt: The Expoſition. Ye haue heard) that is, you Iewes which now heare mee, whether Scribes, Phariſies, or others; you haue heard that it hath beene ſaid of olde) that is, by your auncient Teachers, the olde Scribes and Phariſies, who haue expounded this law vnto you: and that this phraſe muſt be vnderſtood of the ancient Iewiſh teachers, may plainely appeare, becauſe in the next verſe hee oppoſeth his owne teaching thereunto, and would haue theſe his hearers, that before had learned a falſe interpretation of this law, from their old Teachers, now to learne of him, the true expoſition thereof. The Law is this, Thou ſhalt not kill. The expoſition of the auncient Iewiſh Teachers was this; for whoſoeuer killeth ſhall be culpable of iudgement: that is, whoſoeuer layeth violent hands on an other, to take away his life (for they knew no other murther, neither did they extend this commandemēt to forbid any ſinne, but actuall murther) ſhall be culpable of iudgement: that is, ſhall be held guiltie of murther, both in the courts of men, and alſo before the iudgement ſeate of God, where he ſhal receiue the deſerued puniſhment thereof. This was the interpretation of the Iewes.

Antiquitie no infallible marke of truth.

Here firſt obſerue, that Antiquitie is no infallible marke of true doctrine: for this expoſition of this commandement was auncient, receiued from auncient Teachers; and yet Chriſt the Doctor of truth, reiecteth it, as falſe and corrupt: and therefore the argument which the Papiſts vſe, for the ſtabliſhing of their religion, drawne from Antiquitie, is of no effect.

How the Phariſies expounded the law.

Secondly, by theſe words of Chriſt, yee haue heard, it hath beene ſaid of olde, we may eaſily gather, after what manner the Scribes and Phariſes expounded the law: namely, they left the Scriptures, and followed the interpretation of their auncient Teachers. But here Chriſt checketh and reprooueth this manner of teaching; and therefore the like cannot be warrantable among vs at this day: whereby we ſee that kind of teaching reprooued, wherein euery point is ſtuffed out with the teſtimonies of Fathers, Schoolemen, and humane writers. And here alſo is diſcouered a wicked and daungerous practiſe of the Papiſts, who referre all deciding of controuerſies, and interpretation of hard places of Scripture, to the Church and to the Fathers. If we ſay that Fathers oft diſſent, and the Church may erre, then they ſend vs to the k Popes breaſt. But if this courſe were ſafe, then the Iewiſh Teachers might haue had a good defence againſt this charge of Chriſt: for they had both church and Fathers on their ſide, and the high Prieſt that was then in place. Indeede the Fathers muſt be reuerenced, as lights of the Church in their time, and their teſtimonies duly regarded, wherin they agree with the written word: but for the confirmation of the truth in mans conſcience, and for the edifying of the ſoule in the graces of the ſpirit, the word of God hath the onely ſtroak: by it alone Gods children are begotten, and borne anew to a liuely hope; and by it alone they are fed and nouriſhed in the faith, yea, by it alone they are confirmed and ſtabliſhed in the truth.

Mans naturall conceit of keeping the Commandements.

Thirdly, in theſe Iewiſh Teachers, forbidding nothing as a breach of this law, but the outward ſinne of murther; and on the contrarie approouing of thoſe as keepers of this law, that kept their hands from this Actuall crime of blood, and by conſequent worthie of life euerlaſting; behold a plaine picture of euery naturall man; for is not this the common opinion, that vnleſſe a man kill an other, he breakes not this commandement? and ſo for the reſt, if he abſtaine from the outward actuall groſſe ſinnes of ſtealing, adulterie, and falſe witneſſe bearing, then he keeps thoſe commandemants, though his heart be neuer ſo full fraught with enuie, mallice, luſt, couetouſnes, falſhood, &c. But let vs obſerue Chriſts reproofe of ſuch erronious interpretations of Gods law, as a meanes to ſchoole our hearts from ſuch vaine conceits.

V. 22. But I ſay vnto you, whoſoeuer ſhall be angrie with his brother vnaduiſedly ſhall be culpable of iudgement: and whoſoeuer ſaith vnto his brother, Raca, ſhall be worthie to be puniſhed by the Councel: and whoſoeuer ſhal ſay, foole, ſhal be worthy to be puniſhed by hel fire.

Here our Sauiour Chriſt propounds the true interpretation of this Commandement: But I ſay vnto you) that is, whatſoeuer you haue heard the Scribes or Phariſies teach you from themſelues, or from their fathers, it is nothing, let them not deceiue you; for I that am the Lawgiuer and Doctor of my Church, and therefore beſt know the meaning of my owne law, I ſay otherwiſe vnto you: whoſoeuer is angrie with his brother, &c. Here Chriſt laies downe three kinds of murther, and three degrees of puniſhments for the ſame. The firſt degree of murther is Anger, not anger ſimply: but raſh and indiſcreete anger towards a brother: and by Brother he meaneth, firſt, one Iew with another, to whom Chriſt ſpake; ſecondly, one neighbour with an other, whether Iewe or Gentile: for by creation we are all brethren, ha-

1 Three degrees of murther.

2 uing one Father which is God, as Adam is called the ſonne of God, Luk. 3. 38. The ſecond degree of murther, is calling his brother Raca. Some expound this word Raca, an idle or emptie braine: others, an euill man: others take it to ſignifie a loathſome man, one to be ſpit at, as we by ſpitting vſe to ſhew our contempt: but theſe interpretations cannot ſo fitly ſtand; for then the third degree of murther and this ſecond, ſhould be one and the ſame; for to call a man emptie braine, euill, or loathſome, and to call him foole are equal in degree. Now Chriſts intent is to ſet downe diſtinct degrees of murther, as is euident by the diſtinct degrees of puniſhment adioyned thereunto. A more fit expoſition is this, that Raca hath no perfect ſignification, but is onely an interiection of indignation, whereby a man doth not ſlaunder or reuile his brother, but onely in geſture ſhew the contempt and anger of his heart againſt him; as when in Engliſh we ſay, fie, tuſh, or ſuch like: which words are not open raylings, but onely outward ſignes of the inward anger and contempt concealed in the heart; ſo that the meaning is this: He that is angrie with his brother, and expreſſeth this his anger either in geſture or countenance, by frowning lookes, gnaſhing of teeth, or by imperfect ſpeach, as tuſh, fie, piſh, or ſuch like: hee is guiltie of murther. 3 The third degree of murther is, when a man doth ſhew his anger againſt his brother by open railings, and reproachful names: expreſſed in theſe words, Whoſoeuer ſhall call his brother Foole. And all theſe three degrees are beyond the interpretation of the Iewiſh Teachers, who onely condēned actual killing by this cōmandement.

Now to theſe ſeuerall kindes of murther, Chriſt addeth diſtinct degrees of puniſhment. The firſt is, to be culpable of iudgement for vnaduiſed anger. The ſecond, to be worthie to be puniſhed with a Counſell, for outward ſignes of this anger. The third is, to be worthie of hell fire, for reproachfull names or raylings. And here we muſt vnderſtand, that Chriſt ſpeaketh not properly in ſetting downe theſe degrees of puniſhment, but figuratiuely, alluding to the cuſtome of puniſhing offenders vſed among the Iewes: for they had three courts; The firſt was held by three men for meane matters, and other caſes of ſmall importance. The ſecond was held by three and twentie men, wherein were determined matters of great importance, that could not be decided in the firſt court; as matters of life and death; and it was kept in the cheife Cities of the Land. The third court was held at Ieruſalem onely, called the court of the Seuentie-two, from which none might appeale to any other. In it were all weightie and great cauſes determined, and this court is here called a Counſell. Now Chriſt alluding hereto, ſaith to this effect: Looke as among you Iewes there are different courts, and ſome matters are adiudged in your courts of iudgement, and others in the Counſell at Ieruſalem, ſo God alſo hee hath his A iudgement, and his counſell: thoſe that are raſhly angrie, ſhall vndergoe Gods iudgement: and hee that makes knowne his anger by ſpeech or countenance, ſhall be puniſhed more grieuouſly and vndergoe a deeper iudgement, as it were by the Lords counſell: but hee that ſhall by open reuilings and raylings, ſhewe forth his mallice againſt his brother; as by calling him foole, or ſuch like, hee ſhall be worthie the moſt grieuous iudgement and torment of hell fire; alluding to the higheſt degree of torment among the Iewes, which was burning: for before their Gouernment was taken from them by Herod, the Iewes vſed theſe foure kinds of puniſhments; hanging, beheading, ſtoning, and burning. Further, the words tranſlated hell fire, are properly the B fire of Gehenna; for there was a place neere to the ſuburbs of Ieruſalem called Gehenna, which is a compound Hebrew word, ſignifying the valley of Hinnom, wherein was a place called Tophet, Ier. 7. 31. where the idolatrous Iewes, following the horrible ſuperſtition of the Nations about them, vſed to burne their children vnto Molech: for which fact the place became ſo odious to the godly, that to aggrauate the heinouſneſſe of this crime, they vſed this name to ſignifie and betoken the place of torment appointed for the reprobate: whereupon in Chriſts time, Gehenna, and the fire of hell, were in ſignification all one. Now in this valley the Iewes vſed to burne their malefactors; and vnto this kinde of iudgement Chriſt alludeth, meaning not ſimply hell fire, the torments of C the damned, but a more grieuous and greater kind of puniſhment then the former, becauſe it was a higher degree of ſinne: ſo that Chriſts meaning is this; Howſoeuer you Scribes and Phariſies teach you, that there is no murther but actuall killing, and that it onely deſerues condemnation: yet I which am the Law-giuer ſay vnto you, that as you haue diuers puniſhments in ſeuerall courts for diuers offences, as hanging, ſtoning, and burning: ſo God hee hath diuers degrees of puniſhments for the ſeuerall breaches of this commandement; hee that is raſhly angrie, is worthie of iudgement: and hee that giues out any ſhew of his anger in geſture, ſhall be puniſhed more grieuouſly: but hee that ſhewes forth his anger by D rayling and reuiling, ſhall endure the moſt grieuous puniſhment of all.

Courts among the Iewes, three. P. Fagius in Deut. 16.

Firſt, whereas Chriſt here maketh degrees of puniſhments for diuers ſinnes, the Papiſts hereon would build their diſtinction of ſinnes into veniall and mortall. Veniall ſinnes (ſay they) are light ſinnes, as badde thoughts, vaine ſpeeches, and ſuch like, which doe not deſerue damnation, but ſome temporall puniſhment, onely ſuch as were allotted to ciuill courts among the Iewes: for here (ſay they) Chriſt onely makes open rayling and reuiling of our brother, ſuch an heinous ſinne as deſerues hell fire. But this diſtinction can not here be grounded: for Chriſt doth not appropriate condemnation to this tearme of hell fire: but he hath reference thereto in euery phraſe that here imports a puniſhment; as, to bee culpable of iudgement for vnaduiſed anger, is to deſerue condemnation in hell fire; and to be puniſhed by a Councell, for teſtifying anger by outward ſignes, is to deſerue condemnation, but yet in a deeper degree: And to be worthy to be puniſhed with the fire of Gehennah, for open rayling, is to deſerue condemnation alſo, but yet in a deeper meaſure then the former: for as among the Iewes by the ſentence of their Courts, ſome offences were puniſhed by beheading or hanging; greater offences by ſtoning, and the greateſt by burning; all which puniſhments differed in degree, and yet euery one was death: ſo before God, leſſer ſinnes deſerue leſſer condemnation in hell fire, & greater ſinnes deeper damnation; and yet euerie ſinne deſerues damnation: for the wages of ſinne, be it neuer ſo little, is death, Rom. 6.23. ſo that Chriſt here makes degrees of puniſhmẽt according to the degrees of ſinne; and yet ſo, as euery ſinne is mortall, deſeruing damnation, and none veniall in it ſelfe.

2. Rules for the expounding of the Law.

Secondly, we may here obſerue two excellent Rules for the expounding of the Morall lawe. 1 Firſt, that vnder one ſinne named in a commandement, are forbidden all ſinnes of the ſame kinde, with all the cauſes thereof: for Chriſt in expounding this ſixt commandement, doth not onely condemne Actuall murther, but euen Raſh anger in the heart, and all ſignes thereof in countenance and geſture, with all railing, and reuiling ſpeeches, as breaches of this commandement: and the like he obſerueth in thoſe which followe. 2 II. Rule. To the breach of euerie commandement there is annexed a curſe, albeit it be not expreſſed: for Chriſt here ſetting downe the breaches of this ſixt cõmandement, threatneth condemnation to the leaſt breach therof; ſaying, he that is vnaduiſedly angrie with his brother, ſhall be culpable of iudgement. Is it not then a wonder to ſee, how ignorant people doe vſe the commandments for praiers, when as indeed (if they could perceiue it) they are Gods thunderbolts to throw their ſoules to hell for euery ſinne they commit?

Aduiſed anger not vnlawfull.

Thirdly, Chriſt condemning vnaduiſed anger as a breach of this law, giueth vs to vnderſtand that aduiſed anger is not vnlawfull: and true it is, that all anger is not ſinnefull: for [a] Chriſt was oftimes angrie with the Iewes, and the Apoſtle bids vs [b] to be angry, but ſinne not.

a Mark. 3.5.
b Eph. 4.26.

How lawfull anger may be diſcerned.

If any here aske, how we may diſcerne godly anger, from that which is euill and vnaduiſed: I anſwer: two wayes, 1 firſt, by the beginning of it: for good anger proceedeth from the loue of him, with whom we are angrie; now loue is the fulfilling of the lawe, and therefore anger proceeding from loue, and guided thereby, cannot be a breach thereof: but euill anger proceedeth from ſelfe-loue, from diſlike or hatred of the partie with whome wee are angrie. 2 Secondly, we may diſcerne it by the ende. Good anger is for Gods glorie againſt ſinne, becauſe God thereby is diſhonoured; and for our brothers good: but euill anger wants theſe ends, and intendeth priuate reſpects. It is quickly mooued, it continueth long, and alſo carieth with it a deſire of reuenge.

Anger muſt be bridled.

Fourthly, ſeeing vnaduiſed anger with the ſigne thereof is a breach of this law deſeruing death; hereby we are admoniſhed to beware of this headſtrong affection of anger, and betime to reſtraine and bridle the ſame: it hath a bad beginning, and an euil end, and thereby we become murtherers. How. Now that we may ouerrule it, ſo as it preuaile not againſt vs; 1 firſt, we muſt lay to our hearts this commandement of God forbidding raſh anger, as a barre to ſtop it. 2 Secondly, we muſt remember, how louingly and mercifully God deales with vs euery day, in forbearing and forgiuing vs: and therefore we ought to be like minded towards our brethren, Eph. 4.31,32.

Signes of deſpite are degrees of murther.

The ſecond branch of ſinne here condemned is, to ſay vnto our brother, Raca: whereby we may ſee that euery geſture expreſſing raſh anger, & deſpite of heart towards another, is murther before God; as 1 caſting the countenance towards him: this God reprooued in Caine, Gen. 4.6. 2 frowning and nodding the head, or ſhaking it in contempt, as the Iewes did to Chriſt, Matth. 27.39. 3 alſo contemptuous laughter and deriding: hence [c] Iſmaels ieering at Iſaack, is called perſecution, Gal. 5.29. and the like may be ſaid of all 4 ſignes of contempt in words: as fie, tuſh, piſh, and to (thou) a man in diſdaine, for otherwiſe a ſuperiour may thou his inferiour: 5 ſo alſo whẽ a man contemptuouſly takes a thing in ſnuffe, though he ſay nothing, but flings away with a heart riſing againſt his bother. All theſe and ſuch like tokens of contempt, and diſdaine, are here condemned for murther of heart: and therefore it ſtandeth vs in hand, to make conſcience of euery geſture of our bodie, of the caſting of our eyes; of our laughter, and of all paſſionate words, leaſt thereby wee ſhewe any contempt, or anger towards our brethren.

Make conſcience of geſture.

If it be ſaide, how can euerie geſture expreſſing raſh anger or contempt be murther, ſeeing the Law permits a widow to [d] ſpit in the face of her huſbands brother, or next kinſeman, euen before the Elders of the citie, if hee refuſed to raiſe vp ſeed vnto his brother. Anſ. Firſt, the Lord might command her ſo to doe, thereby to manifeſt his great diſlike of want of loue in him towards his dead brother. Secondly, I anſwer, the words may as fitly bee tranſlated thus, and ſpit in his ſight, that is, ſpit on the ground before his face, that hee might ſee her: and that ſeemeth to be the true meaning of that place; for it was verie vnſeemely for any one, much more for a woman, ſo publikely to ſpit in a mans face. And in that ſenſe is the word vſed in the ſame booke, Deut. 4.37. where God is ſaid to bring Iſrael out of Egypt in his face, that is, in his ſight.

ſigne of contempt, are many abuſes of the tongue moſt iuſtly condemned: as firſt, bitterneſſe of ſpeech; when men that bee at variance, giue out hard and grieuous words one againſt an other: theſe are as pricks of e ſwords, as the wiſe man ſaith: and therefore the holy Ghoſt chargeth vs, that f all bitterneſſe, anger, and wrath be put away from vs. Secondly, all wrangling and contentious ſpeech betweene parties diſagreeing, when as neither will yeeld, but each one will thinke to haue the laſt word: Philip. 2. 14. Doe all things without murmuring and reaſoning: for that ſprings of choller and ſtout ſtomacke, cleane contrary to meekeneſſe and patience, a fruit of the ſpirit. Thirdly, g crying alſo is here forbidden, whereby men or women beeing at variance in priuate ſpeeches, doe thorough choller and malice lift vp their voices, that they may be heard a farre off. This is a fruit of raging anger, and furie. Fourthly, threatning ſpeeches are alſo here condemned, when as men from an inward diſlike and rage in their owne priuate cauſe, doe giue out menacing words againſt others: Eph. 6. 9. Maſters are forbidden thus to deale with their ſeruants: much leſſe then may one brother thus threaten an other. Fiftly, all kinde of girding and taunting others by priuie and cloſe nippes, is here condemned, although there be no open railing: for thereby men ſeeke to diſgrace their brethren, and to glad their owne hearts by grieuing others; which is more then to ſay, Raca.

Reuiling tearmes forbidden.

The third degree of murther is, in Reuiling tearmes, calling our brother foole, or ſuch like: this alſo is a ſinne againſt the ninth commandement by robbing him of his good name: for one ſinne in diuers reſpects may be againſt many commandements. It is a breach of this firſt commandement, in that hereby we grieue and trouble our neighbour, and ſo farre as a reproach can goe, make him wearie of his life.

Grieuous practiſes here forbidden.
1 Vſurie.
2 Hoarding vp of corne.
3 Fighting.
4 Soule-ſtaruing.
5 Offending.

Vpon the ground of this degree of murther, be all grieuous practiſes of men againſt their brethren, iuſtly condemned for bloodie practiſes. As firſt, Vſurie, whereby men binde their brethren to returne gaine, for the bare lone of money or other goods, which naturally yeeld no increaſe; without all reſpect to their neceſſitie, or to the ſucceſſe of the imploying of it. Hereby many are brought to great pouertie; reuiling tearmes doe nothing ſo much pinch the poore, as this oppreſſion. Secondly, the hoarding vp of corn till times of dearth, that thereby they may gaine the more: theſe men make a priuate gaine of Gods common iudgement vpon the poore. Indeed it is not vnlawfull in time of plentie, to lay vp ſtoare againſt a time of dearth: but to doe it with the hurt of the poore, is to ſucke their blood, and to eate Gods people; as when men keepe their garners full, and ſuffer the poore to ſtarue; the peoples curſe lies on ſuch, Prou. 11. 26. Thirdly, fighting and ſtriking by priuate perſons, or by others in their priuate cauſes: for they wound or weaken the body of their neighbours, which is more then to grieue him by reuiling ſpeeches. Fourthly, the detaining the foode of the ſoule, by thoſe that cannot or will not preach, is a damage againſt eternall life: and therefore Paul to cleare himſelfe from blood in this behalfe, ſaid, He kept nothing backe, Act. 20. 26, 27. Fiftly, to giue offence by word or deede, whereby others are occaſioned to fall: this is, vncharitable walking, Rom. 14. 15. whereby we doe as much as in vs lieth, deſtroy him for whome Chriſt died. And this is cruell in all, ſo eſpecially in publike perſons, as Magiſtrates, Miniſters, Parents, Maſters, and ſuch like, becauſe their practiſes are Rules to their inferiours. They are like lights in an hauen which guides the ſhippes that ſaile by night, which ſtanding amiſſe, lead the ſhips vpon rockes and ſands, and ſo cauſe ſhippewracke.

The true vſe of this law.
1. Search our hearts.

Hauing ſeene the true meaning of this Law expounded by Chriſt, let vs here further obſerue, how he reſtoreth the true vſe thereof. we muſt not thinke, that he did onely here intend the rectifying of our iudgements for vnderſtanding, and not alſo ſtrike at the reformation of our hearts and liues for practiſe. Touching the vſe of this law therefore, Chriſt here teacheth vs two things. Firſt, to diſcend into our owne hearts, and there to ſearch how we haue broken this commandement: as whether wee haue borne in our hearts any malice againſt our brother; and whether wee haue expreſſed the raſh anger of our hearts by ſpeech or geſture, or haue any way wronged him by reuiling tearmes, or other iniuries againſt his life; if we haue, Chriſt tells vs we are murtherers.

2. Iudge our ſelues.

Secondly, Chriſt ſetting downe the curſe to euerie degree of murther; teacheth vs, vpon due examination of our hearts, finding our ſelues guiltie in any degree, to caſt downe our ſelues before the Lord, to accuſe & condemne our ſelues, crying out that all ſhame and confuſion belongs vnto vs: this we muſt doe, that by the view of our miſeries, we may be mooued more earneſtly to ſue for mercie. And indeede if we examine our hearts, and our behauiours throughly, we ſhall finde, that wee are all murtherers. For though we may be free frō actuall killing, yet our conſciences wil tell vs, that the motions of wrath and malice, and the ſignes of vnaduiſed anger haue broken forth, both in words and geſture: for who can ſay he neuer ſnuffed at an other by way of contempt or diſlike? who can cleare himſelfe from deriding and diſgraceing others? now theſe things and ſuch like, make vs guiltie of ſinne againſt the lawe, and ſo ſubiect to the wrath and curſe of God; which muſt needs be fulfilled, though heauen and earth ſhould paſſe away. This vndoubtedly is our miſerable and wofull caſe in our ſelues. And there is no way to eſcape this curſe, but onely this; wee muſt humble our ſelues before God, and confeſſe againſt our ſelues the murther of our hearts, A our hearts, declared in our geſture, ſpeach, and behauiour, then we muſt labour to be grieued for theſe ſinnes: for which ende we muſt apply vnto our ſelues, Gods fearefull iudgements due vnto vs for them. Thirdly, we muſt earneſtly ſue vnto God for mercie and pardon, as for life and death, like as poore priſoners doe, whē the ſentence of death is to be pronounced againſt them: yea, we muſt crie with ſighs and groanes that cannot be expreſſed, and giue the Lord no reſt, till he ſend into our conſciences the comfortable meſſage of mercie and pardon by his good ſpirit. This done, we muſt labour in our callings for the time to come, to procure and further the welfare and ſafetie of our B brethren, as wel as our owne: we muſt not ſeek our ſelues, but the common good, eſchewing thoſe things that may grieue our brethren; and doing thoſe that may be good and comfortable vnto them: that ſo by newe obedience wee may ſhew forth thankefulneſſe for Gods mercy and fauour towards vs.

Hitherto we haue handled the three degrees of murther, which Chriſt condemneth by this law, beyond the doctrine of the Iewiſh teachers. Beſids theſe, there is a fourth degree here Actuall killing. condemned, which is actuall killing, This Chriſt doth not here name, becauſe he taketh it for graunted, euen by the doctrine of the Scribes and Phariſies. Now becauſe it is the maine ſin of this commandement, therefore here it is to C be handled; which we will doe thus: firſt, we will ſhew when killing is murther, and when it is not, and then handle the kinds thereof.

When killing is allowed. For the firſt: Killing is not alwaies murther, for ſometime a man hath power giuen of God to kill, and it is no ſinne: now God giues a man 1 power to kil three waies: I. by the written word: thus Princes and Gouernors, and vnder them executioners, are allowed to kill malefactours that deſerue death: and thus ſouldiers are warranted to kill their enemies in a lawfull war: 2 II. by an extraordinarie Commandement: and ſo Abraham might lawfully haue killed his ſonne, if the [a] Angel of the Lord had not ſtaied his 3 hand: III. by an extraordinarie inſtinct, which is anſwerable to a ſpeciall commandement: D and ſo [b] Phinees ſlue Zimri and Coſbie, without guilt of murther. But killing is murther when men of their owne wills, without warrant from God, ſlay others: and this ſinne is plainely and directely forbidden in this commandement.

The kinds of killing. II. Point. The kinds of killing be two; either voluntarie, or caſuall. 1. Voluntarie. Voluntarie killing is, when a man killeth of purpoſe and intent: and this ſinne is ſo hainous, that it [c] defileth the land where the blood is ſhedde, till it be purged by the blood of him that ſhedde it. And this purpoſe to kill is two-fold: either with deliberation and fore-deſire of reuenge, as when a man hath carried a grudge in his heart long before: or without deliberation, when a man without all former malice is ſuddenly carried by furie A and anger to ſlay his brother: and this ſecond kinde of killing is diſtinguiſhed from that which is vpon deliberation, by the name of manſlaughter, and alſo fauoured by the lawes of ſome Countries, becauſe it is not done of ſet purpoſe, but through ſudden anger before the blood be cold: but Gods law maketh both of them murther, and admitteth [d] no recompenſe for the life of the murtherer: nay, beſide it adiudgeth the murtherer to eternall death, both in ſoule and bodie. To this voluntarie 2 murther, we muſt referre thoſe that giue commandement, counſell, or helpe vnto the murtherer: for he that commandeth is the principall Agent, and the murtherer is his inſtrument. B Againe, it is voluntarie murther to ſtrike an o- 3 ther, though with purpoſe onely to wound, if death follow thereon: And that alſo which is committed by a drunken man: for his will is free, though ſenſe and reaſon be blinded.

Manſlaughter is murther:

Caſuall killing, comonly called chance medlie, is when a man killeth an other, hauing no purpoſe to doe him hurt. The preſumptions 1 of caſuall killing be theſe: Firſt, if a man kill an other, hauing no ill will or anger towards him, nor to any other for his ſake; neither is mooued thereto by couetouſnes, or any affecti- 2 on. Secondly, if he be doing the lawfull duties of 3 his particular calling. Thirdly, if hee be well occupied, doing ſome lawfull worke beſide his 4 calling. And laſtly, if hee bee doing a thing C which he ordinarily practiſeth, keeping his vſuall place and time. And albeit this kinde of killing, if it be meerely caſuall, is no ſinne, yet the party committing it, in old time was bound to come to his anſwer, thereby to purge and cleare himſelfe from ſuſpition of murther, as alſo to auoide the hatred & danger of the friends of the partie killed; and laſtly, to keepe and maintaine the hatred of murther among Gods people. Now this ſixt commandement, is not to be vnderſtood of caſuall, but of voluntarie killing. And this alſo muſt be obſerued, that Chriſt giueth the name of murther, to all the occaſions thereof, that hee might breede in our hearts an hatred of thē all, as of murther it ſelfe.

Caſuall killing. The ſignes thereof.

v. 23. If thou then bring thy D gift to the Altar, and remembreſt that thy brother hath ought againſt thee,

24. Leaue there thy gift before the Altar, goe thy waies, firſt be reconciled to thy brother, then come & offer thy gift.

Here Chriſt propounds a Rule of concord, by ſeeking reconciliation with them whom we haue wronged: and it depends vpon the former verſe as a conſequent and concluſion drawne therefrom, as may appeare by the firſt wordes, If then, or therefore: as if he had ſaid, If raſh anger and the teſtification thereof, either in geſture, or reuiling ſpeech, bee murther, and deſerue condemnation, then we are with all diligence to ſeeke to bee reconciled to our brethren, whenſoeuer any breach of loue is made betweene vs and them.

The Expoſition. If thou bring thy gift to the Altar] Here Chriſt alludeth to the Iewes manner of worſhippe vnder the Lawe; which was, to offer in the Temple ſacrifices vnto god both of propitiation, and thankſgiuing. And though chriſt here only name this one kind of ceremoniall worſhip, yet vnder this he comprehendeth all maner of true outward worſhippe, whether Legall or Euangelicall; as if hee ſhould ſay, If thou come to worſhip God any way, either by offering ſacrifices, or by praying vnto God, by hearing his word, or receiuing the Sacraments; and remembreſt that thy brother hath ought againſt thee, that is, that thou haſt any way wronged and offended thy brother: this appeareth to be the true meaning by the like wordes of [a] Marke, If thou haſt ought againſt thy brother, (meaning for iniurie done vnto thee by him) forgiue him: and therefore our brother hath ſomething againſt vs, whē we haue wronged or offended him in word or deede, and he hath knowledg thereof, and iuſt cauſe thereupon to complaine.

Leaue there thy gift before the Altar] Still hee alludeth to the manner of the Iewes worſhip; who when they went to ſacrifice to the Lord, brought their ſheepe or bullocke vnto the vtter court; or as ſome thinke, tied it to the hornes of the altar, in token that they preſented it vnto the Lord: now if at that very inſtant, they did remember that they had any way offended their brother, then were they to leaue their gift there, (not quite omitting this dutie, but only ſuſpending or deferring it for a while) and goe ſeeke to be reconciled to their brother whom they had wronged.

Queſtion. How could this departure be warrantable, ſeeing the Iewes had a law [b] that whē the ſeruice of God was once begun, none might depart, no not the Prince himſelfe, till it was ended. Anſw. This Rule muſt be vnderſtood of departure out of the vtter court of the Temple, whither the people brought their ſacrifice ſoone after they had preſented it, before it was begun to be offered: for till the Prieſts had begunne Gods ſeruice, it was lawfull for the people to depart, eſpecially vpon this occaſion.

[b] Ezech.46. 10.

Queſtion II. But what if the partie offending, can not poſſibly come to his brother whom he hath wronged, by reaſon of his abſence in ſome farre countrey, his cloſe impriſonment, or ſuch like. Anſw. He muſt teſtifie his endeauour to be reconciled vnto him: and if the act it ſelfe be neceſſarily hindred by gods prouidence, God will accept the will for the deede, if there be a willing minde: for this is A Chriſts meaning, that wee ſhould doe our vtmoſt endeauour to be reconciled vnto our brethren whome we haue wronged, ſhewing ſuch care thereof, that we preferre the ſame before the outward actions of Gods worſhip, not preſuming to worſhip God, till we be reconciled to our brethren.

Here we haue a notable Rule for the maintaining of loue and charitie among men; namely, brotherly reconciliation. In the giuing whereof, Chriſt ſtill continues his expoſition of the ſixth Commandement: for hauing condemned murther, and the prouocations thereunto, in the former verſe; here hee commandeth the contrarie vertue of brotherly loue, and the B meanes to vphold the ſame; to wit, Reconciliation for offences giuen.

A third rule for expounding Gods commandement.

Out of this Rule in generall we may obſerue: firſt, a Third direction to the right expounding and vnderſtanding of Gods commandements; namely, where any vice is forbidden, there the contrarie vertue is commanded: and on the contrarie, where any vertue is commanded, there the contrarie vice is forbidden. This Rule muſt bee obſerued as a priuiledge of the lawe of God, aboue all humane lawes: for mens lawes are ſatisfied, by abſtaining from the vice forbidden, though the contrarie vertue be not practiſed: as he ſatisfies mans law, forbidding murther, that abſtaines from the actuall crime, though he loue not his brother: But hee tranſgreſſeth C the law of God, that performeth not the contrarie vertue, though he abſtaine from the vice forbidden: for though a man abſtaine from killing, yet if he doe not loue his brother, hee is guiltie of the breach of this ſixt Commandement; which ſerues to confute the error of our ignorant people, who becauſe they abſtaine from Murther, Adulterie, and other outward ſinnes, doe perſwade themſelues that they keepe the law, and that God will therefore bee mercifull vnto them. But they muſt know, that though they ſhould abſtaine from the vices forbidden, yet they ſtand culpaple of Iudgement, for want of doing the contrarie vertues: for it is not ſufficient to abſtaine from euill, but we muſt doe good, and therefore Iohn Baptiſt D ſaith, [a] Euery tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewen downe, and caſt into the fire: and the ſentence of damnation ſhall be denounced againſt the Reprobates, for their omiſſion of doing good: [b] I was hungrie, and ye gaue me no meate, &c.

God reiects ſacrifice without mercie.

Secondly, by this Rule of Reconciliation, it appeareth that the performance of any outward ſeruice vnto god, is diſpleaſing vnto him, if it be ſeparated from the loue of our brethren: Iſa. 1. 11, 12. What haue I to doe with the multitude of your ſacrifices, ſaith the Lord: and ſo he proceedeth, reiecting in particular, all the ſeruice of the Iewes, becauſe they liued in enuie, debate, and oppreſſion; Their hands were full of blood. Iſa. 58. 5, 6. The Lord doth there reprehend the Iewes faſting from meates, becauſe cauſe they did not withall abſtaine from ſtrife, and oppreſſion; adding withall, that refraining from crueltie, and doing workes of mercie, is the faſt which hee requires: which ſerues to ouerthrow the naturall conceit of men, who thinke that the whole worſhip of God, ſtandeth in the duties of the firſt Table. This was indeed the conceit and practiſe of the Phariſies, whereupon they c taught the people, that if they gaue oblations to the Church, though they releeued not their poore parents, yet God was pleaſed with them. And the like is the practiſe of the Church of Rome, who in caſes of tranſgreſſion, through want of brotherly loue, doe not appoint this Reconciliation, but Auricular confeſſion, & Canonicall ſatisfaction, as matters well pleaſing vnto Almightie God: yea, ſuch is the conceit of our common people, that if they be preſent at diuine ſeruice, if they heare the word preached, and receiue the Sacraments at ordinarie times, then they haue done God good ſeruice; and he will reſpect them, though in their ciuil conuerſation they be at enmitie with their brethren or liue in ſuch like ſinnes. But we muſt learne, that God is ſerued, not onely in the duties of the firſt Table, but of the ſecond alſo; and that God abhorres the duties of pietie in ſuch perſons as make no conſcience of the practiſe of loue and mercie, Ierem. 7.9,10. Will you ſteale, murther, commit adulterie, &c. and yet come and ſtand before mee in this houſe, wherein my name is called, and ſay, We are deliuered though we haue done all theſe abhominations? as if hee ſhould ſay, neuer thinke it: and therefore if we deſire true comfort in our ſeruing of God, let vs make conſcience to ioyne therewith the practiſe of mercie towards our brethren.

Thirdly, here alſo we may learne, how to behaue our ſelues before we come to the Lords Table, if we call to minde, euen when we be in the Church, that we haue any way offended our brother, wee muſt firſt goe and reconcile our ſelues vnto him, & then come to the Lords Table: we muſt not abſtaine vpon the remembrance of our wrong doing, for ſo we adde ſinne vnto ſinne, refuſing ſpirituall ſocietie with God, becauſe we will retaine enmitie towards our brother; but ſeeking ſpeedily reconciliation, we muſt returne to receiue the Lords Sacrament. Which flatly condemnes the common practiſe of many, who abſtaine from the Lords Supper, becauſe they wil not ſeeke to be reconciled to their brethren. This argues an heart full ſtuft with pride and malice, which preferres it owne luſt before the will of God: for God commands that the ſunne goe not downe vpon our wrath; and it is his ordinance we ſhould receiue the Sacrament to ſhewe forth Chriſts death, when it is adminiſtred by the Church; againſt both which hee offendeth that abſtaineth, becauſe he is at variance with his brother: for Chriſt will not haue the gift that is brought to be taken away, but there left a while, till reconciliation be made.

Fourthly, in this Rule of Reconciliation, we may ſee there be degrees in the duties of Gods worſhip; all are not equall, but ſome more, and ſome leſſe neceſſarie. The firſt and higheſt degree of holy worſhip, is preſcribed in the firſt Commandement, as to loue, feare, and to reioyce in God aboue all, and to beleeue in him, and all his promiſes. The ſecond degree of holy duties is to loue our neighbour as our ſelues, to ſeeke peace and reconciliation with them whome we haue wronged or offended. Thus much doth Chriſt here import, in preferring the practiſe hereof before the offering of ſacrifice. The third degree conſiſts, in the outward ceremoniall duties of Gods worſhip, commanded in the firſt Table: as the outward actions of Gods worſhip, and the outward ſolemnitie of the Sabbath: for theſe giue place to the workes of loue and charitie commanded in the ſecond Table, and therefore Chriſt ſaith, firſt be reconciled, & then offer thy gift.

Now by this diſtinction of holy duties, we haue a good direction for our behauiour; that ſeeing the loue of God and of our brethren, are the two higheſt degrees of good workes, therefore we are aboue all things to ſeeke after them, and to preferre the doing of them before the outward worſhip of God; for that we ſee commeth in the laſt place. But the practiſe of men is otherwiſe; generally they are more forward in outward ceremonies, then in the main duties of the loue of God, and of their brethren; like to the Phariſies, d who paſſed ouer iudgement and the feare of God, and were very ſtrict in tything mint and rue: but this is a prepoſterous courſe, and cleane contrarie to this precept of our Sauiour Chriſt.

Thus much of this Rule in generall. Now I come to more particular obſeruations out of the words: Leaue thy gift at the Altar.] Here Chriſt approoueth of this worſhip of God among the Iewes by offering ſacrifices; from whence it followeth, that ſacrificing at the Altar, and by proportion other ceremoniall worſhip, was not abrogated either at Chriſts birth, or baptiſme, for here Chriſt alloweth of them; and therefore they ceaſed onely at his death, when vpon the croſſe he ſaid, e It is finiſhed, then f he put out the hand writing of ordinances that was againſt vs.

Thy gift; that is, thy ſacrifice; whereof the Iewes had two kindes: Propitiatorie, and Gratulatorie, or of thankſgiuing: and they are here called gifts, becauſe in ſacrificing the people gaue ſome thing vnto God: in which reſpect a ſacrifice differeth from a Sacrament, wherein God giues ſome thing vnto vs. Now the ſacrifices of the law, wherein men gaue ſomething vnto God, ſignified two things: firſt, that Chriſt ſhould giue himſelfe vnto his Father for our ſinnes: ſecondly, that we ſhould wholly giue our ſelues vnto God, both in ſoule and bodie, to ſerue him: and therefore God ſaith, Prou. 23. 26. My ſonne, giue mee thy heart: Rom.

6. 13. Giue your members as weapons of righteousnesse vnto God, as they that are aliue from dead workes: Rom. 12. 1. I beseech you brethren, by the mercies of God, that you giue vp your bodies a liuing sacrifice, holy, and acceptable vnto God: this we ought to doe in token of thākefulnesse for Gods endlesse mercies: and this we then doe; First, whē we acknowledge our selues not to be our owne, but Gods in Christ: Secondly, when we consecrate and dedicate our selues to the seruice of God, that both in heart and life we may shew our selues thankefull for our creation, preseruation, & Redemption especially. But lamentable is the case with men in this behalfe: in stead of giuing themselues to God, men bequeath themselues to the deuill, and become his slaues and vassalls: they make their hearts his dwelling place, by malicious, wicked, and lustfull thoughts; they consecrate the faculties of their soules, with all the parts of their bodies vnto him in the practise of sin: this ought not to be, seing Christ gaue himselfe for vs, let vs giue our selues wholly vnto him.

And there remembrest; that is, doest call to minde, that thy brother hath ought against thee, &c. By this Christ teacheth vs, that whensoeuer we come to doe any seruice vnto God, we ought first of all to enter into our owne hearts, and there to search and trie our owne estate, in respect of offences giuen to God or man, whereof we haue not repented, that so before we come to Gods solemne worship, we may be reconciled both to God, and to our brethren. The want of this, bring many a curse vpon mens soules, euen in the meanes wherein they thinke to receiue Gods blessing: and therefore we must looke to the practise of this dutie, that we doe it speedily and from our hearts. This we had neede to looke vnto in respect of God, whom we daily offend: for if he haue ought against vs, and yet we stand out against him by impenitencie, who can saue vs from his wrath? Let vs thinke on Elies speech, g If one man sinne against an other, the Iudge shall iudge it: but if a man sinne against the Lord, who will pleade for him.

V. 25. Agree with thine Aduersarie quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him, least thine aduersarie deliuer thee to the Iudge, and the Iudge deliuer thee to the Seriant, and thou be cast into prison.

26. Verely, I say vnto thee, thou shalt not come out thence, till thou hast paied the vttermost farthing.

Our Sauiour still goeth on with his former Rule of concord and Reconciliation. Now because the meaning of the words are controuersall, it shall not be amisse somewhat to discusse the diuers expositions that are made hereof. The Papists say, that by Aduersarie is meant God, commanding men in his law; and by way, is meant the space of time in this life: by Iudge, they vnderstand Christ: by Seriant, Gods Angels: by prison, hell: and because in hell there be many places, therefore here by prison, they vnderstand purgatorie: and by the vttermost farthing, veniall sinnes: as if this were the meaning; Agree with God whiles thou art in this life betweene this and the day of Iudgement, least thou come before Christ, and he cause his Angels to cast thee into Purgatorie, and there thou remaine till thou haue satisfied for thy least veniall sinnes. This exposition they stand vpon the more, because hereupon they would build their doctrine of Purgatorie.

Bellarm. de purgat. lib. cap. 4.

But this cannot be the true meaning of this place, for the reasons following: First, these words depend vpon the former, and are a continuance of the rule of Reconciliation betweene man and man, and not betweene God and man. Secondly, their exposition ouerthroweth the mediation and satisfaction of Christ for man to God: for if (as they say) man may & must satisfie for his veniall sinnes, euen to the vttermost, then Christ did not make a perfect satisfaction for man to God: for if he did, why should man satisfie for himselfe? Thirdly, by this exposition they confound the Aduersarie and the Iudge (for the Father & the Sonne are one) which in the Text are made diuerse and distinct. Fourthly, they make a Redemption and deliuerie from hell, from which indeede there is no redemption. And lastly, in making a parable of this place, they set their purgatorie on a sandie foundation: for from the words of a parable can no sound collection be made, but onely from the maine scope thereof.

The confu.

Others there be, that vnderstand these two verses of the partie offended, for (say they) Christ hath shewed before the duty of the party offending, to seeke reconciliation: now therefore he laieth downe the dutie of the partie offēded and wronged, namely, that when the partie offending comes vnto him and desires reconciliation, he must agree & be reconciled with him quickly. This exposition, howsoeuer it is plausible and fit in reason, yet it cannot well stand with the words of the Text, which threaten to the partie that agrees not with his aduersarie betimes, to be carried before the Iudge, and cast into prison, there to lie till he haue paied the vttermost farthing: but there is no reason why the party offended should thus be cast into prison, and therefore it cannot be vnderstood of him.

Thirdly, others expound these words, to be a parable borrowed from the courts of the Iewes; and hard it is to ſay, whether they be the words of a parable or not.

The true expoſition.

But to leaue all theſe, A fourth Expoſition, which I take moſt fit and proper to expreſſe the true meaning of this place, is this. The words containe no parable; but are litterally and properly to be vnderſtood: for Chriſt had before exhorted the party doing wrong, to ſeeke to be reconciled with his brother, by acknowledging of his offence, and making recompenſe according to the iniurie offered. But becauſe men are obſtinate and ſtiffe necked, and will not yeeld and ſubmit themſelues to this dutie; therefore he further vrgeth the partie offending, to the ſpeedie performance of this dutie, by the danger inſuing vpon the neglect hereof; ſaying, Agree with thine aduerſarie, &c.] that is, vſe meanes to become freindes with him, with whom thou art at variance, (for an aduerſarie doth not here ſignifie an open enemie, but any one, with whom we are at difference, who hath an action againſt vs in any matter by reaſon of our iniurie done vnto him.) Quickly] that is, without delay, ſtand not vpon thy ſuppoſed right, but rather yeeld from thine owne right, then ouer-long to deferre to be reconcily. Whiles thou art in the way] that is, (as we may plainely ſee, Luk. 12. 58.) while thou art going with thine Aduerſarie to haue the matter tried before the Magiſtrate. Leſt thine Aduerſarie deliuer thee to the Iudge] That is, leaſt thine aduerſarie, hauing a good action againſt thee, doe conuince and caſt thee, before the Magiſtrate. And the Iudge deliuer thee to the Seriant, and thou be caſt into priſon. That is, leaſt after thou art conuinced of wrong doing, the Iudge command the Serieant to caſt thee into priſon. And becauſe it might be thought a ſmal thing, to be caſt into priſon, for that hee might quickly come out againe; therefore our Sauiour Chriſt addeth in the laſt place, Verily, thou ſhalt not come out, till thou haſt paied the vttermoſt farthing: this farthing was the leaſt coyne vſed among the Iewes, called a quadrin, which containes two mytes, as we may ſee, a by the widows gift caſt into the Treaſurie; and it is the fourth part of a peny in Engliſh: ſo that this laſt phraſe is prouerbiall, as if he had ſaid, Looke for no compounding or agreement with thine aduerſarie, when thou art once caſt into priſon, for hee will ſhew thee no fauour, but vſe thee as hardly as may be, remitting nothing: but cauſing the to make full reſtitution and ſatiſfaction, euen to the vttermoſt farthing. And this I take to be the true and proper meaning of the words.

The ſpeciall points to be obſerued in the words, are two; a Precept, and a Reaſon thereof: The Precept in theſe words, Agree with thine aduerſarie quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him: that is, vſe all good meanes to become friends with whomſoeuer thou haſt any waies offended, before the quarell come to be tried before the Magiſtrate. The Reaſon is in the words following, drawne from the danger that will enſue deferring of agreement, leaſt thine Aduerſarie deliuer thee to the Iudge, & the Iudge to the Serieant, &c. The precept is a rehearſall of the Rule of Reconciliation giuen in the former verſe, touching agreement with thoſe whom we haue offended: which point, Chriſt ſtands the more vpon, becauſe of the ſtubborneſſe of mens hearts, that cannot abide to ſubmit themſelues, either in yeelding a little of their owne right, or making ſatisfaction for wrong done to others. Now this precept is further ſet out, by theſe two circumſtãces; Firſt, of the time, it muſt be done quickly, & not deferred vpon any pretence or ſhew of our owne right: Secondly, of the place, in the way, as we goe to the Court.

How to preſerue peace.

In this Precept, Our Sauiour Chriſt giues vnto vs a notable Rule of equanimitie, for the maintenance of peace and loue, with thoſe with whom we are to deale in the priuate affaires of our ſpeciall callings; namely, to deale moderately, if the matter concerne our ſelues without all rigour or extremitie: vnleſſe our place bee ſuch, wherein our ſilence may impeach the glory of God, or the good of his Church, Phil. 4. 5. Let your patient minde be knowne vnto all men.

Rules. 1.

To the practiſe of this Rule, many duties are required: Firſt, we muſt conſtrue all mens ſayings and doings in the beſt part; herein they failed, that bare falſe witneſſe againſt our Sauiour Chriſt, by applying his ſpeach to the b materiall Temple in Ieruſalem, which hee ſpake of the Temple of his bodie. This miſtaking and miſconſtruing of mens ſayings and doings, is the cauſe of much debate continually. 2 Secondly, we muſt learne to beare with, and to winke at our brothers wants, Prov. 19. 11. It is the glorie of a man to paſſe by an offence: if the ſame onely concerne vs, and be not derogatorie to Gods glory; as if he be froward, haſtie, angrie, reproachfull, and ſo forth, we muſt in Chriſtian patience paſſe by the ſame, as though we tooke no notice of it, till by our reproofe we may do him good. 3 Thirdly, though direct iniurie be done vnto vs, yet if the ſame be priuate, and doe not impeach the glorie of God, our life, or good name, we muſt be content to beare it; 1. Cor. 6. 7. Paul doth ſharply rebuke the Corinth. for going to law about trifles, why rather (ſaith hee) ſuffer you not wrong? why ſuſtaine you not harme? And this by Gods grace a man ſhall do, if firſt he duly and equally conſider his owne deſerts, both of like iniuries frõ men, & of eternall damnation from God himſelfe, whom he continually offendeth. Secondly, if he haue an eie to the prouidence of God, in that thing wherein he is wronged, which diſpoſeth all things for the good of his children. 4 Fourthly, for the maintenance of peace, wee muſt yeeld of our owne right: ſo did c Abraham vnto Lot though hee were aboue him both in yeares and authoritie, bidding him chooſe where he would dwell, whither on the right hand, or on the left: and our Sauiour Chriſt, though he were free, beeing of the Kings ſtocke, yet for the [d] auoiding of offence, paid tribute for himſelfe, and Peter. And obſeruing theſe things with good conſcience, we ſhall by Gods grace maintaine Chriſtian concord.

d Mat.17.26.

Wrangling forbidden.

Secondly, Chriſt commanding ſpeedy agrement condemneth that wilfulneſſe and ſtubbronneſſe of men, whereby, rather then they will ſubmit themſelues, and yeeld a little of their right, they will carrie euery trifling matter before the Magiſtrate. This is a common fault among vs in theſe daies of peace, for euery trifle is made a law matter, which ought not to be among Chriſtians; it plainely argueth great want of loue, and ſmall regard to this commandement of our Sauiour Chriſt. I ſpeake not this, to condemne the lawfull vſe of the law, but to reprooue the badde practiſe of carnall men, who make lawing the meanes of their priuate reuenge, and ſometime of flat iniuſtice againſt their brethren, whome they doe not affect.

Mans naturall crueltie.

Thirdly, Chriſt here alſo noteth out the hardneſſe and crueltie of mens hearts, who will neuer let a man goe, if once they get him in the lurch: ſuch cruell wretches are they that take the forfeitures of leaſes, bonds, and obligations: and ſuch, for the moſt part, are our common vſurers: but all theſe muſt know, that they are void of loue, and grace, wherby they ſhould maintaine this concord, which Chriſt requires.

Heart-burning in ſuits, vnlawfull.

Fourthly, by this circumſtance of time, [Agree quickely] Chriſt would teach vs to keepe our hearts cleare from grudging and hart-burning, euen then, when we haue occaſion of ſuit or controverſie with others; for this rancor of heart, wil cauſe further debate and contention, like to an angrie humour in the veines, which ſets the whole bodie in burning fits.

Reconciliation with God muſt be ſought betime.

Fiftly, if we muſt vſe ſpeed in ſeeking agreement with men whome we haue offended, before we come to the triall of a mortall Iudge; then much more muſt we giue all diligence to be reconciled vnto God, for our daily ſinnes, whereby we offend him; and that with all ſpeede, euen in this life, before we come to his tribunall ſeate: for howſoeuer in the courts of men, we may goe vpon ſureties, yet at the barre of Gods Iudgement, none can anſwer for vs. If we be not before hand reconciled to God in Chriſt, this vndoubtedly will be the iſſue; we ſhall be caſt into vtter darkneſſe, and there remaine till we haue fully ſatisfied the Iuſtice of God, which will neuer be. Let all eſtates and degrees thinke on this, and eſpecially the yonger ſort, who deceiue themſelues by deferring repentance, when as indeede, they as well as others, are euery day going forward to the barre of Gods judgement.

Vſe ſpeed in well-doing.

Sixtly, as in ſeeking Reconciliation, ſo in doing euery good worke that concernes Gods glorie in the good of others, we muſt vſe all

A conuenient ſpeede; [e] while we haue time we muſt doe what good we can vnto all, for death and the laſt judgement come ſuddenly: Say not to thy neighbour (ſaith [f] Salomon) goe, and come againe to morrow, if thou haſt it now. And againe, Eccleſ. 9. 10. Whatſoeuer thy hand ſhall finde to doe, doe it with all thy power. This is Iobs defence, [g] that hee reſtrained not the poore of their deſire, nor cauſed the widowes eyes to faile: and his practiſe muſt be our preſident, for the more good we doe, the more grace we haue, & the liker we be to our [h] heauenly Father.

h Matth.5. 44.45.

Thus much of the Precept: The Reaſon followeth, Leaſt thine aduerſarie deliuer thee to the Iudge &c.] which is thus much in effect, If B thou ſhew extremitie, thou ſhalt find extremitie ſhewed vnto thee againe, euen by the Magiſtrate. They that deale ſtifly and rigorouſly, ſhall bee rewarded in their kind: God in his iuſt judgement will haue men meaſured vnto, as they meaſure vnto others, Matth. 7. 2. 6. Mark.4.24.

Here then we are taught to deale in equitie and moderation with all men, in the priuate affaires of our callings, euen as we would haue them to deale with vs; and then God will cauſe others to deale well with vs: but if we deale ill with others, God will reward vs in the ſame kinde. This point all Vſurers, Ingroſſors, Trades-men, &c. ſhould well obſerue who thinke they may doe with their owne, what
C they will; but we muſt knowe, we are but Stewards, and our account will be exact.

Magiſtrate approoued.

Secondly, here we ſee, Chriſt alloweth of the Magiſtrate, and his Iudgement ſeate: 2. Of his proceeding againſt the guiltie, in deliuering him to the Officer: 3. Of the office of the Sergeant: 4. Of caſting guiltie perſons into priſon: 5. Of ſuing at the law, when right cannot be gotten by any other lawfull meanes; but law muſt not be the firſt courſe we take in ſeeking our right, we muſt rather ſuffer ſome wrong, and ſeek to ende the matter by freinds: and vſe law, as Phyſitions vſe poiſons, when gentle phyſicke will not ſerue the turne; then in caſe of extremity, they doe miniſter ſtronger phyſicke; yea, ſometime poiſon it ſelfe: ſo when D we cannot otherwiſe procure our peace and right, then we may lawfully take the benefit of the law.

V. 27. Ye haue heard that it hath beene ſaid of olde time, Thou ſhalt not commit Adulterie.

Here our Sauiour Chriſt goeth about to reſtore the ſeauenth Commandement, touching Adulterie, to his true ſence and meaning, and ſo to his proper and right vſe, by purging it from the falſe and erroneous interpretation of the Iewes: for which ende, he firſt laies down the falſe interpretation of the Scribes and Phariſies, riſies, verſe 27. and then adioyneth the true ſenſe thereof, verſe 28. eſpecially, yet ſo, as he continueth the ſame in the verſes following.

For the firſt; before the interpretation of the Iewes Teachers, he prefixeth this Preface; Yee haue heard that it hath beene ſaid of olde time, or, of the ancient Teachers. The meaning and vſe whereof, we haue before ſhewed, verſe 21. Then after followe the words of the ſeuenth commandement, Thou ſhalt not commit adulterie, which are the proper words of the holy Ghoſt: yet here muſt not they be taken in that ſenſe, which the Scribes and Phariſies gaue vnto them: for the better conceiuing whereof, this one thing eſpecially muſt be opened; namely, what is Adulterie here forbidden.

Adulterie.

Adulterie properly, is the breach of wedlocke by ſuch parties, ſome one whereof, at the leaſt, is either maried, or eſpouſed: I call it the breach of wedlocke, to note the propertie of this ſinne, which is not in any other ſinne, vnleſſe it bee of this kinde, though the ſinne be farre more grieuous. Idolatrie is a more hainous ſinne then Adulterie, beeing a breach both of the firſt and ſecond commandement, of the firſt Table; and yet it comes ſhort of Adulterie in this qualitie of breaking wedlocke; for wedlocke may bee kept of thoſe which are Idolaters. Secondly, I ſay, betweene any parties, if one be married: meaning the husband as well as the wife, to cõfute the opinion of ſome Iewes, and by ſome lawes alſo maintained, that the man hath a priuiledge aboue the woman, ſo as he breaketh not wedlocke, when he goeth into another woman, beſides his wife; which is falſe: for though he haue a prerogatiue ouer his wife, in beeing her head, yet he hath no priuiledge to free him from matrimoniall fidelitie, but is as much bound to keepe himſelfe vnto his wife, as ſhee is to keepe her ſelfe to him. The preheminence of ſuperioritie cannot free the husband from the bond of mariage, the husband is bound to the wife, as much as the wife is to the husband; and ſhe hath power ouer his bodie, as much as he hath ouer hers, 1. Cor. 7.4. Thirdly, I ſay, or eſpouſed, becauſe Adulterie is not onely committed by ſuch parties, whereof one or both, be fully married; but alſo by them, whereof one is ſingle and the other contracted only; and therefore is the ſame [a] puniſhment alotted to both: for contract in right is mariage. Thus we ſee the ſinne here directly forbidden, according to the letter of the Law. Now, though the Lord vnder this one includes all the ſinnes of the ſame kinde, as we ſhall anon perceiue; yet the Phariſies tooke this litterall ſignification for the whole meaning, and taught that the ſinne here forbidden, was bodily adulterie only, and ſo made the adulterie of the heart to be no adulterie; which expoſition Chriſt here confutes.

The vſe. Fraud in expounding Scripture.

Firſt here obſerue the fraud and cunning of theſe Phariſies; they would ſeeme faithfull interpreters of the Lawe, in that they keepe A themſelues ſo cloſe to the words, that they wil not paſſe one iot beyond the litterall ſenſe: but yet in the meane time they omit the full meaning and true vſe of the Lawe. The like hath beene the practiſe of heretikes in all ages; as the Arians, who denied that Chriſt was God, ſticke faſt to theſe words of Scripture, [b] the father is greater then I, and to ſuch like. And the Papiſts to vphold their breaden God, by tranſubſtantiation, will needes keepe the litterall ſenſe of theſe words of Chriſt, This is my body, whereby they ouerturne the nature of that Sacrament. And the like might be ſhewed by ſundry examples in all ages: whereby we are taught, not to ſtand vpon the proprietie of the words of Scripture onely, but to labour to haue the B true ſpirituall ſenſe ioyned with them.

Rhem.Mat. 26.ſect.8.9.

Adulterie a grieuous ſin.

Secondly, here obſerue how grieuous a ſinne Adulterie is; in that Chriſt by name doth expreſly forbid it, among all the ſinnes of this kind; yea, the very Phariſies doe euerie where condemne it: for though they would eaſily diſpenſe with [c] diſobedience to Parents; yet the woman taken in adultery muſt be put to death, Ioh. 8.4.5. The greatnes of this ſinne might be ſhewed by many arguments; for if he be [d] worſe then an Infidel, that careth not for his familie, then farre worſe is the Adulterer, for he deſtroyeth his familie. Salomõ (we know) [e] maketh adulterie worſe then theft; and yet theft is a notorious ſinne, greatly hated, and ſeuerely puniſhed of C all nations. Againe, Adulterie deſtroyeth the Seminarie of the Church, which is [f] a godly ſeede in the family, and it breaketh the couenant betweene the parties and God; it robbes another of the precious ornament of chaſtitie, which is a gift of the holy Ghoſt, it diſhonoureth their bodies, and maketh them the Temples of the deuil; & the adulterer maketh his family a Stewes, for as Dauid dealt with Vrias, ſo his owne ſonne Abſalon dealt with him: and laſtly, it bringeth Gods vengeance vpon the poſteritie: & therfore Iob calleth it [g] a fire which ſhall deuoure vnto deſtruction: yea, the greatneſſe of Gods puniſhment vpon Adulterers, partly in this life, and principally after death, may plainely ſhew the greatneſſe of this ſinne: for D this and other ſinnes, God ouerthrewe [h] Admah and Zeboim, Sodome and Gomorrah, with fire and brimſtone from heauen; and the place where they ſtood, is made a poole of poyſoning water vnto this day. And although the Lord doe not ſhewe ſuch extraordinarie reuenge againſt ſinne, yet his wrath is a conſuming fire againſt whole families, townes, and kingdomes, for this ſinne; though Dauid repented of his Adulterie, yet for that verie ſinne, [i] the ſword muſt not depart from his houſe for euer. And for the life to come, [k] Adulterers, & whoremongers, God wil iudge. Againe, [l] neither fornicatours, nor adulterers, &c. ſhall inherit the kingdome of God: they may repent, and ſo be ſaued, but then they ceaſe to be adulterers.

Now if adulterie bee ſo grieuous a ſinne,

Secondly, the grieuouſneſſe of Gods wrath againſt this ſinne, muſt admoniſh euery one to beware thereof, for it brings the beſome of deſtruction, to ſweepe all away, both in Church and common wealth.

V. 28. But I ſay vnto you, that whoſoeuer looketh on a woman to luſt after her, hath committed adultery with her alreadie in his heart.

Here our Sauiour Chriſt laies down the true ſenſe of this commandement, and as we ſee, he ſpeaketh as the Law-giuer and Prophet of his church, who hath abſolute power to giue lawes, and to expound the ſame. But I ſay vnto you: The Phariſies ſaid there was no adulterie, but that which was outward, and bodily; but Chriſt plainely confuteth that, and ſaith, hee that looketh on a woman to luſt after her, that is, either in looking on her, luſteth; or by looking, luſteth after her: that is, deſireth to increaſe his luſt, hee hath committed adulterie with her alreadie in his heart. Here then our Sauiour Chriſt ſetteth downe two things touching the interpretation of this lawe: Firſt, the occaſion of adulterie, which is looking to luſt. Secondly, that the luſt of the heart; that is, the motion & inward inclination of the heart vnto this ſinne, is adulterie before God, though it neuer come into action.

For the occaſion: To looke vpon a woman, is not ſinne, but may bee done lawfully; yea, thereby a man or woman may glorifie God, as the Queene of Sheba, by beholding a Salomons perſon, and hearing his wiſdome, did take occaſion to glorifie God: but here is meant the abuſe of the ſight: that is, the idle looking, or curious looking of men vpon women, or women vpon men. Now idle looking, is when one looketh without iuſt cauſe, as when a man looketh with intent to luſt: Thus did the ſonnes of God behold the daughters of men, Geneſis, 6. 2. by whoſe looking came luſt, and for luſt came the flood: ſo Potifars wife b firſt, caſt vp her eyes vpon Ioſeph, and then luſted after him, and c Dinah, Iacobs daughter went out to ſee the daughters of the countrie, & to be ſeen againe, and ſo when Shechem ſaw her, he luſted after her, and rauiſhed her: ſo the Prophet Dauid, d liuing in peace and ſecuritie, caſt his eie idly and curiouſly vpon Bathſheba, as ſhee was waſhing her ſelfe, whereupon he luſted after her, and ſo committed both Adultery and murther. This idle and curious looking, Saint Peter calleth e an adulterous eie, both becauſe it is the beginner of luſt, and the increaſer thereof.

a 1. King. 10. 8.

b Gen 39. 7.

c Gen. 34. 1. 2.

d 2. Sam. 11. 2. 3.

e 2. Pet. 2. 14.

A But this ſinne is little regarded, and made a ſmall matter with many, who can bee content to come with Chriſtian eares into the aſſemblies, and yet will bring with them idle and curious, yea adulterous eyes; but ſuch perſons which ſo abuſe their ſight, to the diſhonour of God, muſt know, that they are adulterers before God: and howſoeuer they may perſwade themſelues, that grace enters into their hearts by hearing, yet vndoubtedly by their idle curious eyes, Sathan enters into their ſoule, and keepes out Gods word, whereby the ſoule ſhould bee renued. Wee therefore muſt here be admoniſhed, to take heed how we vſe the ſight of our eyes, eſpecially when wee B are in the aſſemblies of the Saints, and holy exerciſes: and to preuent this euill, it were to be wiſhed, that men and women would ſit by themſelues, and not be mingled in the congregation, vnleſſe it were the husband with his owne wife. Againe, if the idle and curious eye be the beginning of adulterie, then wee muſt learne, with care to gouerne our eyes, as the ſeruants of God haue done. Dauid prayed the Lord to f keepe his eyes from regarding vanitie: and Iob, becauſe hee would avoid vnchaſt thoughts, g made a couenant with his eies, not to looke on a maide.

f Pſ. 119. 37.

g Iob. 31. 1.

Now, as looking to luſt is here forbidden; ſo by proportion are all other like occaſions C vnto adulterie: as firſt, 1 reading of vnchaſt & wanton books of loue matters, vſing light and wanton talke. Many are giuen to theſe kinds of delights, but they muſt know, that therein they ſinne grieuouſly; for they haue not only a wanton eye, but a laſciuious tongue alſo. 2 Secondly, the acting of al ſuch Plaies & Comedies, the matter whereof, is the repreſentation of the light behauiour of men and women; for therein are idle and curious lookes ſet forth to the eie, which ought not to bee, beeing here condemned. 3 Thirdly, the wearing of vaine and light attire, whereby others are prouoked to caſt their eyes vpon them vnto luſt; for if the light and wanton eye bee condemned, then that which cauſeth it, is much more condemned. This ought to be regarded; for light and D forraine attire is a ſecret profeſſion of an vnchaſte heart. 4 Fourthly mixt dauncing of men and women, in time and meaſure, for therein is more occaſion and prouocation vnto luſt, then by the bare beholding of each other with the eie. 5 Fiftly, euill companie: ſo are the words of the Apoſtle Paul out of an Heathen Poet; h Euill conuerſings, corrupt good manners: which may well include that vnſeemely conuerſing of men with women, not warranted either by the generall, or particular calling. 6. Sixtly, the pampering of the bodie with daintie meates, or ſtrong drinkes; this was the ſinne i of Sodome: and it is much more an occaſion of luſt, then the bare ſight of the eie. 7 Seauenthly, Idleneſſe & lazineſſe, in not employing the body in ſome honeſt calling, for thereby alſo is luſt incited.

Occaſions of adulterie here forbidden.

h 1. Cor. 15. 33. Menander in Thaide.

i Ezek. 16. 49.

A And thus much of the meaning of this commandement, forbidding all occaſions to adulterie, vnder a luſtfull eie.

Now conſidering that a man is guiltie of adulterie, that vſeth the occaſions therof, hereby we may ſee that we cannot excuſe our ſelues from the breach of this law; for though we be cleane from the bodily outward fact, yet who can ſay, My heart is cleane? who is free from the occaſions thereof? as from a wanton eye, vaine apparell, wanton ſpeach, intemperance, and the reſt: all which makes vs culpable of this ſinne: and therefore we muſt lay our hands vpon our mouthes, and condemne our ſelues of guilt before God: we muſt humble our ſelues, acknowledging our ſinnes, and breaches of this commandement: and laſtly, we muſt take heed of all occaſions, that may mooue or incite vs vnto luſt or wantonneſſe.

The ſecond point which our Sauiour Chriſt propoundeth in the interpretation of this law, is this; that the luſt of the heart, though it neuer come into act, is Adulterie: now that we may know what our Sauiour Chriſt meaneth by luſt, ſundrie points are to be handled: firſt, how luſt can be a ſinne, conſidering it is onely a hidden deſire of the heart: ſecondly, how luſt can be a ſinne of the ſeauenth commandement, ſeeing it is forbidden in the tenth: and thirdly, how great a ſinne luſt is.

Luſt is a ſin.

For the firſt, that luſt is a ſinne, is thus prooued: Gods Law requireth obedience of the whole man, both in ſoule and bodie, and in euery part, facultie, and power thereof; Thou [k] ſhalt loue the Lord thy God, with all thy heart, with all thy ſoule, and with all thy ſtrength: and that obedience which commeth not from the whole man, is ſinnefull. Now when a man conceiueth vnchaſt thoughts in his heart, then his ſoule, & mind, & his affections, haue not done their duty vnto God, & ſo he ſinneth in luſting.

[k] Mat. 22. 37.

Pelagians.

Yet this doctrine was neuer receiued of all, but ſome haue ſtill excepted againſt it, and their principall reaſons are two: 1. They ſay, luſt is a naturall inclination, deſire, and appetite, which was in Adam before his fall, and ſo can not be a ſinne. Anſ. Luſt or appetite in the heart, is not ſimply a ſinne: for ſo it is a naturall deſire, which was in our firſt parents in their integritie; but to luſt after that which God forbiddeth, that is the ſinne; as for a man to luſt after a woman, or a woman after a man, not being man and wife, which we ſee here Chriſt condemneth. 2. They ſay God bleſſeth adulterers, and fornicators in their luſt, with the iſſue of ſeed in child bearing, as well as man and wife, in lawfull marriage: and therefore it cannot be a ſinne. Anſ. In adulterie two things may be conſidered: the lawfull luſt of the heart, and the act of generation: now when God giues iſſue to adulterers and fornicators, it is no approbation of their ſinnefull luſt, but onely a common bleſſing of naturall generation, which is his owne ordinance by creation: for howſoeuer God approoues not of their ſin, yet he preſerues nature in ſinnefull works. And thus we ſee that luſt is a ſinne.

II. Point. How can luſt be a ſinne of the ſeauenth commandement, ſeeing it is directly forbidden in the tenth: for in this briefe decalogue there is no needles repetitio of any thing? Anſ. Luſt is two-fold, either without conſent of will as when vnchaſte deſires come into the minde and heart, and are not entertained of the will, but be ſpeedily checked ſo ſoone as they ariſe, and ſuch luſt is forbidden in the tenth commandement: or with conſent of will, when a man is willing to entertaine & cheriſh the vnchaſt thoughts that come into his mind, though he neuer put them into practiſe: and theſe are forbidden in the ſeauenth commandement. B

Luſt of the heart a grieuous ſinne.

III. Point. The greatneſſe of this ſinne of luſt: This is here expreſſed by Chriſt, calling it Adulterie before God; as if hee ſhould ſay, Looke how great a ſinne bodily adulterie is before men, who puniſh the ſame with death, euen ſo great and hainous a ſinne before God, is the inward vnchaſt luſting of the heart, whereto a man giues conſent of will, though he neuer bring it into action; for this he ſtands culpable of adulterie before God, and ſhall therefore be condemned, vnleſſe he repent.

How to examine the heart by the 7. commandement.

The vſe of this Third point is manifold. Firſt, hereby we may learne how to examine our ſelues by this ſeauenth commandement: for our Sauiour Chriſt here teacheth vs, that they which willingly retaine vnchaſte deſires with delight, though they neuer giue their bodies to C the outward act, are Adulterers before God: and therefore when we would examine our ſelues by this commandement, we muſt ſearch our hearts, whether we haue willingly retained therein any luſtfull thoughts: and if we haue, we muſt know that we are guiltie of Adulterie before God. And becauſe none of vs are free from this ſinne, it muſt humble and caſt vs downe before God as breakers of this commandement.

Motiues againſt luſt.

Secondly, if the luſt of the heart be Adulterie before God, then we muſt with care and diligence learne the Apoſtle Pauls leſſon, 2. Cor. 7. 1. To purge our ſelues from all vncleanneſſe both of fleſh and ſpirit: that is, we muſt labour D to keepe our hearts and mindes pure and chaſt, as well as our bodies. And to induce vs hereunto, conſider the reaſons following. Firſt, we 1 all deſire to ſee God, and to know his loue in Chriſt, for our comfort in this life, and ſaluation for euer: but without holineſſe and puritie of heart, we can neuer ſee God, nor know the comfort of his loue: for when a man defiles his minde with vnchaſte thoughts, hee depriues himſelfe of the ſtate of Gods fauour, and of the 2, experience of his loue. Secondly, conſider the ſtate and condition of mans heart, by effectuall calling; it is the dwelling place and Temple of the holy Ghoſt, (for when a man is in Chriſt, he liueth in Chriſt by faith, and Chriſt in him by his ſpirit:) now then looke as men vſe to trimme vp their dwelling houſes, for the receiuing of ſome noble gueſt, ſo ought we to keep our hearts pure and cleane from vnchaſt luſtes, that they may be fit habitations for the bleſſed ſpirit of God; but by vnchaſte luſtes, we make the heart a ſtable for the deuill, and a cage of all vncleane ſpirits. 3 Thirdly, if we ſuffer our hearts now to burne with fleſhly luſt, we make an entrance in them for the burning of hell fire for euer: for theſe two alwaies goe together, burning luſt, & hell fire, vnleſſe repentance come betweene. And therefore if we would eſcape hell fire, we muſt quench the fire of luſt, and clenſe our hearts from this vncleannes. 4 Fourthly, by profeſſion we ſeeme to be the members of Chriſt; and if we would be ſo indeed, then we muſt take heed of vnchaſte luſts, for thereby we pull our hearts from Chriſt, and knit them to an harlot. Theſe and ſuch like reaſons, muſt mooue vs to auoide all vnchaſt deſires: and for the preſeruation of chaſtitie in our hearts, theſe Rules muſt be obſerued.

Rules for preſeruation of chaſtitie.

1 Firſt, the minde muſt be filled with godly meditation, and the word of God muſt dwell in our hearts plenteouſly: for vnchaſt luſts do therfore ariſe in our hearts, becauſe we are idle minded, and emptie of Gods word: if that were truly ingraffed in vs, theſe wicked deſires could not enter, or at leaſt take no place in vs. 2 Secondly, we muſt often giue our ſelues to the ſpirituall exerciſes of faith, repentance, and new obedience; as to the vſuall hearing, reading, and meditating in Gods word, to the often receiuing of the Lords ſupper, and to continuall prayer, not onely publikely, but priuately eſpecially: for theſe confirme Gods graces in the heart, and doe euen nippe in the head all vngodly motions whatſoeuer. 3 Thirdly, we muſt vſe ſobrietie in meate, drinke, apparell: for vngodly luſts are kindled, fedde, and nouriſhed with too much pampering of the bodie: Sodom and Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim ſinned moſt grieuouſly in this kind through fulnes of bread; and therefore we muſt vſe a moderation in theſe things, that grace may be ſtrengthened, and all euill luſts weakened in vs. 4 Fourthly, we muſt alwaies be doing ſome good thing, either in our generall calling of a Chriſtian, or in our particular calling: yea in our lawfull recreation we muſt intend and practiſe good: for when men are idle, Satan fills their hearts with euill thoughts, and ſo defiles the ſame. 5 Fiftly, men and women muſt not priuately conuerſe together, without warrant ſo to doe, either from their generall, or particular calling, ſo as with good conſcience they can ſay, the Lord doth call them ſo to conuerſe: for the mutuall conuerſing of men and women, is the cauſe of many noiſome luſts: and therefore neither men nor women without good warrant, ſhould thruſt themſelues into ſuch occaſion of temptations. Remember what the Apoſtle ſaith, * Euill conuerſings, corrupt good manners. The Apoſtle Peter felt the ſmart of this boldneſſe, though in an other caſe: for comming to warme himſelfe in Caiphas hal, without good warrant ſo to doe, when a ſilly maide demanded of him, whether hee was not one of Chriſts companie, he denied him flatly, and that with curſing: and ſo many men and women conuerſing without warrant where they ſhould not, do fall into many noyſome ſinnes; and when they thinke themſelues moſt ſtrong, then with Peter, haue they the greateſt falls.

* 1.Cor.15. 33.

V. 29. Wherefore if thy right eye cauſe thee to offend, plucke it out, and caſt it from thee: for better it is for thee, that one of thy members periſh, then that thy whole bodie ſhould be caſt into hell:

V. 30. Alſo if thy right hand make thee to offend, cut it off, and caſt it from thee: for better it is for thee, that one of thy members periſh, then that thy whole bodie ſhould be caſt into hell.

Scope.

In theſe two verſes, our Sauiour Chriſt laieth downe a moſt heauenly inſtruction, for the auoiding of offences; propounding it by way of anſwer to a ſecret obiection, which might be framed, by occaſion of his former expoſition of this ſeauenth commandement: for hauing condemned the Adulterie of the heart, declared by the eye, ſome man might ſay, What ſhall we doe with our eyes, if an vnchaſt looke be ſo dangerous? Our Sauiour Chriſt anſwers, If thy right eye cauſe thee to offend, plucke it out: Which words muſt not be taken literally, in their proper ſenſe: for this is a Rule in the expounding of Scripture, That when the literall ſenſe is againſt any commandement of the law, then the words muſt not be taken properly. Now theſe words in their proper ſenſe, doe command a breach of the the ſixth commandement which bindeth euery man to preſerue his own, and his neighbours life; & ſo no man can without ſinne pull out his eye, or cut off his hand.

Rule of expounding Scripture.

Expoſition.

By eye then, we are to vnderſtand: Firſt, the eye of the bodie: yet not that onely, but any other thing that is deere and pretious vnto vs: as our eye, euen our right eye is. If it cauſe thee to offend,] that is, cauſe thee to ſinne, and to faile in the way of obedience vnto Gods commandements. Pluck it out, and caſt it from thee:] Theſe words are a loftie kind of ſpeech, called Hyperbole, whereby thus much is ſignified: Reſtraine and gouerne it moſt carefully, though it be to thine owne great paine, loſſe, and hinderance; For better it is for thee, that one of thy members periſh, then that thy whole bodie ſhould be caſt into hell:] Theſe words containe a Reaſon of the former exhortation, to this effect: It is better for thee, to want the benefit and vſe of things moſt precious and deere vnto thee, in this life, and ſo to be ſaued; then by hauing & vſing them to periſh for euer: So that the true meaning of this place, is this: as if our Sauiour Chriſt had ſaid, Go through the whole courſe of thy life, and take a viewe of all thy wayes, and therein ſee what thing is an occaſion of ſinne vnto thee; that take heede of, and auoide, though the vſe thereof bee moſt deere vnto thee: for it is better that thou ſhouldſt want the vſe thereof, and ſo be ſaued; then by it to periſh eternally in hell.

Alſo if thy right hand make thee to offend, cut it off: for it is better for thee, &c. Here the ſame exhortation and Reaſon is againe repeated, which we muſt not thinke to bee a thing needeleſſe and friuolous; for ſuch Repititions in Scripture haue ſpeciall vſe, to ſignifie that the things ſo deliuered, be of ſpeciall importance, worthie all careful obſeruation and obedience. Now by right hand, here is meant, any thing that is moſt profitable vnto vs, what euer it be, if it cauſe vs to ſinne againſt God, it muſt be auoided, and left off moſt carefully.

Vſe. Guard the ſenſes.

By this Exhortation of our Sauiour Chriſt, we are taught to carrie a ſtrict watch ouer all our ſenſes, and ouer all the parts of our bodies, eſpecially the eye and hands, that they become not vnto vs occaſions of ſinning againſt God: and for the gouernment of the eyes, there be two ſpeciall Rules.

ules for the yes. 1

First, we muſt vſe our ſight, that is, open and ſhut our eyes, in obedience vnto God. Salomon giuing Rules for the well ordering of the tongue, ſight, and foote, ſaith thus of the eie, [a] Let thine eye behold the right, and thy eye lidder direct the way before thee: which words ſeeme to carie this ſenſe, That we ſhould order our ſight according to the ſtraite Rule of Gods word, for that is the way wherein wee ought to walke. Now the neceſſitie of obſeruing this Rule, may appeare by ſundrie examples: Eue [b] looking vpon the forbidden fruit, with deſire to eate thereof againſt Gods commandement, was the doore and entrance of that ſinne into her heart: was not [c] Cham accurſed for looking vpon his Fathers nakednes? was not Lots wife turned into a pillar of ſalt, for [d] looking back towards Sodome? Fiftie thouſand threeſcore and tenne men of Bethſhemeſh were ſlaine [e] for looking into the Arke of the Lord, againſt his reuealed will: by all which it is plaine, that we ought to vſe our ſight in obedience to God: for which ende, it will bee good before we looke on any thing, to conſider whether the ſame wil bee for Gods glorie, the good of our ſelues, and of our brethren: if it bee, we may vſe our ſight; if not, we may not vſe it.

2. Rule. Looke to Gods glorie.

Secondly, we muſt make our eies, not the weapons of any ſinne, but the inſtruments of Gods worſhip and ſeruice. This we ſhall doe, if wee employ them thus: 1. In beholding Gods creatures in heauen and earth, that in them we may ſee Gods glorie, wiſedome, mercie, power, and prouidence, and thereby take occaſion to magnifie the name of God. 2. In beholding Gods iudgements very wiſhly and narrowly, that therein we may ſee his iuſtice and wrath againſt ſinne, and ſo be humbled in our ſelues, & terrified from ſinne. 3. In beholding of the Elements of Gods Sacraments, eſpecially the bread and wine in the Lords Supper, which be viſible words, wherein we may ſee our Sauiour Chriſt, as it were crucified before our eyes. 4. In vſing them as inſtruments of Inuocation, by lifting them vp [f] to heauen, to teſtifie the lifting vp of our hearts vnto God. This vſe of the eyes nature teacheth vs; for whereas other creatures haue but fowre muſcles in their eyes, whereby their eyes are turned round about, man onely aboue them all hath a fifth muſcle, whereby his eie is turned vpward towards heauen. And this which is ſaid, for the well ordering of our eyes, muſt be obſerued in the reſt of the ſenſes, and in all other parts of the bodie; they muſt all bee imployed and ſet a worke in obedience to God, and continually obſerued, that they become not the weapons of ſinne, but the inſtruments of his glorie.

Columl.5. cap.9.

Avoide all occaſions of ſinne.

Secondly, this Exhortation of Chriſt, muſt teach vs to avoide all the occaſions of euerie ſinne, though it be with great loſſe vnto our ſelues, in the things of this life. This is the cheife point that our Sauiour Chriſt aimeth at in this place; & therefore it ought with ſpeciall regard to be learned, & remembred. Mans nature is like to drie wood, or towe, which will burne ſo ſoone as fire is put vnto it; giue a man the leaſt occaſion of any ſin, & he is as readie to comit it, as dry wood is to burne, though therby he doe as much as in him lieth, to caſt away his owne ſoule for euer. Look therefore, as Mariners on the Seas, haue conſtant and continuall care to avoide both rocks and ſands, whereby they may ſuffer ſhipwracke; ſo muſt we moſt warily auoide the occaſions of euery ſinne. A moſt worthy example hereof we haue in Moſes, who was brought vp in Pharaohs Court, till he was fourtie yeares olde, where he enioyed all earthly pleaſures and honours that his heart could wiſh; and ſo might haue continued if he would, for hee was the adopted ſonne of Pharaohs daughter, but yet Moſes left them all, and [g] choſe rather to ſuffer affliction with the people of God in Goſhen, then to enioy all the pleaſures of Egypt. And this he did, becauſe they were but the pleaſures of ſinne, which he could not enioy, vnleſſe he would forſake the true feare and worſhip of God, and all good conſcience: and his example we ought to followe.

Now that we may avoide all the occaſions of ſinne, and ſo put in practiſe this wholeſome precept of our Sauiour Chriſt, I will here entreat of the occaſions of ſinne, and ſhew withall, how they may be avoided.

An occaſion of ſinne deſcribed.

By occaſion of ſinne, I meane any thing that either of it ſelfe, or by mans abuſe, becomes offenſiue, and prouoketh vnto ſinne. In this large acceptance, an occaſion of ſinne extendeth it ſelfe, not onely to ſuch things as are euill, but euen to things good and commendable in thẽſelues, which by mans abuſe, cauſe tranſgreſſion againſt God. Occaſions of ſinne are two-fold; either giuen, or taken. An occaſion giuen, is that thing, either word or action, that is euill in it ſelfe, the ſpeaking or doing whereof, ſtirres a man effectually to ſinne. Occaſions giuen are two-fold: either of one man vnto another, or of man vnto himſelfe. The occaſions wherby one man may prouoke another to ſinne, are many: I will reduce them vnto ſixe heads. The firſt, is bad counſel, whereby on man perſwadeth an other vnto ſin. This is a great cauſe of much euil in the world: thus came the fall of our firſt Parents: for [h] Satan perſwaded Eue and Eue her husband; thus came the crucifying of the Lord of life: for the high Prieſts and [i] Rulers perſwaded the people to aske Barrabas, and to deſtroy Ieſus. Hence commeth ſeeking to wizzards: one friend perſwades another, for their outward good as they thinke: yea, from this bad counſel comes the common neglect of al good duties in Gods worſhip.

i Mat.27.20.

The ſecond is, conſent or approbation of ſinne, and it is two-fold; ſecret, or open. Secret approbation and conſent is, when men ſee ſinne committed, and are not grieued thereat: for this cauſe the Apoſtle Paul checketh the [k] Corinthians, that they were not ſorrowfull, but rather puffed up at the fall of the inceſtuous man: whereby they did in ſome ſort hearten him in his ſinnes: this is a great occaſion of ſinne in our dayes. The Prophet David was of another minde, his [l] eyes guſhed out riuers of teares, becauſe men brake Gods lawes. Open approbation of ſinne is, when men doe openly countenance ſinners, and lewd perſons, which make profeſſion of badde practiſes: this is a great occaſion of many horrible impieties: hereby the hands of the wicked are ſtrengthened in their wickednes, as [m] the Lord complaineth: and this is the ſinne of this age: for who is ſo badde, that hath not ſome patrone of his euill, and ſome backe friend to ſooth him in his ſinne, which makes ſinne ſhameleſſe, and ſinners impudent? But all Gods children muſt follow Eliſha, who in great feruencie of ſpirit told Iehoram to his face, though he were a king, that if it had not beene for the preſence of good King Iehoſaphat, he would not haue looked towards him, nor ſeene him: the Lord himſelfe will not [o] take the wicked by the hand, neither can he endure that his children ſhould [p] helpe the wicked, or loue them that hate the Lord.

The third occaſion giuen, is prouocation vnto ſinne, A when either by word or deed, men excite or drawe on others to ſome euil; as vnto anger, reuenge, hatred, to drunkennes, or ſuch like; and this is a common fault of thoſe that delight in drunken fellowſhip.

Prouocation to ſinne.

The fourth occaſion is, neglect of good duties vnto our brethren; as of exhortation, admonition, inſtruction, or rebuke, Ioſhua 7. Achan ſtole the execrable thing for himſelfe alone, & yet all the people are charged with that fault, and puniſhed for it: the cauſe was, their neglect to keepe one an other from that ſinne, according as God commanded them, chap. 6. 18. This is a great occaſion of impietie among vs; if neighbour would admoniſh neighbour, and one brother an other, B ſinne would not be ſo rife as it is. But this dutie is not only neglected of priuate men one to another, but of publike perſons, who are more bound vnto it. The Magiſtrate is negligent in puniſhing, and the Miniſter in reproouing ſinne: and the maſter of the family careleſſe in reforming thoſe that are vnder him, which cauſeth ſinne to abound.

Neglect of good duties.

The fift occaſion giuen, is euill Example in the practiſe of any ſinne whatſoeuer, which may be knowne, this is moſt dangerous, like vnto wild fire that inflameth all places whereon it lighteth. The truth hereof appeares among vs: for let any one man or woman take vp a newe faſhion in attire, and preſently the ſame is generally receiued: let a man invent or ſing a C lewd ſong, and preſently it is learned of all, euen of little children that can ſcarſe ſpeake: whence alſo comes it, that crawling infants ſhould ſweare roundly, & frame themſelues to all impietie when they cannot ſpeake readily, but from the bad example of their Elders, with whome they are brought vp? Now among all men, their bad example is moſt dangerous, who make the greater profeſſion of Religion. They are like falſe lights vpon the ſhoare, which lead the ſhippes vpon the ſands. And therefore ſuch as ſhew any care or forwardnes in holy practiſes of religion, muſt haue ſpecial watch ouer all their waies, that (if it be poſſible) they may be blameleſſe both in word and deede; for all men haue an eye at them, and the wicked would D gladly ſpie holes in their coate.

Bad example.

The laſt occaſion giuen is, the priuate ſlandering of Gods Miniſters, and the diſgracing of their Miniſterie: this is an offence as generall as the reſt, and it cauſeth many to contemne the meanes of their ſaluation. When men meet together, their common talke is of the Miniſters, and of their doctrine, not to be edified by mutuall conference, but onely to diſgrace their perſons, and to make their Miniſtery contemptible; but they little know what great miſcheif this cauſeth, & therfore it ought to be avoided.

Slandering Gods miniſters.

These are occaſions of ſinning giuen by one man to another: for the avoiding whereof, which is the plucking out of the eie, and cutting off the hand here commanded, this Rule muſt bee obſerued: We muſt hate and eſchewe the occaſions of ſinne as deadly poiſon: and eſteeme thoſe perſons that giue them vnto vs, in that regard, as ill as the deuill. Thus Chriſt dealt with Peter his owne Diſciple, when he went about to hinder him from doing his Fathers wil in ſuffering for our ſinnes; ſaying, q Come behinde mee Satan; conſidering him in that action, as if hee had beene the deuill himſelfe: for we muſt know, that the deuill comes not openly vnto men, but cunningly conuaies himſelfe in theſe occaſions of ſinne giuen by others; that thereby he may enter into them for the deſtruction of their ſoules: we therefore muſt endeauour as Paul did, r To keepe a good conſcience in all things: that is, to keepe our ſelues pure and vncorrupt from all occaſions of ſinne in the world: with a watchfull eye againſt offences muſt we walke on, in that way that leadeth vnto life, eſchewing theſe ſtumbling blocks which the deuill caſts in our way by other men: and ſo ſhall we obey this good coūſel of our Sauiour Chriſt.

The ſecond kind of offence giuen.

Offences ariſing from a mās corrupt affections.

The ſecond kind of occaſions of ſinne giuen, are thoſe which a man giues vnto himſelfe and they ariſe either from his affections, or from his imaginations: from mans affections ariſe ſo many occaſions of ſinne, as there be corrupt affections in him; as from corrupt deſire ariſeth couetouſneſſe, which is ſo great an occaſion of ſinne, that the Apoſtle calls it f the roote of all euill. This drawes mans heart ſo much to the world, that he can ſpare no time for the meanes of his ſaluation; herewith he is ſo choked, that he neuer thinketh of repentance, till the laſt gaſpe. Such an other occaſion of ſinne, is pride of heart, whereby many giue themſelues ſo much to the garniſhing of their bodies, that they neglect their ſoules altogether. The like is ſelfe-loue, whereby men ouerweening their gifts, thinke not themſelues honoured according to their deſert, and ſo through diſcontent giue themſelues to plotte and practiſe much miſcheife, for the aduancing of their eſtate. Of this ſort are the Romiſh Prieſts and Ieſuits, as their manifold dangerous attempts againſt our Church and State doe euidently declare. And thus we might runne through al the affections of mans heart, ſhewing that the corrupt motions thereof are the cauſe of much ſinne vnto him, and a moſt dangerous meanes for the ruine of his ſoule.

f 1.Tim.6.10.

How to auoid offences ariſing from a mans owne heart.

The Rule.

Meanes. 1

In regard whereof here alſo we muſt ſhew, how this eye may be plucked out, and this hand cut off: that is, by what meanes we may reforme our hearts, and ſtay the rage of our affections, that they cauſe vs not to ſinne. The way is this, we muſt mortifie and crucifie our vnruly affections and corrupt deſires. And for this ende we muſt put in practiſe three duties. Firſt, we muſt beleeue that we are crucified with Chriſt; that is, as we conceiue our ſelues to be in Chriſt by faith, whereby we haue communion with him; ſo we muſt conceiue that this communion with Chriſt, is in his death and burial, ſo as our ſinfull nature, with all our corrupt affections, were A nayled to his croſſe and buried in his graue: as the Apoſtle ſhewes at large, Rom. 6. 3, 4. &c. Now when this perſwaſion ſhall take place in our hearts, it will by Gods grace keepe vs from yeelding to corrupt motions and deſires, and mooue vs to labour to ſubdue them daily: for herein ſtands our aſſurance that we haue fellowſhip with Chriſt, when we haue fellowſhip in his death. And therefore as we ſee malefactours to ceaſe from ſtealth and robberie when they are once hanged; ſo we beeing crucified with Chriſt in reſpect of the olde man, muſt not ſuffer the ſame to rule in our affections, or to haue force in our members: knowing (as the a Apoſtle ſaith) that our olde man is B crucified with Chriſt, that the bodie of ſinne might be deſtroied, that henceforth we ſhould not ſerue ſinne: and, b they that are Chriſts haue crucified the fleſh, with the affections and luſts thereof: whereupon he bids vs c thinke, that we are dead to ſinne, meaning with Chriſt, and ſo cannot liue therein; Saint Iohn ſaith, d Hee that is borne of God, ſinneth not, becauſe the ſeede remaineth in him: that is, true faith aſſuring the heart that all the benefits of Chriſts death and paſſion belong vnto him; whereof this is one, that in our nature he ſuffered death vpon the croſſe, that we by the power of his ſufferings might haue ſinne crucified in vs, ſo as it ſhould not raigne in vs to bring forth fruites vnto death. 2 Secondly, wee muſt remember C Gods commandement forbidding euery ſinne, and euery wicked luſt and affection; and withall we muſt applie the threatning of his wrath againſt the ſame, that thereby our fleſh may be ſubdued. 3 Thirdly, we muſt ſtriue againſt our corrupt motions and affections, not giuing them libertie to beare ſway in vs, but ruling them by meditating in the word of God, and by praier for ſtrength of grace to ouercome them all; dealing with them as parents doe with kniues, turning the edges of them before they leaue them in the hands of their children, leaſt they be hurt therewith: as if our loue be ſet vpon the world, we muſt labour to ſet it vpon Chriſt and his righteouſnes; and if our hatred be againſt our brethren, we muſt labour to ſet it vpon ſinne, and ſo for euery affection, D as ioy, feare, &c. we muſt ſo keepe them to their right obiect, that they may rather further vs in well doing, then become in vs the occaſions of any ſinne againſt God.

c Rom.6.11.

d 1.Ioh.3.9.

Offences ariſing from mans mind.

The ſecond kind of occaſions of ſinne which a man giueth to himſelfe, ariſe from his minde and imagination: And they are many, I will onely note three. The Firſt, is an inward conceit of perfect knowledge, touching mans dutie to God, and the way of his ſaluation: that this is a common conceit in the hearts of the ignorant eſpecially, may appeare by this common ſpeech of theirs; that they know as much as any Preacher can teach them: for the ſumme of all (ſay they) is, to loue God aboue all, and my neighbour as my ſelfe, and to beleeue to bee ſaued by Chriſt: now this they know as well as the beſt; and hereupon they become contemners of the preaching of the word, the ordinarie meanes of their ſaluation, as of a thing needeleſſe and ſuperfluous. This conceit is common among vs, and doth much hurt to many a mans ſoule.

Remedie. The way to cut it off is this; the vaine man that is puffed vp with this conceit, muſt examine himſelfe touching his knowledge, whether it be ſufficient to ſaluation. And for this ende hee muſt make inquirie in himſelfe for theſe two things:

Trie our knowledge.

1 Firſt, whether he ſees his owne naturall blindneſſe, and whether he be mooued thereby to labour for the knowledge of God and of his will; where this is wanting, there is nothing but a vaine conceit of knowledge.

3 Secondly, whether his knowledge be ioyned with conuerſion of heart from ſinne vnto God; and with reformation of life from euill to good. This change of heart and life goeth with all ſauing knowledge. Now if theſe be wanting (as vndoubtedly they are in all vaine perſons) then is their knowledge ſo farre from beeing ſauing knowledge, profitable to ſaluation, that it rather turneth to their deeper condemnation.

The ſecond imagination in a man, occaſioning him to ſinne, is the perſwaſion of his ſtrong faith. The more ignorant ſort that want both faith and repentance, will thus bragge of their ſtrong faith; that no euill companie can hurt them, and hereupon they take occaſion to liue as they liſt. But that this is a vaine preſumption, may hereby appeare; becauſe [a] true faith puriſieth the heart, and [b] ſtrengtheneth a man in life to auoid ſinne, yea, it miniſtreth ſweete comfort towards the time of death. But vſually theſe men that bragge and boaſt ſo much of their faith, are corrupt in heart, ſinnefull in life, and fearefull in their death; many times deſpairing of Gods mercie, as lamentable experience oft times teacheth.

Remedie. Trie thy faith. Two wayes. The way to cut off this occaſion of offence is this; to make triall in our ſelues whether our faith be true and ſound or not. This will appeare two waies:

1 Firſt, by the beginnings and degrees of the workes of the ſpirit, which go before a true and liuely faith, which be three; firſt, a true ſight of our ſinnes, with an apprehenſion of the wrath of God due for the ſame; ſecondly, a true ſorrow and greefe of heart for offending God by theſe our ſinnes: and laſtly, an hungring and thirſting after the mercie and grace of God in Chriſt, aboue all worldly things: where theſe things are, there is grace; but where theſe are wanting, there is no true faith, but a vaine preſumption.

2 Secondly, faith will appeare by the worke of loue: for in loue will faith bring forth all the duties of the morall law, both to God and man: for [c] faith worketh by loue, and loue is the fulfilling of the law, Rom. 13. 10. Now all ſuch perſons as ſtand ſo much vpon the ſtrength of their faith, ſhall ſoone find, if they examine themſelues by theſe

A two Rules, that they haue nothing in them but a vaine preſumption, which will turne to their deeper condemnation, vnleſſe they repent, and get true faith.

3 The third Imagination cauſing a man to ſinne, is a thought of ſecuritie, whereby he puts farre away the euill day; perſwading himſelfe that though God will come in iudgement againſt ſinne, yet it is farre off. This was the wicked thought of the Iewes, who ſaid, The [d] viſions ſhewed to the Prophets, were of times a farre off, and for many daies to come. This conceit is naturally bred in euery man, and is the occaſion of many foule ſinnes: Matth. 24. 48. The euill ſeruant ſaid in his heart, my maſter doth deferre his comming, and thereupon he takes occaſion to ſmite his fellowes, and to liue lewdly. B Iſa. 28, 15. The wicked ſay, they haue made a couenant with hell and death, and though a ſcourge runne ouer, and paſſe through, yet it ſhall not come at them. And the vngodly, that walke after their owne luſts, ſay, [e] Where is the promiſe of his comming? And is not this wicked thought riſe among vs? for God hath now a long time called vs to repentance by the preaching of the Goſpel, and becauſe it takes no place in our hearts, he ſends vpon vs his heauie iudgements, as plague, famine, rumors of warre; but yet all this haue not cauſed vs to meete the Lord: generally that complaint of the Prophet may be applied vnto vs, [f] No man ſaith, what haue I done? now the cauſe hereof, is this wicked conceit, whereby we thinke [g] the euill ſhall not come nor haſten for vs. In this regard we are like the men of the C olde world, who would not beleeue Noah, though he preached vnto them both by word and deede; and ſo they knew nothing till the flood came and tooke them all away: ſo fearefull is it, to put away from vs the threatnings of Gods iudgements. And yet this ſinne takes place not onely in the ignorant, but many times in the hearts of Gods children.

Remedie. The way to remooue this wicked conceit is, to eſteeme of euery preſent day, as the day of our death, or of the laſt iudgement, and ſo accordingly, to prepare our ſelues to die, and to meete God in iudgement euery day. This thing Moſes aimed at, when he praied God [h] to teach him and his people ſo to number their dayes, that they D might applie their hearts vnto wiſedome: for this perſwaſion of long life, mooues many to giue themſelues to the ſinnes and vanities of this world exceſſiuely: we muſt therefore ſhake off this vaine perſwaſion, and euery day prepare our ſelues for death, and for the day of iudgement; ſo ſhall we number our daies aright, and applie our hearts vnto wiſedome: for this is true wiſedome in man, rightly to conſider his latter ende. And the more neerer doth this dutie concerne vs, becauſe of the continued intercourſe of Gods iudgements vpon vs, in famine, plague, and peſtilence, &c. which plainely argues, that more heauie iudgements are to enſue, vnleſſe we preuent the ſame by ſpeedie and

Hauing thus ſhewed, what be the occaſions giuen whereby men are drawn to ſin, I come to occaſions taken. An occaſiõ of ſinne, or an offence taken is, when a man of a good thing frames that vnto himſelfe which cauſeth him to ſinne againſt God, and ſo much as in him lieth, to caſt away his owne ſoule. Theſe occaſions taken, ariſe eſpecially from foure heads. Firſt, from the Scripture: ſecondly, from the doctrine of the Church drawne out of Scripture: thirdly, from the ſtate of the Church: and fourthly, from the ſtate of the wicked. For the firſt: though the word of God be moſt perfect euery way, both for matter and ſtyle, yet hence doe many take offence, and that two waies principally; partly from the plaineneſſe & ſimplicitie of the Scripture, and partly from the contents thereof. For the firſt: it is moſt true, that the Scripture ſtyle and phraſe in many things, is plaine and familiar euen to the capacitie of the ſimple; yet this is no diſgrace to Scripture, but rather an honour, which more ſetteth out the Maieſtie of Gods word. And yet hereby many take occaſion to contẽne it, eſteeming the ſtudie of Scripture too baſe & ſhallow, & the knowledg thereof too plain & familiar for their fine wits; wherupon ſome giue themſelues to other ſtudies & courſes, which might glorifie God in this calling. Others alſo, though they addict themſelues vnto Diuinitie, yet they more imploy themſelues in the writings of men, for their priuate ſtudies, then in the word of God; & in their publique Miniſterie, they more affect the oſtentation of humane wit, eloquence, and learning, in multiplicitie of reading, and ſet words and phraſes, in diuers languages, then that plaine euidence of the ſpirit, which the Apoſtle a Paul ſo much commends. This alſo is a great fault in many hearers, that they are more delighted with the vaine conceits of men in preaching, then with the pure and plaine word of God, counting baſely of that ſermon wherein the Prophets and Apoſtles are only quoted, but highly aduancing that Sermon for deepe learning, which is ſtuffed with Fathers, Schoolmen, Poets, and ſuchlike.

Offences taken.

Foure heads fro whence offences are taken.

1. From Scripture.

1. From the plaineneſſe of it.

a 1.Cor.2.4.

To cut off this offence: Firſt, the will of God muſt be conſidered, for the penning and preaching of his word, in plaine and ſimple manner: for herein is that true, b that God hath chooſen ſuch, as to the world are fooliſh, weake, vile, and deſpiſed, to confound and bring to nought the wiſe and mightie things of the world: and hereby alſo is made euident, that c the faith of Gods elect, doth not conſiſt in the wiſdome of men, but in the power of God: againe, the preaching the Goſpel, d with the wiſedome of words, makes the croſſe of Chriſt of none effect: let no man therfore deceiue himſelfe; for e the fooliſhneſſe of God is wiſer then men, and the weakeneſſe of God, ſtronger then men. Againe, hee that doth exerciſe himſelfe in the word of God either priuately or publiquely, muſt labour thereby to ſee his owne ſinnes, and Gods heauie iudgement due vnto him for them; and ſo will he beginne to reuerence Gods word, as the onely meanes of true comfort. The woman of f Samaria, at the firſt beganne to cauill with Chriſt, when ſhe heard him talke of the water of life: but ſo ſoone as he diſcouered her ſinne to her conſcience, telling her g ſhe had had fiue husbands, and he whome ſhee now had, was not her husband: then ſhe left off to cauill, and h honoured him, by beleeuing his word, and cauſing others to come and to beleeue in him. The Iewes made i light of the giuing of the holy Ghoſt vnto the Apoſtles at the firſt, but when Peter had k pricked their hearts, they ſought vnto the word, and receiued it with gladnes: ſo the Iayler, though ouernight hee dealt vnkindly with the Apoſtles l putting their feete in the ſtockes in the dungeon; yet beeing ſtricken with a feare by the opening of the priſon doores, he then fell downe before them trembling, and asked what hee might doe to be ſaued.

Secondly, others take occaſion of offence from the contents of the Bible: as when they read of the miracles wrought by the Prophets, by Chriſt and his Apoſtles; they ſay, the like may be done by Magicke, and ſo blaſphemouſly do father vpon the Scripture that moſt wicked practiſe of ſorcerie; like to the malicious Iewes, who ſaide of Chriſt, that hee caſt out deuills by the power of Beelzebub, Luk. 11. 15. Others denie the Hiſtorie of Moſes to be true, by reaſon of Noahs Arke, which (they ſay) as it is diſcribed for quantitie could not containe a couple of euerie kinde of creatures, with prouiſion & fodder for them, for a whole yeares ſpace: of this opinion was Apelles an auncient heretike in the Primitiue Church: and many vpon this occaſion haue becom Atheiſts, denying the truth of Gods word to their damnation. To theſe I anſwer, firſt for the miracles, that no creature, men, or Angels, is able to doe ſuch workes, as are recorded in Scripture, to be done by the power of God: Ioh. 9. Chriſt opened the eyes of one that was borne blinde. The deuill by his ſkill, and man by Arte can doe much in curing blindneſſe, cauſed by wounds and diſeaſes; but no power of nature nor of magick, no not all the power of Angels, is ſufficient to procure ſight to on that was borne blind; that muſt be done by a power creating, which is in no creature. Againe, as Hiſtories record, the deuill is able to enter into a dead bodie, and cauſe it to moue, and can ſpeake in it; but to raiſe vp one to life that had beene dead fowre daies, as m Chriſt did Lazarus, is a worke that all the deuills in hell, nay all the Angels in heauen, are not able to doe. And for Appelles the heretike, who tooke occaſion from Noahs Arke to condemne the books of Moſes: the anſwer made to him in the Primitiue Church may ſerue the turne: to wit, that it was in quantitie ſufficient to con-taine couples of all kindes of creatures, and prouiſion for them for a whole yeares ſpace: for to omit the height an breadth of it: it was [a] three hundred cubits long, and euery cubit (according to the auncient meaſure) contained nine foot, which in all came to the lēgth of half a mile and more. Again, others ſay that though euerie cubit had beene but on foote and an halfe long (as our cubits are) yet hauing [o] three lofts, it was of ſufficient bignes to containe all kindes of creatures by couples, and prouiſion for them for a yeares ſpace. But yet put the caſe that we could not tell, how an Arke ſhould be made great enough to containe couples of all kinds of creatures, and prouiſion for them; ſhould wee thereupon take occaſion to condemne the books of God that record the ſame and the thing it ſelfe? God forbidde: nay rather we muſt hereby learne to acknowledge and confeſſe our owne blindneſſe, and the ſhallow reach of our vnderſtanding, and ſo admire the wonderfull worke of God.

1.Rule.

The way to cut off this occaſion of offence, taken from the Scripture, is, firſt to obſerue, that (howſoeuer nothing is more repugnant to our nature then the word of God) yet the ſame word of God hath more preuailed with many mens hearts to winne the ſame vnto it, then any thing beſides could euer doe. Humane writings are farre more plauſible to naturall men, then the holy Scriptures of God: for the wiſdome of God in Scripture is eſteemed fooliſhneſſe to mans naturall reaſon: and yet who did euer cleaue ſo faſt to the writings of men, as Gods children haue done to the word of God, for the teſtimonie whereof they haue beene and are content to liue and die? This thing argueth plainly: that there is in Scripture a diuine power: for if it had beene from man, and againſt his nature as it is, man would haue contemned it.

2.Rule.

Secondly, this muſt be conſidered, that the penmen of holy Scriptures, both the Prophets and Apoſtles, haue recorded their owne faults in penning of it, which plainely argueth that they were penned by holy men of God, acording to the direction of the holy Ghoſt, and are not the inuentions of politique heads, to keep men in awe: for then the Authors and penmen thereof, would rather haue concealed their owne faults, then haue publiſhed the ſame in their owne workes to their diſcredit.

3.Rule.

Laſtly, conſider the ſubiect and matter of the whole Bible: to wit, Ieſus Chriſt, who therein hath profeſſed himſelfe to bee the Sonne of God: now if Chriſt had not beene very God, & yet ſhould haue taken this honour vnto him, then the like iudgements would haue befallen him that befell others for the like offence: for none euer tooke that honour vnto them, who were not grieuouſly puniſhed. As was [a] Adam in Paradiſe, for ſeeking to be like vnto God: and Herod, for receiuing and applying to himſelfe, the blaſphemous praiſe of the people crying, [b] The voice of God and not of man: but howſoeuer moſt fearefull iudgements befell Gods enemies, that thus ſought to robbe him of his honour: yet Chriſts ende was glorious and bleſſed: which may mooue vs to thinke highly of Scripture, as of the word of God.

2.Head of offences taken: The doctrine of the Church.

1 From ſuppoſed newnes.

The ſecond head from whence offences are taken, is the doctrine of the Church grounded on the word of God. The offences hence taken are manifold: firſt from a ſuppoſed neweneſſe of our doctrine: this is taken of the Papiſts, and eſpecially of our owne Recuſants: for they ſay our doctrine is but of fourescore yeares continuance, ſince the dayes of Martin Luther: auouching alſo that for the ſpace of foureteene hundred yeares, we cannot bring record of any Church that held and profeſſed the doctrin, which we now teach and hold.

Remedie.

Now for the auoiding of this offence, two points muſt be remembred: I. that the doctrine of our Church for the ſubſtance thereof, is the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles, Act.2.42. the doctrine taught by the Apoſtles concerning Chriſt, is made the foundation of the Church, and looke where this doctrine is rightly held & confeſſed, there it is an infallible note of a true church. Again, the apoſtles to iuſtifie their doctrine, had recourſe to Moſes and the Prophets, as we may ſee in the Acts of the Apoſtles in ſundrie [c] places: now the doctrine touching Chriſt held and receiued in our Churches, is confirmed by the teſtimonies of the Prophets and Apoſtles, and therefore for ſubſtance and doctrine is theirs. Secondly, we muſt know that for the ground and foundation of Religion, our Churches agree with the Churches after Chriſt which continued for the ſpace of fiue hundred yeares: for we doe not onely allow of the Apoſtles Creede, but of the foure generall Councells, and of their Confeſſions and Creedes, and that in the ſame manner and ſenſe which they did; ſo as the religion of our Church is vniuſtly ſlandered to be new.

2. From ſuppoſed ſtrictneſſe.

The ſecond offence taken from the doctrine of our Church, is from the ſuppoſed ſtrictnes and rigour thereof: we teach indeede, that a Chriſtian man muſt holy denie himſelfe, his owne will and deſires, & reſigne himſelf wholly vnto Chriſt, to be guided by his ſpirit, according to the direction of his word. Now hence ſome would gather, that our doctrine permits not a man to laugh or be merrie, or to doe any thing for his owne delight: and hereupon they growe to contempt of Religion, counting the profeſſion and practiſe thereof preciſeneſſe; and therefore will not be bound vnto it, but liue as they liſt: and this is common among vs.

Rule.

The way to cut off this occaſion of offence is twofold: 1. we muſt knowe, that by the doctrine of our Church, it is lawfull for a man to be merrie, ſo it be in the Lord: Philip.4.4. Reioyce in the Lord alway (ſaith the Apoſtle) againe I ſay reioyce, Pſal. 104.15. God cauſeth wine that maketh glad the heart of man, and oyle to make his face to ſhine, and bread to ſtrengthen his heart. Againe, God doth put moſt glorious colours, and delightſome ſmells into the flowers of the feild, no doubt for this ende that man might take his delight therein: yea, beſides the skill of muſicke, God hath giuen to many a man, a voice more ſweete and pleaſant then is the ſound of any muſicall inſtrument, which were to no ende, if a man might not ther with cheere vp his heart in a moderate delight: nay, laughter it ſelfe is the gift of nature, which was in Adam, before his fall, and therefore is lawfull. But yet I ſay, mans reioycing muſt be in the Lord, to cut off many abuſes of delight: for firſt, there be many that cannot be merrie, but in the practiſe of ſome ſinne; if there be a thought of God or of his word, all their mirth is quaſht. But we muſt endeauour our ſelues ſo to reioyce, that God may approoue thereof. Againe, I ſay, in the Lord; becauſe ſinne will ſooneſt preuaile with a man, when he giues himſelfe to delight and pleaſures. This Iob knew well, and therefore while his ſonnes feaſted each other, [d] hee offereth ſacrifices for them particularly euery day: for (ſaith he) it may be my ſonnes haue ſinned and blaſphemed God in their hearts.

d Ioh.1.5.

II Rule. Reſignation of our ſelues vnto God.

The ſecond way to preuent the taking of this offence, is to reſigne our ſelues wholly vnto God, that hee may doe his whole will in vs and vpon vs; ſo Chriſt ſaid to his Diſciples: [e] If any man will come after mee, let him denie himſelfe, take vp his croſſe, and follow mee: that is, wholly reſigne himſelfe to bee guided by mee: and Matth. 13.46. he that would get the precious pearle, muſt ſell all that hee hath and buie it, Rom. 12.1. We are deſired by the mercies of God, to giue vp our ſelues, both ſoules and bodies vnto God: whereby we may ſee, that we haue iuſt cauſe to bewaile the caſe and condition of all ſuch, as count religion preciſeneſſe: for they are like vnto Ananias and Saphyra, who brought part of the ſale of their poſſeſſiō vnto the Apoſtles, and ſaid it was all: ſo theſe men looke to be ſaued by Chriſt, they heare his word, and receiue his Sacraments, and therein make a high profeſſion as any can doe: namely that they will giue themſelues wholly to Chriſt: but when they are out of the aſſemblies, they ſhew themſelues to haue diſſembled with God: for they practiſe no ſuch thing as they made ſhew of: and therefore they may iuſtly feare, leaſt that befal them in their ſoules, which befell [f] Ananias and Saphyra in their bodies, euen ſudden death: for they are lyers vnto God himſelfe.

f Acts 5.5.10.

III. Offence taken from the croſſe accompanying the truth.

Thirdly, others take offence at the croſſe, which accompanies the ſyncere profeſſion of true Religion: many like wel of the doctrine of our religion, but yet they are loath to embrace and to profeſſe the ſame, leaſt they ſhould be reproached for it in the world.

Remedie.

The way to cut off this occaſion of offence is this, we muſt remember that the croſſe endured for the Goſpel ſake, eſpeciall if we profit by it, is an infallible marke of a child of God. Heb. 12. 7. If yee endure chaſtening, God offereth himſelfe vnto you, as vnto ſonnes: for what ſonne is it, whom the father chaſteneth not? In reaſon we finde this to be true: for ſay that two children be fighting in the ſtreete, & there comes a man who taketh one of them and beateth him, but the other he lets alone: wil not all men ſay, that the mā is father to the child whom he beateth? euen ſo the Lord for our nurtering, will ſend croſſes vpon vs, when we imbrace his Goſpel: now if we ſhall profit by his corrections, and learne thereby to humble our ſelues vnder his mighty hand, then we begin to receiue aſſurance of his fatherly dealing towards vs his ſonnes & daughters: and therefore we muſt be ſo farre from beeing hindered in the courſe of our holy profeſſion by reproaches and croſſes that they muſt be the meanes to incourge vs therein. Iam. 1.2.3.

Offences taken from particular doctrines. I. Of Predeſtination.

As from the doctrine of the Church in generall, ſo from the parts thereof, do many both learned and ignorant take occaſion of offence; as firſt, from the doctrine of Gods predeſtination, whereby we teach that God hath decreed the condemnation of ſome. This doctrine many doe renounce, as a doctrine of crueltie, and thereupon frame vnto themſelues priuate opinions, which will not ſtand with the word of God.

Remedie. 1. Rule.

The way to auoid this occaſion of offence, is this; Firſt, to grant vnto God himſelfe ſo much in this caſe, as we will yeed to mortall man in the like. Among our ſelues we allow of this libertie one to another, that a man may kill a flie or a worme; and for his lawful vſe & pleaſure, kill ſheepe, oxen, and other creatures, and yet be a mercifull man: ſhall we not then allow vnto God, that he may glorifie his name in the iuſt and deſerued condemnation and deſtruction of his creature? This is leſſe then we grant to men, for a worme is ſomthing vnto man; but a man is nothing in reſpect of God. Againe, among our ſelues, in ſome things we giue libertie one to another to doe as we will, and yet thinke the action iuſt and lawfull; much more then ought we to giue freedome of will vnto God in all his actions, without conceit of crueltie in any one of his workes; for all his workes are done in equitie. Secondly, it muſt be remembred, that we teach not, that God doth ſimply ordaine ſome men to hell fire; but touching reprobation, our doctrine is this; that God hath decreed and purpoſed to glorifie his name, in the due and deſerued condemnation of ſome; for in mans reprobation God hath two actions: Firſt, he decrees to paſſe by ſome men without ſhewing his eternal mercy vnto them, and onely to declare his iuſtice vpon them; then after he decrees, when they are by themſelues fallen into ſinne, to inflict vpon them deſerued condemnation for the ſame.

2. Rule.

Doctrine of Reprobatiō.

The vnlearned alſo, from this doctrine of Predeſtination, take occaſion of moſt fearefull falling; for thus they reaſon: If I be predeſtinate to ſaluation, I am ſure to be ſaued, let me doe what I will; and if I be predeſtinated to condemnation, I am ſure to be condemned, though I liue neuer ſo godly; for Gods decree changeth not, and therefore I will liue as I liſt. Thus doe deſperate perſons imbolden themſelues to ſin, and to caſt away their ſoules.

Remedie. Rule.

The way to cut off this offence is this, they muſt remember, that in Gods decree, the ende, and the meanes that bring men to that ende, goe alwaies together: and therefore, that ſuch as are ordained to ſaluatiō, are ordained to the means thereof; namely to vocation, iuſtification, and ſanctification, Rom. 8. 30. The ende and the meanes in Gods decree muſt neuer be ſeuered: Now righteouſneſſe and holineſſe in Chriſt, is the means wherby God hath decreed to bring men to ſaluation: and therefore they ſinne grieuouſly, that vpon the immutability of Gods decree, take occaſion to liue profanely. Hezekias is ſicke vnto death, yet God promiſeth to adde vnto his daies fifteene yeares: now if Hezekias had conſulted with theſe mē, they would haue told him thus; be of good cheare O King, neither eate nor drinke, nor vſe any thing to cure thy ſore, or to preſerue life: for thou ſhalt certenly liue fifteene yeares; God hath ſaid it, and it muſt be done: but Hezekias taketh no ſuch courſe: nay, he vſeth the meanes both to cure his ſore, & to preſerue his life. And ſo did Paul, for his owne and others preſeruation, keepe the marriners in the ſheepe, who were the meanes vpon the ſea to bring them ſafe to land, though God had giuen vnto him all that ſailed with him.

a Iſa.38.5.

Act.27.31. with 2.4.

2. Of the fall of Adam.

The ſecond ſpeciall doctrine of the Church, whereat ſome take occaſion of offence, is concerning the fal of Adam: for we teach, that God in ſome ſort decreed his fall: whereupon ſome obiect, that we make God the author of ſinne, conſidering his decree is vnchangeable. Now to preuent this offence, two Rules muſt be remembred: I. that Gods will may be diſtinguiſhed. It is either generall or ſpeciall. Gods generall will is that, whereby he willeth that ſinne ſhall be, by his iuſt permiſſion. But Gods ſpeciall will, is the approouing will of God, wherby he taking pleaſure in any thing, will haue the ſame done and brought to paſſe. Now we ſay not, that God willed Adams fall by his approouing will, but onely by his permitting will; becauſe it was good in regard of God, that man ſhould fall. II. We muſt remember, that Gods decree went before Adams fall, onely as an antecedent, not as a cauſe thereof: for the vnchangeable decree and will of God takes not away the liberty of mans wil, or of the ſecond cauſes, but only inclineth and ordereth the ſame as the firſt and higheſt cauſe of all.

Remedie. I. Rule.

3. Of mans inabilitie of himſelfe to doe good.

The third ſpeciall doctrine of the Church, whereat offence is taken, is this, That man of himſelfe can doe no good, but all goodneſſe & grace in man come from God. Hence our common people take occaſion of looſeneſſe of life: for tell them that they muſt repent and beleeue, if they will be ſaued; their anſwer is, that they do it ſo wel as God will giue them grace; al goodnes (ſay they) muſt come from God: yea the wiſer ſort among vs will not ſticke to lay the fault of their looſe life on God, who giues the no more grace. But for the auoiding of this occaſion of offence, we muſt know; that when we are not able to doe our duties as we ought, and to pray, to repent and beleeue as God requireth, the fault is in our ſelues, and not in God: for we were created righteous in Adam & in him had power and grace to haue done whatſoeuer God required at our hands: but Adam loſt this power through his default; and we in him loſt it alſo: and therefore our inability commeth from our ſelues. Againe, we muſt conſider that God giues grace indeede, yet not miraculouſly in Ale-houſes and Tauernes, but then when men vſe the meanes to come by grace, and do that which by nature, they are able; that is, come and heare the word attentiuely, endeauouring to beleeue and to obey the ſame: for though the good vſage of the gifts of nature cannot merit any grace, yet ordinarily we may obſerue, that in the vſe of meanes is grace receiued: Act. 2. 41. At one Sermon there were conuerted three thouſand ſoules, among the rebellious Iewes: Act. 2. 41. Lidias heart was opened in hearing Paul preach: and ordinarily men are conuerted in the meanes: for faith commeth by hearing the Goſpel preached, Rom. 10. 17.

4. Of Iuſtification.

The laſt point of doctrine, from whence many take occaſion of offence, is the doctrine of Iuſtification by faith alone, without workes. Hence the Papiſts condemne our Church as an enemie to all good workes: and many hereby take occaſion of a leud life, becauſe good workes muſt not iuſtifie them before God. Now to cut off this offence, we muſt hold and know, that good works and faith are diſioyned in the worke of our iuſtification before God; but they are conioyned in the whole courſe of our liues and conuerſation, both before God and man. No worke in man but faith is required to his iuſtification, though in God there be reſpect to his owne free mercie, and to Chriſts merits: but in our liues, faith and works muſt goe hand in hand together. Now that theſe may thus be well diſtinguiſhed, I ſhew it plainely: In the fire is both heate and light, yet in the warming of the bodie the heate hath force onely, and not light, though to many other vſes it ſerue neceſſarily; euen ſo in a child of God are required both faith and workes, but to iuſtifie him faith onely is required, though workes be neceſſarie thorough his whole life: for they iuſtifie vs before men, and winne vnto vs a teſtimonie of our iuſtification before God, not onely in our owne hearts, but from the

A Lord, Iam. 2.21. and therefore we muſt not content our ſelues with a faith in ſpeculation, voide of workes; but within the compaſſe of our callings, do what good we can for Gods glory, and the comfort of our brethren.

III. head of offences, frō the ſtate of the Church. 1. from the wants in it.

The third head from whence offences are taken, is the ſtate of the Church: firſt, in regard of the wants that be in the Church, and namely in this our Church. Hence ſundrie men take occaſion to condemne our Church as no Church; our Sacraments as no ſacraments; our Miniſters as no Miniſters, and our people as no Chriſtians; & therefore do ſeparate themſelues frō our Church, as beeing no true member of the Church of God. To preuent this occaſion of ſinning, three Rules muſt be obſerued: firſt, Remedie. I. Rule. A true note of the Church. Gods church deſcribed.

that to beleeue and confeſſe the doctrine of ſaluation, B taught and deliuered by the Prophets and Apoſtles, is an infallible and inſeparable note of a true Church of God: for Gods Church is nothing elſe, but a companie of Gods people, called by the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles vnto the ſtate of ſaluation. This doctrin is the ſeede of regeneration, whereby men are begotten vnto Chriſt; & it is that ſyncere milke whereby they are fedde and nouriſhed vnto eternall life. Now I ſay, that this our Church of England (through Gods mercie) doth maintaine, beleeue, and profeſſe this doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles: for the proofe hereof, let him that doubteth, haue recourſe to our Engliſh confeſſion, and to a booke intituled, the Articles of Religion eſtabliſhed in the Church of C England; in which are ſet downe the foundations of Chriſtian Religion, allowed and held by all Euangelicall Churches. And further to ſhew that this our profeſſion is not in hypocriſie, but in truth; this our Church is readie to maintaine and confirme the ſame doctrine by the ſhedding of their blood, againſt all foes whatſoeuer; and this thing indeede hath been the onely cauſe of all our diſſentions with the Church of Rome: whereupon we ſee there is iuſt cauſe our Church ſhould bee reputed the true Church of God, and a good member of his Catholike Church.

II. Rule. Chriſts practiſe towards the Church of the Iewes.

Secondly, obſerue the practiſe of Chriſt and his Apoſtles towards the Church of the Iewes which in their time without all doubt, was ex- D ceedingly corrupt: for the office and place of the high Prieſt was bought and ſold, and thorough ambition and couetouſneſſe became annuall; yea, there were two high Prieſts together at one time: all which were againſt Gods ordinance. Againe, the Scribes and Phariſies which were the Doctors of that Church, erred in ſome foundamentall points of doctrine, teaching Iuſtification by workes: and with all they greatly corrupted the lawe of God, both by their doctrine and traditions; and the Temple became a denne of theeues: and yet for all this, Chriſt did not ſeparate from that Church, neither taught his Diſciples ſo to doe; but was preſent at their ſacrifices and aſſemblies, and kept his Paſſeouer with them: and ſo did his Apoſtles, till they ſawe them of obſtinacie and malitiouſneſſe refuſe the grace of God, offered vnto them in the miniſterie of the Goſpell. Now their example muſt teach vs, that ſo long as our Church holdeth Chriſt, we muſt eſteeme it to be the Church of God, and not for ſome wants thereof depart from it.

III. Rule. Reformed Churches iudgemēt of our Church.

Thirdly; all the reformed Churches in Europe doe with one conſent honour our Church as the true Church of Chriſt; now their iudgment is not ſlightly to be regarded, but to be preferred farre before the raſh opinions of priuate men: for the Church hath a gift of diſcerning in waightie matters; ſhee can iudge of bookes of Scripture, which bee authenticall, which not; ſhee can iudge of ſpirits, and of doctrines; and therefore alſo can iudge what companie of men is a true Church, and what is not: and this their iudgement alſo muſt confirme vs in this truth, that this our Church is a true member of Gods Catholike Church. Now whereas ſome alleadge the wants of our church to make it no Church: I anſwer, though I will not excuſe any default in it, wherein it wanting, to that which Gods word requireth, but rather deſire, that the righteouſneſſe thereof may breake forth as the light, and ſaluation thereof as a burning lampe; yet this may bee ſaid in behalfe of our Church, that the wants thereof are not ſuch as do any way raſe the foundation of religion, or of Gods holy worſhippe, and ſo cannot make it to ceaſe to bee a true Church; and therefore none ought to ſeparate from it for ſuch wants; and yet this hindereth not, but that Gods ſeruants may in a godly manner deſire the Reformation of things that be amiſſe: for a good Church may be bettered: and wee ought to ſtriue after perfection.

2. Offence, from cōtrouerſies in the Church.

The Second offence taken from the Church, is from the diuerſitie of opinions that be therein: for hence many reaſon thus; learned men be of ſo many opinions, that we knowe not what to follow; and therefore we will be of no religion, till the truth bee eſtabliſhed by ſome generall Councell, and all agree in one.

Remedie. 1.

For the auoiding of this offence wee muſt know; that though men differ in ſundrie opinions in the true Church of God, yet they all agree in the Articles of faith, and in the foundation of Gods worſhip: their difference is in matters beſide the foundation, and therefore it muſt hinder none from receiuing and embracing true religion. Againe, it is Gods will that there ſhould be diuerſities of opinions: yea ſciſmes and hereſies in his Church that man might be prooued whether they hold the truth in ſinceritie or not; as we may ſee, 1. Cor. 11. 19. Deut. 13.1, 2. Now in this caſe Ieremias direction muſt be obſerued, [a] Stand in the parting of the waies (ſaith he) and inquire for the olde and auncient way: (that is, the doctrine of the Prophets) what God willeth and commandeth by them, and by his Apoſtles, and that we muſt fol- law with all good conſcience. This Chriſt intended, when he bad the Iewes to [b] ſearch the Scriptures, which teſtified of him: and this we muſt ſanctifie by earneſt prayer, as Cornelius did, Act. 10.1,2.

b Ioh.5.35.

3. From the miſerie of the Church.

The third occaſion of offence taken from the Church, is the miſerie thereof: for the ſtate of the Church is oftentimes in affliction, becauſe it conſiſteth of ſuch as are ſubiect to the contempt and reproach of the world. Hence ſundrie are diſcouraged from ioyning themſelues truely to the Church; and although this occaſion of offence be not much among vs, ſaue onely in reproaches; yet it may be more: and therefore we muſt learne to preuent it, and to B cut it off.

Remedie. Conſider the priuiledges of the Church.

The way is this; wee muſt beleeue and remember, that out of the Church there is no ſaluation: In this regard Noahs Arke was a true type of the Church; for as none were ſaued from drowning, that were out of the Arke, in the generall deluge; ſo none can be ſaued ordinarily from condemnation, that are out of the Church: for in the Church is Gods couenant of grace, with the Sacraments, which be the ſeales thereof. In the Church is vocation, iuſtification, ſanctification, & the way to glorificatiō; but out of the Church are none of all theſe, and therefore it is ſaid, that [c] God added to his Church daiely ſuch as ſhould be ſaued. In the Church is protection againſt all enemies, and from all iudgements ſo farre forth as ſhall be for the glorie of God, & C the good of the Church: and in a word, in the Church is life euerlaſting; but out of the church is nothing but a fearefull looking for of eternall woe and condemnation: and for this cauſe [d] Moſes choſe rather to ſuffer affliction in Gods Church, then to enioy all the pleaſures in the world, out of it: whoſe example wee ought to follow, & ſo ſhal not the miſerie of the Church be any occaſion vnto vs to forſake the ſame, eſpecially if we conſider that the whole world will profit a man nothing, if he looſe his ſoule, Matth. 16.26.

c Act.2.47.

d Heb.11.26.

4. From the Apoſtacie of ſome.

The fourth offence taken from the Church is, from the Apoſtacie of ſome that liue in the Church; for ordinarily in Gods Church are many D Apoſtates, as in this our Church, many that were in times paſt Proteſtants, are become Papiſts, ſome Arrians, Sabellians, and ſome open Atheiſts, and blaſphemers. Hence many fearing their falls (as they pretend) dare not ioyne thēſelues to the truth, and the profeſſion thereof. But to cut off this occaſion, two rules muſt be remembred; Firſt, that the falling away of any man from the truth, is the worke of God, diſcouering an hidden hypocrite. 1. Ioh. 2. 19. They went out from vs, but they were not of vs, for if they had beene of vs, they would haue continued with vs: but this is come to paſſe, that it might appeare they were not all of vs. Secondly, conſider that the beginning & continuance of our religion and ſaluation, ſtands on Gods free election, which is vnchangeable; and hereupon muſt A we ſtay our ſelues touching our eſtate, whē we ſee others fall away. 2.Tim.2.19. Paul comforteth the Church, againſt the feare of griefe which they might conceiue, by the Apoſtacie of Himeneus and Philetus, which were two pillars amongſt them, by this Rule, The foundation of God remaineth ſure, and hath this ſeale, the Lord knoweth who are his. Now becauſe ſome might ſay, God indeede knowes it, but we doe not: to this (I take it) the Apoſtle anſwers, when he ſaith, and let euery one that calles vpon the name of the Lord, depart from iniquitie: as if he ſhould ſay, Looke that you call vpon God for grace, and make conſcience of all ſinne, & B by this you ſhall knowe your ſelues to belong to God; which thing when once you knowe, then ſtay thereon for Gods calling is vnchangeable.

Remedie. 1. Rule.

2. Rule.

More ſpeciall offences in the church.

1 From want in Miniſters doctrine.

Againe, as theſe occaſions are taken from the whole Church in generall; ſo more eſpecially, ſome take offence from ſeuerall things therein; as firſt, from the wants that be in Miniſters, both for iudgement and doctrine. Hence politicke carnall men plead thus: Preaching is full of imperfection, therein men publiſh their owne errors; but the written word containeth in it the ſermons of Chriſt, and of his Apoſtles which are moſt perfect: and therefore it is beſt to content our ſelues with the Scripture read, and to heare no preaching by men.

Remedie.

To cut off this offence, we muſt remember, that the preaching of the word, though it bee C by ſinnefull man, is Gods holy ordinance, preſcribed and enioyned as ſolemnly, as any morall precept is, either againſt murther, or adulterie; for from the beginning, till the Iewes came to mount Sina, God himſelfe preached to his Church, which was then contained in ſome fewe families. But from that time, [e] becauſe the people could not abide the voice of God himſelfe, it pleaſed him to ordaine the Miniſterie of the word, by the hand of ſinnefull man. Now it beeing Gods owne ordinance, vnleſſe wee will make our ſelues wiſer then God, we muſt ſubiect our ſelues thereto, with all reuerence, albeit it be deliuered by ſinnefull D man. Thus Cornelius did, Act. 10.33. and the Theſſalonians, 1. Theſſ.2.13.

e Deut.5.26.

2. From the liues of Miniſters.

Secondly, many are offended at the liues of Miniſters, and from the wants that be in them, whether indeede, or in ſuſpition onely, many take occaſion to contemne their doctrine; thinking, as the Rulers of the Iewes ſaid to the blind man; [f] Thou art altogether borne in ſinne, and doeſt thou teach vs? Now to cut off this occaſion, two things muſt be remembred. Firſt, we muſt diſtinguiſh of euery Miniſter, & conſider in him a double perſon: both that he is a ſinnefull man, ſubiect to many infirmities, as we our ſelues are: and alſo that hee is the Lords Ambaſſadour, ſent in Gods name to deliuer his will vnto vs. Now looke, as wee honour the Embaſſadour of a Prince, though his perſon be vile and baſe; ſo much more ought we to re-uerence the Embaſſadour of God himſelfe, and receiue his doctrine, as from God, though for his perſon, he be ſubiect to manifold infirmities. Secondly, he muſt conſider, that it is Gods will and commandement, that though Miniſters be manifeſtly faultie and ſinnefull, yet their miniſterie muſt be receiued and obeyed carefully. Matth. 23. 2. The Scribes and Phariſes ſit in Moſes chaire (ſaith Chriſt,) all therefore that they bid you obſerue, that doe; but after their workes doe not. Phil. 1. 15. Some preach Chriſt of enuie (ſaith Paul) and not in ſinceritie, but yet the Apoſtles reioyced therein; becauſe Chriſt was preached euery manner of way, v. 18. And therefore, as we doe not refuſe meate for our bodies whẽ we be hũgrie, though a wicked perſon haue dreſſed it; ſo muſt we not refuſe or contemne the word of God, the food of our ſouls, for the ſins of the party that deliuereth it.

Remedie. 1.

3. From lenitie towards offenders.

Thirdly, many take offence at the lenitie of the Church, towards offenders, and for the preſence of wicked perſons at the Lords table, do refuſe to communicate with the Church: now albeit men ſhould not be admitted hand ouer head, to the Lords table, but ſcandalous perſons ought to be reſtrained; yet the want thereof, ought not to keepe the godly from this Sacrament: for another mans euill conſcience can not defile thy good conſcience, another mans ſinne cannot hurt thee, vnles thou do ſome way communicate with him therin. Chriſt was more carefull in his dutie, then euer mã was, & yet he communicated with the wicked Iewes, Scribes & Phariſes, in the ſeruice of god, vnder the law.

4. Generall head of offẽces taken. From the eſtate of the wicked.

The fourth head from whence offence is taken, is the ſtate of the wicked, principally in regard of their proſperitie. Hence ſome holy ones ſuſpect their owne eſtate and religion, as either not good, or not regarded of God. This befell Dauid, Pſal. 73. when he ſaw the proſperitie of the wicked, and their increaſe in riches, with peace, and eaſe, he ſaid, Certainly, I haue clenſed mine heart in vaine, and waſhed my hands in innocencie. Hence alſo Ieremie reaſons with God, [h] why the way of the wicked ſhould proſper, and they be in wealth that tranſgreſſe rebelliouſly. Hence vndoubtedly at this day, many call into queſtion the good prouidence of God. Now the way to cut off this offence is, to enter into the ſanctuarie of God, as Dauid did; that is, to come to the aſſemblies of Gods people, where the word is preached; for there a man ſhall ſee the manifold reaſons, why God wil haue his owne people afflicted, and alſo the fearefull ende of the pleaſures of the wicked; namely, a fitting of them to further deſtruction. Againe, from this ſame ground, doe many rich men take offence; for hauing the world at will, they bleſſe themſelues with this perſwaſion, that God loues them, and thereupon take occaſion to condemne all religion, and to goe on in the purſuit of worldly profits & delights. And this is one maine cauſe, why among the rich, we haue ſo fewe good and ſound profeſſors; becauſe that from a falſe ground of outward things, they perſwade theſelues of Gods loue and fauour. But to cut off this offence, we muſt remẽber that mans caſe is the more fearefull, when he wants all croſſes: for God chaſteneth euery child whome hee receiueth, Heb. 12. 6. and it is a marke of Gods child, to be in affliction, if he profit thereby: the ſtalled oxe commeth ſooner to the ſlaughter, then the oxe that is vnder the yoake; and the ſheepe that goeth in fat paſture, commeth ſooner to the ſhambles, then that which goeth on the bare commons: ſo oftentimes God fatteth the wicked with the bleſſings of this life, as hee did [f] the rich glutton, that he may more iuſtly cõdemne them in the world to come. Laſtly, we muſt remember what Salomon ſaith, [g] No man knoweth loue or hatred, of all that is before him: that is, of all outward things; all things fall alike vnto all, both good and bad: and therefore no man muſt ſo bleſſe himſelfe with his outward eſtate, that he be drawne to eſteeme of religion, as a thing needleſſe or ſuperfluous.

V. 31. It hath been ſaid alſo, whoſoeuer ſhall put away his wife, let him giue her a Bill of diuorcement:

32. But I ſay vnto you, whoſoeuer ſhall put away his wife (except it bee for fornication) cauſeth her to commit adulterie: and whoſoeuer ſhall marie her that is diuorced, committeth adulterie.

Our Sauiour Chriſt proceeding further, to reſtore the ſeauenth Commandement to his perfection, doth here confute a falſe interpretation of Politicke a law of Moſes, giuen by the Scribes and Phariſes. For this end, firſt he laies downe the words of Moſes politicke law; but yet ſo, as containing in them the falſe interpretation of the Iewiſh teachers, v. 31. then he oppoſeth the truth of God, againſt their falſe interpretation, and maintaineth the firſt inſtitution of mariage, v. 32.

For the firſt, Moſes politicke law was, That he which put away his wife, ſhould giue her a Bill of diuorce. This law the Iewiſh Teachers did falſly interpret: for the better perceiuing whereof, theſe three points are to be handled, touching Moſes politicke law: 1. what kind of law it was: 2. the ſtraitneſſe of that law: 3. what effect and force it had. For the firſt, the law is ſet downe, Deut. 24. 1. When a man marieth a wife, and ſhee finde no fauour in his eyes, becauſe hee hath eſpied ſome filthineſſe in her: then let him write her a bill of diuorce, and put it in her hand, and ſend her out of his houſe. This law was not morall, but ciuill, or politicke, for the good ordering of the Common wealth. Now among their particular lawes, ſome were lawes of toleration, and permiſſion, which were ſuch as did not approoue of the euill which they concerned, but did onely tolerate and permit that euill which could not be auoided, for the preuenting of a greater euill, which otherwiſe would fall out. As when the ſea hath made a breach into the land, if it cannot poſſibly be ſtopped, the beſt courſe is, to make it as narrow as may be. Such was the law concerning vſury, Deut. 23. 20. permitting the Iewes to exerciſe it vpon a ſtranger, but not towards a brother: and the like was the law touching polygamie, Deut. 21. 15, If a man hath two wiues, the one hated, the other loued, & they both haue borne him children: if the firſt borne be the ſonne of the hated, (though ſhe were maried to him the latter) yet her ſeede was legitimate, and her ſon had the right of the firſt borne. In both which lawes were tolerated, that which God condemned, onely for the preuenting of a greater euill. Vnder this ſort comes our law of vſurie, for taking tenne in the hundred, not approouing but permitting ſo much, for the auoiding of greater vſurie. Vnto this kind, the Papiſts would reduce their law of permitting Stewes, for the preuenting of greater ſinnes: but that law can haue no title to ſuch permiſſion: for a law of permiſſiõ, is to diminiſh that euill, which by man cannot poſſibly be cut off altogether: now that ſinne which they would preuent by their Stewes, might be cut off among them, if they would giue allowance to Gods owne ordinance of lawfull mariage, vnto all ſorts and ſexes. So likewiſe this law of Moſes for diuorce, was a law of permiſſion, not approouing of the giuing a bill of diuorce for euery light cauſe, but tolerating of it, for the preuenting of greater miſchiefe, euen of murther: for the nature of the Iewes was this; if a man once tooke diſlike to his wife, he would neuer be at reſt till he had ſhed her blood, if they might not be parted aſunder. Now this law of diuorce, was giuen to reſtraine this great euill, for hereby a man was tolerated to put away his wife, when ſhee found no fauour in his eies, leaſt he ſhould kill her; yet ſo, as he gaue her a bill of diuorce, wherein he muſt ſet downe the cauſe why he put her away: whereby alſo, many were reſtrained from putting away their wiues, becauſe it was a great ſhame, for a light occaſion, ſo highly to tranſgreſſe Gods holy inſtitution, who made them by mariage, one fleſh. The truth of this may appeare by the Lords owne complaint, againſt his people, to whome he ſpeaketh, as to a wife that had forſakẽ her husband without a cauſe on his behalfe, Iſa. 50. 1 Where (ſaith he) is that bill of your mothers diuorcement, whereby I ſent her away? As if he ſhould ſay, I gaue her no bill, but her departure and ſeparation from me, is by her owne ſinnes; which phraſe ſheweth what was the cuſtome of the Iewes in this caſe.

Bellarm. de Amiſſ. grat. & ſtat. pecc. lib. 1. cap 18. Harding cõfut. of the Apolog. part. 4 chap. 1. div. 1.

II. Point. The ſtraitneſſe of this law appeares in this, that the man onely was permitted to giue this bill vnto his wife, but the wife might not giue it to her husband: for Moſes ſaith, Whoſoeuer ſhall put away his wife: neither is there any place in Scripture, to prooue that the wife had this libertie, ſo to deale with her husband. If it be asked, whether the wife in a iuſt cauſe, as for adulterie, had not the like libertie: I anſwer, If we reſpect Gods inſtitution touching mariage, the right of diuorce is equal to them both: for in regard of the bond of mariage, they are equally bound one to another. Here indeede this libertie is permitted onely to the man, by this politicke law, not that he had more right, but to preuent the euill, of the hardneſſe of his heart, who taking diſpleaſure at his wife, would rather ſpill her blood, then continue with her. If it be alleadged, that a man [a] is the womans head: I anſwer, that is for regiment and direction in her place, but not in regard of breaking the bond of mariage, wherby he is bound to his wife, as well as ſhee to him, as the Apoſtle teacheth, 1 Cor. 7 4.

III. Point. The force and effect of this law was this, It made the Bill of diuorcement for any cauſe giuen, to be tolerable before men; and mariage after ſuch a diuorce, lawfull and warrantable in the Courts of men, Deut. 24. 4. But yet in the court of conſcience before God, the diuorcement it ſelfe, and ſecond mariages made thereupon, were both vnlawfull; for God hateth this ſeparation, Mal. 2. 15. And whether partie ſoeuer marieth another vpon this diuorce, commits adulterie. Matth. 19. 9. This muſt be remembred, for the true vnderſtanding of this law of Moſes; the firſt words whereof, are a permiſſion, to this effect; If a man doe conceiue ſuch a diſlike againſt his wife, as that he will not abide with her, but will needes put her away, then he may; but yet ſo, as he giue her a bill of diuorce: which doth not acquit him before God, but before men onely.

Hauing thus ſhewed the true meaning of this law, it remaineth now to ſee what the Phariſies taught touching diuorce. Their doctrine was this, that he which gaue a bill of diuorcement vnto his wife, by any light occaſion, was thereby acquitted from her before God; and thereupon might marrie another, without the guilt of adulterie: and alſo that another man might lawfully marrie her that was thus diuorced. That this was their meaning, may appeare by the contrarie anſwer of our Sauiour Chriſt, wherein he croſſeth and confuteth this their interpretation, in the words following.

verſ. 32. But I ſay vnto you, whoſoeuer ſhall put away his wife, except it be for fornication) cauſeth her to commit adulterie: and whoſoeuer ſhall marie her that is diuorced, committeth adulterie.

Here Chriſt anſwereth not to Moſes law, but to the corrupt interpretation of the Scribes and Phariſies, whereby they depraued that law. By fornication Chriſt meaneth, not euery ſinne of that kinde, but onely the ſinne of adulterie; or that which is greater in that kinde, namely inceſt. Adulterie, is a ſinne that is committed by two parties, one whereof is either married, or eſpowſed, as hath been ſhewed before. Cauſeth her to commit adulterie.] That is, giueth her occaſion to marrie againe, and ſo commit Adulterie; becauſe their firſt bond remaineth ſtil: and he that marrieth her that is diuorced:] that is, for any ſmall cauſe, and not for adulterie, he alſo commits adulterie.

Here then two points are ſet downe; Firſt, that hee who puts away his wife for any light cauſe, cauſeth her to commit adulterie. Secondly, hee that marrieth her that is diuorced, committeth adulterie. Yet vnto both theſe, Chriſt putteth an exception in the caſe of adulterie. The [a] Papiſts and ſome others, would reſtraine the exception to the firſt part of the ſentence, and make it a negation, to this effect; He that puts away his wife, beeing no fornicator, &c. But the truth is, that the exception belongs to the whole anſwer of our Sauiour Chriſt, denying diuorce, ſaue onely for adulterie; and permitting no marriage after diuorcement, ſaue onely where the diuorce is for adulterie.

The vſe.

Firſt, whereas our Sauiour Chriſt oppoſeth vnto this politicke law of Moſes, concerning diuorce, the law of nature, touching mariage, Gen. 2.24. he giueth vs an excellent diſtinction betweene all politicke lawes, and the law of nature, which is the morall law; for that is a law of eternall equitie, commaunding good, and forbidding euill ſimply, without reſpect of man: but politicke lawes are tempered according to the conditions of men, & though they doe not approoue, yet ſometimes they permit euill, for the auoiding of greater miſcheiſe: yea, they tollerate that, which before God, and in conſcience is condemned. This point muſt teach vs, not to content our ſelues with performing obedience to the politicke laws of men, for the lawes of men may tolerate that which Gods law doth condemne: ſo the law of this Land in practiſe tolerates vſurie, but vſurers muſt not hereupon thinke that all is ſafe and wel with them, and that they ſinne not in taking ten in the hundred, becauſe the law of the land permits it; for our law tolerates that, for the preuenting of greater vſurie, when as the law of God doth vtterly condemne the ſame. Againe, our lawes are open for men to goe to law at the firſt, vpon euery light occaſion, without ſeeking former meanes of agreement: but yet ſuch men as doe ſo, are guiltie of ſinne before God, notwithſtanding their libertie by our politike lawes. Some politike lawes alſo tolerate contracts of mariage, made without conſent of parents; yet ſuch children ſinne againſt the law of God, for herein God requires childrens ſubiection to their parents & gouernours. And the like might be ſhewed in many other points, ſo that it is no ſufficiēt iuſtification of our actions, to ſay the lawes of men allow vs ſo to doe.

Secondly, hence we may learne, that a man cannot lawfully and with good conſcience put away his wife, except it be for adulterie; the text is cleare both here, and alſo in Matth. 19. 7. which confuteth the ciuill lawes of ſome countries, and the [a] popiſh conſtitutions, that allow other cauſes of [b] diuorce, beſides adulterie. Here they obiect ſundry things, in their defence againſt this doctrine: As 1. the ſaying of Chriſt, Whoſoeuer forſaketh Father or Mother, wife, &c. ſhall receiue much reward, Matth. 19. 29. Here (ſay they) is diuorce for religiō allowed. Anſ. Chriſt by forſaking, meaneth not that ſeparation which is made, by giuing a Bil of diuorcement: but that which is cauſed by impriſonment, baniſhment, or by death.

2. Obiect. 1. Cor. 7.15. If the vnbeleeuing depart, let him depart; a brother or a ſiſter is not bound in ſuch things. Here (ſay they) is another cauſe of diuorce. Anſ. The malitious and wilfull departing of the vnbeleeuer, doth diſſolue the mariage; but this is no cauſe of giuing a bil of diuorce: onely adulterie cauſeth that. Here the beleeuer is a meere patient, and the diuorce is made by the vnbeleeuer, who vniuſtly forſaketh, and ſo puts away the other.

3. Obiect. Titus 3. 10. Auoide an heretike after once or twice admonition. This (ſay they) is ſpoken to all Chriſtians; and therefore for hereſie may a bil of diuorce be giuen. Anſ. Firſt, that commandement is not giuen to euery priuate perſon, but to the miniſters of the Church, who after one or two admonitions, are to excommunicate and cut off all heretikes from the Church. Secondly, it hindreth not, but that the bond of mariage may remaine ſure and firme, though one of the parties be cut off from the Church; for the beleeuing huſband muſt not forſake his vnbeleeuing wife, if ſhee wil dwell with him: 1. Cor. 7. 12.

4. Obiect. After mariage, one partie may haue a contagious and incurable diſeaſe, which may cauſe the other to giue a bill of diuorce. Anſwer. A contagious diſeaſe may cauſe a ſeparation for a time, but no diuorce; & if that diſeaſe bee incurable, and diſable the partie from the dutie of mariage, then ſuch parties muſt think themſelues, as it were, called of God to liue in ſingle life.

5. Obiect. But maried perſons may ſeeke to ſpill the blood one of another, and therefore it is good to giue a bil of diuorce, to preuent that euill. Anſwer. Such enmitie may cauſe a ſeparation for a time, till reconciliation be made, but the bōd of mariage muſt not therfore be brokē.

6. Obiect. Death maketh a diuorce. Anſw. Death indeede endeth mariage eſtate, and ſetteth the partie liuing free, to marie in the Lord, where he or ſhe will: but this comes not by diuorce giuen of either partie: ſo that the concluſion ſtill remaineth firme, that a man with good conſcience cannot giue a bill of diuorce for any cauſe, but for adulterie: and therefore thoſe lawes which permit diuorce for other cauſes, are greatly faultie before God. If any ſhall aske, whether mens lawes may not make more cauſes of diuorcement, then this one? I anſwer, no: for mariage is not a meere ciuill thing, but partly ſpirituall and diuine, and therfore God onely hath power to appoint the beginning, the continuance, and the end thereof. If any yet aske, why Idolatrie and Magicke, which be greater ſinnes then adultery, may not breake mariage? Anſ. They are greater indeed, againſt God, but not in this ordinance of mariage: for the ſinne of Adulterie, breaketh only the bond of marriage, which may remaine ſtill betweene two parties, though one be an Idolater, a witch, or an Atheiſt. Now conſidering that Adulterie is ſo great a ſinne, that it cuts off the knot of mariage, aboue al things, thoſe perſons that are called to this eſtate, muſt take heed of all ſinnes, ſo of this eſpecially.

Thirdly, here may be asked, whether after diuorce for adulterie, the parties diuorced may marrie againe, without committing adulterie? This point hath bin diuerſly diſcuſſed, we will conſider the reaſons on both ſides: Firſt, for the lawfulneſſe of it, eſpecially to the partie innocent.

1. From Chriſts doctrine in this place: for in his anſwer to the falſe interpretation of Moſes politicke Law, touching diuorce, he firſt propounds a generall rule, and then puts an exception thereto: the nature of which exception is, alwaies to implie and put downe the contrarie to the generall rule. As in this place; the generall rule is, Whoſoeuer putteth away his wife, cauſeth her to commit adulterie: and hee that marrieth her committeth Adulterie. The exception then muſt be contrarie; namely, that in this caſe of adulterie, he that puts away his wife, lawfully conuicted thereof, cauſeth her not to commit adulterie; neither he that marrieth her that is diuorced, doth commit adulterie. If it be ſaide, that Chriſt propoundeth two rules, one for the caſe of diuorce, the other for the caſe of marying after diuorce; and applieth his exception for adulterie onely to the caſe of diuorce, and not to the caſe of mariage after diuorce. Anſ. As the exception for adulterie, is here in this chapter ioyned with the caſe of diuorce; hee that putteth away his wife, except it be for fornication, &c. ſo in the 19. chap. v. 9. the ſame exception for adulterie, is expreſſely applied, not onely to the caſe of diuorce, but alſo to the caſe of mariage after diuorce; ſaying, Whoſoeuer ſhall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and marrie another, committeth adulterie: ſo that if in this place the exception make the diuorce lawful for adulterie, then in the 19. chapter, it maketh it lawfull to marrie againe after ſuch diuorce, without the guilt of adulterie. 2. The innocent partie is not to be puniſhed for the wilfulneſſe of the offender, and therefore the partie that is faultleſſe may with good conſcience marrie againe, after lawfull diuorce. 3. God hath prouided mariage to be a remedie againſt incontinencie for all perſons, 1. Cor. 7. 9. But if parties lawfully diuorced, might not marie againe, then they ſhould want this remedie, and be depriued of this benefit. If it be ſaide, they may reconcile themſelues each to other, and ſo haue remedie. Anſ. But what if the partie offending liue in adulterie ſtill, then the partie innocent cannot in conſcience ioyne him or her ſelfe to the other, and reunite the bond of matrimonie; for that were too much lenitie, towards ſo foule a crime: and a ſinne againſt God, for want of Chriſtian reconciliation, which requireth that this reuniting ſhould be in the Lord, and not in the fleſh alone. 4. The phraſes of Scripture vſed by the [a] holy Ghoſt, concerning mariage after diuorce, reſtraining it to ſome caſes, and allowing it in others, ſeeme to take it for graunted, that after lawfull diuorce, it is no ſinne to marrie againe.

Reaſons alleadged on the other ſide. Firſt, Chriſts generall ſaying, [b] Whoſoeuer putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adulterie. Hence ſome inferre, that there may be no mariage at all after any diuorce. But they abuſe that Scripture, for though S. Marke put downe no exception; yet Matthew hath made ſupplie thereof in two places, Chap. 5. 32. and 19. 9. Now the Goſpels were penned by ſeuerall men, that that which was not fully expreſſed by one, might be ſupplied by an other, that ſo by conferring writer with writer, the whole truth might be made manifeſt.

Secondly, Matth. 19. 6. Whome God hath coupled, let no man put aſunder. Therefore after diuorce, they ſtill remaine man and wife, before God, and may not marrie to others. Anſ. The partie offending breakes the bond of mariage, and ſo ſinneth grieuouſly againſt that commandement: but the partie innocent marrying againe after lawfull diuorce, onely taketh the benefit of that libertie, whereto God hath ſet him free, through the vnlawfull breaking of the bond, by the partie offending.

Thirdly, Rom. 7. 2. The woman is bound to the man while he liueth, and therefore may not marrie againe after diuorcement. Anſ. That place muſt be vnderſtood of the ſtate of mariage, continuing vndiſſolued till death: but in the caſe of adulterie, the bond of mariage is broken: and therefore that hindreth not, but mariage may be after lawfull diuorce.

Fourthly, 1. Cor. 7. 10, 11. Let not the wife depart from her husband, and if ſhee depart, let her remaine vnmarried, and be reconciled vnto her husband, and let not the husband put away his wife. Here (ſay they) is a plaine place againſt mariage after diuorcement. Anſ. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh of departure, and putting away, for other cauſes then adulterie; as for hatred, diſlike, &c. which indeede are no ſufficient cauſes of diuorce, and therefore they that ſeparate thereupon, ought not to marrie.

Fiftly, the bond of mariage, is a reſemblance of the coniunction that is betweene Chriſt and his Church, which is inſeparable and eternall: and therefore mariage alſo is inſeparable. Anſ. That reſemblance ſtands not in euerything, but in this, That as in marriage two are made one fleſh, ſo ſpiritually Chriſt, and euery true member of his Church become one; and that as Eue was taken out of Adams ſide, and made fleſh of his fleſh, & bone of his bone; ſo the Church ſpringeth as it were out of Chriſts blood, which iſſued from his ſide: for elſe, if their reaſon were good, we might ſay that mariage ſhould be eternal in the life to come; because the vnion of Chriſt with his Church is eternall; which we know to be falſe, for [c] in the reſurrection men marie not, but are as the Angels of God.

c Mat. 22.30.

Sixtly, if parties diuorced might marie again, their children ſhould be iniured, hauing ſtep-fathers or ſtep-mothers in ſtead of their owne naturall parents. Anſ. This reaſon is not ſufficient to diſallow diuorce, or mariage after it: for by the ſame reaſon we might delude all the iudiciall lawes of Moſes, and of all countries, which impoſe death for ſundrie crimes, becauſe thereby ſome children ſhould looſe their parents: but Iuſtice muſt be iuſtice with all men, though the poſteritie haue hindrance by the execution thereof. Queſt. But what if the lawes of ſome countries forbid mariage after diuorcement? Anſ. Yet the libertie of conſcience remaineth ſtill, for this beeing giuen of God can not be taken away by man: and therefore when men haue freedome from the Magiſtrate, they may with good conſcience marie againe after lawfull diuorce. And yet here we muſt know, that diuorcement, or mariage after, muſt not be done priuately by man and wife vpon their owne heads, but by order of law, before the Magiſtrate, according to the cuſtome of that Church or Common-wealth whome it concernes. Againe, there be ſome particular cauſes which may iuſtly hinder mariage after diuorce: as firſt, if the parties revnite their bond againe by reconciliation: for the knot broken by adulterie, may bee reunited againe by the conſent of the partie innocent. Secondly, when the one partie is a manifeſt cauſe of the Adulterie of the other, and ſo become an acceſſarie to the others offence: for it ſeemes vnequall, that he who hath put his hand to the committing of a ſinne, ſhould reape any benefit or priuiledge by the ſame. And therefore I ſay the partie innocent hath freedome in this caſe.

v. 33. Againe, yee haue heard that it was ſaide to them of old time, Thou ſhalt not forſweare thy ſelfe: but ſhalt performe thine oathes vnto the Lord.

34. But I ſay vnto you, ſweare not at all, &c.

Our Sauiour Chriſt hauing reſtored the ſeauenth commandement to his true ſenſe & meaning, doth here proceede to doe the like vnto the third commandement: obſeruing herein the ſame order that he did in the former; for firſt, he laieth downe the falſe interpretation of the Scribes and Phariſies giuen to this commandement concerning ſwearing, v. 33. and then deliuereth the true doctrine of an oath. v. 34. The corrupt ſenſe giuen by the Scribes and Phariſies, is propounded in the word of the holy Ghoſt, Leuit. 19.12. Deut. 5.11. Thou ſhalt not forſweare thy ſelfe, but ſhall performe thine oathes vnto the Lord: which are not here taken in that true meaning wherein Moſes ſet them downe, but in the falſe interpretation of the Iewiſh teachers: wherof that we may the better iudge, let vs ſearch out the true meaning of Moſes law concerning an oath: for which ende we muſt firſt ſee what periurie is; then propound the kindes of periurie; and laſtly, ſhew the grieuouſneſſe of this ſinne.

Of periurie.

I. Point. In periurie there muſt be two things: Firſt, a man muſt affirme or auouch ſomething against his owne minde, his owne meaning, purpoſe, intention, or perſwaſion. When a man knowes a thing to be true, and ſaith it is true: or knoweth a thing to be falſe, and ſaies it is falſe, and ſweares thereto, this is no periurie, becauſe his ſpeach is anſwerable to that which is in his mind: but when a man knowes a thing to be true, & auoucheth it to be falſe: or knowing a thing to be falſe, auoucheth it to be true, vpon his oath; this is periurie; becauſe in ſo doing, he ſpeakes againſt his minde and perſwaſion. Secondly, in periurie there muſt be an oath; it is not periurie to ſpeake a thing that is falſe, vnleſſe he alſo ſweare to the thing he ſpeaketh falſly, againſt his minde, and yet euery oath maketh not direct periurie, vnleſſe it be a binding oath; for a man may ſweare to a thing that is vnlawfull, and after alter his mind, and not performe his oath, without the guilt of periurie: as if a child beeing vnder age, doe bind himſelfe by oath to marrie without his parents conſent; but comming to riper yeares doth better conſider of the matter, and ſubiects himſelfe to his parents diſpoſing, who marrie him to another. Now though he ſinned in ſo ſwearing, yet he is not periured, becauſe the oath was not a binding oath; for a child vnder yeares hath no power to take an oath.

II. Point. That wee may yet better iudge of this ſinne, wee muſt know that there be three kinds of periurie: Firſt, when a man confirmeth by oath, that which he knowes or thinkes to be otherwiſe; as when he takes an oath that a thing is true, which he knowes to be falſe; that a thing was thus, which he knowes was otherwiſe. 2 Secondly, Deceitfull ſwearing is periurie, when a man, either about things paſt, or to come, ſweares contrarie to the true knowledge and purpoſe of his owne minde. Example of this we haue in the Romiſh Preiſts, who both defend in writing, and practiſe in action, this deceitfull ſwearing: for beeing brought before the Magiſtrate, and made to ſweare to this demaund, or ſuch like; Whether they ſaid Maſſe, or knewe where Maſſe was ſaid at ſuch a time? They anſwer vpon their oathes, That they did not, nor knew not, (though indeede they did) which is according to their doctrine, That vnto dangerous Interrogatories a man may frame a ſafe meaning vnto himſelfe, and ſweare to it: as in the former inſtance, they ſweare they knew not where Maſſe was ſaide, meaning, to reveale it to the Iudge. But this is flat periurie; for their oath is giuen them to anſwer according to the meaning of the Magiſtrates demaund: and if a man might lawfully frame a meaning to himſelfe, in ſwearing, hee might eaſily delude all truth, and ſo ſhould not an oath for confirmation, be the ende of ſtrife; but the breeder thereof, through ſurmiſe of falſe meaning in him that ſweareth. 3 The third kinde of periurie, is The breaking of a binding oath; as when a man vpon his oath promiſeth to doe a thing that is lawfull, and doth it not; yet this is not alwaies periurie; as Firſt, If God after the oath taken, make the thing promiſed, impoſſible to be done: as if a man ſweare to make another his heire, of ſuch and ſuch lands; now dwelling by the ſea ſide, the ſea breakes out, drownes all his land before he dieth; Is this man periured; becauſe hee performed not his promiſe bound with an oath? no verely; for God made the thing impoſſible. Secondly, if a man be bound in conſcience to breake his oath: Thus [a] David ſwearing raſhly to ſlaie Nabal, and his familie, was yet ſtaied from ſo doing by Abigals counſell, and brake his oath, and [b] gaue God thankes for it; for indeede his oath was vnlawfull, beeing the bond of iniquitie, and the doing of it had beene the doubling of his ſinne.

b verſ.32.

Here it may well be demaunded, whether thoſe that are ſworne to the Statutes and lawes of ſocieties and incorporations be periured, if they breake the ſame? Anſ. The Statutes of incorporations be of two ſorts; ſome are of the foundation of ſocieties, without which the incorporation cannot ſtand, and theſe (not beeing againſt the word of God) cannot be broken without the guilt of periurie; others, are Statutes onely of outward order and decencie; as touching apparell, geſture, and ſuch like: as in ſome incorporations the Statutes require, that euery man therein ſhould weare the round cap: hereunto many are ſworne, who alwaies weare it not; now (though I ſay not that they are faultleſſe altogether) yet they are not periured; becauſe this Statue of order, bindes not a man ſimply, but either to obedience, or to paie the mulct; which if a man be content to paie, he ſatisfies the Satute, and benefits the ſocietie, as much as if he kept the Statute.

Hauing ſhewed what periurie is, with the kinds thereof; let vs ſee whether we be free from it. After examination it will appeare, that mens liues are full of periurie; for where is much ſwearing vſually, there cannot but bee much periurie: becauſe they that ſweare in their common talke, doe forget their oathes, as they doe their communication. But ſay we are cleare from periurie, yet are we in danger of Gods heauie iudgements, for the breach of our vow in baptiſme; wherein we promiſe to beleeue in God, and to ſerue him, forſaking the world, the fleſh, and the deuill: now the breach of this vow, is as ill as periurie, for therefore may Baptiſme be called a Sacrament, becauſe of the oath and vow which a Chriſtian makes to God therein; for the word Sacrament properly betokeneth the oath which a ſouldier maketh to his Captaine for his fidelitie. The breaking of Ioſua his oathe vnto the Gibeonites, by Saul, [c] cauſed 3. yeares dearth, and was not ſatisfied, but with the blood of 7. of Sauls kindred. And [d] Zedekias periurie to the King of Babel, was one cauſe of the Lords fierce wrath againſt Ieruſalem, & the Princes thereof. Now ſhall one mans periurie cauſe ſuch iudgements? and ſhall we not thinke, that among other ſinnes this our periurie vnto God, in breaking our vow in Baptiſme, bringeth vpon vs Gods heauie wrath, by plague, famine, and vnſeaſonable weather? Wherefore let the conſideration hereof perſwade vs to repentance, and to a more conſcionable care of performing our vow vnto God.

d Ezek.17, 13.15.16.

III. Point. The grieuouſneſſe of this ſinne of periurie, which here the Lord forbids, appeares by theſe three ſinnes which are contained in it. Firſt, the vttering, or maintaining of a lie. Secondly, the calling on God to be a witneſſe vnto a lie; wherein men doe, as much as in them lieth, ſet the deuill himſelfe, the father of lies, in the roome of God, and ſo greatly robbe him of his honour and maieſtie. Thirdly, in periurie a man praies for a curſe vpon himſelfe, wiſhing God to bee a witneſſe of his ſpeech, and a Iudge to reuenge, if he ſweare falſly; ſo as herein a man is his owne vtter enemie, & as much as in him lieth, doth caſt both bodie and ſoule to hell.

Grieuouſnes of periurie.

Queſt. Seeing this ſinne of periurie is ſo great, whether may ſuch a man be put to his oath, as is certainely thought will periure himſelfe, if he be put to ſweare? I anſwer, men that put others to ſweare, are either priuate perſons or publicke Magiſtrates: a priuate man for his owne priuate cauſe, may not put ſuch a man to his oath; for he ſhould haue greater care of Gods glorie, and of the other mans ſoule, then of his priuate gaine: and therefore ought rather depart from his temporall right, then ſuffer his brother ſo to diſhonour God, and to hurt his owne ſoule. But if a Magiſtrate bee to put ſuch a man to his oath, as is verily thought will periure himſelfe, he may lawfully do it, but yet he is firſt to aduertiſe the partie of the waight of an oath, and of the fearefull ſinne of periury; and then, if the order of Law and iuſtice ſo require, he may miniſter an oath vnto him; leauing the euent to God: for the execution of iuſtice muſt not ſtay on mans miſdemeanour, nor waite, til they make conſcience of ſinne; for if it did, no cōmonwealth could ſtand, no war could be made: Moſes and the Leuites executed vengeance vpon the idolatrous Iews, without waiting for their repentance.

Exod.32.27, 28.

But ſhalt performe thyne oathes vnto the Lord.] Theſe words are not ſet downe in any of Moſes bookes, but are a collection from the former lawe of Moſes, gathered by the Iewiſh Teachers; which collectiō though it be not expreſly ſet downe, yet is it the verie ſenſe of the Law: for if a man cannot without periurie breake a lawfull binding oath, then that Law which forbiddeth periurie, bindeth man to performe all that he hath lawſully ſworne vnto God.

The ſtraite bond of an oath.

Here then in this collection of the Iewiſh Teachers, is ſet downe an excellent point, touching the ſtraitneſſe of the bond of an oath. In euery lawfull oath, there is a double bond; Firſt, it bindes one man to another, for the performing of the thing he ſweareth to doe. Secondly, it binds a man vnto God, for he that ſweareth, invocates God as a witneſſe, and a Iudge of the truth of his aſſertion; & he ſtands bound vnto God, till the thing ſworne vnto, be performed, if it be lawfull and poſſible. And herein the Phariſies are good Teachers, and from this their collection, we learne ſundrie points.

A conſtrained oath of things lawful bindes.

Firſt, that if a man take an oath, though he were conſtrained thereto by feare, yet it muſt bee kept, if it be of things lawfull and poſſible; becauſe in an oath a man ſtands bound to the Lord: as if a man ſweare vnto a Thiefe, for the ſauing of his life, that he will bring him ſome money, or other bootie, of his owne goods; this he is to performe, becauſe the loſſe is priuate; but if hee were ſworne further, not to detect the Thiefe, that were a bond of iniquitie, tending to the hurt of the common wealth: and therfore ſuch an oath a man ought not to take; and if he doe ſo ſweare, yet he muſt not keepe it, but repent of his raſh oath.

An oath gotten by error.

Secondly, if a man be brought to ſweare by error, being ouertakē by another, yet if it were of things lawfull, within his power, it muſt be kept: ſo did Ioſuah to the Gibeonites, and the breach thereof by [e] Saul was grieuouſly puniſhed as we ſhewed before.

[e] Ioſh.9.19.

An oath indamaging.

Thirdly, if a man ſweare vnto a lawfull promiſe, and it fall out, that the keeping of his oath procure him great temporal loſſes; yet the oath muſt be kept, becauſe therein he is bound vnto God. This Dauid noteth for a propertie of him that muſt reſt in Gods holy mountaine, to keepe his promiſe whereto he is bound by an oath, though it turne to his owne hinderance, Pſal. 15.4.

Fourthly, here we may ſee, that the [f] doctrine and [g] practiſe of the Church of Rome is wicked and damnable: They teach, that the Biſhop of Rome, by the power of the Keyes, may free a man in conſcience from the bond of a lawfull oath: Indeede, if the bond were only betweene man and man, it were ſomething; but beeing betweene God and man, hee that will diſpenſe therewith, muſt be aboue, or at leaſt equall to God himſelfe. The Phariſies doctrine was farre better, who taught that mens oathes muſt be performed vnto God, without diſpenſing therewith. And therefore our Engliſh Prieſts who before haue ſworne to the Supremacie of this ſtate, and now are reconciled to the Pope, are flatly periured perſons, and ſo to be held.

[f] Azorius Ieſuit. Inſt. Mor. c.15.

[g] Pius 5. Pontif. in Bull. in Eliz.

But howſoeuer the Phariſies make this one good collection, yet they erre groſſely, in their further meaning and expounding of this law; for whē as God forbiddeth a man to forſweare himſelfe, hence they gather; firſt, that it was lawfull to ſweare ordinarily in common talke, euen by the name of God, ſo that they ſware truely, and did not forſweare themſelues; that this was their meaning, will appeare in Chriſts anſwer. Secondly, hence they gathered, that the lawe ſpake nothing of indirect oathes: for they made two kinds of oathes; direct by the name of God, and indirect by the creatures. And as they held that a man might ſweare directly by the name of God without ſinne in common talke, ſo they taught that ſwearing indirectly by the creatures, as by heauen, by the temple, the head, Altar, and ſuch like, was nothing; neither the breaking thereof was any periurie, as *Matth.*23.16. And like vnto theſe Iewes are Popiſh teachers, who hold that men may not onely ſweare by the name of God, but by holy things, as by the Rhoode, the Maſſe, Saints and Angels, if they be not abuſed.

Aquin.2.2.q.89.art.6.

verſ.34. But I ſay vnto you, ſweare not at all, neither by heauen, for it is the throne of God, &c. Here Chriſt cōfuteth the falſe interpretation of the Iewiſh Teachers. And his anſwer is propounded, firſt generally; ſweare not at all; then particularly in the words following to the 38. verſe. The words of his generall anſwer are ſomewhat hard, and peruerted by many; therefore that we may come to the true ſenſe thereof, two points are to be conſidered. Firſt, what it is to ſweare: then how farre forth Chriſt forbiddeth ſwearing. For the firſt, wee ſhall beſt conceiue of an oath by the parts thereof. In an oath be two things: Confeſſion, and Imprecation. Confeſſion is three-fold; though for outward forme the words of an oath be few. 1. A man confeſſeth, that that which he ſweareth is true true in his conſcience: 2. that God is a witnes not onely for the outward action and ſpeech, but alſo of his particular conſcience: and 3. that God is an omnipotent Iudge of all, and of him that ſwereth, able to iuſtifie him if he ſwear truly, or otherwiſe to condemne him eternally if he ſweare falſly. Imprecation, the ſecond thing in an oath, is a prayer to God for two things: Firſt, that God would be a witnes with him that ſweareth, to teſtifie that he ſweareth truely, and according to his conſcience: ſo Paul did, Rom. 9. 1. I ſpeake the truth in Chriſt, I lie not: my conſcience bearing mee witneſſe in the holy Ghoſt. Secondly, a man praies, that God would become a Iudge to curſe him with eternall wrath, if hee ſwore falſly: 2. Cor. 1. 23. I call God for a record vnto my ſoule: and the forme of ſwearing in the old time, was the vſing of this imprecation: God doe ſo to me and more alſo, if I doe not thus and thus, 2. king. 6. 31.

2 Imprecation.

How farre Chriſt forbids ſwearing.

We ſee what it is to ſweare. Now we come to ſhew, how far forth Chriſt forbiddeth ſwearing, in theſe words, Sweare not at all. The Anabaptiſts gather hence that al ſwearing is forbidden, and ſo did ſome [a] Heretikes in the primitiue Church; yea and [b] ſome of the ancient Fathers (that otherwiſe deſerued well of the Church) thought that the Lord in the old Teſtament did onely permit ſwearing, as he did ſome other things that were euill, which hee approoued not, and that now Chriſt did quite take away the ſame. But this opinion is falſe & erronious: for ſwearing is [c] commanded as a part of Gods worſhip: now if Chriſt ſhould here forbid it, he ſhould be againſt himſelfe, condemning that which himſelfe approoued. Againe, the Apoſtle Paul vſed it, as is plaine to be ſeene in the moſt of his Epiſtles: & Heb. 6, 16. An oath for confirmation, is called the ordinance of God, for the ending of all ſtrife. Others (as the Papiſts) ſay, that Chriſt here ſets down a counſell of perfection, not forbidding all ſwearing, but rather wiſhing that men could ſo liue in faith, loue, and truth, that there ſhould be no vſe of an oath. But this cannot be true: for Chriſts words are not perſwaſiue, but prohibitorie, expreſſely forbidding ſwearing. And yet we muſt know, that Chriſts meaning is not here to forbid all ſwearing ſimply, but all ſwearing after the Iewiſh manner and cuſtome; that is, in common talke and communication, as is plaine in the laſt words of this anſwer, when he ſaith Let your communication bee yea, yea. For this is a Rule to be obſerued in the interpretation of Scripture, that things generally ſpoken, muſt particularly bee vnderſtood, according to the circumſtances of the preſent mater in hand: as when Paul ſaith, [d] he became all things to all men, if it ſhould be taken generally, we might ſay, that with blaſphemers he became a blaſphemer, &c. but that ſpeach muſt be reſtrained to the vſe of things indifferent, in all which he yeelded to the weakeneſſe of all, that he might winne ſome: and ſo here, Sweare not at all, muſt be reſtrained to the Iewiſh cuſtom, which was to ſweare by the name of God in their cōmon talke, and by other creatures, both which Chriſt doth vtterly forbid.

Vſe. 1. Againſt ordinarie ſwearing.

Here firſt we learne that ordinarie ſwearing is vnlawfull, either by the name of God, or by other creatures. This is the common ſinne of our age in al ſorts and degrees: ſome ſweare by their faith; others by their troth, before God, by the croſſe of the coine (hauing money in their hands,) by the fire that is Gods angel (as they vſe to ſpeake) others by bread, drinke: and looke how many occaſions men haue offered vnto them, ſo many oathes haue they framed vnto themſelues.

2 Minſed oathes.

Secondly, here is condemned all minſed oathes, as by my fay, maskins, and yea mary; for the ground thereof was this Popiſh oath by Marie. Thirdly, here are condemned all groſſe oathes by the parts of Chriſts bodie, as by his heart, blood, ſides, and ſuch like.

Pretences for ſwearing.

1 Yet men haue their excuſes for common ſwearing, as firſt, that they ſweare the truth, and nothing elſe. But the truth of their oath, cannot diſpenſe with the commandement of God, forbidding all ſwearing in ordinarie cōmunication.

2 Others that be more ſimple, ſay, they ſweare by good things. But that makes their ſinne the greater: for the goodneſſe of a thing, doth aggrauate the offence in the abuſe thereof.

3 Others ſay, that they cannot be beleeued vpon their bare word: Anſw. But Chriſts commandement muſt not be broken, to winne credit to our ſpeeches; that credit is deare bought, which is got by pawning the ſoule to the deuil: God muſt be obeyed for the matter of our communication; though no man will beleeue vs.

4 Others, as Soldiers & yong gallants, vſe to ſweare to teſtifie their courage and gentrie; theſe men ſhewe that they loue the praiſe of men more then the praiſe of God. But that will be found in the ende but ſorie reputation, which is gained by tranſgreſſion; their glorie wil be their ſhame, and their end damnation, Philip. 3. 18. nay, their baſe minds and cowardlineſſe are herein euident, that they glorie in their ſlauiſh bondage vnto ſinne and Satan. Theſe excuſes will not free men from the guilt of condemnation at the day of iudgement: for common ſwearing is a ſhamefull taking of Gods name in vain; now the Lord hath ſaid, that he will not hold them guiltles, that take his name in vaine. Theſe therefore that haue this way offended, muſt betime repent of this impietie, and learne to feare the name of God, making conſcience of an oath, and let their communication be yea, yea, and nay, nay, as Chriſt commandeth. The wicked fact of Iezabel couering bloodie impietie vnder hypocriſie, [e] in proclaming a faſt, when ſhee would haue Naboth ſlaine for blaſphemie, ſhewes that the cuſtome of thoſe times was to haue publike humiliation for ſuch ſinnes, leaſt the wrath of [e] 1. king. 21. 9, 10.

God ſhould come vpon our land. And when good king Hezekias heard the grieuous blaſphemie which Rabſhakeh vttered againſt the Lord, d hee fell to his prayers, and to humble himſelfe before God; ſhall this good King doe this for an other mans blaſphemie, and ſhall not we doe the like for our owne, but continue in ſwearing without all remorſe. Our common ſwearers are deuills incarnate, yea worſe then the deuill himſelfe, for the e deuills beleeue God and tremble; but they teare God in peices, and are neuer mooued. If men abuſe earthly Princes in their names and titles, they are impriſoned, baniſhed, or hanged, and that iuſtly: nowe ſhall this be done to thē that impeach the dignities of mortall men, and ſhal not Gods wrath be hot againſt that people, who liue in the cōtinuall blaſphemie of his name. Let vs therefore feare to open our mouthes in any kinde of common ſwearing, though it be by the baſeſt creature that God hath made: for the leaſt creature is better then we can be allowed to abuſe by our oathes.

Curſing our ſelues.

Laſtly, here is forbidden all curſing of our ſelues in our common talke, as when men ſay, If it be not ſo, I would I were hanged: I would this bread might bee my bane, and ſuch like: for euery imprecation is a part of an oath: as we may ſee in the oathes ſpecified in Scripture; 1. Sam. 25.22. So and more alſo, doe God to the enemies of Dauid, &c. and 2.king. 6.5. If I doe not ſo and ſo, then God doe ſo and ſo to me: now as wee are not to ſweare in our common talke, ſo neither ought we to vſe imprecation therein, for beeing part of an oath, it ought not to bee the matter of our common ſpeech.

Two caſes wherein an oath is lawfull.

Here two queſtions muſt be skanned: firſt, when may a man lawfully ſweare: and when not? for Chriſts ſpeech forbidding ordinarie ſwearing, ſeemes to graunt, that there is a time wherin a man may lawfully take an oath. There be two times and caſes wherin a man may lawfully take an oath. Firſt, when the Magiſtrate miniſtreth an oath vnto a man vpon a iuſt occaſion: for the Magiſtrate hath the power of God in this caſe, and therefore when hee iuſtly requires it of man, then may he lawfully ſweare. Secondly, when a mans owne calling generall or particular, neceſſarily requires an oath; and that is in fowre caſes: I. When the taking of an oath ſerueth to maintaine, procure, or winne vnto God any part of his glorie, or to preſerue the ſame from diſgrace. In this regard, Paul mooued with a godly zeale, vſeth an oath in ſundrie of his Epiſtles, for the confirmation of his doctrin, that the Churchs to whom he writ might be ſtabliſhed in the truth, and ſo glorifie God the more. II. When his oath ſerueth to maintaine or further his owne or others ſaluation or preſeruatiō in ſoule or body; in this caſe a Paul calls God for a record vnto his ſoule, that hee came not to Corinth to ſpare them. And Dauid to further himſelfe in the way of ſaluation, b bound himſelfe by an oath that hee

b Pſal.109.106.

A would keepe Gods commandements. III. When the oath ſerues to confirme and ſtabliſh peace and ſocietie betweene partie and partie, countrey and countrey, kingdome and kingdome. Thus did Abraham and Abimelech ſweare each to other, Gen.21.23. and Iacob and Laban, Gen. 31.53. and by vertue hereof doe ſubiects bind themſelues by oath in allegiance to their Princes, and ſoldiers to their Gouernours. IV. Whē a man by oath and not otherwiſe, may either free himſelfe from temporall loſſes, or to procure to himſelfe temporall benefits which bee of great weight and moment: for an oath for confirmation is among men the ende of all ſtrife: now we knowe that much ſtriſe and cōtroverſie doth ariſe about worldly affaires. B And in this regard a man by oath may lawfully purge himſelfe of infamie and ſlander. In theſe fowre caſes, a man may lawfully ſweare, not onely publikely before the Magiſtrate, but alſo priuately, ſo it be with due reuerence and good conſcience. But in common talke, or on light occaſion, a man cannot lawfully ſweare, either by ſmall or great oath, for that is to take the name of God in vaine.

II. Queſt. How muſt a man take an oath, when by iuſt occaſion hee is called to ſweare? Anſw. To this queſtion the Prophet Ieremie anſwereth, ch.4.2. Thou ſhalt ſweare, The Lord liueth in truth, in iudgement, and in righteouſneſſe: where three vertues are required in an holy manner of ſwearing. First, truth, and that reſC pecteth two things, as well the matter whereto we ſweare, for God may not be brought for a witneſſe to a lie; as alſo the minde of him that ſweareth: for his oath muſt be according to his minde, without fraud or deceit, and with intent to performe that truely which he promiſes therevpon. Secondly, Iuſtice or righteouſneſſe, which alſo reſpecteth two things; firſt, the thing ſworne to, that muſt be iuſt and lawfull and according to Gods word: ſecondly, the conſcience of the ſwearer: for a man muſt not ſweare for a triſtle though the thing be true, but either by the authoritie of the Magiſtrate, or vpon ſome neceſſarie cauſe of his lawfull calling: and againſt this vertue doe thoſe ſinne, ſweare vſually in their common talke, though D the thing be true: for trifles and light matters are not a iuſt cauſe of an oath. Thirdly, iudgement, as well of the oath, as of his owne perſon: for the oath; he that ſweareth rightly, ought to know the nature of an oath, & be able to iudge of the matter whereabout he ſweareth, & alſo diſcerne rightly of the perſons before whom, of time, place, & other circumſtances. And for his owne perſon, a man that ſweareth, ought to ſee in his conſcience that he is fit to take an oath, and thereby to worſhip & glorifie God; for he that ſweareth ought to haue his heart ſmitten with feare and awe towards God, as in all other parts of his worſhip: Deut.10.20. the feare of God, and ſwearing by his name, are ioyned together: and a prophane man that hath no feare

A feare of God in his heart ought not to ſweare. And thus much of Chriſts generall anſwer, to their falſe interpretation.

Neither by heauen, for it is the throne of God: v.35. Nor yet by the earth, for it is his footſtoole: neither by Ieruſalem, for it is the citie of the great King, &c. Here our Sauiour Chriſt commeth particularly to forbid ſwearing in foure ſeuerall kinds of oathes vſed among the Iewes, vnder which he includeth all indirect oathes by the creatures: and withall obſerue, that he addeth ſeuerall reaſons in prohibiting theſe ſeuerall kinds of indirect oathes: as that a man muſt not ſweare by heauen, because it is the throne of God, &c. B Now as I take it, Chriſt doth not directly forbid ſwearing by the creatures in this place: for his intent is to forbid ordinarie ſwearing in common ſpeech, whether it be by God, or by the creatures; which here he nameth, becauſe the Iewes counted them but light oathes. Yet here this point muſt needs bee ſkanned, whether it be lawfull at any time to ſweare by the creatures.

Whether we may ſweare by the creatures. Ianſen.concord. Euang. cap.40. Manuale confeſſ. Martini ab Aſpilcueta. c.12.num.4.

Sundrie Papiſts, and thoſe of the beſt account both for learning and deuotion, make two kinds of oathes, in ſwearing by the creatures: First, when a man ſweares by the creature, and puts it in the place of God, making it a Iudge and witneſſe to his conſcience of the truth of the thing whereof hee ſweareth: and this doe all condemne as wicked and vnlawful, 1 both Proteſtants and Papiſts. Secondly, when the creature is named, but yet the oath is directed C to God in the mind of the ſwearer, vnder the name of the creature, as the creature is in relation to God a ſigne of his preſence: and this kind of ſwearing is taken for lawfull, not only of all Papiſts, but of many Proteſtant Diuines which bee of good account in our age. 2 Yet with reuerence to them all, I ſee no reaſon in the word of God, to warrant this kind of ſwearing by the creature, with direction to God in the mind of him that ſweareth. Indeed a man may name the creature in his oath (as Paul did, I call God to record to my conſcience) & yet ſweare by God: for it is one thing to name the creature in ſwearing, and an other thing to ſweare by the creature.

Reaſons againſt ſwearing by the creatures.

D Reaſons againſt this forme of ſwearing by the creatures, are theſe. 1 First, an oath is part of Gods worſhip, as hath before been ſhewed: now euerie part of Gods worſhip muſt be referred to God directly; ſo wee pray and giue thāks to God directly, and not in the creature, and ſo wee ought to ſweare; but in indirect ſwearing by the creatures, the oath is directly referred to the creature, and indirectly vnto God, namely in the creature which is not lawfull. 2 Secondly, a man muſt ſweare [a] by him that is greater then himſelfe, and therefore [b] God ſware by himſelfe becauſe there was no greater to ſweare by; where it ſeemeth the holy Ghoſt takes it for graunted, that there is no lawfull ſwearing by the creatures; becauſe they are not greater then man, and ſo there muſt bee but A one onely direct kinde of ſwearing, by God himſelfe. 3 Thirdly, Deuteron.6.13 Thou ſhalt ſweare by my name: there it ſeemeth he preſcribeth ſuch a forme of ſwearing, wherein the name of God in ſome plaine manner is expreſſed; but in indirect oathes, an other beſides him that ſweareth, cannot tell whether hee ſweare by God or no, becauſe the oath is by the creature, and directed to God onely in the minde of him that ſweareth. 4 Fourthly, Matth. 23.21. He that ſweareth by the Temple, ſweareth by God: whence I gather, that an indirect oath is ſuperfluous, becauſe it is ſufficient that a man ſweare by God onely, and not by the creature B alſo.

By theſe reaſons I haue beene mooued to diſlike of indirect oathes; now let vs ſee what is ſaid in the behalfe of them. First, it is ſaid, that [e] Ioſeph a man comended for his faith, ſware by the life of Pharaoh: therefore men may ſweare by the creatures. Anſ. It may wel be expounded, not to be an oath, but an aſſeueration to this effect, as ſurely as Pharaoh liueth: but ſay it is an oath, yet this fact prooueth not the lawfulnes of this kind of ſwearing: for no mā is ſo good, but hee may bee tainted with the impieties of the place wherein he liueth, eſpecially beeing ſo wicked a place as Pharaohs court was.

Second reaſon. 2. King.2.4. the Prophet Eliſha ſweareth by Eliahs ſoule. Anſw. That place prooueth not the point in hand: for the queſtion is of indirect oathes, where the name of C God is concealed: but in that place Gods name is prefixed, as the Lord liueth, and as thy ſoule liueth. Againe, that phraſe may be taken for a ſolemne Aſſeueration onely, as it is well tranſlated; as the Lord liueth, and as thy ſoule liueth, I will not leaue thee.

Reaſon III. Canticl.3.5. There (ſay they) Chriſt himſelfe ſweareth by the creatures, the Roes & the Hindes of the field. An. Thoſe words are not an oath, but an admiration: for Chriſt chargeth the enemies of his Church not to trouble her; and he confirmeth his charge by a teſtimonie from the bruit beaſts, which may be done without an oath; for it is all one as if he had ſaid, If you doe trouble my Church, the D Roes and Hindes of the field ſhall be witneſſes againſt you, becauſe you doe that which they would not doe, if they had reaſon as you haue: now the creatures may be made witneſſes vnto an Admiration: as Deut. 32.1. Moſes calleth heauen and earth to witneſſe: and ſo doth the the Lord, Iſa.1.2. but when a man ſweareth by a thing, the ſame is made a witneſſe to his conſcience, which no creature can be.

Reaſon IV. Paul (ſay they) ſware by [d] their reioycing, which is a gift of God. Anſw. Thoſe wordes, are not an oth, but an obteſtation, to teſtifie the conſtancie which he ſhewed in his miniſterie, and they declared in the confeſſion of their faith: now a teſtiomie may bee drawne from a creature, as we ſhewed before. But (ſay they) the word there vſed, is a note of an oath.

Anſw. Not

[a] Heb.6.16.
[b] v.13.
[e] Gen.42.16.
[d] 1.Cor.15.31.

Not alwaies: or ſometime it betokens an aſſeueration, as in other authors might be ſhewed: ſo that I take it, there ought not to be any indirect oaths wherein Gods name is concealed, and the creature ſworne by, made a pledge of Gods preſence.

Now I come to the reaſons, for which Chriſt forbids theſe indirect oaths: the ſumme of thẽ in generall is this; becauſe Gods name, which muſt not be taken in vaine, is ſet in euerie one of his creatures, euen in the leaſt haire of a mans head, (for therein a man may ſee the wiſedome and power of God) therefore we may not ſweare in our common talke, no not by the leaſt creature that God hath made.

Instructions.
Swearing by faith, troth, &c. vnlawful.

Hence wee learne ſundrie inſtructions. 1. That it is not lawfull to ſweare by faith, troth, bread, drinke, and ſuch like: for faith (to inſiſt in one) is a gift of God, which beareth Gods name in it: for the matter of our faith is Chriſt, ſo as whẽ we ſweare by it, we ſweare by Chriſt whoſe name wee may not take in vaine, and therefore we may not ſweare at all by any ſuch oathes. Againe, God hath ſet his name on euery creature, he hath imprinted in them the ſignes of his power, wiſedome, iuſtice, and mercie: Rom, 1.20. The inuiſible things of God are ſeene by his workes: and, Act. 14. 17. Raine from heauen, and fruitfull ſeaſon, were witneſſes vnto the Gentiles of Gods goodneſſe vnto them: which ſerueth firſt to condemne the world of great ingratitude: for we haue ſet before our eyes, wee daily taſt and handle the good creatures of God; yet who beholds in them his wiſdome, mercie, and goodnes, that thereby he might take occaſion to praiſe his name? for men are like to bruit beaſts, who vſe the benefit of the creatures, but yet neuer think on God the creator; and like vnto the ſwine, who eateth vp the maſt, but neuer looketh vp to the tree from whence it commeth; yea, ſome are ſo ſhameles, that they denie God by their works, though not in word.

Meditate on Gods creatures.

Secondly, this teacheth vs carefully to meditate vpon the creatures of God, labouring therein to ſee Gods wiſdome, iuſtice, and mercie, and the reſt of his attributes; that hereby we may take occaſion to praiſe his name: Pſal. 139. 14. I will praiſe thee, for I am wonderfully and fearefully made: marnelous are thy workes, and that my ſoule knoweth right well: here the Prophet doth profeſſe: Firſt, that hee did meditate on the creatures of God ſeriouſly; then, that his meditation made him to feare and to be aſtoniſhed: and thirdly, to praiſe God. Pſal. 92.5,6. Oh how glorious are thy workes! therein importing, that he did meditate thereon: but the vnwiſe man (ſaith he) knoweth it not, and a foole doth not vnderſtand this: where he ſheweth that it is a great point of folly to ſee Gods creatures, and not to behold the wonderfull power, and goodneſſe of God in them: Pſal. 145. 5. I will meditate vpon all thy wondrous workes: and ver. 10. All thy workes praiſe thee, O Lord. His example we ſhould followe. And whereas Gods iudgements are among vs, we muſt labour in them to ſee Gods indignation againſt our ſinnes, and his mercie in chaſtening vs for our amendement, that we might not be condemned with the world.

Thirdly, if euery creature carie in it ſome ſtampe of Gods name, then what ſhould the reaſonable creature doe? ſhould not men much more beare Gods image? yes verily, both in thought, will, affection, and action; we muſt therefore ſeeke to repaire in vs Gods image decaied in Adam; and aboue all things take heede, we carie not about vs the image of the deuill in any ſinne: for if we doe, we are farre worſe then the dumbe creatures.

Plea of the ignorant confuted.

Fourthly, whereas euerie creature beares about ſome part of Gods image, this ſerues to ſtrippe the ignorant ſort of their falſe plea: who thinke God will hold them excuſed, becauſe they are not book learned: but they muſt know they deceiue themſelues, for ſith they are ignorant of the wiſdome, mercy, and power of God, & of many other things in God, which the very vnreaſonable creatures might haue taught them, if they had beheld the ſame, and meditated thereon: they may iuſtly feare, leaſt theſe ſilly creatures ſtand vp in iudgement againſt them at the laſt day.

Vſe the creatures reuerently.

And laſtly, ſeeing God hath ſet his image in euerie creature, we muſt labour to vſe them all in an holy manner; as meate, drink, apparell, & ſuch like: we muſt beware we abuſe them not vnto our luſts any manner of way, for the abuſe redounds vnto the Lord whoſe name they beare; and we know God will not hold him guiltleſſe that taketh his name in vaine.

Now I come more particularly to the ſeuerall reaſons annexed to the ſeuerall prohibitions. The firſt particular prohibitiõ is this, Thou ſhalt not ſweare by heauen: and the reaſon followeth, for it is the throne of God. This reaſon is to be ſcanned. A Throne is a chaire of eſtate wherein earthly Princes vſe to ſit in iudgment, & ſhew themſelues in glorie and maieſty. Now heauen is not properly a Throne, but by reſemblance; becauſe that God doth in heauen, and from heauen ſhew his glorie and maieſtie vnto men. In heauen the Saints and Angels behold the vnſpeakeable glory of God. And from heauen doth God ſhew his exceeding power, euen in ſpreading the heauens like a curtaine aboue the earth, in ſetting therein the Sunne, the moone and ſtarres, moſt glorious creatures; in giuing particular motions vnto them; by ſending raine from heauẽ with ſtormes, lightning, and thunder. Againe, he ſheweth his iuſtice from heauen, by powring downe his iudgements thence: As the [e] flood vpon the world of the vngodly, fire and brimſtone vpon Sodome and Gomorrah; as the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 1.18. The wrath of God is reuealed from heauen, againſt all vngodlineſſe and vnrighteouſneſſe of men. Againe, Gods mercie and goodneſſe is manifeſted from heauen,

[e] 2.Pet.2.5.

heauen, thence commeth euery good gift, Iam. 1. 17. yea, thence our Sauiour Chriſt deſcended for the worke of our redemption: thence alſo the holy Ghoſt deſcended in Chriſts baptiſme; and the Fathers voice was heard from thence, pointing out that Lamb of God which taketh away the ſinnes of the world: and thence ſhall Chriſt come againe in glorie at the laſt day, to be glorified in his Saints: all which doe magnifie vnto vs the glorie of this Throne.

The vſe.

Is the Throne of God in heauen and not on earth? then muſt we learne to conceiue of God as of an heauenly King: in the chapter following we are taught to call him our heauenly Father, v. 9. and therefore when we ſpeake or thinke of God, or doe worſhip vnto him in prayer or thankſgiuing, we muſt not conceiue of him in any carnall ſort, but in an heauenly manner. The ſecond commanndement forbidding the repreſentation of God in any ſimilitudes, may teach vs, that we muſt not conceiue of God after any earthly or carnall manner. Indeede the Popiſh Church approouing of the images of the Trinitie (as before was ſhewed) doe thereby teach the people to conceiue of God, as of an old man ſetting in heauen, with a crowne vpon his head, becauſe he is called d the Auncient of dayes; but all ſuch carnall conceits of God are he re forbidden.

d Dan. 7. 13.

How to conceiue aright of God.

That we may then conceiue a right of God, two Rules muſt be remmembred. 1 First we muſt not frame in our mindes any Image of God at all, as that he ſhould be like vnto man, or any other creature, but we muſt conceiue of him both in his workes, as our creator, gouernour, and preſeruer; and alſo in his properties, as moſt wiſe, moſt iuſt, holy, mercifull, and ſuch like: 2 Secondly, wee muſt conceiue that God is one in ſubſtance, and three in perſons: we muſt not confound the perſons, nor deuide the ſubſtāce, but conceiue of one God in three perſons; and three perſons in one and the ſame Godhead. Theſe two Rules beeing well obſerued, will keepe our hearts from thoſe vaine conceits of God, which many frame to themſelues when they thinke of him in their minds.

An heauenly conuerſatiō.

Secondly, ſeeing Gods throne is in heauen, therefore our conuerſation muſt be there alſo: for where God is and his throne, there ought our hearts to be. Now wee ſhall haue our conuerſation in heauen by doing two things; firſt, by a continuall eleuation of our minds vnto heauen, morning and euening, and at all times when we haue occaſion: 1. Theſſ. 4. 17. we are commanded to pray continually; and that wee doe, ſo oft as in the duties of our ordinary calling, wee deſire in our hearts the bleſſing and aſſiſtance of God for the ſighs and groanes of the ſoule, are prayers approoued before God: wee muſt therefore lift vp our heart to God, as Dauid did, Pſal. 25. 1. Secondly, wee muſt ſet all our affections on God, and on heauenly things, as our loue, our ioy, and feare, yea our care muſt be of comming to heauen: for where can wee bee in a more happy place then before Gods throne in heauen, where God ſets out his glory and maieſtie to his creature?

How we muſt conceiue of Gods prouidence.

Thirdly, hence we may learne, to conceiue aright of the prouidence of God: for God ſitting in his maieſtie in heauen, and beeing infinite in wiſedome, power, and greatnes, doth by a moſt carefull prouidence ſee, know and gouerne all things that are done vpon earth: this is notably ſet forth vnto vs, Pſa. 11. 4. The Lords throne is in heauen, his eies well conſider, his eyelidder will trie the children of men: the words are verie ſignificant, importing that God from heauen doth moſt narrowly ſee into all mens dealings and affaires: which teacheth vs when we ſhall be in any diſtreſſe, either in bodie, minde, goods, or friends, to behaue our ſelues in a holy manner, for God ſees our caſe: and therefore firſt we muſt make our moane vnto him, & hūbly intreat for that grace and mercie at his hāds whereof we ſtand in neede. Dauid maketh this a ground of much comfort in affliction: Pſal. 102. 19, 20. Out of heauen (ſaith he) did the Lord behold the earth, that he might heare the mourning of the priſoner, and deliuer the children of death.

A terror to ſinners.

Laſtly, this ſerueth to terrifie euery ſinner: for the Lord ſits in heauen with a peircing eie, beholding all thy doings whatſoeuer thou art; and therefore when a man ſinneth, though hee hide the ſame from men, yet the Lord ſees him, and will reprooue him, and iudge him: let vs therefore make conſcience of all ſinne, & feare to doe euill, either by thought word or deede, ſeeing wee are euer before the Iudge that ſits vpon this throne.

verſ. 35.

The ſecond particular prohibition is, againſt ſwearing by earth: the reaſon is, becauſe it is the Lords foot-ſtoole. The earth is the Lords footſtoole, not properly, but by reſemblance; becauſe as the footſtoole is nothing in glory to the throne, no more be thoſe glimpſes of glory which God ſhewes here on earth, comparable to that ſurpaſſing dignitie and glorie, wherein Gods manifeſts himſelfe in heauen.

Inſtruction.

Gods omnipreſence.

Is the earth the Lords footeſtoole? then is he not included in heauen, but is preſent alſo vpon earth: God is not in one place alone, but he is euery where at one & the ſame time. Here then we haue a plaine proofe of Gods infinite greatneſſe and omnipreſence, in regard of his eſſence and godhead; for Chriſt compares him to a king, who is of that bigneſſe that hee fills heauen with his glorie; and of that height, that the earth belowe is his footſtoole, according as he ſaith, Ierem. 23. 23. I fill heauen and earth. This point Dauid prooues at large, Pſal. 136. 7. 8. Whether ſhall I goe from thy preſence? &c. ſhewing plainely, that there is no place, whereof it can be truely ſaid, that God in eſſence is not there preſent. The conſideration whereof teacheth vs;

Firſt, to vnderſtand aright that ſaying of

A

Paul, Act. 17. 28. In him we liue, moue, and haue our beeing: we are not in God, as parts of God, for his eſſence is moſt ſimple; and yet it is true we are in God, becauſe his eſſence is euery where: it is in vs, forth of vs, and about vs, and beeing in vs, and about vs, giues vs liuing, beeing, and moouing.

2 A right conceiuing of Gods prouidence.

Secondly, this teacheth vs to conceiue aright of Gods holy prouidence; to wit, that God in regard of his ſubſtance, is in euery place, giuing beeing, life, and moouing to all things that be, liue, and mooue, preſeruing them, & killing the at his pleaſure, and doing whatſoeuer he will.

3 A ground of feare and obedience.

Thirdly, this conſideration of Gods eſſentiall preſence, ſerues to kindle in our hearts that feare of God, which is the ground of true obedience in all eſtates. B If God ſhall lay vpon vs any affliction, either in bodie or minde, friends, or goods, let vs then conſider the eſſential preſence of God, laying that croſſe vpon vs, and it will ſtrike into our hearts a reuerent feare of God, and mooue vs to patience, meekenes, & contentation; yea, it will cauſe vs to humble our ſelues vnder his hand; for the cauſe why men flie not to God, by humbling themſelues in their afflictions, is becauſe they thinke God is farre off. Againe, if in proſperitie we conſider Gods eſſentiall preſence with vs, giuing vnto vs all good things, it will make vs thankfull; ſo much we doe vnto man, when we be in his preſence that hath beſtowed a fauour vpon vs, we C readily addreſſe our ſelues to thankfulnes: and ſhall we not doe ſo to God? In a word, this holy meditation of Gods preſence, will make vs to humble our ſelues vnto God, & to reſt contented with his good will and pleaſure.

4 No difference of place for worſhip in regard of holines.

Fourthly, if God in eſſence be preſent euery where, then it is needleſſe to make choice of places in regard of holineſſe, for the worſhip of God, for one place is no more neare to God then another: which confutes the vanity of Popiſh Pilgrimages to choiſe places for religious worſhip: and it checketh alſo the blind opinion of many among vs, who thinke the Church is the onely place of prayer and other parts of Gods worſhip; whereupon they neuer regard to pray in their priuate houſes. But God is in thee, and in thy houſe, as well as in the Church, D and therefore thou maiſt lift vp pure hands vnto God in all places, and muſt pray at home, as well as in the Church (alwaies prouided, that thou honour Gods ordinance in the publike aſſemblies.)

5 Thinke on Gods preſence.

Fiftly, if God be euery where, then we muſt labour to haue hearts affected with this perſwaſion, that whereſoeuer we be, God is preſent with vs. This leſſon God taught Abraham, Gen. 17. 1. Walke before mee, and be vpright: and this Enoch had learned long before, Gen. 5. 24. and therefore was reported of, that hee had pleaſed God, Heb. 11. 5. now where this perſwaſion taketh place, it will ſtrike the heart with a reuerend feare and awe towards God, making a man thus to reaſon; God is preſent with me, A how then ſhould I doe this euill in his ſight. Oh that this thought did runne in our mindes in the time of temptation, that by Gods grace we ſhould feare to ſinne, and endeauour to walke before God in all holy obedience, as his ſeruants haue done. Many are ſhameleſſe in ſinning, which comes from the want of this perſwaſion of Gods preſence, which ſhould ſtrike this feare into their hearts, as we may ſee, Gen. 20. 11. Pſal. 10. 3, 4. 11. and 94. 6, 7.

6 A helpe againſt the feare of the deuill.

Sixtly, this knowledge of Gods preſence, ſerues to quiet & ſtrengthen their hearts that are troubled with feare of the deuill: thus they muſt reaſon with themſelues; the Lord my God is preſent with me, both in power and eſſence, B he can bind Satan, & he will keepe thoſe that truſt in him from the ſnare of the hunter, wherefore then ſhould I be afraid?

II. Inſtruct. A ground of an humble and penitent life.

Secondly, is the earth the Lords footſtoole? then while we liue here vpon the earth, our liues ought to be a daily practiſe of humiliation and repentance: when good ſubiects come before the chaire of eſtate, eſpecially if the Prince be preſent, then they bow their bodies, to teſtifie their loyall ſubiection vnto their Prince; ſhall man doe this to man, and ſhall not we, whoſe dwelling is at the Lords footeſtoole, much more humble our ſelues? When Dauids wrath was kindled againſt Nabal, Abigail Nabals wife, beeing wiſer then her huſband, went to meete Dauid with a preſent, and ſo ſoone as C ſhee ſaw him, [f] ſhee light off her aſſe and fell downe vpon her face, and bowed her ſelfe vnto the ground, and fell at his feete, and beſought him humbly to forget the treſpaſſe, and to ſtay his hand from blood: ſo likewiſe when Iacob met his brother Eſau, [g] he bowed himſelfe ſeauen times, to moue him to compaſſion towards him and his family: how much more then ought we to bow our ſelues before the Lord, who haue ten thouſand fold more deſerued his wrath then Nabal did Dauids, or Iacob Eſaus? and beſides, our humble walking before him at his footſtoole here on earth, may giue vs aſſurance that one day he will place vs on his throne in glorie in the heauens. But if we walke proudly before him in the practiſe of ſinne, being at his footſtoole, D let vs know that he hath feete like vnto fierie braſſe burning in a furnace, Reuel. 1. 15. vnder which he will trample all his enemies, and make them his footſtoole, Pſal. 110. 1.

Ieruſalem is Gods citie, though abounding with corruptions.

The third inhibition, is from ſwearing by Ieruſalem: the reaſon is, for it is the citie of the great King: that is, the citie of God, the King of kings; for God had choſen the Iewes to be his peculiar people, and Ieruſalem for his holy citie, where he had his Temple, and ſacrifices for his ſolemne worſhip. Now here obſerue, that at this time the Temple was made a denne of theeues, and many of the Scribes and Iewiſh teachers were notable Heretikes, erring againſt the foundation of religion; yet, the people were rebellious and wicked, as Steuen plainely telleth them, Act. 7. 51. and yet Chriſt here calleth Ieruſalem the citie of God; and ſo the people, Gods people; though they for their part had forſaken God. The reaſon hereof is this, becauſe neither the Iewes, nor any other doe then preſently ceaſe to be the people of God, when by ſin they cut off themſelues from God and forſake him; but then doe they ceaſe to be Gods people, when God forſakes them, and cuts them off from him: like as in the ſtate of matrimonie, when either man or wife commits adulterie, that partie breakes the bond of mariage, and as much as in him lieth cuts off himſelfe from the other: but yet while the partie innocent retaines matrimoniall affection towards the partie offending, and giues not a Bill of diuorce, they ſtill remaine man and wife. This appeares in theſe Iewes, whom neither Chriſt himſelfe did then forſake, when they reiected him (for he prayed for them when they crucified him) nor yet his Apoſtles, till they ſaw in them manifeſt ſignes of incurable obſtinacy, Act. 13.46.

[g] Gen 33. 3.

Whē a people ceaſe to be Gods people.

This point muſt be remembred, as ſeruing to rectifie our iudgements touching the ſtate of a Church or people, that haue many grieuous wants & faults among them, both for doctrine and manners: for though a people doe what in them lyeth, to cut off themſelues from God, yet till God cut them off from him, they ceaſe not to be his people, and therefore we may not iudge them to be no people of God, till wee ſee that God hath cut them off. And to apply this to our owne Church, put caſe we had forſaken God, and had among vs all thoſe abuſes which ſome would faſten vpon vs, as making vs to be no Church, yet this prooues vs not to be no Church, neither ought we for all this to be ſo reputed: for though we haue deſerued indeede that God ſhould cut vs off, yet ſeeing he vouchſafeth vnto vs the doctrine of life, and the pledges of ſaluation, it cannot truely be ſaid, that we are no Church. If it be ſaide, that by this reaſon wee will make the Church of Rome to be Gods Church, becauſe they haue ſome ſignes of Gods fauour, as Baptiſme and the word, though greeuouſly corrupted. Anſwer. Though I doubt not but God hath his companie in the middeſt of Poperie, yet if we vnderſtand by the Church of Rome, a companie of men who profeſſe & hold the Pope for their head, and embrace the doctrine eſtabliſhed by the Councel of Trent, then (I ſay) they are no Church: for Chriſt hath cut them off, and giuen them a bill of diuorcement in his holy word, Reuel. 18.4. Come out of her my people.

Browniſts.

Rome no true church.

Hence wee are taught, to carie a charitable opinion of ſuch particular perſons, as goe on in ſinne without remorſe: for though they for their part haue forſaken God, yet we know not, whether God hath forſaken them: he may in mercie call them to repentance; and therefore we muſt not raſhly giue ſentence of iudgment againſt them. Queſt. But what if a man giue himſelfe to the deuill by couenant, as many haue done, and doe daily, may we not then giue ſentence againſt them, or they againſt themſelues? Anſw. No verily: for though this caſe be moſt fearefull, yet they haue not abſolute power ouer themſelues. [a] Manaſſes a king of Iuda had moſt wickedly forſaken God, and bound himſelfe in league to the deuill; but yet when he humbled himſelfe, being in affliction, and prayed to God, he was receiued to mercie. Sauls caſe was fearefull while hee [b] made hauocke of the Church; and yet the Lord conuerted him when he went to perſecute. This muſt not embolden any to goe on in ſinne, for the Lord will not bee mercifull vnto ſuch, Deut. 29.19.

Charitie toward the impenitent.

a 2.Chro.33.6.12.

b Act.9.1.2.

verſ.36.

Neither ſhalt thou ſweare by thine head.] This is the laſt forme of ſwearing forbidden by Chriſt; the reaſon, becauſe thou canſt not make one haire white or blacke: that is, thou ſhalt not ſweare by thine head, becauſe thou haſt not power ouer thine owne head, thou art not able to make thine head; nay, thou canſt not make one haire of thine head; nay (which is leſſe) thou canſt not giue to any haire his naturall colour, by making it either white or blacke.

Where obſerue the honour giuen to God, not onely to make the haire of mans head, but euen to giue a naturall colour to euery one of them: man can not doe the leaſt of theſe things.

This teacheth vs, firſt that there is a particular prouidence of God, whereby he diſpoſeth of all things, euen of the leaſt and baſeſt things that be in the world: for what is more baſe the the haire of a mans head? and what is leſſe to be regarded then the colour thereof? and yet the Lords prouidence reacheth hereunto. This is a matter of endleſſe comfort to Gods children: for when we are once perſwaded of the particular prouidence of God ouer ſo baſe and light things, we ſhall eaſily be reſolued, that all things which befall vs in this life, whether in proſperitie or aduerſitie, come by Gods ſpecial prouidence: which will mooue vs to a patient bearing of all miſeries, and to contentment in euerie eſtate, becauſe it is the Lords ſending; yea this will be a notable comfort in any affliction to know that God is the author thereof.

Gods particular prouidence prooued.

Secondly, if hath not man power ouer the leaſt creature, no not ouer the haire of his head; then doubtleſſe he may not lawfully ſweare by any creature, though it haue relation to God therein: for if hee might lawfully ſweare by a creature, it were becauſe he might preſent that creature vnto God, as a pledge of his preſence, wherein he deſires God to puniſh him, if he faile in his oath. This is graunted of thoſe that defend this forme of ſwearing: but a man may not lay downe any creature, as a pawne before God, and appoint the Lord to puniſh him therein, becauſe the creature is not in mans power: euery creature is the Lords, and we may not appoint him how he ſhall puniſh vs for our periurie. If it be ſaide, that the oath made by the creature, is a binding oath, which muſt be kept, for Chriſt calls it an oath, Matth.23.20. and therefore a man may lawfully vſe it. Anſw. The reaſon is not good: for the oath bindeth and muſt bee kept, becauſe indirectly a man ſweares by God, and ſo in ſubſtance it is an oath; but yet the manner of it is vnlawfull, becauſe an oath, beeing a part of Gods worſhip, ought to bee directed vnto God immediately: when an Infidel ſweares by his falſe gods (as e Laban did by the God of Nahor) that is an oath, and it binds his conſcience, becauſe in his intent he ſware by the true God; and yet the forme of it is vnlawfull, becauſe he puts that in the roome of God, which is not god.

e Gen.31.53.

Abuſes about the haire of the head.

Thirdly, is the haire of the head the creature of God, and the naturall colour his workemanſhip? then all abuſe hereof muſt needes be vnlawfull: as firſt, the cuſtome of thoſe men or women, who beeing aſhamed of Gods workmanſhip in their owne haire, doe beautifie their heads with bought haire, ſometime of dead perſons. This is an odious thing, and ſuch perſons take Gods name in vaine, as much as they which ſweare by the head at euery word: for be they what they wil be, God in ſome ſort hath ſet his owne name in the naturall colour of their haire, which none ought to be aſhamed of. Secondly, the painting of faces, and colouring of the haire is another abuſe of Gods nam ſet therein. This practiſe was abhorred of the heathen, who in their writings haue branded Poppea Neros wife, becauſe ſhee vſed an ointment made of Aſſes milke, to make her face faire and bright: what then ſhall we ſay of our ladies and gentlewomen, who paint their faces with Spaniſh white, and colour their haire? Theſe doubtles beleeue not Gods word, which preferreth the feare of God before fauour and beautie, Prou. 31. 30. But yet mee thinkes they ſhould be aſhamed to be followers of Ieſabel, 2.King 9.30. Thirdly, the wearing of long haire is another abuſe thereof, in the younger ſort; it beganne indeede among the aged, but now it is become a tricke of youth, and is the badge of a proud heart: for how can they ſay they glorifie God thereby, when the Apoſtle ſaith, It is a ſhame for a man to haue long haire. Well, ſith God hath ſet his name therein, wee muſt beware how we make it an inſtrument of ſinne. If it be ſaid, to weare long haire is our Engliſh faſhion: I anſwer, It is not our auncient Engliſh faſhion, but indeede it is a forraine tricke, and therefore as vnlawfull as forraine attire, which God condemnes, Zeph.1.8. Our ancient Engliſh faſhion (except it were among the aged) was to weare ſhort haire: and in euery countrey, the moſt auncient and graue faſhions ought to be followed; not onely in the vſe of the haire, but in apparell alſo, that therein men may ſhew the grace of their heart: for mans attire is Gods ordinance, borrowed from his creatures, wherein God hath ſet his name, and therefore we ought not to deface it, with the ſtampe of pride and vanitie, but rather ſhew therein, that libertie and modeſtie, that may honour Gods name.

Plin. nat. hiſt. l.11.c.41.& l.28.c.12.

V. 37. Let your communication be yea, yea, and nay, nay: for whatſoeuer is more commeth of euill.

A rule of communication.

This verſe containeth two parts: A rule for the framing of our ſpeech in common talke; and a Reaſon thereof. The Rule is this, Let your communication be yea, yea, nay, nay: where hee ſheweth, that though men may not ſweare in their common talke, yet they may vſe a ſimple affirmatiõ, or negation to the thing they ſpeak. This Rule is diuerſly expounded; ſome take it to reſpect the truth of our ſpeech, as if Chriſt had ſaid; Whatſoeuer you affirme in ſpeaking, affirme it truely, and whatſoeuer you denie in ſpeaking, denie it truely. But by the circumſtãces of the place, it rather ſeemeth, that Chriſt here propoundeth a Rule for the very forme of our common talke, to this effect: If you would affirme any thing in your ordinarie ſpeech, let your affirmation be yea; and if you would deny any thing, let your negation or deniall bee no, and in your ordinarie communication ſay no more, though you be vrged thereto. So muſt wee take communication, for ordinarie talke: for in ſome caſes it hath beene lawfull to ſweare, as hath beene ſhewed.

The vſe.
1. Invocations in communication vnlawfull.

Firſt, by this Rule is condemned the adding of invocations to our common affirmations or negations: as O Lord, yea: nay, good God, and ſuch like. In ſome caſes, and at ſome times theſe may be vſed: but in ordinarie and familiar communication, theſe invocations are abuſes of Gods name. An earthly Prince wil not ſuffer his name to bee toſſed in euery mans mouth; and much leſſe will the Lord, who herein is iealous of his glorie.

2. Aſſeuerations.

Secondly, here note, that aſſeuerations may not be ordinarily vſed in common talke, as verely yea, no in truth, and ſuch like: theſe are more then ſimple affirmations and negations, and therefore in common ſpeech cannot be vſed. Our Sauiour Chriſt, the patterne of pietie, neuer vſed them, but in waightie matters, which were carefully to be remembred; & then he ſaid, Verely, verely, I ſay vnto you.

3. Execrations.

Thirdly, here is condemned the vſe of execrations, when wee affirme or denie a thing in our common talke; as to ſay, yea, or els I would I were dead, and ſuch like.

4. Ordinarie ſwearing.

Fourthly, ordinarie ſwearing is here againe plainely forbidden, whether it be by the name of God, or by other creatures. Some to avoide ſwearing (as they thinke) in their common talke, for yea and nay, vſe to ſay, by yea, and by no: but herein they offend, for theſe phraſes are oathes, as well as by faith, and by wrath: & in a word, all ſpeeches in common talke, added to confirme our ſpeech, aboue yea, and nay, are abuſes againſt this Rule of Chriſt, for ordinarie communication.

For whatſoeuer is more then theſe, that is, whatſoeuer exceedeth a ſimple affirmation or negation in common ſpeech commeth of euill, that is, of the euill one, the deuill: ſo chap.6.13. Deliuer vs from euill; that is, from the deuill, that euill one. This is a moſt excellent reaſon, to mooue men to put in practiſe this Rule: for all abuſes of oaths, aſſeuerations, inuocations, and deprecations, in common ſpeech, are abuſes of Gods name, and they come from the deuill, he is the ſchoolmaſter that teacheth mē to vſe thē.

Queſt. Whether doth euery temptation come from the deuill? Anſ. Euery temptation to euill, is of the deuill; ſo much this Text prooueth: and Matth.4.3. the Deuill is called the Tempter, becauſe he giues himſelfe to tempt all men, by all means, at all times. True it is, that ſome temptations come from our corrupt hearts, but yet the deuill hath an hand in them to further them. Queſt. How can this be, ſeeing the deuil is but one, and can be but in one place at once? Anſw. There is indeede one head of wicked ſpirits, called Beelzebub, and the deuil, who hath innumerable wicked angels miniſtring vnto him, as may be gathered, Matth.25.41. where hell is ſaid to be prepared for the deuill and his Angels; and it is not vnlike, but they are moe in number, then all the men vpon the earth: for where can any man be in this life, but ſome wicked ſpirit will be readie to tempt him vnto ſinne? doth he not prouoke the filthie perſon to vncleanneſſe, and euerie man to ſuch ſinne, whereunto hee is moſt inclined? And ſay the euil motion ariſeth from our owne corruption, yet the deuills helpe is neuer wanting to bring it into action.

Vſe 1. Deuills oft about vs though vnſeene.

This ſerueth to confute the follie of our common people, who neuer feare the deuill, but when hee appeares vnto them in ſome ſhape: they thinke he is neuer neere them, but when they ſee him: but they muſt know, that the deuill by his wicked ſpirits is alwaies about them day and night, and in all places: and therefore they muſt learne more to feare his temptatiōs, then his appearance: for that is not ſo terrible to the ſight, as his temptations are hurtfull to the ſoule. 2 Secondly, this preſence of the deuil with euery man, to tempt him at all times, muſt teach vs to keepe ſtraite watch againſt all ſinne and the occaſions thereof: we are eaſily perſwaded to watch againſt theeues that would depriue vs of our temporall goods, or naturall life: now the deuill our ſpirituall enemie, is daily about vs, to ſeeke the ruine of our ſoules, & therefore we muſt alwaies haue an eye to his temptations. And indeede, if we would well conſider his preſence, and malice againſt vs, it would make vs watch and feare, leaſt he ſhould take vs in his ſnare.

Why Satan is called the euill one.

A But why is the deuill called the euill one? Anſw. By a kinde of excellencie of ſpeach, for theſe reaſons. 1 Firſt, becauſe he is euil in exceſſe, his ſins are in the higheſt degree: for it is like, his firſt ſinne was directly againſt the holy Ghoſt, which may be one reaſon, why God choſe not Angels, but men, on whom he would ſhew mercie after their fall. 2 Secondly, becauſe he commits euill and wickedneſſe without ceaſing, and therefore is compared to an [a] hunger-bitten Lyon, who goeth about continually, ſeeking whome hee may deuoure. The moſt wicked man that is, or euer was, will ſometime doe good: [b] Pharaoh humbled himſelfe, and confeſſed his ſinnes to Moſes, and [c] Saul deſires to worſhippe B God with Samuel: Herod alſo heard Iohn Baptiſt [d] gladly, and did many things according to his Miniſterie: but the Deuill herein differs from all wicked men, that he doth nothing but practiſe wickedneſſe, he is alwaies murthering, and neuer ceaſeth to ſeeke mens deſtruction. 3 Thirdly, becauſe he practiſeth ſinnes of all ſorts and degrees, in himſelfe, and by his Miniſters; for the ſinnes that be in the world, be all from him, either originally, or by furtherance. The vileſt man that is, doth abſtaine from ſinne ſometime, yea by nature he hateth ſome ſinnes: the proud and prodigall man cannot abide couetouſneſſe; and the drunkard may abhorre idolatrie; but the deuill continually practiſeth ſinnes of al ſorts, and therefore is iuſtly called C the euill one.

[a] 1.Pet.5.8.
[b] Exo.10.16.
[c] 1.Sam.15.30.
[d] Mar.6.

Why we are called the children of wrath, and of the deuill.

Here then we may ſee a reaſon, why we are called the children of wrath, and of the deuill by nature: namely, becauſe by nature we carrie in vs, and about vs, as liuely an image of the deuill in ſinne, as any child doth of his naturall father. For firſt, in our conception we are guilty of Adams ſinne, in eating the forbidden fruit. Secondly, our nature is ſtained with originall ſinne, which is (not a practiſe) but a proneneſ to all manner of miſcheife and wickedneſ, that is committed in the world. Seeſt thou a man kill his father, or mother, or betray his maſter, as Iudas did to Chriſt, though it may be, thou abhorreſt ſuch ſinnes, yet doubtleſſe the ſeed thereof is in thee: yea, if God in mercie did D not keep vs from it, our corruption would cary vs to the blaſphemie againſt the Spirit. And thirdly, from this naturall corruption, doe ariſe innumerable euill thoughts, words, and deedes, in the courſe of our liues, in all which we beare the image of the deuill, till God bring vs to repentance; and therefore iuſtly may we be called the children of wrath, and of the deuill by nature, hauing the ſame corruption in vs, that is in the deuill, though not in the ſame degree and manner.

Vſe 1.

Hence we learne, Firſt, to be aſhamed and confounded in our ſelues, yea to hang downe our heads: for what cauſe hath he to be puffed vp with ſelfe-loue, that is by nature in himſelfe like to the deuill. 2 Secondly, this teacheth vs aboue all things, to labour to haue the image of God renewed in vs, in righteouſnes, & true holines, which was loſt in Adam, that ſo, the deuills image, in ſinne and wickednes, may be defaced. 3 Thirdly, this muſt cauſe vs to make no account of any worldly thing, that pertaineth to vs; but all our ioy muſt be in Chriſt, he muſt be our wiſdom, and righteouſnes, our riches, & all things elſe, becauſe by him we are renued from the deuils likenes to the image of God.

v. 38. Ye haue heard that it hath beene ſaid, an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, &c.

Here Chriſt returns to the commandements of the ſecond Table, intending to reſtore the ſame to their proper ſenſe, and withall to confute the erroneous interpretation thereof, giue by the Iewiſh Teachers. And firſt, he commeth to a particular Iudiciall law of Moſes, pertaining to the ſixt commandement, touching the Requitall of like for like: in which, as in the former, he firſt ſets down the words of the law of Moſes, but yet to be vnderſtood, with the erroneous interpretation of the Scribes and Phariſies, v. 38. then, he giues the right ſenſe of that law, and withall confuteth the falſe interpretation of the Iewiſh teachers, v. 39. 40. 41.

Moſes law of like for like expounded.

For the firſt, the words of Moſes law here ſet downe, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, are written, Exod. 21. 24. whereto, as to the former, Chriſt prefixeth this preface, It hath beene ſaid; thereby giuing vs to vnderſtand, that he is about to lay downe the law of God in the falſe ſenſe of the Iewiſh Teachers; for the better perceiuing whereof, we muſt obſerue the true meaning of that law: An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: wherein the Lord requireth, requital of like for like, not by euery priuate man, but by the publicke Magiſtrate. As if a man did put out his neighbours eye, then the Magiſtrate ſhould put out his eye, & ſtrike out his teeth, that ſtrikes out his neighbours teeth: this appeares to be ſo, becauſe reuenge is flatly forbidden to euery priuate perſon, and plainely appropriateth to the Iudge, Deut. 19. 18. 19. 21. But the Iewiſh Teachers expounded this law of priuate reuenge; as though God had ſaid to euery priuate man, If thy neighbour plucke out thine eye, pluck out his again; and if he ſtrike out thy tooth, ſtrike thou out his tooth: this is the falſe interpretation of the Iewes. Queſt. How could they ſo farre ouerſhoote themſelues in ſo cleare a caſe, ſeeing in all the books of Moſes, it is plainely referred to the Magiſtrate? Anſw. There may be two reaſons giuen thereof: Firſt, it is a naturall opinion, that a man may reuenge himſelfe in his owne cauſe priuately, and not waite for recompence of the Magiſtracy; and anſwerable hereunto, there is a mighty ſtrong deſire of reuenge in euery mans heart by nature, when he is iniuried: now it is like, that theſe Iewes followed their corrupt nature, and headie affections, in Deut. 19. 18.

A the interpretation of this law. Again, the Iewiſh people were mightily giuen to reuenge, by their naturall diſpoſition, as may appeare by the law of the Cities of Refuge, and by mentioning of the Reuenger of blood: which plainly imports, that the Iewes would haue blood againſt him that ſhed blood, whereſoeuer they met with him. Now, the Iewiſh Teachers framed their doctrine to the common diſpoſition and behauiour of their people, and ſo falſified the truth of God, as many times it falls out, that the common practiſe of men makes ſinne to ſeeme no ſinne.

Vſe. 1. Tempering religion to mẽs humors a Satanicall policie.

In the perſō of theſe Iewiſh Teachers, we may ſee the policie of the deuil: whoſe intent is, and hath beene in all ages, to ouerturne religion B and to this ende, hee endeauours to cauſe men to temper religion to their naturall diſpoſition and common opinion in outward manners; whereby hee ouerturneth both religion and people. This appeares in other points among the Iewes, as well as in this caſe of reuenge: They were a people giuen much to couetouſneſſe, as may appeare by the law of toleration for taking vſury of ſtrangers, and by their hardneſſe of heart, ſo much reprooued by all the Prophets. Now the Deuil perceiuing this to be their natural diſpoſition, makes Gods doctrine of ſaluation, ſeeme to them a doctrine of earthly benefits; for hee cauſed them to dreame of an earthly King for their Meſſias, and of an earthly flouriſhing kingdome vnder him. Thus alſo hath the deuill dealt with other heathen C people: The Romans in Italie haue beene euer groſly addicted to ſuperſtition, ſorcerie, and idolatrie, as heathen writers doe teſtifie. Now though God vouchſafed them his true Religion, in the Primitiue Church, yet the deuil perceiuing their naturall diſpoſition to ſuperſtition, hath ſo tempered the truth of God among them, with a naturall and ſuperſtitious religion, that now they abound as much in idolatrie and ſuperſtition, as euer they did when they were heathen. The like malitious practiſe doth the deuill ſhew, among the Proteſtants, where the Goſpel is truly preached; for though he cannot (as he deſires) corrupt religion in the mouthes of the Teachers; yet he weakens it greatly in the hearts of men, both Teachers D and hearers, cauſing them ſo farre forth onely to receiue it, as it is ſutable to their nature & diſpoſition: but where it croſſeth their humors, there to leaue it. Is not this euident? for he that embraceth the truth with his heart, will frame his life according to it; but generally the entertainment of religion is only formal: for though men profeſſe it, yet they liue in their ſinnes, they make it to iumpe with their natural diſpoſition, hauing indeed a ſhew of godlines, but they wāt the power thereof: and ſo in them religion is vaine, Iam. 1. 26. Whereby we muſt be aduertiſed, to take heede of this policie of the deuil: and whereas he labours to transforme religion to mens diſpoſitions, we on the contrarie muſt

A propertie of a badde Teacher.

Secondly, in theſe Scribes and Phariſies we obſerue the propertie of a bad Teacher: namely, to transforme himſelfe and his doctrine, to the cuſtome and manners of the people, when as the people ſhould be transformed into his doctrine and practiſe, according to godlineſſe. Hereof the Lord admoniſheth Ieremie, f Let them returne to thee, but returne not thou to them: for it was the practiſe of the falſe prophets in his time, thus to g ſtrengthen the hands of the wicked: and it is a common fault in many Teachers, that they frame themſelues, both for doctrine and practiſe, to the cuſtome and manners of the people: but this is the deuils pollicie, whereby he ouerthroweth religion, and deſtroyeth mens ſoules.

V. 39. But I ſay vnto you, reſiſt not euill: but whoſoeuer ſhall ſtrike thee on thy right cheeke, turne to him the other alſo.

In this and the three next verſes, Chriſt confutes the falſe interpretation of this law. The ſumme of this anſwer ſtands in two points; the firſt is an inhibition, reſiſt not euill, which is explaned by three examples in the words following. The ſecond, is a commandement to requite good for euill, v. 44.

Expoſition.

For the firſt, by euill is meant, the iniurie or wrong that is done to man; or more properly, the euill one, that is, the euill man that doth the wrong. Reſiſt not] that is, riſe not againſt the euill one, to requite like for like, according to the iniurie he hath done vnto thee: ſo much the word ſignifieth. Now Chriſt forbiddeth not reſiſting euill by a lawfull defence, but by way of priuate reuenge: for he ſpeaketh to his Diſciples, and to priuate men, ſaying, I ſay vnto you which heare, (as Saint Luke hath it, chap. 6. 27.) Yet further to cleare this interpretation, we muſt know, the Scripture mentioneth two kinds of reuenge, Publicke and Priuate. Publike reuenge is, when the Magiſtrate according to iuſtice, and the law of God, puniſheth an euill perſon, that wrongeth his brother. Priuate reuenge is, when thoſe that are no Magiſtrates, will reuenge themſelues on ſuch as doe them wrong. The publicke reuenge is allowed by S. Paul, calling the Magiſtrate, h Gods Miniſter, for the executing of reuenge vpon euill doers. Priuate reuenge, is forbidden by the ſame Apoſtle, i Reuenge not thy ſelfe. Now by this doctrine it is plaine, that our Sauiour Chriſt here forbidding reuenge, meaneth not publike, but priuate reuenge.

h Rom.13.4.

i Rom.12.17.

The vſe 1. Magiſtracie lawfull.

First, here we ſee thoſe men confuted, who thinke it vnlawfull for a Chriſtian to be a Magiſtrate, to execute reuenge vpon malefactours by the ſword, or to make warre againſt the common enemies: theſe men are deceiued, by miſtaking this text, which forbiddeth onely priuate, and not publike reuenge. Secondly, here we ſee, that all priuate reuenge is flatly condemned, as a ſinne againſt the ſixt commandement. This point muſt be remembred, becauſe it is our naturall opinion, and our hearts deſire to requite like for like in priuate cauſes, when we are iniured.

2 Priuate reuenge vnlawfull.

Now that we may ſee more into this ſinne, we are to know that priuate reuenge is twofolde, Inward, and Outward: Inward priuate reuenge, is a purpoſe in the heart, to doe a man an euill turne; this is commonly called the bearing of a grudge, and it is here condemned. Outward reuenge, is when the ſpite of the heart comes into action, either by word or deede: by word, when a man giues out threatning ſpeeches; as that hee will ſit on his ſkirt, or be euen with him, if it lie in his lot, and ſuch like; or vſeth curſing ſpeeches, as a plague take thee, a murren or peſtilence light vpon thee; or raileth or chideth, calling another knaue, villaine, &c. By deede and action men ſhew outward reuenge, when they lie at a word and a blowe, vſing to fight and to ſtrike one another, by way of priuate reuenge. Hereto alſo we may referre an ordinarie bad practiſe of ſome Magiſtrates and Superiours, though (it may be) few thinke it to be a fault; to wit, when the Magiſtrate doth aggrauate the puniſhment vpon a malefactour, for ſome priuate grudge he beareth to him, for then he vſeth priuate reuenge: as alſo when Parents or Maſters correct their ſeruants and children in furie and rage; for though they be publike perſons in this regard, yet to giue correction in a chollerick moode, is to eaſe the heart by way of reuenge.

Kinds of priuate reuẽge.
1. Inward.
2. Outward.

Here then we muſt learne, that wee may not requite euill for euill, in thought, word or deed, to thoſe that doe vs wrong any manner of way, but muſt rather ſuffer iniurie, and referre the reuenge vnto God that iudgeth righteouſly. And becauſe this dutie goes againſt our naturall diſpoſition, I will vſe ſome reaſons to perſwade our hearts to yeeld vnto it: Firſt, the Apoſtle teacheth out of Deuteronomie, that k Vengeance is the Lords; if then we ſhall priuately reuenge our ſelues, we rob God of his right, & ſo ſinne againſt the firſt commandement. Secondly, in the next words he addeth, and I will repay, ſaith the Lord: where God takes vpon him to be our debter in the caſe of iuſtice, and therefore when wee are wronged, we muſt not be raſh to reuenge our ſelues, but muſt waite with patience vpon the Lord, laying downe our iniuries at his feete; for he will repaie in due time, to them that haue wronged vs. Thirdly, conſider the examples of worthy men in this caſe; for our Sauiour Chriſt neuer ſought reuenge, but bare wrong patiently, committing all to him that iudgeth righteouſly, leaning vs an example to doe likewiſe, 1. Pet. 2. 20. Yea, when he was cruelly & vniuſtly crucified, he praied for his perſecutours, Luk. 23. 34. Steuen alſo praied for them that ſtoned him, Act. 7. 16. and Dauid, though a King, would not ſuffer reuenge to be taken on Shimei that curſed him, 1. Sam. 19. 9, 10. neither would he euer touch Saul, who ſought his life, though he had him [i] often in his hands: nay, in his heart ſmote him for cutting off the lappe of his coate: ſo farre was hee from ſeeking reuenge. 4 Fourthly, in the fifth petition wee pray, Forgiue vs our ſinnes, as wee forgiue our treſpaſſes: but if we carrie grudging in our hearts, wee praie God not to forgiue vs, but to condemne vs; for wee will not forgiue, but be reuenged on them that offend vs. Now this is a moſt fearefull caſe, that a man ſhould pray for vengeance vpon himſelfe. 5 Fiftly, it is not meete in common reaſon, that the ſame partie ſhould be the accuſer and the Iudge; and yet if a man might reuenge himſelfe, this ſhould be ſo: and therefore, if we would be Chriſts Diſciples, we muſt arme our ſelues with patience, in ſuffering wrong, and referre reuenge to God that iudgeth righteouſly.

Yet ſome will ſay, If we alwaies put vp and ſuffer wrong, we ſhall neuer be at quiet, but ſtill be abuſed. Anſwer. Though in our owne perſon we may not reuenge our ſelues, yet we may craue the helpe of the Magiſtrate, either for the preuenting, or for the puniſhment of wrong done vnto vs; for the Magiſtrate is Gods Lieutenant, to releeue the oppreſſed, and to execute vengeance on malefactours: thus did [a] Paul ſend to the chiefe Captaine, to preuent a conſpiracie that the Iewes intended againſt him, and [b] appealed to Ceſar, to auoide the danger of the Iewes at Ieruſalem: and yet when wrong is done vnto vs, we muſt beare it patiently, without ſeeking priuate Reuenge, although the wrong were doubled or trebled vpon vs.

Thirdly, our Sauiour Chriſt here calling the wrong doer an euill one, giueth vs to vnderſtand, that it is the propertie of an euill man to doe wrong vnto others; and this title is giuen to the wrong doer, to teach vs, that wee muſt ſuffer wrong patiently, though hee be an euill man that offereth it vnto vs. It is the propertie of a good man to do good cōtinually, but to doe wrong is the marke of an euill man, who herein is like the deuill: which muſt teach vs not to doe wrong to any one, in his bodie, goods, or name, either by word or deede, but rather apply our ſelues to doe all the good we can, to euerie one within the compaſſe of our calling. Hereby we ſhall ſee what our eſtate is; for if in our callings we ſee our ſelues to hurt others, either by word or deed, wee are in the ſight of God euill men: ſuch are our vſurers, and extortioners, and all thoſe that vſe fraud and deceite in their callings. But if we would ſhewe our ſelues to be good men, approoued A of God in Chriſt, then we muſt referre our bodies and ſoules, and all that we haue, to the good of others. Although men by nature bee like to [p] ſauage beaſts, as Lyons, Woolues, Cockatrices, &c. whoſe propertie is, to deuoure and hurt other creatures; yet when it pleaſeth God to receiue them to mercie, and to place them in his kingdome, then they laie aſide their cruell nature, and liue peaceably one with another; for in the mountaine of Gods holineſſe, none ſhall hurt or deſtroy, ver. 9. It is a propheſie of Chriſts kingdome, that therin the ſword and ſpeare which be weapons of war, ſhall be turned into ſythes and mattocks, which are inſtruments of common good in time of B peace; whereby was ſignified, that when men are conuerted, and become true children vnto God, they laie aſide all malice, and giue themſelues to do good, and become ſeruiceable vnto all for the good of all. This was notably verified in Paul, who of a [q] perſecutor became a preacher: yea, he [r] became all things to all men, that by all meanes he might winne ſome. And thus doing, we are like to our heauenly father, who doth good to all; but if we giue our ſelues to wrong doing, we are euill ones and herein like to the deuill himſelfe.

Fourthly, Chriſt here forbidding priuate reueng, which is vnlawful, doth hereby eſtabliſh that reuenge, which is lawfull & iuſt. Now lawfull reuenge (to ſpeake ſomewhat hereof) is C the worke of a iuſt and lawfull power, requiting euill for euill. This iuſt reuenge is twofold; Diuine, and Humane; Diuine reuenge, is the work of Gods abſolute power, taking vengeance vpon offenders: of the lawfulneſſe of this reueng in God, there is no queſtion; onely this we muſt remember, that God executes this vengeance daily, in the manifold miſeries of this life, & likewiſe in the iuſt condemnation of the impenitent after death. Indeed as a father he chaſteneth his Church and children, for vengeance in Chriſt becomes nurturement; but as a ſeuere iudge he plagues the wicked, powring vengeance on them, both temporall and eternall. Humane reuenge is the ordinance of God, whereby men beeing thervnto called by God, do execute vengeance in the name of God; & D it is twofold, extraordinary, or ordinary: Extraordinarie, when men are extraordinarily ſtirred vp by the ſpirit of God, to execute vengeance vpon offenders, in the name of God. Thus [s] Phineas ſlewe Zimri and Coſbie: & thus many of the Iudges of Iſrael, eſpecially [t] Ehud and [u] Sampſon, tooke reuenge vpon the enemies of Gods people: thus Elias the Prophet ſlew Baals prieſts, 1. King. 18. 40. and deſtroyed the two Captaines and their fifties with fire from heauen, 2. King. 1. 10. 12. thus [x] Peter killed Ananias & Saphyra: and Paul ſtrooke [y] Elimas with blindneſſe. This kind of reuenge is nowe rare; for we are not to looke for extraordinary inſtincts: wee knowe Chriſt rebuked his [z] Diſciples for ſeeking to execute this extraordinarie reuenge vpon the Samaritans; and therefore when we haue a conceit hereof in our ſelues, wee may iuſtly ſuſpect what ſpirit it is that mooueth vs. Ordinarie reuenge, is that which men ordinarily put in execution, in the Church and common wealth, according to Gods wil, beeing thereto called by God: and it is two-fold, Leſſer, or Soueraigne. Leſſer reuenge, is the inflicting of lawfull correction vpon offenders, in word or deede, not reaching to the caſe of life and death: this kind of reuenge is committed to Parents ouer their children, and Maſters ouer their ſeruants, to ſchoolemaſters ouer their ſchollers, and Tutors ouer their pupils. Soueraigne reuenge, is that whereby the Magiſtrate may lawfully puniſh men according to their offences, in bodie, goods, or life it ſelfe; this I call ſoueraigne, not ſimply, but becauſe it is the higheſt that agreeth vnto man, beeing of life and death. This reuenge is executed partly in peace, and partly in warre; In peace, by the confiſcation of goods, by impriſonment, baniſhment, and (if the offence deſerue it) by taking away of life, for the good of the ſtate publike. In time of warre, when as (not for euery caſe) but for the iuſt repelling or requiting of wrongs, warre is made againſt the enemies of the ſtate. Now though it belong to the Magiſtrate onely, to execute publike reuenge, yet euery priuate man may haue the benefit hereof, and may vpon iuſt cauſes vſe the Magiſtrates helpe for his reuenge; as firſt, if his cauſe bee waightie wherein he is wronged: 2. if it bee neceſſarie: and 3. if it be for his iuſt defence, for the common good, and the puniſhment of the offender; and the Magiſtrate in theſe caſes may lawfully, nay he muſt put in execution reuenge for priuat men: for without this, neither church, nor common wealth, nor any ſocietie could ſtand.

Wherein we may ſeeke to the Magiſtrate for reuenge.

Thus we ſee what iuſt reuenge is: now conſidering it is the ordinance of God, this muſt admoniſh vs to eſchewe all outward offences, that we may ſo eſcape the iuſt reuenge of the Magiſtrate; and alſo to make conſcience of all ſinnes that ſo we may auoide the vengeance of God. And thus much of the generall rule.

1. Example of ſuffering wrong.

Now becauſe this generall rule might ſeeme to be hard, therefore Chriſt explaines the ſame in 3. particular examples, wherein he ſhewes how men are to behaue themſelues when they are wronged. The firſt example is in theſe words, Whoſoeuer ſhall ſmite thee on the right cheeke, turne to him the other alſo. Vnder which, are comprehended all iniuries done to mens bodies, not onely by blowes and wounds, but alſo in the contempt of their perſons, ſignified by ſtriking on the right cheeke: for vſually men ſtrike with the right hand, which directly ſhould light on the left cheeke, and if the right cheek be ſmitten, it is commonly with the back of the hād, which is a blow with contēpt: now, ſay a man is abuſed in his bodie, euen by blows of contempt, yet hee muſt not reuenge himſelfe, but turne the other cheeke alſo.] which words muſt not ſimply bee vnderſtood, but by compariſon, thus; rather then thou reuenge thy ſelfe, and reſiſt the euill man that hath ſtricken thee on the right cheeke, turne to him the other: for this particular example comprehendeth in it the generall rule of not reſiſting euill by priuat reuenge: and that it may not ſimply be takē, may hereby appeare: firſt, becauſe Chriſt ſhould then command the ſufferer to giue further occaſion of wrong doing to the euill man, which is not his meaning: againe, Chriſt himſelfe who gaue this rule, did not ſo practiſe it, when he was ſmitten by the ſeruant of the high Prieſt, Ioh. 18, 22, 23.

The vſe. Chalenging the field vnlawfull.

Firſt, by this example Chriſt condemneth the common practiſe of challenging the field for perſonall wrongs, & of taking that challenge when it is giuen; as alſo the fighting the ſingle combate: for Chriſt teacheth, that a man muſt take many wrongs, before he ſeeke to reuenge himſelfe by any ſuch courſe. If it be ſaid, it is a diſgrace to refuſe a challenge, we muſt know, that true grace and credit ſtandeth in yeelding obedience vnto God, & not in ſinning againſt him for the ſauing of our reputation with men.

Fighting and quarrelling.

Secondly, the common practiſe of fighting and quarrelling, is here condemned: many hold it vnlawfull to giue the firſt blow, but yet if another ſtrike them they thinke they may ſtrike againe: but this Chriſt here condemnes, and his owne example is againſt it: for when hee was ſmitten before the high Prieſt, he [a] ſmote not againe: when Paul [b] was ſmitten, he onely defended himſelfe in word, but ſmote not againe. And Chriſt checketh Peter for taking the ſword to reſiſt the officers that apprehended him in the garden; indeede he permitted his diſciples to weare weapons, yet not for reuenge, but for their iuſt defence.

[a] Ioh. 18. 22. 23.
[b] Act. 23. 3.

Thirdly, Chriſt here condemneth their opinion, that make it a matter of praiſe for a man that he will not turne his face from a man. It is indeede the praiſe of the Magiſtrate to be couragious, and not to feare the face of man. But yet a priuate man, be he neuer ſo ſtrong, ought to turne his face from the aduerſarie, vnleſſe it be in the caſe of his neceſſarie defence: for a mā muſt ſuffer double or treble wrong, rather thē reuenge himſelfe. If any ſhall thinke this to be a great diſgrace, ſtill hee muſt remember, that our chiefeſt honour conſiſteth, in approouing our ſelues vnto God, by obeying his wil, who here commandeth vs rather to turne our backes & flie, then to reſiſt in our owne reuenge.

What a man may doe, being vnlawfully aſſaulted.

Queſtion. But what if a man be aſſaulted, either on the high way, or in his houſe, may he not then reſiſt to ſaue his life, & his goods? Anſwer. In ſuch a caſe he may doe two things: Firſt, he may to the vttermoſt of his power defend himſelfe and his goods; for the Text ſpeaketh not againſt defence, but againſt reuenge. Secondly, if a man can ſee no way to eſcape, either by flight, or calling for helpe of the Magiſtrate; then he is to ſtand ſo farre in his owne defence, that hee is rather to kill then be killed: for in this caſe, God puts the ſword into a priuate mans hand, and makes him a Magiſtrate, to execute reuenge vpon his aduerſarie: and thus might a man lawfully kill a theefe in the night without the guilt of blood, Exod. 22.2.

Priuate mens dutie towards Tyrants.

Fourthly, hence obſerue, that no priuate man may lawfully kill a Prince, though he ſhould tyrannically deſtroy both church and common wealth; for this rule muſt ſquare the actions of priuate men, they muſt rather beare double and treble wrong, then by way of priuate reuenge reſiſt the euill one. The reuenge of euill Magiſtrates muſt be referred to God, to whom it iuſtly belongeth, as Dauid did, 1. Sam. 26.10. and Pſal. 43. 1.

Quarrelling notes an euill perſon.

Laſtly, in this firſt example of particular iniurie, we may ſee one propertie of an euill man; namely, to be giuen to fighting, quarrelling, and contending: ſuch a one may think himſelfe a goodly fellow, but yet he that vſeth his ſtrength to ordinarie quarrelling, and wrong doing to others, is here made an euill one, by the ſentence of our Sauiour Chriſt: and therefore ſuch as excell in ſtrength, if they would be approoued of Chriſt, muſt make conſcience of quarrelling and fighting, and offer violence to no man.

V. 40. And if any man will ſue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him haue thy cloake alſo.

2. Example of ſuffering wrong.

Here Chriſt propounds the ſecond example of wrong done vnto men, wherein he forbids the party wronged to reuenge himſelfe: to wit, being iniured in his goods, either priuatly, or vnder colour of law; for both theſe may here well be vnderſtood. By coate properly is meant the inner garment; and by cloake the outward: but here the words are not ſo ſtrictly to be taken, but indifferently for any diuers garments; for in Luke they are thus ſet downe, And him that would take away thy cloake, forbid not to take thy coate alſo. And Chriſts meaning is this; If one vniuſtly contend with thee, to take from thee one garment, let him haue another alſo, whether coate, or cloake, or ſuch like thing. And yet this commandement is not ſimply, but comparatiuely to be vnderſtood; to wit, rather then a man ſhould ſeeke priuate reuenge, he muſt not onely ſuffer the loſſe of one garment, but of moe, and ſo of other temporall goods.

1 Contentious lawing not Chriſtian-like.

Out of this example, we may learne theſe Inſtructions; Firſt, that Chriſtians muſt be quiet and patient, and not giuen to contend, whether it be priuately, or openly by ſuite at the law. This contention Paul reprooued in the Corinthians, 1. Cor. 3.3. & chargeth the Philippians, that nothing be done among them by contention, Phil. 2. 2. which is a notable rule: for though men be at difference, yet there ought to be no contentions either in word or deed, all things ought to be done in loue, & ſo ſtrife ſhal ceaſe: that wrangling ſpirit is not of God, whereby men ſtriue to put downe others in words; when a man hath ſpoken his minde, he ought to ceaſe, for multiplying of words is againſt Chriſtian ciuility, and euery where condemned in the holy Scripture.

2 Common vſe of lawing nought.

Secondly, here is condemned, not the lawfull, but the common vſe of lawing, whereby men for euery trifle will trouble the Courts. This argues a contentious ſpirit, and a minde that is giuen to reuenge, which beſeemeth not Chriſtians, as Paul ſheweth, 1. Cor. 6. 1, 2, 5, 6. and yet it is the common practiſe in theſe our daies, from whence come ſuch vnchriſtian ſpeeches as this, I will be reuenged on him, or elſe I will ſpend all that I haue. But the truth is, that rather then a man ſhould goe thus to law, hee ought to ſuffer a double and treble loſſe.

Thirdly, here Chriſt teacheth, that in all our dealings we muſt haue a principall regard vnto charitie, and rather ſeeke to maintaine this grace in our hearts then our outward worldly goods.

4 How we ought to eſteeme of peace.

Fourthly, we are here taught to preferre our owne peace and quietneſſe, before our temporall goods; yet not ſimply, but in this reſpect, that hereby we may haue better time with quietneſſe to imploy our ſelues in the worſhip of God, and to edifie our ſelues in holineſſe and pietie: this dutie concerneth them eſpecially, which haue much dealing in the world, and thereupon many occaſions of anger & vexation; for ſuch vnruly paſſions make a man vnfit for Gods ſeruice; it is the meeke and lowly heart that receiues the bleſſing from the Lord, Matth. 11. 29.

5 Wrong doing a note of an euill perſon.

Laſtly, in this example is ſet downe vnto vs, a ſecond propertie of euill men: namely, to be giuen to wrong their brethren in their goods, either priuately, or vnder colour of law; ſuch a one was Zacheus before his calling, when he gathered tribute and cuſtome for the Romane Emperour, he vſed [a] forged cauillation, for his owne gaine: and theſe our daies abound with thoſe that enrich themſelues by pilling and polling of their brethren; but all ſuch are vniuſt & euill perſons, by the iudgement of our Sauiour Chriſt.

[a] Luk. 19.8.

Verſe 41. And whoſoeuer will compell thee to goe a mile, goe with him twaine.

3. Example.

Here Chriſt propounds the third example of wrong doing, by Superiours towards their inferiours, wherein the partie wronged is likewiſe forbidden to make reſiſtance by way of priuate reuenge. For the vnderſtanding whereof, we muſt know, that as in this our common wealth we haue Poſt-maſters, ſo in other countries, eſpecially in Perſia, there were like officers who by authoritie from their Kings or Emperours, might take mens cattell, nay men themſelues, and vſe them for trauell and carriage, at their pleaſure: and it is like, the Iewes had got this cuſtome among them after their captiuitie, as may in part appeare, by their [b] compelling Simon of Syrene to beare Chriſts croſſe when they met him. Now Chriſt ſpeakes here of the abuſe of this authoritie; ſaying, That if a man compell thee wrongfully, vnder colour of the Magiſtrates authoritie, to goe with him one mile, goe with him twaine: that is, rather then by reſiſting thou ſhouldeſt reuenge thy ſelfe, goe with him two miles: whence hee giues to all inferiours a commandement, to beare patiently the wrongs that are done vnto them by their Superiours, & rather to ſuffer a double wrong, then ſeeke to reuenge themſelues by priuate reſiſtance.

b Mat.27.32.

Practiſes of impatience in inferiours.

Here then we ſee a iuſt ground of reproofe of inferiours for ſundrie practiſes of impatience towards their ſuperiours; as firſt, when a man is attached by an officer, to make violent reſiſtance. This practiſe ſwarueth from the Rule of Chriſt, for ſay thou art attached wrongfully, yet thou oughteſt to acknowledge Gods ordināce in Magiſtracie, and to obey the ſame, without offering priuate reuenge. Secondly, it often falls out, that Land-lords and men of wealth, oppreſſe the poore, by incloſing of common lands, and ſuchlike; now hereupon the poorer ſort vſe to raile againſt them, and to curſe them: but this practiſe is alſo here forbidden by our Sauiour Chriſt; for albeit the rich men ſin grieuouſly in oppreſſing the poore, yet the poore muſt ſuffer rather double or treble wrong, then by curſing ſpeeches ſeeke priuate reuenge.

A note of euill ſuperiours.

Againe, in this example we may ſee a third kinde of wicked men; to wit, all ſuch as beeing ſuperiours, doe wrong and violence to their inferiours; as cruell Magiſtrates, oppreſſing Landlords, trauelling officers, víurers, and ſuch like: theſe are here called euill men by our Sauiour Chriſt, and therefore they muſt learne to ſhew mercie, and leaue off wrong and violence, if they looke to eſcape to be iudged as euill ones at the laſt day.

Chriſtianitie a ſtate of ſuffering.

Thus we ſee the three particular examples of wrongs, wherein men may not reuenge themſelues priuately. Now from them all ioyntly conſidered, we may note two points; Firſt, that the calling of a Chriſtian is a ſtate of ſuffering, 1. Pet. 2. 20, 21. If yee take it patiently when yee ſuffer wrong for well-doing, this is praiſe worthie, for yee are hereunto called: and therefore if we would declare our ſelues to be the true mēbers of Chriſt, we muſt ſhew forth patience in bearing wrongs, without ſeeking reuenge. This was Chriſts leſſon to his Diſciples, for hauing tolde them of afflictions to come, he bids them to [c] poſſeſſe their ſoules with patience: ſo when the ſpirit of God ſets down the afflictions of the Church, hee addes this as an Item, [d] here is the patience of the Saints. We therefore muſt labour to repell all malice and rancour when we ſuffer vniuſtly, remembring this rule of Chriſt, that rather then we offer priuate reuenge, we muſt ſuffer the doubling and trebling of the wrong. It is true indeed, this is hard for fleſh and blood to doe; but if we be but fleſh, that is, naturall men, why doe we profeſſe our ſelues to be Chriſtians? for hee that hath not the ſpirit of God, is none of his, Rom. 8. 9. And if we be in the ſpirit, we muſt obey the motions thereof, and learne of Chriſt who was meeke and humble, and following him we ſhall find reſt for our ſoules.

c Luk.21.19.

d Reuel.13.10. and 14.12.

Secondly, when Chriſt ſets down theſe three examples of ſuffering wrong, he applies himſelfe to the preſent outward eſtate of the Iewes which was this; For one man to ſuffer wrong of another in his bodie, and in his goods, and yet to reſt contented, without releife or amends: Now the cauſe of this their miſerable condition, was their ſeruitude to the Romane Emperour, who a little before Chriſts comming, had remooued the ſcepter from Iuda, and made Iuda a Prouince tributarie vnto Rome, ſo as they were ruled not by a Prince of their owne, but by a forraine enemies Deputies.

Forraine regiments a grieuous thing.

In this eſtate we may ſee the miſerable condition of any people that are in bondage to a forraine enemie, their liues are euery way miſerable, for beſides their perſonall bondage, they are conſtrained to ſuffer loſſes and wrongs, in goods, in their names, without all remedie or releife. The conſideration hereof muſt teach vs, Firſt to be heartily thankfull vnto God, for the happie outward peace, which with the Goſpel of Gods grace we now enioy vnder our Soueraigne, beeing free from ſubiection vnto any forraine power. Secondly, to pray earneſtly vnto the Lord, for the good eſtate, life, and health of our Prince, by whom vnder God, we enioy ſuch ioy and proſperitie; as alſo for the continuance of Gods holy hand of protection to preſerue the whole land againſt all forraine power whatſoeuer. Thirdly, to repent vnfainedly of al our ſinnes, that ſo we turning vnto God from them, he may continue vnto vs theſe happie daies of peace, wherein we haue freedome from ſubiection to forraine tyrannie: for our ſinnes are our greateſt foes, they lay open the ports of our lands, and the gates of our cities to the ſpoyling enemie; they will pull downe our ſtrong walls, and take away the ſtrength of our armed men: no enemies can doe vs ſo much harme as our owne ſinnes; and therefore we muſt humble our ſelues for them, and if we haue not repented, now we muſt beginne; and if we haue begunne, we muſt proceede and renew the ſame more and more. If we had felt the miſerie of ſubiection to forraine power, as theſe Iewes now did, it would touch vs: and therefore before theſe euills come vpon vs, let vs meete our God by true repentance, that ſo he may keepe from vs this fierce wrath.

V. 42. Giue to him that asketh: and from him that would borrow of thee, turne not away.

Doe good for euill.

Chriſt hauing forbidden priuate reuenge, doth here command the requitall of good for euill, in two particular examples of well-doing, taken from giuing & lending: by both which, though not expreſſely, yet in ſence and meaning, Chriſt would teach his hearers thus much, Let the man be what he will, doe thou good vnto him for euill.

For the firſt, Giue to him that asketh, &c. Theſe words muſt not be taken ſimply, but in this ſenſe: Giue vnto him that asketh on a iuſt cauſe beeing poore, though he cannot requite thee againe; nay though he had done thee wrong, & were thine enemie. This expoſition is plaine, Luk.6. for hauing ſet downe his commandement for giuing, v.30. he renders this reaſon thereof in effect, becauſe they cannot requite thee againe, v.33. which plainely imports that it muſt be to the poore.

Almes-giuing a dutie.

Here now firſt obſerue, the forme of Chriſts words, they are commanding, Giue to him, &c. whence I gather that a man is bound in conſcience vpon the paine of death to giue Almes and releefe; Matth.25.41,42. Chriſt adiudgeth ſome to hell for the neglect of this dutie; now there could be no ſuch curſe, if there were no commandement that did bind their conſcience to doe that, for want whereof they are condemned. Againe, in the ſixt commandement, we are bound to doe all duties that may preſerue our neighbours life, of which ſort is giuing releefe vnto the poore, without which they cannot liue. If it be ſaide, that a Daniel made Almes deeds no commandement, but a matter of counſell vnto Nebuchadnezzar: I anſwer, that things commanded may be propounded by way of counſell: ſo doth Chriſt to the Church of Laodicea, b I counſell thee to buie of me gold, &c. Againe, Daniel vſed this forme of ſpeech to the King, Let my counſell be precious vnto thee: not becauſe it was no commandement, but becauſe he would ſo temper his ſpeech, that it might better take place in the ſtout heart of this proud King. And whereas Paul (2.Cor.8.8) ſpeaking of Almes ſaith, he ſpeaketh not by commandement, it is to be vnderſtood, not ſimply of Almes-giuing, but of the meaſure thereof, as the former verſe doth plainely ſhew.

Vſe 1. We may not doe with our owne what we will.

Here then we ſee thoſe men confuted which ſay, they may doe with their owne what they will: this is not ſo, for mens goods are not their owne ſimply, but Gods alſo; and they indeed are but the Lords ſtewards to diſpoſe of them as he commands: now his will is that part thereof ſhould be giuen to them which want.

Parſimonie condemned.

Secondly, we ſee here alſo that thoſe men ſinne grieuouſly who are ſo couetous, that they will giue nothing to the poore: ſell they will, and lend alſo, vpon a good pawne, for their owne aduantage: but by free gift they will part with nothing. Theſe are miſerable perſons, who doe what they can to condemne themſelues: for Gods commandement binds men in conſcience to giue vnto the poore, & that freely. Yet here we muſt know, that not onely they who giue freely doe a worke of mercie; but alſo they who lend and ſell, when as their lending and ſelling will as much profit the poore as giuing; this in effect is almes deeds here alſo commanded: and therefore Ioſeph is commended, not onely for giuing, but for ſelling corne to the Egyptians and others in the time of dearth.

Lending and ſelling may be works of mercie.

Thirdly, this beeing a commandement binding conſcience, muſt ſtirre vs vp to doe all good duties of releefe with cheerefulneſſe, that ſo meete and decent prouiſion for the poore may not onely be begunne, but alſo continued: for it is acceptable vnto God.

A ſecond point here to be obſerued is, what kind of commandement this is: Giue to him that asketh. Gods commandements be of two ſorts, Affirmatiue and Negatiue; and in the Morall law the one is alwaies comprehended in the other: now this commandement is affirmatiue, which muſt be noted, becauſe negatiue precepts lay a ſtraighter bond vpon the conſcience then the affirmatiue; and therefore are the precepts of the Morall law for the moſt part propounded negatiuely: for the negatiue precept binds a man to obedience alwaies, and to all and euery time: as when God ſaith, Thou ſhalt not kill, a man is neuer exempted from obedience hereunto: but an affirmatiue commandement, though it bind alwaies, yet not to all times, as this of Chriſt for giuing almes, it bindes not all men, but onely thoſe that are inabled to giue; nor yet the rich to all times, but then onely when iuſt occaſion of giuing is offered: and the ſame may be ſaid of euery affirmatiue commandement; as of keeping an holy reſt vnto the Lord, it binds a man for euer, but not at all times, onely for the ſeauenth day and ſuch like.

Negatiue precepts more forcible then affirmatiue.

Of Almes-giuing eight points.

Yet further to lay open this commandement touching Almes, we will herein handle eight points: I. who is to giue: II. what is to be giuen: III. to whome we muſt giue: IV. in what order: V. how much: VI. in what place: VII. at what time: VIII. in what manner we muſt giue.

1 Who muſt giue.

For the firſt: the perſon that is to giue, is not euery one, but ſuch as God hath ſet apart for this dutie: for, Matth.25.42,43. ſome are there made to receiue, as the hungrie, thirſtie, naked, ſicke, &c. and others are made fit to giue clothing, foode, comfort, and ſuch like. And S. Iohn telleth vs who is made fit to giue, namely, c hee that hath the goods of this world: not onely he that hath abundance, but euen he that

c 1.Ioh.3.17

A that hath but a ſmall portion of worldly goods: and therefore the theefe that ſtole for want, is forbidden to ſteale, and commanded to labour; d that he may haue to giue to him that wanteth: and the poore widow is commended of Chriſt, that e of her penurie gaue to the treaſurie but two mites. Now in a giuer there muſt be two things: firſt, a right vnto the goods he giueth: for a man may not giue that which is not his owne: ſecondly, a plentifull proprietie in the things he giueth, (vnleſſe it be in the caſe of neceſſitie:) and by this are children and ſeruants excluded from giuing, vnleſſe they haue ſome things of their owne, or doe it by command.

Properties in a giuer.

Queſt. Whether may the wife giue releefe vnto the poore, without her husbands conſent? An auncient anſwer is this, that many wiues B in giuing are Abigails in regard of their husbands, who are like vnto Nabal; and therefore may giue; and yet ſome other auncient Diuines adde this, that the wife cannot giue, where all conſent of her husband is wanting, becauſe both ſhee and all her poſſeſſions belong vnto him principally: yet here we are to know, that there is a double conſent of the husband, expreſſed in open words, whereupon there is no queſtion, but the wife may lawfully giue: and ſecret, which is threefold; firſt, when the husband doth not diſſent; ſecondly, when he giues conſent generally, as when he allowes her to giue, but names not any particular; thirdly, whē the wife hath a probable coniecture and preſumption, C that if the husband did know, he would allow of her giuing. And in theſe caſes of ſecret conſent, the wife may alſo giue: but if ſhee haue not his conſent any of theſe waies, ſhe may not lawfully giue, vnleſſe in theſe caſes: 1. that ſhe hath ſomething priuate of her owne, either by exception before, or by graunt after marriage: 2. that her giuing ſerues to preſerue the life or good eſtate of her husband and family, as Abigails did when ſhee gaue to Dauid: 3. that the neceſſity of the receiuer requires preſent releefe, for extreame neceſſitie diſpenſeth with proprietie.

Auguſt. epiſt. 199.

II. Point. What is to be giuen namely, Almes. Here two queſtions are to be ſcanned: I. what is almes: II. whereof almes are to be D raiſed. For the firſt, Almes is a free gift, tending to preſerue the temporall life of our neighbour. 1 Firſt, I call it a gift, vnderſtanding it largely, becauſe for giuing to them that are not able to pay, is an almes deed. 2 Secondly, I ſay free, to diſtinguiſh it from ſubſidies to Princes, and Tenths-giuing for the ſtipend of the Miniſter, and ſuch like. Theſe are gifts but no free gifts: for the people receiue protection from the Magiſtrate for their ſubſidies, and inſtruction frō the Miniſter for their Tenths. 3 Thirdly, I ſay, the end of Almes is to preſerue temporall life; to diſtinguiſh it from ſpirituall gifts, which concerne the ſoule: the Papiſts make all workes of mercie whether they concerne the bodie or ſoule, to be almes; but almes properly, are gifts that tend to preſerue this naturall temporall life.

2. What is to be giuen.

Almes deſcribed.

II. Queſtion. Whereof are almes to be raiſed? Anſw. 1 Firſt, of our owne goods; for a man ought not to giue that which is another mans: and therefore thoſe that owe more then they are worth, cannot giue almes, but are rather fit to receiue, for all that they haue in right and conſcience belongs to ſome others. 2 Secondly, our Almes muſt be of our firſt fruits: things holeſome and good, and ſuch as are fit for the perſon releeued. They muſt not be the refuſe of our goods, which we know not elſe what to doe with: Nehem. 8.10. Part of the fatte, and of the ſweete muſt be ſent to them, for whom none is prouided. 3 Thirdly, Almes muſt be of goods lawfully gotten: for euill gotten goods muſt be reſtored, either to the owner (if hee be knowne) or to ſome of his kinred, or to the Magiſtrate: which ſhewes, that the Vſurer ought rather to reſtore, then to giue almes of his gaine for vſurie. 4 Fourthly, our Almes muſt be giuen of our owne, with difference & diſcretion: euery mans goods for the moſt part may be diſtinguiſhed into foure degrees: 1 firſt, ſome are neceſſarie to preſerue life, without which a man and his family cannot liue: 2 ſecondly, ſome are neceſſary to mans eſtate, as thoſe goods by which a man putteth in practiſe the duties of his calling, ſuch are bookes vnto the Student, and tooles vnto the trades man: 3 a third ſort are ſuch, as are requiſite for the decencie of a mans eſtate, and ſuch are thoſe that make a man walke in his calling with comfort, eaſe, profit, and delight: 4 the fourth ſort of goods are ſuperfluous; that is, all that portion which a man may want, and yet haue things neceſſarie for this life, and eſtate, and for the decencie thereof: theſe two laſt degrees are in Scripture called abundance. And anſwerably, there are two degrees of pouertie; the firſt, is common want, when a man can liue without receiuing Almes, but yet very hardly: the ſecond is, extreame want, when a man without releefe cannot poſſibly maintaine life: now in common want we muſt giue of our abundance; that is, both of our ſuperfluitie, as alſo of our riches that ſerue for decencie: Luk. 3.11. Hee which hath two coates, let him part with him that hath none: now he that hath two coates, is not he that hath a coate and a cloake, for ſo had g Paul; and yet retained them both lawfully for his vſe: but Chriſts meaning is, that he which hath things neceſſarie, and beſides ſome thing ouer, ſeruing for decencie and ſuperfluitie, muſt giue thereof to him that lacketh. And in extreame neceſſitie, he muſt giue of thoſe goods which pertaine neceſſarily to his life and eſtate: for our neighbours life muſt be preferred before our owne temporall goods, and outward eſtate; as h Paul teſtifieth of the Macedonians, that in the extreame neceſſitie of the Saints, they gaue to their power, yea and beyond their power: vpon this ground the Chriſtians in the pri-mitiue Church, a ſold their poſſeſſions for the releeuing of the poore brethren in extreame want; rather diminiſhing their owne temporall eſtate, then ſuffering the poore to want that were in extreame neceſſitie. This Rule ought alwaies to be regarded and practiſed, eſpecialy in times of want; as for thoſe that make aduantage of a dearth, and enrich themſelues by Gods iudgement on the poore, they are moſt miſerable & wretched people, quite voide of euery ſpark of that gratious diſpoſition which was in Chriſt, who beeing rich, euen king of heauen & earth, b made himſelfe poore, that through his pouertie he might make others rich. It is the will of God, that we ſhould beare one an others burdens, & help to lift vp the poore, that are preſſed down with the iudgement of God; which wee ſhall doe, when we giue not onely of our abundance in common want, but euen of our neceſſaries in the extreame want of the poore.

b 2.Cor.8.9.

To whome we muſt giue.

III. Point. To whome muſt we giue? Anſ. To the poore: this needs no proofe; yet in theſe poore two things are required. Firſt, they muſt be truly poore: that is, ſuch as are indeed either in common or extreame want: and of ſuch S. Iohn ſaith, c If any man haue this worlds good, and ſeeth his brother haue neede, if hee ſhut vp his compaſſion from him, how dwelleth the loue of God in him? Secondly, they muſt be ſuch as cannot helpe themſelues, Leuit. 25. 35. If thy brother bee impoueriſhed, and haue a trembling hand, thou ſhalt releeue him: the man of a trembling hand, is one that is not able to maintaine himſelfe: of this ſort are Orphans, widowes, the aged, ſicke, blind, lame, maymed in ſeruice, and ſuch like, all theſe muſt bee releeued. But the caſe ſtands otherwiſe with that kind of poore, which wee call luſtie beggers, who are able to prouide for themſelues, if they would take paines: S. Pauls rule belongs to them, d If they will not worke, they muſt not eate: that is, they muſt not be maintained on the Almes of the Church. Queſt. 1. What muſt ſuch luſtie poore doe? Anſw. They muſt be imployed in ſome lawfull calling, wherein they may labour to get their owne bread, and not eate the common foode of thoſe that are poore indeede. For the Church and Common-wealth are as a mans bodie, wherein euerie member hath his ſeuerall office, for the good of the whole bodie: and indeede euery man ſhould haue not onely a generall calling of a Chriſtian, but a particular calling alſo, wherein he muſt imploy himſelfe for the common good: it is againſt the word of God, and the light of nature, that any ſhould liue hauing nothing to doe. Adam in his innocencie was enioyned to worke in the garden; and our e Sauiour Chriſt before his baptiſme, liued vnder his father in a particular calling, till he was thirtie yeares old; whoſe examples we muſt followe. Queſt. 2. What is our dutie towards theſe luſtie beggers? Anſw. From f Pauls rule we may gather, that we muſt not ordinarily and of cuſtome releeue them: indeede vpon preſent neceſſitie they are to bee releeued, but yet with this aduertiſement, that they looke not for it againe, but that they prouide for themſelues by labouring in ſome lawfull calling: for this common releeuing at mens doores, makes ſo many idle vagabonds and rogues as there are.

The order of giuing almes.

IV. Point. In what order muſt we giue our Almes for diſtinction of perſons? Anſ. Touching order in releeuing, the holy Ghoſt hath laid downe three Rules: Firſt, by S. Paul g hee that prouideth not for his owne, and namely for them of his houſhold, is worſe than an Infidell: whence this order may be obſerued, that I. a man muſt giue to them that bee of his owne houſhold and family: II. to his owne bloud, kinred, and alliance: III. vnto ſtrangers. The ſecond Rule is this, Gal. 6. 10. Doe good vnto all, but ſpecially to the houſhold of faith: firſt, beleeuers muſt be releeued, and then all others, good or badde. The third Rule is giuen by Moſes, Deut. 15. 10. Wee muſt firſt releeue our owne poore, that is, ſuch as liue among vs, and then giue vnto ſtrangers, if our abilitie will afoard, and their neceſſitie doe require.

Of the quantitie of our Almes.

V. Point. How much muſt we giue? Touching the meaſure of our Almes, there is no particular commandement in Scripture: but yet theſe generall Rules may thence bee gathered. Firſt, that a man is not bound to giue all that hee hath: Prou. 5. 15, 16. Drinke the waters of thine owne ciſterne, and flowing ſtreames out of the middeſt of thine owne well: let thy fountaines diſperſe themſelues abroad: where vnder an allegorie borrowed from waters, the holy Ghoſt directeth a man, for the diſpoſing of his riches; namely, comfortably to enioy his owne goods, and yet to beſtow ſome part thereof on them that want: & Luk. 13. 11. Let him that hath two coates, giue (not both) but one to him that wanteth: where we ſee them iuſtly rebuked, that in prodigalitie doe riotouſly lauiſh & ſpend all that they haue: for if a man may not giue all, much leſſe may he ſpend all wilfully. II. Rule. 2. Cor. 8. 13. A man muſt not ſo giue to others, that he himſelfe be grieued, and they be eaſed altogether. III. Rule. Almes muſt be according to the giuers abilitie, and withall anſwerable to the neceſſitie of the poore, whether in food, rayment, or harbour: ſo Paul ſaith, ſpeaking of common releefe, q The miniſtration of this ſeruice ſupplieth the neceſſitie of the Saints: and S. Iames requires, that in releefe ſuch things be giuen r as be needefull to the bodie: and Deut. 15. 8. If thy brother be poore, thou ſhalt open thy hand vnto him, and lend him ſufficient for his need which he hath.

VI. Point. In what place muſt Almes be giuen? Touching the place we muſt know this, that it is a diſorder not beſeeming Gods Church, to giue releefe to wandring beggers at our dores: this may appeare by theſe reaſons. I. It is Gods commandement, s that among his people there ſhould bee no ſuch beggers: if any may aske; how the poore were then releeued? I anſwer, God made ſufficient order for their prouiſion: for firſt, the husbandman[z] muſt not gather his grapes cleane, nor cut his whole field; but leaue the after-gathering and gleaning for the poore. Secondly, beſides the [a] yearely Tenthes for the Prieſts and Leuites, euery [x] third yeares tenthes were to bee gathered and kept for the poore, and for ſtrangers. Thirdly, euery ſeuenth yeare the land was to reſt, and all that it brought for that yeare, with the fruit of vineyards and oliues was for the poore. Exod. 23. 11. Againe, in the newe Teſtament the Apoſtles ordained, [y] that in euerie Church there ſhould bee Deacons, that is, men of wiſdome and diſcretion, who were to gather for the poore, and likewiſe to diſpoſe of that which was giuen, according as euery man had neede: in which very order of prouiſion for the poor, the Lord forbids all wandring begging. II. These wandring beggers, are the ſhame & reproch of the people where they are ſuffered: for it argueth want of care of good order in gouernors, and want of mercie in the rich, that they gather all to themſelues, without regard how the poore ſhould liue. III. In releeuing theſe wandring beggers, there is this double want in the giuer; he cannot tell what to giue, nor how much: becauſe he knowes not the ſtate of the partie that beggeth. Now in almes deeds there ought to be a double diſcretiō: the giuer ought to know both his owne abilitie, and alſo the neceſſitie of the receiuers. IV. Common releeuing at mens doores makes many beggers, and maintaines a wicked generation: for theſe wādring beggers are for the moſt part flat Atheiſts, regarding nothing but their bellie, ſeparating themſelues from all congregations: and from begging many fall to ſtealing, or elſe they take ſuch pleaſure therein that they will neuer leaue it, no not for a yearely rent. This is knowne to be true by experience. All which things duly conſidered, muſt mooue the Magiſtrates and euery other in their place, to ſee that better order be obſerued for the poore then doore-releiuing to all that come. And ſith good lawes are made in this behalfe, men ought in conſcience to ſee the ſame obſerued and kept: neither can any man without ſinne tranſgreſſe the ſame. Indeede if good order were not prouided for the poore, it were better to releeue them in their wādring courſe, then to ſuffer them to ſtarue: for ſo dealt Chriſt and his diſciples with the poore, when good order failed among the Iewes, they releeued them in the high waies and ſtreetes.

Time of almes-giuing. Rules. 1.

VII. Point. At what time muſt Almes bee giuen? Anſw. Hereof the Scripture ſpeaketh little; yet this may be gathered thence: Firſt, that releefe muſt be giuen when preſent occaſion requireth: therefore Salomon ſaith, [a] Say not to thy neighbour, Goe and come againe to morrow, if thou now haue it. Secondly, that the Sabbath day is a fit time for the giuing of releefe for the poore; for the [b] Apoſtle commanded the Corinthians, that each one ſhould lay aſide vpon that day, according as God had proſpered him the week before, that which he would giue for the poore: where by the way, it may be obſerued, that daily giuing at mens doores was not allowed by the Apoſtles. Alſo touching Trades-men this may be added; from this, that the Apoſtle makes contribution for the poore a Sabbath dayes worke; that whereas they vſe to imploy part of the Lords day, both morning and euening in ſeruing their cuſtomers for their owne priuate benefit, this cannot be warranted: onely this they may do, vpon the Sabbath they ſhould ſell vnto none, but to ſuch as buy of neceſſitie, and then they may not make a priuate gaine of their ſale, but muſt turne that worke to a worke of mercie for the poore, either ſelling without gaine if it bee a poore bodie that buyes; or giuing the gaine of that which they ſell to the rich, for the releefe of the poore. This indeed will hardly be obtained at trades-mens hands, but yet they muſt knowe that the whole Sabbath day is the Lords, wherein he will be worſhipped with delight, neither ought men to do therein their owne workes, nor ſeeke their owne wills, nor ſpeake their owne words. The manner of Almes-giuing.

VIII. Point. In what manner muſt almes be giuen? Anſw. Hereof more is to be ſpoken in the chapter following: yet from this text theſe things may be obſerued: 1 Firſt, that Almes-giuing muſt bee free; the giuer muſt neither looke for recompenſe at the hands of man; nor thinke to merit any thing thereby at the hands of God. That Popiſh conceit depriues a man of the true comfort of the ſpirit in this worke of mercie: none but Chriſt by his obedience could euer merit at Gods hands. 2 Secondly, our hearts in giuing muſt be touched with charitie, and the bowels of compaſſion; we muſt giue with cheerefulneſſe: for without loue all that wee giue is nothing, 1.Cor 13.3. and, the Lord loueth a cheerefull giuer, 2. Cor.9.7. now if we conſider the poore as our owne fleſh, and ſee Gods image in them, this will mooue vs to pitie. 3 Thirdly, in the perſon of the poore wee muſt conſider Chriſt Ieſus, & giue vnto them as we would giue vnto Chriſt. This will mooue vs to giue, & that cheerfully: for in the day of iudgement Chriſt will make it known that he comes for releefe to the rich in the perſon of the poor: to the mercileſſe he will ſay, [b] In as much as ye did it not to them, ye did it not to me: but to the mercifull thus, [c] In as much as yee did vnto one of the leaſt of theſe my brethren, ye haue done it vnto me. 4 Fourthly, our almes muſt be giuen as a pledge of our thankefulnes vnto God for the bleſſings we enioy: for all we haue commeth from God, [d] and of his hand it is, whatſoeuer we giue: now he profeſſeth, that when men do good, [e] and diſtribute to the poore, he is well pleaſed with ſuch ſacrifices.

uing is, and how it muſt be performed; we muſt now ſtirre vp our ſelues to put the ſame in practiſe: and to mooue vs hereunto conſider the reaſons following. I. We all deſire to be counted righteous; now if wee would be ſuch indeede, we muſt viſit the fatherleſſe and widows, we muſt doe good, and giue almes to the poore: for this is pure religion and undefiled before God, as [f] Iames ſaith. To come to the Church and heare the word, and to receiue the Sacraments are good things; but without mercie to the poore they are not regarded, but hated of God, Iſa.1.13,14,15. II. If a man ſhould offer vnto vs a peice of ground to manure and till for our owne reaping, wee would take it kindly, and beſtow both paines and ſeede vpon it; behold the poore are ſent of God to the rich, as a peice of ground to be tilled, and when they giue to the poore, they ſowe vpon the ground; now as Paul ſaith in this caſe, [g] looke as a man ſoweth, ſo ſhall he reape: we therefore muſt ſow liberally, that we may alſo reape liberally. III. Prou.19.17. He that hath mercy vpon the poore, lendeth vnto the Lord: we would eaſily be mooued to lend, if we had an honeſt man to be ſuretie vnto vs, for returning of our owne with aduantage: well, the Lord offers himſelfe to the rich to be ſuretie for the poore; who then will feare to lend hauing ſo good a debter? IIII. If theſe promiſes will not mooue vs, let vs conſider the fearefull curſes threatned againſt the mercileſſe and hard hearted: for as hee that giueth to the poore ſhall not lacke, ſo hee that hideth his eyes from them, ſhall haue many curſes, Prou.28.27. And he that ſtoppeth his eares at the crying of the poore, he ſhall cry and not be heard: Prou.21.18. and the wofull ſentence of condemnation ſhal be pronounced vpon the wicked for the neglect of this dutie, Matth.25.41,42.

h Act.4.32.

i Act.5.4.

Further, from the words, Giue to him that asketh] we may learne, that it is the will of God, that among his people there ſhould be a proprietie of goods, and that all things ſhould not be common in that behalfe: for the Lord would haue ſome to haue to giue, and ſome to want that they might receiue; which would not be, if all things ſhould bee common both for vſe and proprietie, as ſome haue fondly imagined. If any man think it was ſo in the primitiue Church, becauſe it is ſaid, [h] they had all things common, he is to know, that that communitie was in ſuch things onely, as men had then freely giuen for the common good. And yet euen then, none was compelled or bound in conſcience to giue all his ſubſtance in that ſort: for there [i] Peter telles Ananias, that his poſſeſſion, while it remained vnſold, appertained to him, and after it was ſold, the price thereof was in his owne power to diſpoſe of as he would. Obiect. 2. All things belong to beleeuers, as Paul ſaith, All things are yours, 1.Cor.3.21. & therefore they ought to be common. Anſ. The Apoſtle meaneth, that they had right in Chriſt to all things, and did enioy them by hope; but yet the fruition of them in actuall proprietie, is not had before the day of Iudgement.

Vowed pouertie vnlawfull.

Rhem. on Matt.19.sect.9.
Bellarm. de Monach.l.2.c.40.

Againe, if giuing to the poore be a dutie of euery one, whom God enables hereunto, then no man may voluntarily diſable himſelfe from it; whereupon the Popiſh practiſe of vndergoing voluntarie pouertie falls to the ground, as vnlawfull: for thereby they diſable themſelues vnto this dutie. Indeede the Papiſts make this a ſtate of perfection, but Dauid iudged begging to be a curſe, Pſal.109.10. els hee would not haue ſpoken of freedome from beggerie as of a bleſſing, which he doth, Pſa.37.25. I neuer ſaw the righteous forſaken, nor his ſeede begging.

Gather-goods reprooued.

Laſtly, in this commandement ſee the error of thoſe men, that giue themſelues wholly to gather riches to themſelues, beeing like to the moule which is alwaies digging in the earth: for God requires, that a man ſhould giue as wel as get, nay he muſt get to giue, & not to keep: for God is more glorified by giuing, then by keeping: and herein his children reſemble their heauenly father, who receiueth nothing of any man, and yet giueth liberally to euerie one that asketh, without reproaching any, Iam.1.5.

Of lending 3. points.

1 What lending is.

And from him that would borrow of thee, turne not away.] Theſe words containe Chriſts ſecond precept, touching requiting good for euil, taken from lending & borrowing. To know the meaning of this Rule three points are to be handled: I. what it is to lend: II. to whom mē muſt lend: III. in what manner. For the firſt, what lending is, is well knowne by common experience. It is a ciuill contract or bargaine in which money, corne, or ſuch like goods, paſſe from man to man, both in regard of vſe and title: yet ſo, as the borrower is bound in conſcience to returne the thing lent vnto him, or elſe that which in value is equall vnto it.

2 To whome we muſt lē

II. Point. To whome men muſt lend. This circumſtāce is not here expreſſed by Matthew, but muſt be ſupplied out of Luke, chap.6.34,35. where Chriſt forbids them to lend, as ſinners doe, to receiue the like againe: but (ſaith he) loue your enemies, and doe good, and lend, looking for nothing againe: where it is plaine, that lending muſt be to ſuch as are truely poore, and not able to lend again like for like. For the better vnderſtanding whereof we are to know, that in humane Societies there bee three ſorts of men. Firſt ſuch poore as are vnable to prouide for themſelues things neceſſarie, by reaſon of ſome impotencie, as ſickneſſe, age, lameneſſe, or ſuch like; and theſe are commonly called beggers. A ſecond ſort are thoſe, which beeing poore haue yet a trade, wherein they can prouide for themſelues ſome part of their maintenance, and yet by reaſon of their pouertie, ſtill want ſome things neceſſarie, which of themſelues they cannot procure. The third ſort are rich men, ſuch as haue worldly goods in abundance, not onely ſufficient for their neceſſaries, but much ouerplus: now to each of theſe belongs his peculiar dutie. To the firſt ſort of poore that haue the ſhaking hand (as Moſes [k] ſpeaketh) almes are due, and they muſt be releeued by giuing freely, as we haue ſhewed in the former precept. To the ſecōd ſort of poore, belongs lending properly, ſpecially then, when their neceſſity requires. To the rich, neither gift nor loane is due; but on the contrarie they ought to giue and lend to the poore, maintaining themſelues by the honeſt labour and induſtrie of their lawfull callings.

k Lev.25.35.

Manner of lending.

3. Point. In what manner muſt men lend? Anſw. With a willing minde, without any ſhew of grudging, either in ſpeech, or by turning away the head or bodie; as it is here ſaide, From him that would borrowe of thee turne not away: which propertie in the lender, is yet further expreſſed by Luke, ſaying, Lend, looking for nothing againe: where Chriſt doth not ſimply forbid men to looke for that which they lent; but his meaning is, to ſhewe with what affection and diſpoſition of heart men ought to lend: namely, hauing reſpect onely to the good of the party borrowing, and not to the reſtitution of the thing lent: as when a poore man comes to borrow, we muſt not reaſon thus with our ſelues; This man is poore, and it may be will not pay me againe; nor thus, This man is painfull though he be poore, and is like to pay mee againe, and therefore I will lend. This (ſaith Chriſt) is the practiſe of ſinners, who lend, becauſe they looke to receiue the like. Bee thou therefore mooued to lend vpon a good deſire to helpe the poore, and let not thy minde bee running vpon the loſſe, or ſafe returne of the thing lent. Thus is that clauſe of Chriſt, looking for nothing againe, to be vnderſtood, and not to be applied to the gaine of vſury, whereat Chriſt aimeth not in this place.

Vſes. 1. Lending is a dutie.

Firſt, here obſerue, that to lend vnto the poore, is a commandement of God, binding the conſcience of the rich: it is not left free to the rich mans choice, whether we wil lend or not, but if the poore mans caſe require, he ſinnes againſt God, if he doe not lend: for he breakes this commandement. David therefore makes it the propertie of a good man to be mercifull, and to lend: Pſal.112.5. where we ſee that wretched practiſe of many rich men condemned to the pit of hel, who are ſo farre from lending to the poore, that they hoard vp their ſtore, til a time of dearth, that then they may inrich themſelues by poore mens want: and thus they increaſe Gods iudgement vpon the poore, and as it were, [l] grinde their faces, and [m] tread vpon them, as the holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh. But they ſhal one day find, that they ought to haue lent vnto the poore, in their neceſſities; yea, and when the hand of God in common want lieth more heauie vpon the poore, they ought then to open their hands more liberally towards them. It is an vſuall and common practiſe, that when a man beginnes to decay in his eſtate, no man will lend him any thing; but becauſe hee beginnes to decay, therefore they withdrew their helpe, leaſt he ſhould not pay them againe. But this ought not to be ſo: its Chriſts commandement, that the rich by lending ſhould ſuſtaine ſuch a one as by reaſon of want, is readie to fall into decay.

m Amo.5.11.

Free lending.

Secondly, this command of Chriſt binds the Rich not only to lend, but to lend freely without taking any increaſe: for they muſt lend, not looking for any againe: yea, Exod.22.25. the Lord expreſſely forbids to take increaſe of the poore: where we ſee the common practiſe of Vſurers condemned to the bottome of hell, who lend vnto the poore vpon bonds for increaſe: theſe are they, that liue on the blood & life of the poore, whoſe ſinne is euery where condemned, and ought to bee hated as bloodſhed it ſelfe. But the rich will ſay, they are intreated ſo to doe, and are greatly thanked for ſo lending. Anſw. This excuſe will not ſerue the turne: for Sauls armour bearer was a murtherer for killing his maſter, though Saul earneſtly beſought him ſo to doe, 2. Sam.1.9.16.

Forgiuing of that is lent.

Thirdly, here further learne, that a man muſt lend, and yet not alwaies take againe the principall: indeede he may require, and receiue his owne, els there ſhould be no lending but all giuing, which two are here diſtinct: but yet when the poore that borrowed, is fallen into further pouertie, the Rich muſt turne his lending into giuing, and forgiue the principall or part therof, as their ſeueralll eſtates ſhall require. Deut.24.10,11,12. A man may take a pledge for his debt of the poore: but yet if the pawne bee a thing neceſſarie to the poore mans life, he muſt not take it, or at leaſt not retaine it till the ſunne ſetting.

Of receiuing increaſe for lending.

Fourthly, ſome may here aske (ſeeing Chriſt [n] bids vs lend looking for nothing againe,) whether may a man at no time with good conſcience receiue increaſe for his lending? Anſw. Lending is two-fold: of due, or of curteſie: lending of due is the loane of the rich vnto the poore, when his neceſſitie compells him to borrow: and for this a man cannot with good conſcience take any increaſe. Lending of curteſie is, when one rich friend lends vnto an other: this is not forbidden in the word of God, but is left to a mans owne libertie and diſcretion, neither hath it any promiſe of reward. Now in this caſe of curteſie, I do not finde in Scripture that all taking of increaſe is ſimply condemned: nay, in ſome caſes, both the lawe of nature, and the lawes of all countries doe allow it: as firſt, when the encreaſe is giuen only in way of thankefulneſſe, as a bleſſing to requite in kindneſſe a good turne receiued: for ingratitude is abhorred of all, and the law of nature requires to doe good for good: and all Diuines both Proteſtants and Papiſts doe allowe this kinde of increaſe. Secondly, when a man ſuſtaineth dammage by his lending, he may receiue increaſe by way of ſatisfaction for his loſſe.

Caſes whe in a man m receiue increaſe for lending.

loſſe. Thirdly, when a man is contented to aduenture his principall in the hand of him that borroweth it, then alſo may he take increaſe; like as a man may receiue hire for his horſe, or for the vſe of any other goods tending to their loſſe. Exod. 22. 14.

Duties of the poore.

1 Contentanon.

Thus we ſee what the will of God is for giuing and lending vnto the poore: now hence the poore may receiue inſtruction. Firſt, hereby all may learne, that God will haue ſome poore among his people, to receiue and borrow of the rich: which may ſerue to perſwade the poore to be contented with their meane eſtate, eſteeming it to be the beſt for them, becauſe God in his wiſedome and prouidence hath ordained it.

2 ...to be ...ich in grace.

Secondly, the poore muſt take occaſion from their outward pouertie to ſeeke to be rich in God through grace. Iam. 2. 5. Hath not God choſen the poore of this world, that they ſhould be rich in faith? Herein they may match, and goe beyond the richer ſort; which is a matter of great ioy. Iam. 1. 9. Let the brother of low degree, reioyce in that he is exalted: that is, with God, who counts them rich. Reu. 2. 9.

3 Humble.

Thirdly, hence the poore muſt learne to carrie themſelues ſubmiſſiuely towards the rich, of whom they receiue great helpe and comfort by their giuing and lending: Prou. 18. 23. The poore (ſaith Salomon) vttereth ſupplications: noting their humilitie; which reproues many poore, who are ſo proud hearted and ingratefull, that they will not afford the rich a good word: but this beſeemeth none, much leſſe thoſe that are to liue by the rich: Pſal. 101. 5. Him that hath a proud looke and high heart, I cannot ſuffer.

V. 43. Ye haue heard that it hath beene ſaide of olde, Thou ſhalt loue thy neighbour, and hate thine enemie.

In this verſe and the reſt to the ende of this Chapter, our Sauiour goeth about to purge the generall commandement of the ſecond Table touching the loue of our neighbour, from the corrupt interpretation of the Iewiſh teachers, and to reſtore it to his true and proper meaning. And as in the former ſo here, he firſt laies downe their falſe doctrine touching this commandement, v. 43. and then confutes the ſame, v. 44. 45. &c. In laying downe their falſe interpretation, he propounds the law of Moſes touching brotherly loue, Levit. 19. 18. Thou ſhalt loue thy neighbour, which muſt here be vnderſtood in their falſe ſenſe, who by neighbour, meant a freind; as if God had ſaid, Thou ſhalt loue thy freind. Then he adioyneth their tradition gathered from the law of God miſconceiued; namely, to hate a mans enemie.

In theſe Iewes we may obſerue two manifeſt abuſes of Scripture, which ought not to be in any Teachers: to wit, miſinterpretation, and a falſe collection. The word they miſconſtrue, is Neighbour, taken two waies.

A Neighbour, which in the old Teſtament is taken two waies, either ſtrictly and more properly for a familiar freind and acquaintance; in which ſenſe it is commonly taken; or more generally, for any one that in any kind of ſocietie is neare vnto vs, as by conſanguinitie, habitation, office, traffique, or being onely in the ſame place with vs; for ſo is the Samaritan ſaid to be neighbour to the man that fell among theeues, becauſe hee found him lying in the way where hee trauailed, and had compaſſion on him. Luk. 10. 36, 37. Now the Iewiſh teachers leaue the generall ſignification of the word, which expreſſed the true meaning of the holy Ghoſt, and take the ſpeciall ſignification, and ſo reſtraine this law B of loue to friends onely. Whereby we ſee how neceſſarie it is, that the tongues wherein the Scriptures were penned, ſhould be well knowne and vnderſtood: for the miſtaking of the ſignification of a word by the Iewiſh teachers, cauſed a manifeſt error to be taught among them for truth. And this maketh greatly for the honour of the Schooles of learning, where the ſtudies of the Tongues is profeſſed. And herein alſo an other thing may be noted in the Iewiſh teachers, that in the time of Chriſt they were ignorant in their owne tongue, and therefore no maruell though at this day they know not the proprieties thereof, ſeeing their commonwealth is deſtroied, and they diſperſed among all people.

Schooles of learning approoued.

C Their ſecond fault is, a falſe collection and conſequent, that becauſe a man muſt loue his friend, therefore he muſt hate his enemie: this is againſt the rules of Arte, for vnleſſe the contraries be equall, a conſequent will not thence follow in this ſort.

Vſe. 1.

Here then obſerue the neceſſitie of the ſtudy of humane Artes, and among the reſt, eſpecially of the arte of Logicke, whereby we may diſcerne betweene true and falſe collections.

2 A note of a falſe teacher.

Againe, here obſerue an infallible note of a falſe teacher; to wit, to temper the word of God to mans naturall affections, and ſo to expound it as they may both ſtand together. The Iewes were a people that loued their friends entirely, and hated their enemies bitterly: now anſwerably doe their Teachers expound this law, D whereby they ouerturne both the law of God, and the ſaluation of the people.

3 Corrupt doctrine corrupts good manners.

Thirdly, marke here the fruit of corrupt doctrine, namely to corrupt good maners. The Iewes were a people that did much bragge of their Anceſtours and priuiledges, and in regard of themſelues contemned all forraine Nations; yea, they hated them, and therefore they were hotte in contention with Peter, for going to Cornelius a Gentile: Act. 11. 2. now this their malice proceeded partly from nature, and partly from the falſe doctrine of their Teachers, which was, that they might hate their enemies. The like may appeare in many practiſes of Poperie to this day: for when that Superſtition was aloft, the people were taught a diſtinction of times and places, in regard of holineſſe, the fruit of which doctrine ſtickes faſt in the hearts of many vnto this day: for they thinke Churches and Chappels to be more holy then other places, and therefore ſome will not pray but when they come into ſome ſuch place. And doe they not make great difference of daies and times? all which are fruits of Poperie. In regard whereof, we ſee it is neceſſarie that the puritie of Religion in faith and maners ſhould be ſtrongly maintained by the ſyncere miniſterie of the word: for many diſorders in mens liues come from the vnſound handling of the Scriptures. Whereby we may ſee Gods vnſpeakeable mercie and goodneſſe towards vs, in vouchſafing vs an holy Miniſterie wherein the puritie of doctrine is, and hath beene long, and may be ſtill through Gods mercie maintained & publiſhed. This ought to moue vs to all thankfulneſſe vnto God, and to endeauour to ſhew the fruit of this true Religion in all holineſſe and pietie, both of heart and life towards God and man.

verſe 44. But I ſay vnto you, Loue your enemies: bleſſe them that curſe you: doe good to them that hate you, and pray for them which hurt you, and perſecute you.

Here our Sauiour Chriſt propounds his Anſwer vnto the former falſe doctrine of the Iewiſh Teachers, for the hating of an enemie. Wherein firſt he laies downe a generall Rule, conteining the ſumme of his whole anſwer, ſaying, Loue your enemies: then he expounds that Rule in the ſame v. and after prooueth it, v. 45. 46. Of theſe in order.

An enemie deſcribed.

What it is to loue an enemie.

For the firſt, Loue your enemies. In this Rule two things muſt be knowne: I. what is an enemie: II. what it is to loue an enemie: both theſe are euident in the words following, wherein Chriſt expounds this Rule, Bleſſe them that curſe you, &c. An enemie then, is any one that of hatred doth wrōg vnto his neighbour, either in word, by curſing or euill ſpeaking; or deed, by ſtriking and perſecuting him. But what is it to loue our enemie? Loue properly is an affection of the heart, whereby one is well pleaſed with an other. But here more generally, loue comprehendeth theſe two things: firſt, to be louingly affected in heart towards an enemie; ſecondly, to vſe an enemie louingly in ſpeech and action: ſo it is taken, 1. Ioh. 3:18. Loue not in word and tongue onely, but in deede and truth. And Rom. 10. 12. Loue is the fulfilling of the Law. For the firſt, loue in the heart comprehendeth all good affections that one man beareth to another; as mercie, compaſſion, meekeneſſe, and deſire to doe vnto them what good we can; as it is more plainely expreſſed, Luk. 6. 36. Bee yee therefore mercifull, as your heauenly father is mercifull. And for the ſecond; that kind vſage which loue expreſſeth in word and deede, is here ſet out vnto vs in three branches: Firſt, bleſſe them that curſe you: where is commanded all good ſpeech, both vnto our enemie, and of our enemie. The ſecond, Doe good to them that hate you: where is preſcribed all louing vſage in action, by affoording them helpe, releefe, and comfort, any way we can. The third, Praie for them that perſecute you: that is, for their good eſtate in this life, ſo farre forth as it ſerueth for Gods glorie, and for their conuerſion and ſaluation in the world to come.

See the euidence of theſe things in examples; For the affection of the heart, take Chriſts example, who ſo loued his enemies, that he was contented to ſhed his owne hearts blood for them, and to ſuffer the pangs of hell vpon the croſſe for their ſaluation. For loue in courteous ſpeech, ſee Dauids practiſe towards Saul his profeſſed enemie, for though Dauid had him in his hands, and might haue killed him ſundry times; nay, though he was prouoked thereunto by his [a] ſeruants; yet hee ſpared him, and with all tearmes of reuerence towards Saul, appeaſed his ſeruants, calling him his Maſter, and the Lords annointed. Thus louingly alſo in ſpeach did Paul behaue himſelfe to [b] Feſtus and Agrippa, though they were heathen men, and his enemies. For doing good in action to an enemie, read Exod. 23. 4. 5. If thou meete thine enemies Oxe or his Aſſe going aſtraie, thou ſhalt bring him to him againe: and if thou ſeeſt thine enemies Aſſe lying vnder his burden, wilt thou ceaſe to helpe him? thou ſhalt helpe him vp againe with it: and Prou. 25. 21. If thine enemie be hungrie, giue him bread to eate: if he thirſt, giue him drinke. See the practiſe hereof in [c] Eliſha, when God deliuered them into his hands that ſought his life, he brought them to Samaria; and when the king of Iſrael would haue ſlaine them, hee forbad him: nay, he cauſed the King to refreſh them with bread and water, and ſo ſent them to their owne maſter. For praying for our enemies, we haue the example of the Prophets, of [d] our Sauiour Chriſt, and of [e] Steuen, who praied for thoſe that put him to death.

Of hatred towards enemies.

Obiect. 1. It will be ſaid, the Scripture elſewhere ſeemes to make againſt this; Pſal. 139. 21, 22. Doe not I hate them, O Lord, (ſaith Dauid) that hate thee; and doe I not earneſtly contend with them, that riſe vp againſt thee? I hate them with an vnfained hatred: whereby it ſeemes, that in ſome caſes a man may hate his enemies. Anſw. Firſt, we muſt put a difference betweene our enemies cauſe, and his perſon; their euil cauſes, and their ſinnes muſt be hated, and we muſt giue no approbation thereto; but yet their perſons beeing Gods creatures, and bearing his image in ſome ſort, muſt be loued. Againe, enemies be of two ſorts, pri-uate

[a] 1 Sam. 24. 7 and chap. 26. 9, 10.

[b] Act. 26. 25. and 27.

[c] 2 King. 6. 14. 19. 22.

[d] Luk. 23. 34.

[e] Act. 7. 60.

Two kind of enemies.

A uate, and publike: a priuate enemie is he that hateth a man for ſome priuate cauſe in himſelfe or concerning his affaires: and ſuch a one wee muſt loue, and not hate, as Chriſt here commandeth. A publike enemie, is he that hates a man for Gods cauſe, for religion and the Goſpels ſake: and theſe publike enemies be of two ſorts, curable, and incurable. If our publike enemies be curable, we muſt pray for their conuerſion, hating their conditions: If they be incurable, and we haue plaine ſignes of their finall impenitence, then we may hate them, for ſo we hate the deuill. So Paul ſaith, [f] If any man loue not the Lord Ieſus, Anathema, Maranatha, let him be finally and wholly accurſed. B And yet this we muſt know, that we ought to direct our hatred to their ſinnes, and for their ſinnes hate their perſons, and no otherwiſe. Now Dauid in that Pſalme, ſpeaketh not of priuate, but of publike enemies, who hated not onely him, but God alſo in his religion, and were alſo incurable.

f 1 Corin. 22.

Obiect. 2. But the practiſe of Gods children ſeemes to be otherwiſe: for Dauid often curſeth his enemies, and prayeth for the deſtruction of them and theirs, Pſal. 109. 9, 10. and Peter wiſheth, that [g] Simon Magus may periſh with his money: and Paul praieth the Lord, to reward Alexander the copper-ſmith according to his doings, 2. Tim. 4. 14. How can this ſtand with the Text. Anſ. There be diuers interpretations of theſe facts. Some ſay (which is true) C that in Dauids Pſalmes, his curſes are in proper ſenſe, propheſies of the deſtruction of publike incurable enemies of Gods Church, and are onely propounded in the forme of prayers. Againe, Dauid, Peter, and Paul, were enlightened by Gods ſpirit, and ſaw into the finall eſtate of theſe their enemies whome they curſed, and therefore do they wiſh for their confuſion, not for their owne cauſe, in way of priuate reuenge, but vpon a deſire of the furtherance of Gods glorie, in the execution of his iuſtice vpon the whome he had forſaken. And it is not vnlawfull for Gods children, to pray that God in iuſtice would glorifie his name in the iuſt puniſhment of impenitent ſinners, that be cruell enemies to his Church. D

g Act.8.19.

Obiect. 3. God gaue commandement to his people the Iewes, [h] to deſtroy the Canaanites, and to roote out their enemies out of the land: nowe, how could they loue them, whome they muſt ſo cruelly kill? Anſ. We muſt onely loue the Lord abſolutely, and others in God, and for God, that is, ſo farre forth as it ſtandeth with his pleaſure: and therefore when he commandeth to kill, we may lawfully kill. And this wee may doe by way of puniſhment appointed by God, not onely without hatred, but in loue, both forgiuing the wrong which concernes vs, and alſo praying for grace and mercie for the partie, if he belong to God.

h Deut.7.2.

4. Obiect. There bee ſome that ſinne vnto death, for whome we are forbidden to pray, 1. Ioh. 5. 16. and therefore wee may not alwaies pray for our enemies? Anſw. Chriſts commandement to pray for our enemies, admitteth this exception, vnleſſe they ſinne a ſinne vnto death; but that ſinne is hardly knowne of the Church of God: and therefore priuate men muſt not in a conceit thereof, ſurceaſe this dutie, to pray for their enemies. Thus then is the text to bee vnderſtood; Loue your enemies, that is your priuate enemies, and doe good vnto them, vnleſſe God command you otherwiſe; and pray for them, if they ſinne not that ſinne vnto death.

Vſe 1. Popiſh doctrine of louing our enemies.

Here is confuted the old receiued doctrine of the Church of Rome, touching the loue of our enemies, as comming neere to the doctrine of theſe Phariſies; they teach that a man is bound alwaies not to hate his enemies; but for louing them in good vſage outwardly, a man is not bound, ſaue in two caſes: [a] Firſt, when our enemie is in neceſſitie, and danger of life, then he muſt be releeued and helped. Secondly, [b] in the caſe of ſcandal, when as by not helping or releeuing him we giue offence vnto others: but out of theſe two caſes to ſhewe kindnes to an enemie, is a matter of counſell and perfection. But this doctrine is damnable, flat againſt this Text, and the practiſe of Gods ſeruants expreſſed in his word; and therefore wee muſt renounce it, & acknowledg that we are bound in conſcience, on euery occaſion, to ſhew our loue in word & deed vnto our priuat enemies.

2 To wrong an enemie, vnlawfull.

Secondly, hereby is condemned the common practiſe of men in theſe dayes, which is to wrong their priuate enemies any way they can, by word or deede: ſome will raile vpon them, as [i] Shemei did on Dauid, and as [k] Rabſhekah did on Hezekias, and the people of God, yea on God himſelfe. This is a damnable practiſe, flat againſt this commandement of Chriſt, and his holy practiſe, 1. Thirdly, that fruit of rancour is here likewiſe reproued, whereby men will profeſſe they will neuer forget their enemies, though they doe forgiue them. It is indeed agreeable to our corrupt nature, to keepe a grudge long in mind, and to reuiue old wrongs; but this commandement of Chriſt condemneth this practiſe, and biddeth vs both to forgiue and forget: and therefore wee muſt labour to beat downe this ſpirit of reuenge, and endeauour to loue our enemies in word and deed.

Old grudges vnlawfull.

4 Hate no mans perſon.

Fourthly, here alſo ſee, that it is not lawfull to profeſſe enmitie to any mans perſon, for wee ſhould loue euerie man. But how can we loue him, to whome we profeſſe our ſelues enemies: Chriſtianitie and priuate enmitie cannot ſtand together: and therefore we muſt labour to abandon out of our hearts, the hatred of any mans perſon, and ſtriue to ſhewe forth louing vſage, euen towards our enemies, though it bee againſt our nature, both by ſpeaking well of them vnto others, and ſhewing kindneſſe vnto them, both in word and deede; we muſt pray for them, and goe ſo farre in all good duties towards them, that by our wel-doing, l we may heape coales of fire vpon their heads: that is, cauſe their conſcience like a fire to burn within them, accuſing them of their ill dealing towards vs, and not ſuffering them to reſt, till they lay away their enmity and malitiouſneſſe againſt vs.

l Rom. 12. 20.

Fiftly, this commandement of louing our enemies in word and deede, ſheweth it is not lawfull for any man to vtter euill ſpeeches of another, at any time, vnleſſe the occaſion be iuſt, and he be lawfully called thereunto; for loue couers a multitude of ſinnes, but diſgracing ſpeeches are fruits of hatred. Though Saul were Dauids profeſſed enemy, and ſought his blood, yet Dauid neuer reuiled him; and we ought to follow his good example.

Verſe 45. That ye may bee the children of your father which is in heauen: for he maketh his ſunne to ariſe on the euill, and the good: and ſendeth raine vpon the iuſt and vniuſt.

Becauſe it is againſt mans nature to loue his enemie, therefore our Sauiour Chriſt inforceth his Diſciples hereunto, by the benefit they ſhall reape hereby, in manifeſting themſelues to be the children of God: for he ſpake to thoſe that were Gods children, thus perſwading them to loue their enemies: That which will make you knowne to be Gods children, that you muſt doe; but by louing your enemies you ſhall make it manifeſt that you are Gods children: this he prooueth in the words following, becauſe it is a propertie of God ſo to doe; for he maketh the ſunne to ariſe on the euill and on the good, &c.

A B

Here firſt obſerue a true note of the child of God; namely, to imitate God his heauenly father, in louing his enemies, and expreſſing the ſame by all kind vſage both in word and deed, praying for them, and releeuing them in their neceſſities. And becauſe it is ſo bleſſed a thing to be the child of God, we muſt therefore hereby ſtirre vp our ſelues to the conſcionable performance of this dutie.

Vſe. 1. A true note of Gods child.

Secondly, from the ground of this reaſon we are taught, that we ought principally to imploy our ſelues to thoſe things, by the doing whereof, we may get aſſurance that we are the children of God; as alſo to ſhunne the doing of all ſuch things, as declare vs to be the children of Satan: that is all ſinnes which are indeede works of darkeneſſe and of the deuill. In the euill day, whether it be of death, or of affliction, when no man can comfort vs, this will be an onely ioy vnto our hearts, which will ſwallow vp all feare, that wee knowe our ſelues to be Gods children: for then the Lord will acknowledge vs for his owne: but if by ſinne we bee like the deuill, God will refuſe vs, and ſo we fall wholly to the deuill. Let vs therefore practiſe thoſe things, whereby this ground of comfort may be treaſured in our hearts.

2 The exerciſe of a Chriſtian.

Thirdly, note here the ſtyle and title of honour, which Chriſt giueth vnto God; he cals him not onely their father, but their father which is in heauen: this he doth, to ſtirre vp reuerence in his hearers towards God, and ſo haue Gods children done, Dan. 9. 4. before that holy Prophet powers out his prayer vnto God for his people, he ſets out the Lord with moſt glorious titles; O Lord God, great and terrible, which keepeſt couenant and mercie, &c. And Ieremie praying vnto God, ſpends three or foure verſes, in ſetting out Gods great power and Maieſtie, Chap. 32. 17, 18, 19. So Hezekias in his prayer for the people, calles the Lord, the good God; which no doubt he did, to ſtirre vp reuerence in his owne heart, and in the people, towards God. Whereby we are taught when we haue occaſion to mention the name of God, to doe it with all reuerence, and to vſe ſome titles of honour therewithall, to ſtirre vp our ſelues and our hearers, to a gratious awe of heart towards Gods maieſtie. But lamentable is the practiſe of the world in this behalfe, for euery where the name of God is toſſed in mens mouthes like a tennisball: ſome in the middeſt of their laughter vſe O God, O Lord, for breathing words: but others ſpare not to make Gods glorious name, the enſigne of their rage and furie, in bloodie and blaſphemous oathes: but voide of grace are all ſuch.

3 Whereto Gods glorious titles ſerue.

C

For he maketh the ſunne to riſe on the euill, and on the good, and ſendeth raine on the iuſt, and on the vniuſt. Here Chriſt propounds the propertie of God in doing good, and ſhewing kindneſſe to his enemies, to prooue that by ſo doing, we ſhall ſhew our ſelues to be his children. Wherein firſt obſerue the maner of Chriſts ſpeech; he ſaith not, Hee hath cauſed the ſunne to riſe, and hath ſent raine, &c. but ſpeaking of the time preſent, he doth now cauſe the ſunne to riſe, and ſendeth raine: ſo likewiſe, Iohn 5. 17. My Father yet worketh, and I worke together with him. In which phraſe is expreſſed a notable worke of Gods heauenly prouidence; namely, that after the creation of all things, whereby God gaue beeing vnto the creatures, and power and vertue to doe the things, for which they were created, he doth by his prouidence ſtill preſerue that beeing, and ſo in euery particular creature. It is God that gaue beeing to the ſunne at the beginning, and it is he that euer ſince continueth the beeing of the ſunne, with the light and vertue thereof: and the ſame is true of all creatures, and of our ſelues; a for in him wee liue, moeue, and haue our beeing:

D

a Act. 17. 28.

A beeing: hee is not like a Carpenter who buildes a houſe, and then leaues it, but ſtill he preſerues the things hee hath created. Herein he may well be compared to a ſpring or fountaine, which cauſeth the riuers to flow while he ſendeth out waters; but when it is ſtopped, they are dried vp: euen ſo, whiles God continueth the beeing and vſe of creatures, ſo long they are; 1 but if he with-hold his hand from them, they ceaſe to be, and the vſe of them continueth no more. Thus it is with vs, both in regard of our ſoules and bodies, with the faculties, powers, and graces thereof; but [b] what haſt thou that thou haſt not receiued from him? who [c] beareth vp all things by his mightie word.

b 1. Cor. 4. 7.
c Heb. 1. 3.

Duties from Gods preſeruing prouidence.

B Now hence we muſt learne theſe duties; Firſt, to ſeeke to know him that is daily about vs, and preſerueth vs in ſoule and in bodie, from houre to houre. Secondly, to cleaue vnto God with our hearts, and to ſet our affections of loue, feare, ioy, and hope, wholly vpon him, becauſe he is the author and continuer of our beeing, what euer it be. Thirdly, to obey our God in all things; for ſhall he giue beeing to our bodies and ſoules, and ſhall we diſpoſe of them after our pleaſures, to offend him, who doth wholly ſupport vs, and that continually?

The ſunne is the Lords.

Secondly, here note Christ ſaith, his ſunne, not the ſunne, teaching vs, that the ſunne which ſhineth in the firmament, is Gods ſunne, not mens: God himſelfe is the ſole author and gouernour thereof, hee continueth that beeing C which it hath, and the power and vertue which it ſheweth forth. And the ſame thing by proportion, muſt be vnderſtood of all other creatures both in heauen and earth, the moone and ſtarres, all beaſts and cattell, yea and we our ſelues are Gods creatures, and hee is our Creator, our Lord, and gouernour: Pſal. 50. 12. The whole world is mine, and all that is therein. Now hence we muſt learne two things; Firſt, not to abuſe any creature to our luſt, as food, raiment, &c. but to vſe whatſoeuer we enioy to Gods glorie, according to his will. Secondly, to endeauour to bee lead by the creatures which we enioy, to the knowledge of our creator, for they are his: but alaſſe, the practiſe of D the world is otherwiſe, men ſuffer themſelues by the creatures to be drawne from God: for ſome make their bellie their God; to others, riches and pleaſures are their God.

The benefit of the ſunne

Thirdly, Chriſts ſaying of the Father, that he maketh his ſunne to ariſe on the euill and on the good, doth ſhew vs that common bounty which God vouchſafeth to his creatures, both good and bad; for the riſing & ſhining of the ſunne, is an excellent worke of God, by which many other bleſſings are conuaied to the creatures; 1 For firſt, euery thing vpon the earth receiueth heate and warmeneſſe from it, nothing is hid from the heate thereof, Pſal. 19. 6. In which regard it may well be called, the vniuerſall fire of 2 the whole world. Secondly, the ſunne ſerueth A notably for the diſtinction of times, by day and night, weekes, monthes, quarters, and whole yeares, whereby we know the tearme of times from the beginning, and ſo may do till the end of the world; in regard whereof, it may well be called, the clocke of the whole world. Which things conſidered, may make vs to bluſh and bee confounded in our ſelues: for that light regard we haue had of ſo excellent a creature, whereby God conuaies ſo manifold bleſſings vpon the earth; let vs therefore learne to bleſſe God for the ſunne, and to expreſſe our thankefulneſſe by all good duties.

Rain a common bleſſing of God.

And ſendeth raine on the iuſt and vniuſt. Here is noted the ſecond common bleſſing be-B ſtowed of God vpon the world; to wit, the falling of the raine vpon the groũd, both of good and bad. Now here firſt obſerue the forme of ſpeech vſed by Chriſt, ſaying, God raineth; ſee Deut. 11. 14. The Lord giueth raine in due ſeaſon, the firſt and latter raine. This worke is attributed to God, for waighty cauſes; 1 Firſt, to ſhew that the ſame God, who ordained in the beginning, that the clouds ſhould water the earth, doth by his owne power vphold the continuance of the ſame bleſſing vnto this daie: and indeede, if hee ſhould not will the continuance hereof, it would for euer ceaſe to raine vpon the earth. 2 Secõdly, to teach vs that God diſpoſeth of the raine that falleth, reſtraining and enlarging it at his pleaſure, either for the bleſſing, or the puniſhment of the place whereon it falleth, and that many times without the helpe of C the ſecond cauſes, Leuit, 26. 3. 4. If yee walke in mine ordinances, I will ſend you raine in due ſeaſon: & verſe 19. But if you will not obey me, I will make your heauen as iron, & your earth as braſſe. Amos, 4. 7. I haue with-held the raine from you, and cauſed it to raine vpon one citie, and not vpon another; one peece was rained vpon, and that which was not rained vpon, withered.

Vſe. 1.

Here then we muſt learne firſt, that we ought to pray vnto God for his raine of bleſſing; that is, for fruitfull ſeaſons; and alſo to be thankfull vnto God for ſeaſonable weather when we receiue it, becauſe hee ſendeth it.

2. This muſt teach vs to obey and ſerue 2 D God, for he hath the clouds in his hands like a ſpunge, & when he wil he preſſeth out the raine thereof: now, if we obey him, he will cauſe it to fal vpon the earth for a bleſſing; but if we rebell againſt him, he will either hold backe, or powre it downe vpon vs for a curſe.

3 Aſtrological prediction of raine vncerten.

3. Seeing God ſendeth downe the raine, we may gather that no man can certenly tell, by the courſe of the heauens, the particular ſeaſon of the weather day by day. If the raine depended wholly vpon the celeſtiall bodies, then ſhould it fall alike in all places, that be of like poſition to the heauens; but that is not ſo, for God ordereth it according to the ſtate of the people, vpon whom it falleth, either for a bleſſing, or a curſe, as we haue heard.

4. Hence we may gather, that neither wit-

Witches cannot cauſe raine.

ches by the helpe of Satan, nor yet Satan himſelfe can cauſe raine, as many thinke; for it is God alwaies that raineth. The deuill indeed is the Prince of the ayre, and by Gods permiſſion he may ioyne himſelfe vnto a ſtorme, and make it more terrible and hurtfull; as hee did in the deſtruction of [a] Iobs cattell and children, by fire from heauen, and by a mightie winde: but yet he cannot make the matter of wind, or of raine, that is proper to God.

[a] Iob 1.16. 19.

5 Vnſeaſonable raine Gods puniſhment.

5. Doth God raine vpon the earth? then we may well conſider, why the land is ſo often plagued with vnſeaſonable raine: it is no doubt for our diſobedience, as we haue heard, Leu. 26, 19. and the contempt of the word, amongſt other ſinnes, is one maine cauſe of this iudgement. Now if we would either remoue, or preuent this plague at any time, B we muſt turne vnto the Lord, and repent of our ſinnes, for thereto we are called by this iudgement, Amos 4. 7. And if we doe turne, then will the Lord ſend a gratious raine vpon our land; but if we will not turne, we ſhall haue another raine, the raine of Sodome and Gomorrah; for [b] vpon the wicked God will raine ſnares, fire, and brimſtone. And this is certaine, where God ſends his iudgements for the contempt of his word, and yet men doe not repent, there [c] one iudgement is but the fore-runner of a greater, till they be conſumed. And ſith experience teacheth, that after inundations of waters, vſually comes plague and peſtilence; for the preuenting of theſe Iudgements, let vs repent.

[c] Lev.26.21. 24.&c.

Gods friends & enemies.

C The laſt point to be here obſerued is this: in what termes our Sauiour Chriſt expreſſeth, who be the friends of God, and who be his enemies. His friends, he calleth good and iuſt; his enemies, euill and vniuſt. Now that we may diſcerne of our eſtate towards God in this behalf, we muſt ſee what a good and iuſt man is.

A good and iuſt man.

In euery ſuch a one two things are required: Firſt true faith, whereby a man laies holde on Chriſt for his righteouſneſſe, ſanctification, and redemption: and for the obtaining hereof, he muſt denie himſelfe, and become nothing in himſelfe, that he may be all in Chriſt. Secondly, true conuerſion of the whole man vnto God from all ſinne, ſo as his heart muſt be renued and diſpoſed to pleaſe God in all things. D And becauſe theſe things are inward & ſecret, therefore to make them knowne, there is further required, that a man carrie in his heart a reſolute and conſtant purpoſe, from time to time, neuer to ſinne againſt God: and this purpoſe of heart hee muſt teſtifie by a godly and conſcionable endeauour of life, to pleaſe God in all things; for this is the fruite of true faith, and of ſound inward conuerſion; and in regard hereof, were Enoch, Iob, David, Zacharie, and Elizabeth called iuſt. But hee that wants this conſtant purpoſe, and a daily endeauour, from a beleeuing & penitent heart to pleaſe God in all things, is a wicked perſon, and as yet Gods enemie.

Vſe. 1. Ciuill honeſtie deceiu many.

A By this, firſt, we ſee how many are deceiued euery where, with ciuill honeſtie; for if a man liue vprightly among his neighbours, and doe abſtaine from murther, adulterie, oppreſſion, and ſuch like ſinnes, he is preſently counted a good man: ſuch a one indeede may be counted an honeſt man ciuilly, as [c] Abimelech was, but yet this outward honeſtie makes not a man iuſt and good in the ſight of God; ſo as he reputes him for his friend; thereto are required true faith and true repentance, teſtified by new obedience.

[c] Gen.20.6.

A man may goe farre in religion and not be the true friend of God.

Secondly, here alſo ſee, that neither the knowledg of Gods word, nor the hearing of it with ſome gladneſſe, and bringing forth ſome fruits, nor yet to be able to conceiue a prayer for the forme thereof; that none of theſe (I B ſay) no nor all of theſe, doe make a man the friend of God indeed; for all theſe may be in an euill man, who hath a purpoſe in his heart to liue in ſome ſinne, in whoſe heart as yet ther is no true faith, nor ſound repentance: without which (as we heard) no man is iuſt in the ſight of God, nor accounted for his friend. And therefore we muſt not content our ſelues with theſe things, but labour to be good and iuſt indeede. When affliction ſhall befall vs, or death approach, we would giue all the world, if it were in our hands, for good aſſurance that God were our friend: now then let vs labour for true faith and repentance, and teſtifie theſe by a cōſtant purpoſe, & a godly endeauour to pleaſe C God in all things, through the whole courſe of our liues; and then will the Lord eſteeme vs for his friends.

verſe. 46. For if you loue them that loue you, what reward ſhall yee haue? doe not the Publicans euen the ſame?

A ſecond reaſon to loue our enemies.

In theſe words our Sauiour Chriſt propoūds a ſecond reaſon to perſwade his Diſciples and hearers to loue their enemies, and to the ende it may take the deeper roote in their hearts, he repeats the ſame againe in the next verſe, which in effect is the ſame with this. The D words are plaine, if we know what Publicans were; Publicans therefore were officers that gathered tol and tribute, taxes, and rents, of the Iewes, for the Romane Emperour, to whom the Iewes were in ſubiection. Now in the gathering of it they vſed much iniuſtice and oppreſſion, for which cauſe they were hated of the Iewes, aboue all other people, and eſteemed moſt baſely of. Now (ſaith Chriſt) though theſe Publicans be void of all good conſcience, yet they will loue their friends, of whom they are loued. And hence Chriſt reaſons thus, If you my hearers doe but loue them that loue you, yee doe but as theſe Publicans doe; but you muſt doe more then ſuch vngodly perſons doe: and therefore you muſt loue your very enemies.

Publicans.

Here firſt obſerue, that Chriſt doth not forbid one friend to loue another, for then he ſhould be contrary to himſelfe; but here he cõdemnes carnal loue, whereby one man loues another, onely becauſe he is loued againe, which in effect is nothing elſe, but for a man to loue himſelfe in another. And here to note the true maner of louing our neighbour, this Rule muſt be remembred, that all the commandements of the ſecond Table muſt be practiſed in and with the firſt commandement, touching the loue of God: thus father and mother muſt be honoured, in God and for God; and thus one man muſt loue another in God; yea though he be his enemie, becauſe he is Gods creature and beares his image, as well as he himſelfe doth; yea, he is by God commended to our loue. This muſt be the ground, though for other reſpects our loue may increaſe towards our brother.

hat things e muſt ſpe- ally addict ur ſelues nto.

What reward ſhall ye haue? Here Chriſt would teach vs ſingular wiſdome for the ordering of our liues: namely, that we giue our ſelues eſpecially to the doing of ſuch things, as with God haue promiſe of reward: what mooued Moſes to refuſe to be called the ſonne of Pharohs daughter, to forſake the pleaſures and riches of Egypt, and to chooſe to ſuffer affliction with Gods people? the word of God is plaine, f he had reſpect to the recompence of reward. But this doctrine is not regarded, elſe how ſhould all places abound ſo much with idle perſons, & ſuch as giue themſelues wholly to gaming and companie keeping, to ſports & delight: now what reward can theſe look for at Gods hands, vnleſſe it be the wages of ſinne, which is eternal death? Let vs therfore beware of ſuch a courſe, and learne to abound in good works, which are things good and profitable.

f Heb.11. 25,26.

Chriſtians muſt abound in loue.

Doe not the Publicanes euen the ſame? Our Sauiour Chriſts intent in this inſtance, is to ſhew that his Diſciples, and ſo all profeſſors of the Goſpel, muſt goe beyond all other people in duties of loue: indeede their whole life ſhould be ſpent in the practiſe of this vertue, Epheſ. 5. 1. Walke, that this, leade the courſe of your life in loue: and the ſtate of the Church is, to dwell in loue, 1. Ioh. 4. 16. The reaſon is great, for Chriſtians of all other, receiue the greateſt meaſure of loue from God, through Ieſus Chriſt, and therefore they muſt abound in this grace; firſt towards God, and then one towards an other: this is the badge of a Chriſtian, and the grace of our religion, and therefore let vs ſhew it forth.

verſe 47. And if yee bee friendly to your brethren onely, what ſingular thing doe ye? doe not euen the Publicanes likewiſe?

Chriſts drift in theſe words, is further to inforce the dutie of loue, to the ſame effect with the former verſe. The word tranſlated be freindly, betokens the friendſhip which was ſhewed in that countrie in ſalutations, by embracing: now ſaith Chriſt, the very Publicanes wil kindly embrace their friends, therefore you muſt doe more.

Kind vſage of an enemy.

We obſerued before three branches of kind vſage to be ſhewed towards an enemie; to wit, to ſpeake well of him, to pray for him, and to doe him good: now here we may annexe a fourth, euen friendly ſalutation. This Chriſt enioyned to his Diſciples, when he ſent them to preach, when yee come into an houſe ſalute the ſame. Matt. 10. 12. although it may be, afterward they curſed it, becauſe it was vnworthie. And hence we may learne to be kind and curteous in ſalutation to our profeſſed enemies.

Friendly ſalutation.

Obiect. 1. This is to countenance them in their ſinne, and wrong doing vnto vs? Anſ. In ſaluting an enemy, we muſt put a difference betweene his perſon and his ſinne; we muſt ſhew kindneſſe to his perſon, but not countenance his ſinne: nay, when we embrace his perſon, if occaſion be offered, we muſt diſgrace his ſinne.

Ob. 2. 2. Ioh. 10. If any man bring not this doctrine, bid him not God ſpeede. Anſ. Iohn there ſpeakes of ſuch perſons as are enemies to God, to his truth, and to his Church, and ſuch indeede we muſt not embrace: 2. Kin. 3. 14. Eliſha ſaith to Iehoram the idolatrous King of Iſrael, that hee would not haue looked vpon him, nor ſeene him, had it not beene for reuerence of Iehoſaphat the good king of Iudah then preſent. But priuate enemies of whome Chriſt here ſpeaketh, muſt alwaies be kindly vſed in ſalutation. And yet here is a caſe, wherein this kind ſalutation may be denied to one that is not a publike enemie: to wit, when a ſuperiour omitteth it as a part of chaſtiſement and correction vpon the inferiour. Thus Dauid denied libertie to Abſalom to come in his ſight for a time, after he had pardoned him for killing Amnon, 2. Sam. 14. 24. but among equalls and priuate men this muſt be practiſed; yea, we muſt ſalute kindly though they ſalute vs not againe.

v. 48. Be yee therefore perfect, as your Father which is in heauen is perfect.

Why God commands men to be perfect.

Here Chriſt inferres an excellent conſequent from the former reaſons, wherein he exhorts his Diſciples to perfection in all the duties of loue. In it obſerue two parts; a commandement to be perfect; and a patterne thereof in God. For the firſt, why doth God command that which no man can performe, for who can be perfect? Anſ. God giues this and ſuch like commandements for diuers cauſes: firſt, in regard of his elect, for to them Gods commandements ſerue as meanes of obedience, God by his grace enabling them to doe that which by command he requires: for as in the creation Gods commandement gaue beeing to the creatures, ſo is it after a ſort in the regeneration, as here, be yee perfect, is a meanes to make Gods children perfect. Secondly, in regard of the wicked, as well to reſtraine corruption in them, for the peace of his Church, as alſo to leaue them without excuſe, ſeeing the beſt workes they doe are ſhort of that which they are bound to performe.

Of perfection.

To come to the vertue commanded, which is perfection in duties of loue. Perfection in generall, is twofold: of the Law, and of the Goſpel. Perfection of the Law, is when a man loues God and his neighbour, according to the rigour of the law. This is in no man in this life, but this ſhall be in Gods elect in the life to come. Perfection of the Goſpel, is that endeauour of obedience which God accepts in Chriſt, at the hands of his children. This diſtinction the Apoſtle maketh, Philip. 3. for firſt he ſaith, hee hath not attained to perfection, v. 12. meaning, the perfection of the law: and yet after he ſpeaketh of himſelfe and others, as beeing perfect, v.15. Let vs (ſaith he) as many as be perfect, be thus minded: that is, as many as be perfect according to the Goſpel. Thus were Noah, Abraham, Iob, Zacharie, and Elizabeth perfect, that is, ſyncere and vpright before God both in heart and life: and this is that perfection which Chriſt here requireth.

Legall.

Euangelical.

Further, this Euangelicall perfection hath 2. parts; either of mans nature, or of his actions. The perfection of mans nature is by regeneration; for as in originall ſinne, is both guilt of Adams ſinne imputed, and corruption inherent, which is the ſeed of all ſinne: ſo in regeneration, which is the renuing of mans corrupt nature, there is an aboliſhing of corruption, and a reſtoring of grace in euery part and facultie of the ſoule: for looke how far corruption ſpread it ſelfe by Adams ſinne, ſo far doth grace extend by regeneration. Of this perfection there be three branches; Firſt, an vpright iudgement in the minde, whereby a man vnderſtands and beleeues not onely the grounds of religiō, but euery other doctrine truely grounded in the word, and is ready to receiue it, as it is further reuealed; this is ſinceritie in iudgement: whereby it is plaine, that to hold onely the grounds of religion, and for other points, to follow the time, is a great imperfection and want of ſinceritie. Secondly, a pure and honeſt heart, whereby a man is free from any purpoſe to liue in ſinne; and on the contrarie is inclined to euery thing that is good. Thirdly, a good conſcience, giuing teſtimonie according to the word, and ſo excuſing, that a man may ſay with Paul, [a] I know nothing by my ſelfe: meaning, for which he ſhould condemne himſelfe. And looke, where nature is renued, there theſe three are neuer wanting.

Perfection of mans actions, ſtandeth in two things; Firſt, in bewailing his wants and imperfections, knowne and ſecret; for it is a degree of perfection, to bewaile our imperfectiō. Secondly, in ſetting himſelfe from a ſincere heart, to obey God in all his commandements, as occaſion is offered: Pſal. 119.6. I ſhall not be confounded, when I haue reſpect to all thy commandements: and this indeede, is the perfection of a Chriſtian: halfe obedience is nothing; for as [b] Iames ſaith, hee that failes in one commandement of purpoſe and cuſtome, is guiltie of al, becauſe if occaſion were offered, hee would breake all the reſt.

Perfection

b Iam.2.1

But it will be ſaid, a man may haue both theſe, and yet want much of perfection. Anſwer. A thing is ſaid to be perfect two waies; either in parts, when it hath all the parts of perfection, though in weake meaſure; or in degrees, when it hath a full meaſure of perfection in euery part. A child new borne is a perfect man in regard of his parts, hauing all the parts and members of a man; but it is not perfect in degree, till euery part grow vp to his perfection. Now the child of God when he is regenerate, hath all parts of perfection both in ſoule and bodie, though in weake meaſure; but in this life, he is not perfect in degrees, which is that full meaſure the Law requireth. 2.Chro.15.17. The heart of Aſa is ſaid to bee perfect towards God all his daies: and yet the high places were not taken away; yea he failed in ſeeking to the Phyſitian, and not vnto God, chap. 16. 12. Aſa then had perfection of parts, but to perfection of degrees he attained not in this life, and therfore he failed in theſe particulars, through the weakeneſſe of ſanctification, which here is not finiſhed till death.

Perfection i parts, and degrees.

So then it is plaine, there is a perfection in the child of God, though ioyned with much weakneſſe, euen in this life; his nature is perfect beeing renued in ſoule to ſound iudgement, to an honeſt heart, & a good conſcience: his actions are perfect in Gods acceptance thorough Chriſt, whiles he bewailes his imperfection, and endeauours ſincerely to pleaſe God in all things. This is that which Chriſt inioyns to his diſciples, this we muſt labour for, if wil we reſemble our heauēly father, we cā get no higher in this life; but let vs attaine to this, and in the life to come we ſhall be perfect in degrees, for the our regeneration ſhal be accompliſhed.

Who faile in ſeeking perfection.

But herein men faile and come ſhort of their dutie; as firſt, all thoſe that ſpend their ſtrength and wit to get the things of this world; theſe men little thinke of this perfection which the Lord requires in his children; it may be they will heare the word, but yet their hearts are ſo glued to the earth and earthly things, that they ſauour not of regeneration, they know not what it meanes: but if they will be Gods children, they muſt follow Iehoſaphat, 2. Chr. 17. 6. who lift vp his heart to the waies of the Lord; for that is the meanes to come to perfection.

Secondly, thoſe alſo are reprooued, that content themſelues with a ſmall meaſure of knowledge, and doe not ſtriue after perfection, as Chriſt requireth; how can they haue a ſound iudgement, which ſtudie not to know the doctrine of the Scripture?

Thirdly, that general want of Chriſtian perfection is here approoued, when men content themſelues, to yeeld to the outward duties of the firſt Table, that concerne Gods worſhip, and yet neglect the duties of the ſecond Table, that concerne their brethren in generall, and pertaine to their functions and callings in particular. This is a common fault in Magiſtrates, Miniſters, Parents, Maſters, Seruants, &c. they will be Chriſtians in the Church, but they neglect to ſhew the power thereof in their callings; but this is a grieuous want of ſinceritie, which makes them farre vnlike their heauenly father: for he is euer like himſelfe, and therefore looke what men profeſſe in Gods worſhip, that muſt they practiſe in their callings. A Magiſtrate muſt be a Chriſtian vpon the Bench, as well as in the Church; in the adminiſtration of iuſtice, as well as in the Congregation: and ſo muſt Miniſters, Maſters, and all eſtates. God allowes not of their ſeruice in the Church, that ſerue their wicked luſts at home, Ier. 7. 9, 10. Gods ſacrifice vnder the law muſt be whole and ſound, not halt and lame, or maimed; and ſuch ſhould our obedience be vnder the Goſpel, with ſincere reſpect to all Gods commandements. It profited Herod little to heare Iohn gladly, & to do many things, ſo long as he kept his brothers wife; nor Iudas to follow Chriſt, while his heart was vpon the bagge. Let our practiſe of religion therefore, ſhew forth the truth of our publike profeſſion, and ſo ſhall we in ſome ſort reſemble our heauenly Father.

C H A P. 6.

v. 1. Take heede that you giue not your Almes before men, to be ſeene of them, or elſe yee ſhall haue no reward of your Father which is in heauen.

Part of
mon.

IN the former Chapter, the Euangeliſt hath faithfully recorded three parts of our Sauiour Chriſts Sermon, and here he beginneth the fourth, which reacheth to the 19. verſe of this Chapter: wherein our Sauiour Chriſt goeth about to reforme his hearers of all abuſes in doing good works, and he inſtanceth in thoſe three; Almes deedes, Prayer, and Faſting: not ſo much commanding them, as giuing direction for the right manner of performing them; ſo as they may be acceptable vnto God. From the firſt verſe to the fift, he intreateth of Almes deedes, propounding two ſeuerall commandements, touching the manner of giuing Almes. The firſt is in this 1. v. Take heed that you giue not your Almes before men, to be ſeene of them: which he enforceth by an effectuall reaſon in the words following, or elſe yee ſhall haue no reward of your Father which is in heauen. And then exemplifieth it by a particular example of a corrupt manner of giuing Almes, borrowed from the ambitious practiſe of the Scribes and Phariſies, v. 2. The ſecond commandement touching Almes-giuing, is in the 3. verſe, whereof he renders a reaſon in the 4. verſe.

Of Almes-deedes.

For the firſt commandement, Take heede, &c. This may ſeeme to be repugnant to that precept giuen before, Chap. 5. 16. Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good workes. But here is no contrarietie, if we marke well: for in the former chapter wee are commanded to doe good workes before men, that they may ſee them, and glorifie God for the ſame. Now here wee are not forbidden ſimply to doe good workes before men, but to doe them before men for this ende, to haue our praiſe of men, that we might be glorified for doing them, howſoeuer it went with God.

reading.

Before we come to the Rule, the words are ſomewhat to be ſcanned; for whereas we read them thus, Giue not your Almes before men, &c. ſome auncient Churches, after other copies and tranſlations read them thus, Doe not your righteouſneſſe or iuſtice before men: which muſt not ſeeme ſtrãge, that in Gods book there ſhould be diuerſe readings: for in former ages, before Printing was inuented, the Scriptures of God were conuaied from hand to hand, by meanes of writing: now they that writ out the copies of Scripture, did now and then miſtake ſome words and letters by negligence, or ignorance, and put one thing for another, whereupon doe come theſe diuers readings: yet we muſt not thinke, that the word of God is hereby maimed, or made imperfect, for the true ſenſe of the holy Ghoſt remaine ſound and perfect, though it may be we cannot diſcerne of the right reading. And the ſenſe of Scripture is rather to be iudged the word of God, then the words and letters thereof. Now it being here vncertaine, whether reading to follow, (for either of them containe a ſenſe conuenient to the place) therefore I wil exclude neither, but from them both propound this inſtruction.

Almesgiuing is iuſtice.

That the giuing of Almes is Iuſtice, and a part of Righteouſneſſe which God requires at our hands. This the Apoſtle ſheweth plainly out of the a Pſalmes, 2. Cor. 9.9. He hath diſtributed and giuen to the poore, his righteouſneſſe remaineth for euer. And in common reaſon, it muſt be ſo, for a man is but a Steward ouer the goods which he poſſeſſeth, the poore with whom he liueth, hath title to part thereof, and he muſt giue vnto them by b Gods expreſſe commandement: ſo as vnleſſe he giue him in ſome ſort, he plaies the theefe, and robbes the poore, by keeping backe that which is their due.

a Pſal.112.9.

b Deut.15.8.

Prouiſion for the poore a dutie.

In regard whereof we muſt learne: firſt, to acknowledge that prouiding of maintenance for the poore, is not a worke of freedome or libertie, left to mens choiſe, whether they will doe it or no, but a matter of iuſtice, and the not doing of it is iniuſtice, againſt the law of God and of nature, which require that the poore ſhould be maintained at home without begging abroad. Secondly, this ſhould mooue vs, to lay aſide ſome portion of our goods to giue vnto the poore, for the poore haue intereſt vnto them: and for this cauſe we ought to cut off our ſuperfluities in feaſting, in attire, in ſports and pleaſures, that ſo we may be better inabled to doe iuſtice in giuing vnto the poore, for hereby commonly men are diſabled to doe this part of iuſtice. Thirdly, this ſhould teach vs according to our places, to ſee thoſe good orders well maintained and ſet forward, which are prouided for the conuenient releefe and maintenance of the poore; for neglecting of them is iniuſtice, and a kind of theft againſt the poore.

What makes giuing to be almes.

Secondly, obſerue the word tranſlated Almes: it is very pithie, ſignifying mercie and pitie; whence we may learne: Firſt, what it is that makes our giuing to the poore to be Almes: it is not the thing giuen, but the mercifull & pitifull heart of the giuer, be the thing neuer ſo ſmall, as was the poore widows mite: & therefore all our almes muſt proceede from a pitifull heart. Secondly, it ſheweth what a one that partie muſt be that is to be releeued, namely, ſuch a one as is to be pitied, not our luſtie beggers, but infants, orphanes, the lame, blind, weake, maimed, and aged perſons.

Scope.

2. Thus much for the words: now followeth the commandement it ſelfe: Take heede that you giue not your Almes before men to be ſeene of them. This commandement tendeth to this ende, to teach men how to auoide the vnlawfull manner of giuing Almes: for a good thing may be done in an ill manner, and vſually men offend this way in their good deeds. Now this commandement preſcribes a double circumſpection in giuing Almes: firſt, touching the ground: ſecondly, touching the ende of almes giuing. The ground of our Almes muſt not be the pride of our hearts; this Chriſt forewarnes vs of, if we looke it ſhould be good & acceptable in the ſight of God. This is a point of great importance, and therefore for the better obſeruing of it, I wil here ſhew two points: I. what this pride is: II. why it muſt be ſo carefully auoided in our almes deedes.

A bad g of our al giuing.

Pride of heart.

By pride, I meane not outward pride in apparel, but that which is inward in the ſoule, conſiſting partly in the mind, and partly in the will and affections.

Pride of minde.

Pride of minde, is a corrupt diſpoſition thereof, whereby a man thinkes himſelfe to be better, and more excellent then indeede he is: this was the ſinne of the Phariſie, who boaſted vnto God of his owne goodneſſe, Luk. 18.11.12. And hence it came that the Church of Laodicea a gloried in her ſelfe, ſaying, I am rich, and increaſed in wealth, and lacke nothing; when as indeede ſhee was poore, and blinde, and miſerable, and naked. This conceit is moſt dangerous, eſpecially in the point of grace, cauſing many to deceiue their owne ſoules, by thinking they haue grace when they haue none, and ouerweening that which they haue.

a Reu.3.1

Pride in wi

Pride in will, is an inward affection, whereby a man is not contented with that eſtate wherein God hath placed him, but deſires a better. This befell b Adam and Eue, who ſought to be like vnto God himſelfe; and this taketh hold of moſt men in euery age.

b Gen.3.

Practiſe of pride.

Now from theſe two proceedeth that practiſe of pride in mans life, whereby he endeauours to doe whatſoeuer he can for his owne praiſe and glorie. This pride is not in ſome few perſons alone, but in euery man naturally that comes of Adam, Chriſt Ieſus onely excepted. And where it takes place, it is ſo ſtrong, that it will not be croſſed: for rather then a man will not haue his will in this, he will commit any ſinne. This cauſed Abſalom to baniſh his father out of his owne kingdome: and Achitophel to hang himſelfe, when his counſell was refuſed: and ſome Popes (as hiſtories makes mention) to bequeath their ſoules vnto the deuill for the obtaining of the Popedom. And this is that inward corruption which Chriſt here forbiddes to be the ground of our Almes deeds.

Syluest. Platina, an Faſc. Temp.

Why pride muſt be a uoided.

II. Point. The reaſons why this inward pride muſt be carefully auoided, be theſe two. Firſt, becauſe whatſoeuer outward good work the child of God can doe by grace, the ſame may a wicked man doe through pride; as conceiue a prayer, preach the word, and practiſe the outward duties of repentance, of loue, and ſuch like: for pride is a ſinne that will counterfeit grace, and man cannot diſcerne it, but God onely. Secondly, many other ſinnes preuaile in the wicked, but pride is the ſin that troubleth the children of God, and when other ſinnes die, then will pride reuiue, yea it will ariſe out of grace it ſelfe: for the child of God will be proud, becauſe he is not proud: therefore Paul [c] muſt be buffeted by the meſſenger of Satan, leaſt he ſhould be puffed vp with abundance of reuelations.

2.Corin.

ow pride y be a-oided.

Now the way to auoid this dangerous ſinne ſtands in two things: firſt, we muſt be carefull to know the pride of our owne heart, for euery man hath it in him more or leſſe, and the more we ſee it, the leſſe it is; but the leſſe we ſee it, the more it is in vs indeede: and though we know nothing by our ſelues, yet let vs ſuſpect our ſelues hereof, and labour to ſee it in our hearts; for he that is the moſt humbled, is not altogether free from this inward pride: ſecondly, whē we ſee our pride, we muſt labour to ſubdue it; which we ſhall doe, firſt, by conſidering the iudgements of God vpon this ſinne: Were not our firſt parents caſt out of paradiſe when they would needes be as gods, and Herod was eaten vp of wormes when he tooke vnto himſelfe the glorie due vnto God, Act. 12. 23. Therefore Peter [d] ſaith, God reſiſteth the proud, and giueth grace to the humble. A man that would begge an almes, muſt not goe in proud apparell; and ſo he that would procure the fauour of God, muſt not come with a proud heart. Secondly, we muſt ſearch into our ſelues, and labour to ſee our owne wants and corruptions, as our blindnes of mind and ignorance, our vnbeleefe, &c. and the ſight of our ſinnes wil be a meanes to humble vs: for they that feele no wants in themſelues cannot chooſe but be puffed vp. Thirdly, we muſt meditate vpon the death and paſſion of Chriſt, which he endured for our redemption; how he ſweat water and blood, and ſuffered the wrath of God both in ſoule and bodie for our ſinnes; now how can a man thinke that Chriſt endured all this for him, and yet be not caſt downe with the ſight of his own ſinnes, which had a part in the cauſe of all the curſe that cauſed Chriſt to crie; My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken mee?

d 1.Pet.5.5.

euill end in Almes-giuing.

The ſecond branch of circumſpection in Almes-giuing here commanded, reſpects the end thereof: We muſt not giue Almes to be ſeene of men, that is, to get praiſe and fame among men. This caueat Chriſt giues for waightie cauſe: for the corruption of mans nature through the inſtigation of the deuil, cauſeth euery one almoſt to doe all good workes for wrong endes: why doe many toyle themſelues ſo much in their ordinarie callings? is it not partly for honour, partly for pleaſure, partly for profit? and doe not the moſt men propound this ende to themſelues herein, to maintaine their families? But though this be a good and commendable thing, yet neither that, nor the reſt are the right ends for which mē ſhould labour and trauell: the right ende of all, is the glorie of God in mans good, or the good of man in Gods glory; now when our good works proceed from an humble heart, which ſincerely intends the glorie of God in mans good, the is the worke pleaſing vnto God. Other ends or beginnings doe prophane mens labours; and therefore Chriſt giueth this caueat, to looke both to the beginning, and the ende of our Almes deedes.

Thus much of the commandement; the reaſon of it is this: Or elſe ye haue no reward of your Father which is in heauen: ſo the words are; ye haue no reward; and they are very ſignificant, importing thus much: If you doe your works from an humble heart, for Gods glorie in mans good, then you haue a reward laid vp for you in heauen; which though it appeares not preſently, yet it is as ſure as if you had it alreadie in poſſeſſion: but if you doe not ſo, you haue no reward laid vp for you by your heauenly father.

From this reaſon in generall we may gather, that he which hath grace to doe, if it be but one good worke (as to giue Almes) vpon a good ground, and for a good ende, ſhall neuer periſh, but ſhall receiue eternall life: which may be a notable motiue to prouoke euery man to doe good works: as alſo it prooues that the child of God cā neuer periſh or finally fal away; for nothing is loſt that is laid vp with god.

More particularly, firſt obſerue that the word reward, is not taken properly, but by reſemblance, thus: like as a labourer after hee hath done his worke, receiueth his wages; ſo the child of God hauing done that which God commandeth him, receiueth a reward. Secondly, it is ſaide of your father, to ſignifie that this reward is not merited, but is the free gift of a Father vnto his children. Laſtly, Chriſt ſaith your father, ſpeaking to all his hearers, among whome was Iudas, whome elſe-where he calls a deuill, and others, whom he knew to be none of Gods children, and yet beeing here a preacher and Miniſter of Circumciſion (as the Apoſtle [e] ſpeaketh) he leaueth the ſecret iudgement vnto God, and following the iudgement of hope and charitie, taketh all his hearers, to be the children of God: which is a notable preſident to all Gods Miniſters, for Chriſt here preaching of loue, practiſeth it; and ſo ought his ſeruants doe. This alſo condemneth the practiſe of thoſe, that vpon a little falling out will not ſticke to call others damned wretches, or reprobates; there is no charitie in ſuch cenſures: for loue alwaies hopes the beſt, 1. Cor. 13.

e Rom.15.8.

V. 2. Therefore when thou giueſt thine Almes, thou ſhalt not make a trumpet to be blowne before thee, as the Hypocrites doe in the Synagogues and in the ſtreetes, to be praiſed of men: verely I ſay vnto you, they haue their reward.

Here Chriſt propoundeth by way of prohibition, a particular example of the corrupt manner of Almes-giuing proceeding from pride of heart and ambition, borowed from the practiſe of the Scribes and Phariſies; and withall he annexeth in the end of the verſe an effectuall reaſon to mooue men to circumſpection about the ground and end of their Almes deedes.

A rule of interpretatiō.

The Expoſition. The originall is this: Thou ſhalt not blow a trumpet before thee: ſo that our tranſlation doth alſo expound the words of Chriſt, according to the common rule of Diuines; that words of of fact are oftentimes put for words of ſpeach: which beeing well obſerued, will cleare many places from falſe interpretation. Exod. 13. 2. God ſaith to Moſes, Sanctifie vnto mee all the firſt borne; and to f Ieſua, Make thee ſharpe kniues, and circumciſe the ſonnes of Iſrael, that is, command them to be ſanctified, and circumciſed. Ier. 1. 10. I haue ſet thee ouer nations and kingdomes (ſaith God to Ieremie) to plucke vp, to roote out, to deſtroie, and throw downe, to build, and to plant, that is, to preach, and by preaching to pronounce that I the Lord will doe theſe things. Ioh. 4. 1. Chriſt is ſaid to baptize, that is, (as the next verſe imports) he commanded his Diſciples to baptize: and, Act. 10. 15. God is ſaid to purifie things; that is, he pronounceth things to be pure. As hypocrites doe in the Synagogue.] The word hypocrite, betokeneth one that takes vpon him to repreſent the perſon of another, as players doe, who ſometime repreſent mighty Kings, otherwhiles poore beggers, and to them it properly belongeth. Now by reſemblance it is applied to any, that outwardly faigne themſelues to haue that goodnes and holines which they haue not: for hypocriſie is nothing elſe, but a ſhew of that goodnes outwardly, which indeede is not in the heart. Now in this inſtance is included a ſecond reaſon of the former commandement touching the manner of Almes-giuing, ſeruing to make all Chriſts hearers circumſpect, both for the ground and ende of their good workes; and the reaſon ſtands thus; That which hypocrites doe, you muſt not doe: but they doe their Almes to be praiſed of men, as is plaine in this example: and therefore you are not to giue almes to be ſeene and praiſed of men.

f Ioſh. 5. 2.

Hypocrite, what it ſignifies.

A propertie of hypocriſie.

Out of this example we may learne theſe Inſtructions. Firſt, that it is the propertie of an hypocrite to do good workes for falſe ends; as, to be ſeene of men, and to be praiſed of men: for indeede an hypocrite in his heart makes choiſe not of God, but of men to be the Iudges and approouers of his good workes. And this is groſſe hypocriſie, because hereby the honour due to God is taken from him and giuen to men; for God ought to be the Iudge and approuer of all our actions.

Now as Chriſt laies this ſinne vpon the Scribes and Phariſies, ſo ought euery one of vs to lay it on our ſelues, conſidering our ſelues as we are by nature out of Chriſt; for ſo we A make not God, but men the Iudges and approouers of our actions: this will hereby appeare euidently, for when we doe a good thing, and yet thereby incurre the diſpraiſe of men, are we not more grieued thereat, then when by ſinne we offend God himſelfe? which could not be, but that our hearts doe more reſpect the cenſure of men, then of the Lord. And to cleare this point yet further, conſider this, that the roote of hypocriſie and of Atheiſme is in our nature, whereby naturally we doe theſe three things, we Loue, feare, and truſt in men more then in God, and therefore doe make men the Iudges of our actions. 1. for Loue, are we not grieued when we our ſelues or our B freinds are diſhonoured; and on the contrarie, when we our ſelues or our freinds are praiſed; are we not glad and reioyce? but when God is diſhonoured, who is grieued? or whoſe heart doth leape for ioye, when God is glorified? which argues plainely that our affection of loue is more inclined towards our ſelues and to our freinds then vnto God. 2. for feare, are not moſt men more afraide when they offend a mortall man like themſelues, then when they offend the euerliuing God? 3. for truſt and confidence in the time of affliction, moſt men are more comforted if ſome friend promiſe them helpe, then they are by all the promiſes of God himſelfe in his word. But men will ſay, that they loue and feare, and truſt in God aboue all: This indeede is the ordinarie profeſſion of ignorant people: but the truth is, that by nature C we refuſe God to be our iudge & our approouer, and appeale vnto men: and therefore we muſt labor to ſee and feele, and to bewaile this hypocriſie, and to be indued with the contrary grace whereby we may ſimply and ſincerely ſeeke to be approoued of God in all our actions.

We mak men,not God,the iudges of actions.

Secondly, in this example note one euident cauſe of the diſorder which was among the Iewes in reſpect of their poore: for they begged in the high waies, in the ſtreetes of the cities, and gates of the Temple, flat againſt Gods commandement, who would not haue ſuch a begger in Iſrael: other occaſions there were of D this abuſe, but one principall cauſe is here noted; namely, that priuate perſons were permitted to giue their priuate almes vnto the poore with their owne hands in publicke places. This was a great diſorder, and the cauſe of many beggers: for priuate men could not diſcerne the particular wants of all that begged ſo; and therefore God had otherwiſe prouided for them in the olde Teſtament, as he ſhewed before. And in the new Teſtament there were choſen faithfull men called Deacons in euery congregation, who were to looke vnto their poore, to collect for them, and to diſtribute to euery one according to their neceſſitie. It is not vnlawfull for a priuate man to giue Almes in publicke place if need require: but where the poore are no otherwiſe prouided for, then by ſuch priuate releiſe, it is a great diſorder: like as it is in a family, where the children and ſeruants know not where and when to haue their dinners: for the poore are Gods children in his family, and ought to be prouided for in better ſort then by ſuch priuate releefes: and therefore where good order is wanting for prouiſion for the poore, it ought in conſcience to be begun, & where it is begun, men muſt carefully maintaine and continue the ſame.

Thirdly, in this example of a corrupt manner of Almes-giuing, ſee the concurrence of ſundrie ſinnes. Firſt, here is noted hypocriſie, which were enough to condemne a man; but yet with this their goes ambition, and with both, an open contempt and breach of good order in prouiding for the poore: which ſhewes euidently that no ſinne goes alone, but ordinarily hath his companions: for ſinnes are ſo infolded one in another, that he which commits one, is not free from any other: this may plainly be ſhewed by many examples. In Adams ſin there was the breach of the whole law in euery commandement, either directly or by conſequence: for he ſhewed euident want of loue to God, in beleeuing Satan more then God; therein he choſe Satan for his God, he worſhipped Satan, and tooke Gods name in vaine; he ſhewed alſo euident want of brotherly loue, for hereby he became a murtherer not onely of himſelfe, but of all his poſteritie: and thus doe ſinnes concurre in euery wicked action, in which regard it may be ſaid with g Iames, that hee which faileth in one commandement, is guiltie of all: which muſt admoniſh vs to make conſcience of euery ſinne: for we can not liue in any one, but we muſt needs runne into many other.

g Iam.2.10.

Verely I ſay vnto you, they haue their reward. Theſe words containe the reaſon of the former prohibition, wherein we may ſee the vanitie of this giuing of Almes: for the praiſe of men is all their reward; they haue none with God, as we ſhewed in the former verſe.

V. 3. But when thou doeſt thine Almes, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doth:

4. That thine Almes may be ſeene in ſecret, and thy Father that ſeeth in ſecret, he will reward thee openly.

Theſe words containe Chriſts ſecond commandement touching the manner of Almes-giuing, with the reaſon thereof. The commandement is in the third verſe, and it beareth this ſence; that if the left hand could vnderſtand, yet it ſhould not know what our right hand gaue; and therefore much more muſt we A conceale the ſame from men. Yet here Chriſt forbids not all giuing of Almes in open place, or in the ſight of men, but his meaning is to reſtraine the ambition of the heart after the praiſe of men: the giuer muſt not intend or deſire that men ſhould ſee him giue almes, that they might praiſe him: but his heart muſt ſimply and ſincerely ſeeke to approoue it ſelfe vnto God. This will appeare to be the right meaning of our Sauiour Chriſt, by comparing this verſe with the firſt: for here Chriſt reneweth the commandement there giuen, and forbiddeth the corrupt deſire of the heart after vaine glorie in the giuing of almes.

The meaning.

Now for our better vnderſtanding of this commandement, firſt, we will ſhew what is here forbidden: and ſecondly what is commanded. B Here are two things forbidden; firſt, all deſire or intention of mens beholding of vs, when we giue our Almes: ſecondly, all reſpect and intent to pleaſe our ſelues in Almes-giuing: for the left hand muſt not know what the right hand giueth. The thing here commanded is this, that he which giues almes, muſt doe it ſimply intending and deſiring onely to pleaſe God, and to approoue his worke vnto God without all by-reſpects of mens praiſe or approbation.

Here then firſt is condemned the doctrine of the Church of Rome, which teacheth men to doe good workes, with opinion of meriting life euerlaſting thereby at the hands of God: for that is farre more then to doe them for this end C to get praiſe of men, which yet is here forbidden: & therefore the other muſt needs be abominable.

Vſe. 1.
Rhem on Math.6. ſect.2.

Secondly, ſeeing in our well-doing we muſt ſimply intend to approoue our ſelues vnto God, it ſhall not be amiſſe here to ſhew, how we may ſo do our good workes that God may approoue thereof. Hereunto foure things are required: faith, loue, humilitie, and ſinceritie or ſimplicitie. For the firſt, in euery good worke there muſt be a two-fold faith: Iuſtifying faith, and a generall faith. Iuſtifying faith, whereby the perſon doing the worke muſt be reconciled to God, and ſtand before God a true member of Chriſt: for of this it is ſaid, a Without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God. And Chriſt ſaith, D b Euery branch that beareth not fruit in mee, the Father taketh away: and without mee ye can doe nothing: where it is plaine, that whoſoeuer would doe a worke acceptable to God, muſt firſt be in Chriſt: and the reaſon is euident: for firſt the perſon working muſt be acceptable to God, before his worke can be approoued: but no mans perſon is approoued of God, before he be in Chriſt: and therefore iuſtifying faith whereby we are vnited vnto Chriſt is chiefly neceſſarie. By generall faith I meane that, whereby a man beleeues that the worke he doth is pleaſing vnto God. Hereof c Paul ſaith, whatſoeuer is not of faith, is ſinne. A worke may be good in it ſelfe, and yet ſinnefull in the doer, if he want this generall faith. Now vnto this are two things required: firſt, a word of God commanding the worke, and preſcribing the manner of doing it: ſecondly, a promiſe of bleſſing vpon the doing of it: for euery good worke hath his promiſe, both of the things of this life, and of a better: theſe things muſt be knowne and beleeued: vpon theſe grounds we muſt pray, giue Almes, and doe euery good worke, and ſo ſhall they be approoued of God. Now by this double faith required in euery good worke, we ſee, how thoſe that are bound to practiſe good workes, (as euery one is more or leſſe) ought to labour to be acquainted with the word of God, that they may do their works in faith: for els though the worke be good, it may be ſinne in them becauſe it is not of faith; which is the miſerable ſtate of ignorant perſons, who through want of faith, cannot doe good works in a good manner.

c Rom.14.23

2. in loue.

2 The ſecond thing required, in the doing of a good worke, is loue: loue (I ſay) ioyned with faith: for faith worketh by loue, Gal. 5. 9. Indeed faith doth ſome things of it ſelfe; as apprehend, receiue, and applie Chriſt and his righteouſnes to the beleeuer, which is the proper worke of faith: but other things it doth by the helpe of an other: and ſo faith bringeth forth the works of mercie, and performeth the duties of the firſt and ſecond table; not properly by it ſelfe, but by the helpe of loue: and therefore here I ſay, that in euery good worke is required that loue whereby faith worketh. Now the kinds of loue required in well-doing are two: firſt, the loue of God in Chriſt, for as we know God in Chriſt, ſo muſt we loue him: ſecondly, the loue of our brethren, yea of our enemies: for howſoeuer in our vnderſtanding theſe two may be diſtinguiſhed, yet in practiſe they muſt neuer be ſeuered; but muſt alwaies goe hand in hand, to mooue vs to doe the works of mercie, and all the duties of our calling; as Paul ſaith of himſelfe and the reſt of the Apoſtles, The loue of God conſtraineth vs to preach the Goſpel, 2. Cor. 5. 14.

3. in humilitie.

3 The third thing required in doing a good worke well, is humilitie, whereby a man eſteemeth himſelfe, to be but a voluntarie and reaſonable inſtrument of God therein. This vertue will make a man giue the honour of the worke to the principall Agent, that is to God himſelfe: who worketh in vs both to will and to doe of his good pleaſure.

4. in ſimplicitie.

4 The fourth thing required in wel-doing, is ſimplicitie, or ſingleneſſe of heart: whereby a man in doing a good worke intendeth ſimply and directly to honour and pleaſe God, without all by-reſpects to his owne praiſe, or the pleaſing of men. This is a ſpeciall vertue directing a man to the right end in euery good worke, which is the obedience and honour of God in mans good. This vertue was in Paul, [d] who in ſimplicitie and godly pureneſſe had his conuerſation in the world: thus he preached the Goſpel: and ſo ought we to doe euery good worke. Now that this ſinceritie may ſhew it ſelfe, we muſt take heede of a ſpeciall vice which is contrarie vnto it, namely, the guile of the ſpirit, mentioned Pſal. 32. 2. which maketh a man intend and propound falſe ends and by-regards in doing good works, as his owne praiſe and delight, or to pleaſe men thereby. And that we may auoid this Spirituall guile, we are to know, that it may & doth vſually preuaile with men in foure caſes: I. when thoſe doe practiſe vertue in whom God onely reſtraines the contrarie vice: thus ciuill honeſt men that haue no religion, may practiſe iuſtice, temperance, mercie, and other morall vertues, becauſe they are not inclined to iniuſtice, intemperance, and the contrarie vices: but theſe actions in them are no good works before God, becauſe they proceede not from a ſanctified heart, ſincerely intending to obey and glorifie God thereby. II. When men do good works for feare of diuine iudgement, and the penalties of mens lawes: and ſuch for the moſt part is the repentance of the ſicke: I graunt indeede that ſome doe truely repent in this eſtate; but commonly ſuch repentance is vnſound, and proceedeth not from a ſingle heart; but from feare: whereby, being vnder Gods hand, they ſeeke to auoide his iudgement. Such alſo are the outward duties of religion performed by our common Proteſtants, who come to Church, and receiue the Sacraments chiefly for cuſtome ſake, and to auoid the danger of mens lawes. III. When men doe good workes for the honour and praiſe of men. This is a dangerous thing: vpon this ground a man may preach the word, vſe prayer, and profeſſe the Goſpel; yea, and be zealous for Gods glorie as Iehu was: and hence it comes, that many fal away to looſenes of life from a ſtrict profeſſion of religion, becauſe they receiued not the truth in ſimplicitie of heart, with purpoſe onely to obey and pleaſe God, but rather to get the praiſe of men. IV. When men doe good workes from ſome corruption of heart preuailing in them: as when a man is both proud and couetous, yet more proud then couetous: couetouſnes bids him, not to giue to the poore; but yet pride deſiring the praiſe of men preuailing in him, cauſeth him to giue to the poore. And ſo when couetouſnes preuailes in a proud man, it will cauſe him to abſtaine from riot and proud apparell, which yet his pride would perſwade him vnto. In all theſe caſes Spirituall guile corrupts the work that otherwiſe is good in it ſelfe: and therefore we muſt haue a watchfull eye vnto ſingleneſſe of heart in our welldoing, and to the reſt of the vertues before named, that ſo we may be able to ſay with good conſcience, that our workes are ſuch as God approoueth.

V. 4. That thine Almes may be ſecret, and thy Father that ſeeth in ſecret, hee will re- ward thee openly.

Here is the reaſon whereby Chriſt enforceth the former commandement, and it hath two parts: the firſt is drawne from a ſpeciall propertie in God, to ſee in ſecret: the ſecond is from his bountie, in rewarding openly.

God the ſecret ſeer.

For the firſt: the words are thus in the originall, and thy father which is a ſeer in ſecret: for the word there vſed ſignifieth a diſcerning ſeer: whereby Chriſt would teach vs, that God ſees & beholds things that no man can ſee, euen the ſecret thoughts and deſires of mans heart.

Vſe. 1.

Hence we muſt learne three things: I. to examine our ſelues ſtrictly not onely of our groſſe and open ſinnes, which all the world may ſee; but alſo of our moſt inward and hidden corruptions, and when we cannot ſee them, yet we muſt ſuſpect our ſelues of our ſecret wants: for though men knowe them not, no nor wee our ſelues, yet God the ſecret ſeer beholdeth them. 2 II. Neuer to hide our ſinnes within our ſelues, but freely to lay them open before God to our owne ſhame, yea to confeſſe our vnknowne ſinnes: we muſt not like Adam, ſew fig-leaues together to couer our nakedneſſe, or flie from God thinking to hide our ſelues from his ſight: for he diſcerneth in ſecret. 3 III. To be carefull not onely to doe good works, but alſo to do them in an holy manner, from good grounds, and to a right ende: for God ſeeth ſecrets, and will not bee ſhifted off with falſe ſhewes. a Dauid ſaith; I haue kept thy precepts and thy teſtimonies, becauſe all my wayes are before thee. And the rather muſt we be mooued hereunto, becauſe God knowing what is in mans heart, doth oftentimes prooue men with temptations, that he may diſcouer the guile of their hearts: and therefore that we may eſcape the iudgements of God due vnto hypocriſie, wee muſt labour to do all good duties in ſinglenes of heart.

a Pſal.119. 168.

The ſecond reaſon drawn from Gods bountie vnto them that in ſinglenes of heart doe good works, is in theſe words; he will reward thee openly: wherein he preuenteth this obiection, which ſome of his hearers might make againſt his former precept. If I may not do good workes to be ſeene of men, then ſhall I looſe my labour: Chriſt anſwereth: Not ſo: for God the father will reward thee openly, if thou do good from a ſingle heart, onely reſpecting the praiſe and honour of God in mans good. If it be asked, how this can ſtand with that ſaying of Chriſt, Ioh.5.21. that the father iudgeth no man, but hath commited all iudgement vnto the ſon: I anſwer, that in regard of deliberatiõ, of authority & conſent, the laſt iudgement ſhallbe executed by the whole Trinitie: but yet in regard of immediate execution, the father iudgeth not, but Chriſt onely: for he alone giueth the ſentence both of abſolution and condemnation.

The Author.

The ſecond reaſon teacheth vs ſundry things concerning praiſe. Firſt, that God himſelfe is the ſole author of true praiſe: Paul b ſaith, hee which praiſeth himſelfe is not allowed, but hee whom the Lord praiſeth: where he compareth the world to a Theater, wherein men are Actors, and men and Angels bee ſpectators, but God alone is the Iudge, who giueth praiſe and good name to euery one that doth well, not onely in this life, but in the world to come: in regard whereof, we muſt endeauour our ſelues ſo to doe all our good workes, that God himſelfe may approoue thereof; to ſeeke the praiſe of men is a fond thing, ſeeing that none but God is the author of true praiſe: yea this muſt teach vs not to depend vpon man for praiſe & commendation for the good things we doe, but vpon God himſelfe, from whome all true praiſe commeth.

b 2.Cor.10. 18.

The ground.

Secondly, that God as he is a father is the ſole author of praiſe, for Chriſt ſaith, your father will reward you. Now God is our father onely in Chriſt, and therefore our vnion with Chriſt is the ground of all true praiſe. Hee is a true Iſraelite (ſaith b Paul) which is one within, and the circumciſion is of the heart, in the ſpirit, not in the letter, whoſe praiſe is not of men but of God. This then diſcouereth the errour of the world, in ſeeking after praiſe and reputation; for ſome ſeeke it in the comelineſſe of their bodie, ſome in apparell, and ſome in learning, &c. but all theſe are wrong meanes; the right way to get true praiſe, is to be in Chriſt, and to haue an humble and ſanctified heart, ſet purpoſely to keepe Gods commandement, Pſal.119.22. Dauid prayed God to remoue from him ſhame and contempt, becauſe he kept Gods teſtimonies; as though the keeping of Gods commandements, had been the onely meanes to avoid contempt, and to procure true praiſe and fame.

b Rom.2.29.

The time.

Thirdly, that the life to come is the onely time of true praiſe, for Chriſt here ſaith, hee ſhall reward thee openly: that is in the laſt day. 1.Cor. 4.5. When the Lord ſhall come, then ſhall euery one haue praiſe of God. This muſt teach vs not to care for the contempt of the world which followeth our profeſſion, ſo that our conuerſation be godly; but to reſt patiently contented, becauſe it is the lot and portion of Gods children, and our ſinnes deſerue greater reproach: alwaies remembring, that the time of our praiſe is yet to come. Yea, hence we muſt learne not to aime at our own praiſe, in things of this life, but wholly to ſeeke the glorie of God in all things; for if we ſeeke his glory now, the time will come when he will glorifie vs.

Fourthly, that the praiſe that God ſhall giue his children in the ende of the world, ſhall bee open and manifeſt, before all men and all angels, both good and bad, when they ſhall ſtand to be iudged by Ieſus Chriſt: and this is true praiſe which ſhall neuer haue ende, whereunto the praiſe of men is not comparable: we count highly of applauſe & reputation with earthly Princes, and all men honour him whom the Prince commends; how much more then ſhall they be advanced, when God himſelfe ſhould vouchſafe to praiſe and commend.

verſ. 5. And when thou prayeſt, be not as the hypocrites: for they loue to ſtand and pray in the Synagogues, and in the corners of the ſtreetes, becauſe they would be ſeene of men: verely I ſay vnto you, they haue their reward.

Of prayer.

In this verſe and the reſt to the fourteenth, Chriſt intreateth of the dutie of praier, wherein he dealeth as in the former point touching Almesgiuing: for firſt he forbids a twofold vice in prayer; hypocriſie, and babling: and then teacheth the contrarie vertues, and the right practiſe of prayer. The vice of hypocriſie in prayer is forbidden in this fifth verſe, and the contrarie vertue enioyned in the next.

The Expoſition. When thou praieſt] To pray, properly is to entreate of God the gift of ſome good thing concerning our ſelues: and in this ſenſe, it is onely one part of that holy worſhippe of God, which is called Invocation: for 1. Tim. 2. 1. the Apoſtle maketh foure kinds or parts of invocation: to wit, I. Supplication, when we intreat God to remooue ſome euill from vs. II. Prayer, whereby we beg at the hands of God the gift of ſome good thing vnto vs: and theſe two concerne our ſelues. The III. is Interceſſion, when as wee intreate the Lord to graunt ſome good thing vnto our brethren, or to remooue ſome euil from them. The IV. is thankſgiuing, whereby wee giue laud and thanks to God for bleſſings receiued, either by our ſelues, or by our brethren. Now in this place Prayer is not to be taken ſtrictly for one part of invocation, but generally for the whole worſhip of God by invocation; as it is cōmonly taken of vs, and often vſed in Scripture, one part being put for the whole. Be not as the hypocrites] that is, doe not as they doe in prayer; by hypocrites he vnderſtandeth principally the Iewiſh teachers the Scribes and Phariſies, for at them he aimeth in this part of his Sermon. For they loue to ſtand and pray in the Synagogues, and in the ſtreetes.] Wee muſt not here conceiue that Chriſt condemnes altogether this geſture of ſtanding in prayer as vnlawfull: for himſelfe praied ſtanding when [c] hee raiſed vp Lazarus: & the Primitiue Church in their aſſemblies called [d] Stations, praied ſtanding: but he reprooueth here the abuſe of this geſture in theſe Iewiſh teachers. For firſt, they vſed this geſture to a wrong ende, namely, thereby to get the praiſe of men: becauſe ſtanding is the fitteſt geſture which a man can vſe in prayer to make him bee ſeene of others. Secondly, theſe Scribes and Phariſies thought themſelues more righteous then all other men, and therefore iudged that they had no neede to humble themſelues ſo much either in ſoule or bodie as the Publicans and ſinners did. Againe, Chriſt here condemneth not the action of prayer in theſe places, the Synagogues and the ſtreetes: for no man was euer forbidden of God to pray in any place. The Patriarks were not tied to any place; and vnder the Law howſoeuer the Temple was the place appointed for Gods outward worſhip in ſacrificing, and ſuch like, yet euen then it was lawfull for the Iewes to pray in any place; and after Chriſts comming Paul [d] willeth that men pray euerie where lifting vp pure hands vnto God: but here is condemned this groſſe fault of theſe Scribes and Phariſies, that they minded to pray no where els, but in theſe open and publike places, which is expreſſed by this phraſe, they loue to ſtand and pray. So that in a word this is the meaning of this verſe; You my hearers, when you pray, take heede of the hypocriſie of the Scribes and Phariſies, for they regard onely the praiſe of men, and therefore doe vſe ſuch geſture in prayer, and chooſe ſuch places to pray in, that they may beſt be ſeene of men. Where wee ſee, he directly condemnes their hypocriſie, as well in reſpect of the ground thereof, which was the pride of their hearts, and not Gods grace: as alſo in regard of the ende thereof, which was the praiſe of men, and not the glorie of God.

The vſe. 1. Whereas Chriſt ſaith, When thou praieſt: he taketh it for graunted, that all men of yeares muſt pray; and whereas he condemnes the falſe manner of prayer, and ſets downe the right forme and manner thereof, he teacheth vs that it is a moſt neceſſarie thing for all that haue diſcretion, to exerciſe themſelues religiouſly in this dutie of prayer. And becauſe our Sauiour here vrgeth this dutie ſo much, I will here ſhewe the neceſſitie of prayer; which may appeare vnto vs by ſundrie reaſons. I. Prayer is one of the moſt principall parts of Gods worſhip: for herein wee acknowledge him to be the giuer of all goodneſſe, the ſearcher and knower of our hearts; and hereby we teſtifie the faith, hope, and confidence we haue in God. And prayer is called [e] the calues of our lippes, becauſe it is a ſacrifice wel pleaſing vnto God. II. By prayer we doe obtaine, and alſo continue, and preſerue vnto our ſelues euerie good grace & bleſſing of God, eſpecially ſuch as concerne eternall life: for God promiſeth his ſpirit to them that aske it by prayer: and the firſt conuerſion of a ſinner, howſoeuer it be the free gift of God, yet by Gods grace moouing and inabling a man thereunto, is obtained by prayer; and ſo are all the good graces following our conuerſion, both gotten and increaſed. III. The true gift of prayer is a pleadge of the ſpirit of Adoption: and therefore [f] Zacharie calls the ſpirit of prayer, the ſpirit of grace. And Paul [g] ſaith, the ſpirit helpes our infirmities, euen the ſpirit of our Adoption, which teacheth vs to cry, Abba, father. IV. By prayer we haue ſpirituall cōmunion and familiaritie with God: for in the preaching of the word, God ſpeakes to vs; and in prayer wee ſpeake to God, and the more we pray, the neerer and greater fellowſhip we haue with God: which one reaſon (if there were no more) is ſufficiēt to perſwade vs of the neceſſity of praier, and to mooue vs vnto diligence therein.

But ſundrie obiections are made againſt the neceſſitie of prayer: 1. It is ſaid God knowes our thoughts before we pray, and therefore it is needleſſe to expreſſe them by prayer vnto him. Anſ. We pray not to acquaint God with our ſuites, or with our hearts, as though hee knewe them not, but to performe obedience vnto his commandment, who requireth this dutie at our hands. Againe, we pray vnto God, to honour him, in acknowledging him to be the knower of our hearts, the giuer of all goodnes, the ſtay of our faith and hope, in whom onely we put all our truſt and confidence.

Obiect. 2. Whether we pray or not, God will giue vs the bleſſings which he means to beſtow on vs. Anſwer. This is flat Atheiſme: and yet wee muſt diſtinguiſh of Gods bleſſings, for ſome are common bleſſings which God oft giues to mē without their asking, becauſe they ſerue to preſerue nature: as raine and fruitfull ſeaſons, food, raiment, &c. Act.14.16. and yet euen theſe common bleſſings muſt be praied for: Phil.4.6. In all things let your requeſts bee made knowne to God: and Iames h ſaith, You luſt and haue not, becauſe yee aske not: Pſal.106.23. Moſes prayer ſaues the people from deſtruction. Others, are ſpeciall bleſſings of the Elect, and theſe muſt alwaies be ſought and obtained by prayer.

h Iam.4.2.

Obiect. 3. God hath decreed all euents, and euery thing ſhall ſo fall out as he hath appointed, and therefore its needleſſe to pray, and oftentimes its but the croſſing of Gods will. Anſ. This reaſon is naught: for as God hath decreed the euent of all things, ſo likewiſe he hath appointed the meanes whereby his decree ſhall be effected: and prayer many times, is a principall meanes to bring Gods will to paſſe: 1.King.18.1. God ſhewed to Eliah that he would ſend raine in Iſrael after that long drought, and yet the i Prophet crouched vnto the earth, & put his face betweene his knees; no doubt humbling himſelfe in prayer to God for it, as S. k Iames ſaith. Where we may ſee, that prayer is not cōtrarie to Gods decree, but a ſubordinate meanes to bring the ſame to paſſe: and therefore we muſt rather reaſon thus, that becauſe God hath decreed the euent of all things, and hath appointed prayer as a meanes to effect ſundrie of his decrees, therefore we muſt vſe it.

i vers.42.

k Iam.5.18.

Vſe. Diligence in prayer.

Conſidering then that prayer is neceſſarie, notwithſtanding all that can be ſaid againſt it, we muſt learne with ſpeciall reuerence to giue our ſelues vnto this dutie, both publikely in the aſſemblies of the Saints, and priuately in our familyes, beeing maſters and gouernours; for no family ought to want this morning and euening ſacrifice of prayer and thankſgiuing; yea, we muſt pray by our ſelues particularly in regard of our particular wants. Indeede the moſt doe thus plead for themſelues, that they vſe to pray often; but the truth is, that the cōmon practiſe of our people in prayer, is nothing but lippe-labour, and a mocking of God: for what be their praiers, but the ſaying ouer the tenne Commandements and the Creede, which are no prayers: yea, their repetition of the Lords prayer without vnderſtanding or deuotion, is no prayer with God, when they doe it only of cuſtome, and reſt in the work done. But here is required an other manner of prayer thē this. And to incite vs vnto it, let vs conſider the worthy examples of Chriſts ſeruants herein: Moſes prayed for the ſauing of the Iſraelites fourty daies and forty nights without meat or drink: Dauid praied ſeauen times a day: and our Sauiour Chriſt ſpent whole nights in prayer. Now theſe examples were written for our learning, to teach vs to addict our ſelues to this holy dutie wherein our hearts ſpeake vnto God. The want hereof is the cauſe of the common Atheiſme that is in the world, of iniuſtice, and crueltie in mens callings, of ſwearing, pride, & backbiting in mens liues: for if men would often ſet themſelues in the preſence of God, by vnfained inuocation, the remembrance thereof would ſtill be before their eyes, and cauſe them to abſtaine from all theſe iniquities: for who beeing ſtained with ſuch tranſgreſſions durſt preſent himſelfe before the maieſtie of God, who is a conſuming fire againſt all ſinne and wickednes, hauing fierie eyes to ſee their ſinnes, and feete of braſſe to bruiſe them in peices that will not repent.

Deut.9.18, 19.

Pſal.119.164. Luk.6.12.

Rev.1.13,14.

Secondly, in this prohibition againſt hypocriſie in prayer we may ſee, that to conceiue a prayer, and to make profeſſion of religion may for the outward worke, as well be performed from pride of heart as from the grace of God: carnall men may doe that in pride, which Gods children doe by grace, as we ſhewed in the former point of Almes giuing: that therefore which Chriſt ſaid of hearing the word, take heede how you heare, muſt be conceiued to bee ſpoken to vs of prayer and the profeſſion of religion, take heede how you pray, and how you profeſſe religion. And indeede before we pray, we ought to enter into our hearts, and there to ſearch out our corruptions diligently, that wee may be able to diſcerne in our ſelues betweene pride, and Gods grace; and ſo perceiue vpon what ground wee pray, that it be not from a damnable pride, but from the ſauing grace of Gods holy ſpirit.

Thirdly, in this prohibition Chriſt condemnes this falſe ende of prayer, when men do it to haue praiſe of men; whereby we may ſee, that it is a thing incident to the profeſſors of the Goſpel, to doe the duties of religion, for the approbation of men: which notably bewrayes the hypocriſie of our hearts, which naturally haue more reſpect to men, then to the Lord, euen then when wee haue to deale with God himſelfe. Thus did the Scribes and Phariſies, and it is to be feared, the ſame fault is cōmon among vs: for men are farre more forward and carefull to performe the publike duties of religion, in the aſſemblies of the Church, then priuate duties, either in their families, or by themſelues. Many will pray in the Church, that neuer regard priuate prayer at home. Againe, in performing publike duties, men haue more care of the outward action, then of truth and ſinceritie in the heart; and many ſtudie more for fit words to delight mens eares, then for good affections, which God approoueth; for what is the cauſe, that many auncient profeſſors, when they come to die, know not how to commend their ſoules to God? Surely, this eſpecially, that in the whole courſe of their profeſſion, they more reſpected men thē God; and therefore in the time of death, when they muſt needes deale with God indeede, they know not what to doe, nor how to behaue themſelues.

Vnreuerence in prayer.

Laſtly, Chriſt here reprooues their behauiour in prayer, which was ſtanding, without all humbling of themſelues, either in ſoule or bodie. This is a thing incident to many in our congregations, who vſe to ſhew no manner of reuerence or humilitie in the time of prayer, but either ſtand, or ſit, as though they had no need to humble themſelues; or elſe intended onely that men ſhould ſee them. But we muſt know, that howſoeuer the word of God preſcribes no peculiar geſture in this action, yet it is not a thing indifferent, either to vſe, or not to vſe ſome ſeemely geſture of humiliation in this worſhip of God; but ſome muſt needs be vſed, to expreſſe and further the humilitie of the heart, which is chiefly required: Iſay. 6. 2. the Seraphims ſtanding before God, couer their feete and faces with their wings, in regard of Gods preſence: and the poore Publicane that prayed with the Phariſie, howſoeuer hee prayed ſtanding, yet [m] he caſt downe his countenance, and ſmote himſelfe on the breaſt, to teſtifie his humiliation. Yea, Chriſt Ieſus our Lord, when hee bare the puniſhment of our ſinnes in the garden, fell downe vpon his face, and prayed: thus alſo did [a] Moſes, and Aaron, [b] Eliiah, [c] Ezra, and [d] Daniel, humble themſelues. And it hath alwaies beene the practiſe of Gods ſeruants in prayer, by ſome conuenient geſture of the bodie, to expreſſe the humilitie of their hearts; which checketh the cuſtom of our common people in prayer, who are ſo farre from bringing a broken heart to God, which is the thing he chiefly requires, that they knowe not what to aske; and many there be that will not ſubmit themſelues to ſuch outward geſture, as might expreſſe their inward humilitie. Theſe things are far vnſeemely for Gods people, and therefore let vs learne to humble our ſelues at Gods footeſtoole, firſt in our very hearts, and withall, we muſt be carefull to teſtifie the ſame by ſome conuenient outward humiliation.

Sinceritie in praier.

Chriſt hauing forbidden hypocriſie in the former verſe, doth here commaund the contrarie vertue; namely, ſinceritie, ſetting downe the right manner of prayer to God in that behalfe. Now becauſe the words are not to be taken in that ſenſe, which at the firſt reading they ſeeme to beare; therefore for the better vnderſtanding of them, I will here lay downe two grounds: 1. That in this place our Sauiour Chriſt doth not forbid publike prayer in the congregation, or in publike places; for publike prayer is Gods ordinance, where two or three (ſaith [e] Chriſt) bee gathered together in my name, there am I in the middle among them: and whatſoeuer they ſhall deſire, ſhall be giuen them of my father. Againe, publike praier ſerues for moſt worthy vſes, for which it muſt be maintained; as firſt, to make mens prayers vnto God more feruent and effectuall; as in the common-wealth, a priuate mans ſupplication is not ſo much reſpected, as when a whole incorporation, or a whole ſhire make petition to the Prince. Secondly, by publike prayer a man profeſſeth himſelfe to bee a member of Gods Church; and one that ſeuereth himſelfe from all prophane ſocieties and companies of men in the world. Thirdly, publike prayer ſerues to ſtirre vp zeale in them that be cold and backeward; for herin they are made acquainted with Gods bleſſings, they are left to ſee their owne wants, and they haue the good example of Gods children. 2. Ground. That priuate prayer (though it be Gods owne ordinance) is not here directly commanded: for looke what was forbidden in the former verſe, the contrarie thereto is here commanded; but Chriſt did not ſimply there forbid publike prayer, he aimed at an higher thing therein: namely, hypocriſie, and therefore here he cōmandeth not priuate praier directly, but intendeth the right manner thereof, for ſinceritie, whether publike or priuate.

[e] Matth. 18. 19, 20.

The excellent vſe of publike praier. 1 2 3

Hauing laid downe theſe two grounds, I come now to the true meaning of the words. When thou praieſt, that is, either by thy ſelfe alone, or with others, enter into thy chamber, and when thou haſt ſhut thy doore, pray, &c. that is, be as though thou didſt pray in thy cloſet, in-

A tending onely to approoue thy ſelfe, and thine heart vnto the Lord, hauing no reſpect to any creature in the world; for this Chriſt meanes by praying in a chamber, or cloſet; namely, that a man in prayer ſhould not reſpect himſelfe, or any creature, but ſimply intend and approoue himſelfe vnto God onely.

In the words thus explained, we are to obſerue two things; a commandement, and a reaſon thereof; the commandement in theſe words, when thou prayeſt, enter into thy chamber, and when thou haſt ſhut thy doore, pray vnto thy father which is in ſecret. This commandement inioyning the right diſpoſition of the heart to B God-ward in our prayers, doth preſcribe the true and perfect manner of praier; wherein that we may the better attaine, I will ſhew how the ſame is performed.

How to pray right. That a man in praier may approoue himſelfe and his actions vnto God alone, three kind of duties are required: ſome going before prayer, ſome in the act of prayer, and ſome after prayer.

duties before we pray. Before praier foure duties are required. 1 1. A man muſt haue knowledge of three things concerning praier (for euery prayer muſt be made in faith, and in obedience to God, which without knowledge cannot be done) to wit, of Gods commandement to pray, of the things we aske in prayer, and of the manner of asking; which is this, ſpirituall bleſſings concerning life eternall, as remiſſion of ſinnes, ſanctification, and other C neceſſarie graces muſt be asked ſimply without condition: but temporall things concerning this life, as health, wealth, liberty, and ſuch like, muſt be asked with condition of Gods will, as they ſerue for his glory, the good of our ſelues, 2 and of our brethren. 2. A man muſt labour to finde himſelfe conuerted vnto God, hauing a true purpoſe of heart not to liue in any ſinne; a Ioh.9.31. for a God heareth not ſinners; and Dauid ſaith, b Pſal.66.18. b If I regard wickedneſſe in my heart, God will not heare my prayer. When men come to the Lords table, they forſake their ſinnes and turne vnto God; which muſt alſo be done before we pray; for therein we are to deale with God, who can- 3 not abide iniquitie. 3. A man muſt ſeeke to be in Chriſt, that would pray with comfort; Ioh. D 15.7. If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, aske what ye will, and it ſhall be done to you. In the old Teſtament the ſacrifices were to be offered onely vpon the altar of God, in the Temple, or in the Tabernacle, which prefigured this vnto vs, that in the new Teſtament, our prayers, which are our ſacrifices, muſt be of- c Reu.8.3. fered onely in Chriſt Ieſus, who is our c incenſe 4 altar in heauen, and our ſpirituall Temple. 4. Before prayer a man muſt ſeuer himſelfe from all creatures, in his thoughts and deſires, and bring himſelfe before God, with feare and reuerence, that euery power and facultie of the the ſoule, may ſay as Cornelius ſaid to Peter, d Act.10.33. d now are we all here in the preſence of God: for this ende, his minde and memorie muſt bee

A taken vp with diuine and holy thoughts, and his heart poſſeſſed with holy deſires; God in Chriſt muſt be his whole delight, and all by-thoughts muſt be baniſhed. Our Sauiour Chriſt vſed to pray in the night, and in ſolitarie places apart from the ſocietie of men, this he did (no doubt) for this ende, that he might ſet himſelfe wholly before God, and be free from all occaſions of diſtraction in that diuine dutie.

Duties in prayer are eſpecially fiue. 1. We 5. duties in praying. 1 muſt labour to haue a true ſenſe and feeling of our wants, of our ſinnes and corruptions, and be inwardly touched in conſcience for the ſame; for as the begger ſits ſtill at home, and neuer B goes to begge releefe, till hee feele himſelfe pinched with hunger and want, ſo is it with vs; till we feele our owne wants and miſeries by reaſon of our ſinnes, we can neuer put vp an earneſt and heartie prayer to God. 2. We muſt 2 haue an inward feruent and vnfained deſire toward God, for the ſupply of all our wants, and miſeries; this is a ſpeciall thing in prayer, which maketh it not only to be a petition of the lippes but a true requeſt of the hart. This the Prophet Dauid expreſſed, when he ſaid to God, e My e Pſ.143.6. ſoule deſireth after thee, as the thirſtie land doth after raine: and Hanna alſo, when ſhee told Eli f that ſhe powred out her ſoule as water before f 1.Sam.1.15. the Lord. 3. Euerie petition muſt be made in o- 3 bedience, that is, we muſt haue a commande-ment inioyning vs to aske the thing we pray for, and a promiſe to aſſure vs that it ſhall bee C granted vnto vs: and yet here this ſpeciall caueat muſt be remembred, that wee leaue both the time and the manner of accompliſhing our requeſts, to the good pleaſure and wiſedom of 4 God. 4. Euerie petition muſt be preſented to God in the g name and mediation of Chriſt: for g Ioh.16.23. 26. in our ſelues we are ſinners, and h our iniquities h Iſa.59.2. make a ſeparation betweene God and vs; ſo that we cannot haue acceſſe vnto the father, ſaue onely by the mediation of Ieſus Chriſt. If wee would come with boldneſſe into the holy place, it muſt be by the new and liuing way, which Chriſt hath prepared for vs through the 5 vaile, that is, his fleſh. 5 In prayer we muſt haue faith, whereby we beleeue, that the thing wee D aske ſhall be done vnto vs: Mark. 11.24. whatſoeuer yee aske in prayer, beleeue that yee ſhall haue it, and it ſhall bee done vnto you: nowe the ground of this faith, muſt be Gods commandement and his promiſe, which I mentioned before.

2. Duties after praier. The duties after prayer, are chiefly two. 1. We muſt call to remembrance the prayer wee made to God. If one man talke with another, he will be ſo attentiue, that as neere as may be he will remember the words that paſſed betweene them; and much more ought we ſo to doe when we talke with God: now wee muſt thus meditate on our prayers, for this ende, that we may the better doe the thing we aske; as we craue in prayer the pardon of our ſinnes, ſo we muſt after prayer indeauour to leaue the practiſe of them. What a horrible ſhame is it for men to begge at Gods handes the pardon of ſinne, and when they riſe from prayer, to fall againe to the practiſe of it? This is with the dogge to returne to his vomite, and with the deſperate theefe to ſteale, after he hath intreated fauour of the Iudge. 2. After prayer, we muſt bee carefull to be as plentifull in thankſgiuing for bleſſings receiued, as wee were in petitions to craue them. This indeede may be done in the beginning of our prayer, though here I mention it laſt; but omitted it may not be. Ordinarie men haue this humanitie, that where they finde friendſhips, they will be more plentifull in rendring thankes, then in making newe requeſts; & if we deale thus with men, ſhall we not much more doe it with God, with whom true thankfulneſſe for one bleſſing, is a ſpeciall meanes to procure many moe? Now this thankefulneſſe muſt not be onely in word, but in deed teſtified by due obedience, in life and conuerſation: and theſe are the duties whereby a man ſhall auoide all carnall oſtentation in prayer, and approoue his heart vnto God therein.

2.Pet.2.22.

View of Popiſh errors in praier.

By this deſcription of the true manner of prayer, we may learne three things; Firſt, that the Romiſh Church doth neither knowe nor teach, nor practiſe the dutie of prayer aright; they pray not in knowledge, for they pray in an [a] vnknowne tongue, and allowe of [b] ignorance, as the Mother of deuotion; they commend doubting, [c] by ſpeaking againſt aſſurance, and ſo pray not in faith nor obedience; they praie not in humilitie for mercie for their ſinnes, for they thinke [d] to merit by their prayers: and which is worſt of all, they direct not their praiers to God onely in the name of Chriſt; but to God and his Saints, making the [e] virgin Marie their Mediatrix; yea, they [f] pray to the wooden croſſe, which is moſt horrible Idolatrie. Secondly, that our common people come farre ſhort of their dutie in this part of Gods worſhip; for their praiers conſiſt chiefly in the bare repetition of words, which is onely a lip-labour, they pray without knowledge and feeling, and ſo muſt needes faile in many other duties. Now this bewrayes the manifold wants that be in the prayers of the beſt Chriſtians, for beſides their ignorance of many duties in prayer, their doubting and diſtruſt, their dulneſſe and deadneſſe of heart, and their by-thoughts, doe all ſhew that their hearts are not wholly taken vp with Gods glorie, as they ought to be. Laſtly, hereby we may ſee the groſſe ignorance of our common people, about ſpels and charmes; becauſe they conſiſt of good words, and many ſtrange things are done thereby, therefore they thinke them to be good praiers: but herein they are deceiued, through ignorance in the right forme of prayer: for they that make them and vſe them, are either graceleſſe perſons that haue ſocietie with the deuill, or groſly deluded through palpable ignorance: and they cannot ſet themſelues before God to approoue their heart vnto him in this action; nay, the worſhip that is done herein, is to the deuill, and the cure that is wrought thereby, is his worke: for theſe charmes are his watch-word, to ſtirre him vp to ſuch exploits.

Againſt ſpels & charmes.

Furthermore, in this clauſe, Pray vnto thy Father which is in ſecret, that is, to an inuiſible God, is couched a reaſon to induce men to the obedience of this commandement, to this effect; Hee to whom thou praieſt, is an inuiſible God, therefore thou muſt indeauour to approoue the hidden man of thy heart vnto him. Hence I gather, firſt, that it is an horrible thing, to make an Image to repreſent the true God, or to worſhip God with it; for God is inuiſible. The ſecond commandement condemneth them both, as Moſes himſelfe doth expound it, Deut. 4.15.16. Yee ſawe no Image in the day that the Lord ſpake vnto you in Horeb; therefore corrupt not your ſelues by making you a grauen image, or repreſentation of any figure. Secondly, that there ſhould bee no outward pompe in prayer, either for geſture, or for garments; for praier is made to an inuiſible father. This ouerthrowes the whole worſhip of the Popiſh Church, which ſtands in outward ſhewes of carnall pompe; if there be any pompe, it muſt be inward, in the graces of the heart, among which humilitie is the firſt ornament. Thirdly, that all places are alike, in reſpect of Gods preſence, and of his hearing; for he is a God in ſecret, whereſoeuer a man hath occaſion to pray, there God is, which confuteth them, that make the Church a more holy place for prayer, then other-where, and therefore reſerue all their prayers till they come thither; for now difference of place, in reſpect of Gods preſence, is taken away: God is as well in the fielde, and in the priuate houſe, as in the Church: and yet Churches are ordained and vſed in a godly policie, becauſe a congregation may more conueniently there meet, to their mutuall edification, in the publike exerciſe of the word and prayer; otherwiſe priuate houſes were as good places for Gods worſhip, as Churches, if they were ſo decent and conuenient for edification: for in all places men may lift vp pure hands vnto God, as the Apoſtle teacheth.

No difference of place in regard of Gods preſence.

1.Tim.2.

And thy father which ſeeth in ſecret, ſhall reward thee openly. Theſe words containe a two-fold reaſon, whereby Chriſt perſwadeth his hearers, and in them all others, to the carefull practiſe of the former dutie, of ſinceritie in prayer. The firſt reaſon is drawne from Gods All-ſeeing propertie: the ſecond, from his bountie. Gods all-ſeeing propertie is ſet out in theſe words, and thy father which ſeeth in ſecret: that is, although the father himſelfe be inuiſible, yet when thou praieſt in ſecret, that is, as though thou wert in ſecret, intending only to approoue thine heart vnto God in prayer, then thy father ſeeth thee, he knowes thine heart, & heares thy praier. This is vouched by the example of Ionas, who was heard praying in the Whales bellie, of Daniel, praying in the Lyons denne, and of Moses, who is said to crie vnto the Lord, when as he prayed onely in heart. Exod.14.

The vse of this point is manifold. 1. It serueth to admonish vs that when we pray, wee must in singlenes of heart, bring our selues into Gods presence, and heartily and truely put vp our requests vnto God, so as wee may approue vnto him, both our hearts and our prayers; for there is nothing in our prayers that can be hid from God; and therefore, we must not content our selues with the thing done, but labour so to pray, that God may be well pleased with the manner thereof.

2 Secondly, hereby we are taught to make conscience, not onely of our doing and speeches, but euen of our verie thoughts, and that in secret places; for though we may conceale the same from men, yet we cannot couer them from the eyes of God: he is inuisible, and yet all things are naked before him. Heb.4.13.

3 Prayer to Saints vnlawfull. Thirdly, this prooueth that no prayer can lawfully be made to the virgin Marie, or to any other Saint departed; for he alone is to bee called vpon in prayer, who sees in secret: but God onely sees in secret; neither the virgin Marie, nor any other of the Saints can see in secret; and therefore prayer is to be made to none but to God alone. The Papists answer, that Saints departed see in secret, though not of themselues, yet by God, and in God: but this is false: the Angels before their fall saw not their owne future fall, nor the fall of man. The blessed Angels in heauen, know not now the time and day of the last iudgement: yea, and the Saints departed lie vnder the Altar crying, How long Lord? being ignorant of the time of their full redemption; and therefore, the Saints departed see not in secret. Rhem. on Luk.15.sect. Rev.6.10.

The second reason drawne from Gods promised bountie, is in these words: shall reward thee openly: that is, shall repay thee for thy prayer in the day of iudgement, before the Saints and holy Angels, as wee expounded the same words in the fourth verse. This is a notable reason to induce men to pray in a true and holy manner; wherein we may see the matchles mercie of God, vouchsafed to them that pray aright: if any subiect put vp a supplication to his earthly Prince, he takes it for a speciall fauour, if the Prince vouchsafe to admit him to his presence: behold here the King of kings, will not onely vouchsafe vs accesse vnto the throne of grace, when we put vp our supplications vnto him; but if we pray aright, he doth hold himselfe indebted vnto vs for the same, and promiseth one day to reward vs openly. This farre exceedes the loue of all creatures in heauen or earth; no Prince is so kinde and gracious vnto his best subiects, as the Lord is to all that call vpon him in spirit and truth.

Rhem. on this chap. sect.2. Bellarm. de bonis oper. in part. l.1. c.3. From this place the Papists would gather, that prayer is a work that merits at Gods hand eternall life; for thus they reason: Where there is repaying by way of reward, there is something done which meriteth: but vnto prayer there is a repaying, therefore it doth merit at Gods hand. Answ. Reward is due to man two waies, either by desert, or of free gift and promise: nowe in this place God will reward man for his prayer, not for his desert, but of his owne free will and grace, because hee hath promised so to doe. That this is so, may thus appeare: If a Begger should aske an almes of any man, it were absurd to say, that the begger by asking did deserue the almes: and so stands the case for the merit of our prayers; thereby we begge things at Gods hands, and therefore can no more merit thereby, then the begger can deserue his almes by asking: nay rather wee may gather hence, that Gods rewarding them that pray, proceedes from his owne free grace alone; for prayer properly, is the work of man vnto God, wherein man giues nothing vnto God, as the Iewes did in the sacrifices, or as is done in some other spirituall sacrifices of the new Testament, but onely asketh and receiueth something from God, and therefore cannot thereby merit any thing at Gods hands. And by this may all other places be expounded, where reward is promised to mans worke.

Lastly, note the phrase here vsed; he shall reward thee openly: that is, at the last day: whence I gather, that till the day of iudgement, no seruant of God shall fully reape the fruit and benefit of his prayers. This must be well considered of all that haue care to call vpon God vnfainedly; for many times after long and earnest prayer, we feele little or no comfort, whereby we may be brought to dislike our selues, as though God had no respect vnto vs: but we must know, that God doth often long deferre to reward his seruants that pray vnto him: no doubt but Zachary and Elizabeth prayed for issue in their yonger age, and yet they were not heard till they were both olde: and David saith, his eyes failed for waiting on God when hee would accomplish his promise made vnto him. This wee may also see in the petitions of the Lords prayer, for they be all according to his will, yet the full fruition of the benefits there asked, is referred to the appearing of our Lord Iesus Christ.

V.7. And when ye pray, vse no vaine repetitions, as the heathen: for they thinke to be heard for their much babling.

Against babling in prayer. Our Sauiour Christ hauing dealt against hypocrisie in prayer, doth here come to the second vice, which hee intends to reforme therein, namely babling, consisting in the outward forme of prayer. The words containe two parts, a commandement, and a reason thereof. The commandement, when ye pray, vse no vaine repetitions as the heathen doe. Where first we must knowe, that Chriſt reprooues not repetition in prayer ſimply, but needles repetitions only; for Pſal. 51. David doth ſundrie times repeat his requeſts, for the pardon of ſinne, and for ſanctification: alſo Moſes, Elias, and our Sauiour Chriſt, praied fourtie daies together, and in this long praier (no doubt) vſed many repetitions; much leſſe can we pray one day together without many repetitions. Here then by vaine repetitions is meant babling; that is, a deſire and affectation to vſe and ſpeake many words in prayer: and vnder this one vice, are condemned all ſinnes of the ſame kinde, that is, all ſuperfluous multiplication of words in prayer. As the heathen, that is, ſuch as were not [a] the people of God, but aliens from the commonwealth of Iſrael, and ſtrangers from the couenant of promiſe.

a Eph.2.12.

Abuſes in prayer.

In this commandement are condemned many abuſes in the manner of praier; 1. Meere babling, when words are vſed for prayer, which containe neither requeſts vnto God, nor giuing of thanks; ſuch are many Popiſh prayers, and ſuch is the vſe of the Aue Maria, among our common people, for it is the ſalutation of the Angel Gabriel, to the virgin Marie, calling her by commiſſion from God, to be the mother of Chriſt; which words, none ſince that day, had warrant to vſe to the virgin Marie, onely they are to be read as a part of that hiſtorie: yea, the rehearſall of the tenne Commandements, and of the Creede for prayers, is but meere babling. 2. Prayers made in ignorance are here condemned: thus the Popiſh ſort offend, who vſe to praie vnto God in an vnknowne tongue; and thus many ſinne that vſe the Lords praier without vnderſtanding of the words. 3. Cold and dull praying is here condemned, when the lippes drawe neer vnto God, but the heart is no whit affected therewith; this is a common vice, and ſome taint hereof euery man findes in his owne heart. 4. Superſtitious prayers, when as Gods worſhip is meaſured out by ſet numbers. This is the Popiſh practiſe anſwerable to their doctrine, that the rehearſing of ſo many Pater noſters, Aues, Dirges, Maſſes, and ſuch like, are of merit with God, to procure ſuch and ſuch things: this opinion takes place with our common people, for they thinke God is ſerued by the worke done, if the words be ſaid, all is well. 5. Sudden praying without due preparation, is here condemned, when men pray onely on the ſudden by the motion of the ſpirit, as they vſe to ſpeake: too many are of this minde, allowing no ſet forme of praier to any: but howſoeuer conceiued prayer be moſt comfortable, yet without due preparation of the heart, it is moſt ſubiect to vaine repetitions. 6. Raſh vowes, eſpecially of things not lawfull, or about our power. 7. Raſh wiſhes, of good or euill, being framed according to our carnall affections, and not by the word of God. And in a word, all vaine and ſuperfluous ſpeech in any manner of inuocation, wherein the heart is not affected according to the will of God: all which muſt be remembred, for they ſhew plainely, that our common prayers are farre ſhort of that which the Lord requireth and alloweth.

Hore Virginis Mariæ ad vſum Sariſb. Eccleſ.

How to ſpeake aright in praier.

Here ſome will ſay, If ſo many things be diſallowed in prayer, how ſhall we ſpeake aright in prayer? Anſw. As the Apoſtle Paul ſaid of ſinging, ſo I ſay of prayer; it muſt bee [b] with grace in our hearts, and all our words, both for meaſure and number, muſt be tempered thereto, and no more ought to be vſed in praier, then may ſerue to expreſſe and further in our ſelues, or others, ſome inward grace of God, as faith, repentance, zeale of Gods glorie, &c. Eccleſ. 5. 1. Be not raſh with thy mouth, nor let thine heart be haſtie to vtter a thing before God; for God is in heauen, and thou art on earth, therefore let thy words bee fewe: where we haue expreſſe commandement, not onely to prepare our hearts, but our words alſo, when we come before God in praier, that they be ſuch as may expreſſe ſome grace of our hearts.

b Col.3.16.

As the heathen] In this inſtance we may note that the heathen had ſome inſight into matters of religion; for firſt, they knew there was a God, and that the ſame God muſt bee worſhipped: Secondly, they practiſed many excellent vertues of the ſecond Table; as Iuſtice both in word and deede, liberalitie, continencie, fidelitie, and ſuch like; yea, they caried to doe ſome duties of the firſt Table, as here we ſee they prayed vnto God: and ſome of them performed this dutie in ſuch ſort, as they obtained hereby ſome temporall bleſſings: [c] The heathen Mariners that carried Ionas towards Tarſhiſh, praied vnto God and obtained ſafetie: & Ahab, a wicked Idolater, [d] humbled himſelfe vnto God in prayer and faſtings, and obtained a temporall freedom from a fearefull iudgement. Now the conſideration of this point, ſerues to checke many among vs, who thinke that God will hold them excuſed, becauſe they meane well, and doe no man harme; they plead that they are no adulterers, thieues, nor outragious offenders: but all this the heathen man can doe, and yet he is but in a damnable caſe: for though theſe be good things, yet they will not bring any man to ſaluation: we muſt therefore get faith in Chriſt, and from thence practiſe all Chriſtian vertues.

For they thinke to be heard by their much babling. Theſe words are a reaſon of the former commandement, wherein we may note 3 opinions of the heathen concerning God. 1. They thought God was like an earthly man, who might be inſtructed and perſwaded by words. 2. They denied Gods prouidence, & were not perſwaded that God ſawe them, or regarded their eſtate; & therefore they vſed many words to acquaint him therewith. 3. They thought by the force of words to preuaile with God.

3. opinions of the heathen concerning God.

Hence we may learne theſe inſtructions. 1. That though the heathen knewe there was a God, yet they turned him into an idoll, when they worſhipped him; and therefore Paul ſaith, either were without God in the world: for they made him like vnto man, without any prouidence, and perſwadable alſo by mans reaſon, and by many words.

2. By theſe opinions of the heathen touching Gods, we may gather that there was not alwaies in the olde Teſtament, an vniuerſall grace giuen to all, whereby they might be ſaued, if they would: for if they had had any ſuch grace, they would neuer haue thought ſo groſly of God as they did; one ſparke of true knowledge of the Meſſias, would haue expelled all theſe carnall conceits of God out of mens hearts: and therefore howſoeuer the heathen had ſo much knowledge of God as made them without excuſe; yet we are to hold, that before Chriſts comming, they were left to themſelues, and forſaking of God in his iuſt iudgement, in regard of his ſpeciall grace and fauour.

Mens naturall conceit of God.

3. By theſe heathen we may ſee what be our naturall conceits of God, for our nature is the ſame with theirs; & therefore of our ſelues we thinke God to be like ſome old man, ſitting in heauen, without any regard of vs at all: and when we haue all things needfull, we will truſt in God, but when meanes faile, we forſake him ſtraight: and this we ſhew, by vſing vnlawfull meanes to helpe our ſelues in the time of diſtreſſe, as by ſeeking to witches, &c. Laſtly, naturally we think we can preuaile with God by our words. The Papiſts teach, that the ſaying of fiue words, enim hoc eſt corpus meum, will turne the bread and wine in the Sacrament into the bodie and blood of Chriſt: and it is the common opinion of our ignorant people, that the ſaying of words pleaſeth God: they think that the words of Scripture written or ſpoken, haue vertue in them to doe ſtrange things, and this is one maine ground of all the practiſes of ſorcerie which be ſo common among vs: but we are to know that there is no ſuch vertue in any words, it is onely faith in the heart that makes Gods word effectuall, for our good. Words of themſelues can doe no more but ſignifie, and that they doe not of themſelues, but by the pleaſure of men; and therefore we are to renounce the vſe of all ſpells and charmes: for be the words neuer ſo good, they are but the deuils watchword, and the ceremonies vſed therewithall, as his Sacraments to cauſe him to worke wonders. We therefore muſt learne by the word of God to conceiue better of God then nature can teach vs, as of an heauenly and inuiſible God, gouerning all creatures by his prouidence, and not perſwaded by mans reaſon, but working all things according to the counſell of his owne will.

ex vi verborum Concil. Triden. ſeſſ. 13. cap. 3.

v. 8. Be yee not like them therefore: for your Father knoweth whereof you haue need before you aske.

A In this verſe our Sauiour Chriſt repeateth the former commandement touching prayer, made after the manner of the Heathen; and withall annexeth a ſecond reaſon to enforce the ſame. The commandement is repeated from the former reaſon in theſe words, Be ye not like them therefore: as if he ſhould ſay, conſidering that the Heathen in their prayers looke to be heard for the multitude of their words, therefore yee muſt not pray in that manner which they doe. This repetition of the commandement ſerues to imprint the ſame more deeply in the hearts of his hearers, to cauſe them, and ſo vs in them, to be more carefull to auoide needleſſe repetitions in praier.

Diſtinction of people before Chriſts death.

B Now hauing handled this commandement in the former verſe, I will here onely obſerue this point of doctrine touching the diſtinction of people before the death of Chriſt; for here Chriſt ſaith vnto the Iewes, Be yee not like them: that is, like the Gentiles; where he putteth a plaine difference betweene the Iewes and all the Nations of the world beſides. And therefore when he firſt ſent his Diſciples to preach, he forbad them [a] the way of the Gentiles and the cities of Samaria; commanding them to goe to the loſt ſheepe of the houſe of Iſrael. And this diſtinction was not onely in Chriſts time, but had beene from the beginning of the ſpace of 4000. yeares. In the firſt age of the C world there were [a] the ſonnes of God, and the daughters of men: after the flood [b] the children of the fleſh, and the children of the promiſe. And vnder the law, [c] a people of God, and no people. This diſtinction ſtood in two things: 1. In regard of the grace of adoption, and of the eſpeciall fauour of God; for in this Text Chriſt ſaith, the Iewes had God for their Father, which the Gentiles had not, for they were ſtrangers from the couenant of promiſe, Epheſ. 2.12. 2. In regard of Gods true worſhip; for concerning praier, a ſpecial part thereof, Chriſt here ſaith to the Iewes, Ye ſhall not be like the Gentiles: If any ſhall here thinke, that this preferment of the Iewes before the Gentiles, in regard of Gods ſpeciall mercie, came from this that God foreſaw ſomething in them, which D was not in the Gentiles; let them heare what Moſes ſaith to the Iewes, [d] The Lord did not ſet his loue vpon you, nor choſe you for your multitude, but becauſe the Lord loued you, and would keepe the oath which he ſware to your fathers.

The promiſe of life not vniuerſall to all.

From this ground of doctrine touching the diſtinction of people, in regard of Gods ſpeciall mercie, follow three waightie points to be knowne and beleeued. Firſt, that the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting in the Meſſias, is not vniuerſall to all; but indefinite to many of all ſorts, kindes, and eſtates: for if the promiſe pertained to all, then there could be no diſtinction of man and man, of people and people, in regard of mercie; and therefore the opinion of Vniuerſall grace is falſe and erroneous. Secondly, that though Chriſt died for all (for so the Scripture saith) yet he died not alike effectually for all: for if Redemption by Christ had beene vniuersall, then had mercie belonged vnto all, which is against the Text: and therefore the opinion of vniuersall redemption is also a forgery of mans braine.

Against vniuersall redemption.

Thirdly, that God calls not all men effectually to saluation by Christ; for then should euery one haue God to be their Father in Christ: and the Iewe had no priuiledge before the Gentile in regard of mercie, and the grace of adoption: but here we see, that God for many hundreds of yeares, was the Father of the Iewe, and not of the Gentile, in regard of grace and adoption. And by this doctrine we may cleare that place of the Apostle Saint Paul, 1. Tim. 2. 4. where he saith, God would haue all to be saued: for he meaneth not all men in all times, but in this last age of the world, after the ascension of Christ, when as the partition wall was broken downe, and the distinction betweene Iewe and Gentile taken away, in regard of mercy, & the grace of adoption.

Against vniuersall vocation.

For your Father knoweth whereof yee haue neede before yee aske of him.

These words are a second reason against the heathenish manner of prayer, to this effect; It is needlesse for you to vse vaine repetitions in your prayers, because God knoweth your wants before you pray, and therefore few words well ordered are sufficient.

The exposition. Your Father knoweth] This knowledge of God, is not a bare notice taken of our wants, but such a knowledge as doth withall include a speciall care to make supplie vnto them; for this is a rule in the expounding of Scripture, that words of knowledge are often times put for words of affection: as Psal. 1. 6. The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous, but the way of the vngodly shall perish: where the opposition of knowledge to destruction, sheweth plainly, that by knowledge there is meant, the Lords due regard and respect vnto the waies of the godly; which is a point full of all comfort to the children of God: and for the clearing of it, diuers questions are to be scanned, which may well be moued out of this Text.

A rule in expounding Scripture.

1. Quest. If God know our wants before we pray, why then should we pray at all? Ans. We pray, not to informe God of the things we want, as though he knew them not; but for these causes chiefly; 1. to stirre vp our hearts, to seeke vnto Gods presence and fauour: 2. to exercise our faith in the meditation of Gods promises: 3. to ease our wofull hearts, by powring them out vnto the Lord: 4. to testifie our obedience vnto Gods commandements, and our trust in his prouidence, for the obtaining of euery good thing we desire.

Why we pray, seeing God knowes our wants.

2. Quest. If God know our wants, and haue care to make supplie thereof, why then doth God oftimes delay to graunt the praiers of his seruants? Ans. God deferreth to graunt the request of his children for many respects; 1. to kindle their faith, and to stirre vp their zeale in prayer, that they may more earnestly begge the things they want; for this ende our Sauiour Christ reasoneth with the woman of Canaan, before he would cure her daughter: 2. to keepe them in humilitie, and to preuent spirituall pride; thus he denied to remoue from the Apostle Paul, the buffeting of Satan, though he praied for it, least he should be puffed vp through aboundance of reuelations: 2. Cor. 12. 7. 8. 9: 3. to make them esteeme more highly of the blessings of God, and to stirre them vp to more thankfulnesse for the same: for it is commonly seene, that things lightly gotte, are lightly set by.

Why God delaies his graunt to our praiers.

3. Quest. How falleth it out, that God doth neuer graunt some men their requests? Ans. 1. Because they make their praiers, but not according to Gods wil, either failing in the time, as did the foolish virgins, who cried, Lord, Lord, open to vs, when the doores were shut, Matt. 25. 11. 12. or in the things they aske, and so the a sonnes of Zebede had not their request, because they asked they knew not what. 2. Because they doubt and wauer in prayer, for such shall not receiue any thing of the Lord, Iam. 1. 6. 7. 3. Because they pray for wrong ends; Ye aske and receiue not, because ye aske amisse, that ye might consume it on your lusts, Iam. 4. 3.

Why God neuer graunts some men requests.

a Math. 20. 22.

The vse. First, this prouident eye of God ouer all our wants, teacheth vs what to do when we are assaulted by any enemie, either of bodie or soule: we must first of all make God our refuge and tower of defence, by getting assurance of our adoption: for if we be Gods children, he is our father, knowing & weighing our wants, and he is most carefull to make supplie thereto, before we pray. Gen. 25. 22. when the two twinnes stroue together in Rebeckahs wombe, shee sent to aske the Lord thereof, no doubt by Isaac her husband, who before had praied for her, v. 21. So when Iehosaphat was beset with many enemies, he cried vnto the Lord for helpe, and was deliuered, 2. Chron. 18. 31. and chap. 20. 12. And it was the Prophet Dauids practise to haue recourse to God in all his troubles, for which cause he cals the Lord his rock, his resting and hiding place.

Christian behauiour in distresse.

Secondly, hereby we are taught to haue a moderate care for the things of this life: for we haue a Father in heauen, who careth for vs, knowing al our wants, and readie to make supplie thereof, before we pray. In these daies, most men set their hearts vpon the world, and trust to outward meanes more then to God himselfe which comes from this; because they want a true perswasion of their adoption in Christ: for if they knew that Christ were their Father, then surely this perswasion would take place in their hearts; God knoweth my wants, and is care-full for the supplie thereof, therefore I will trust in him, and obey him.

Thirdly, this teacheth vs, in any neceſſitie or affliction, to ſubiect our ſelues to the will of God, labouring to be thankefull for that eſtate, as well as for proſperitie, and ſtudying to pleaſe and honour God therein: For he is a father who ſeeth all our wants before we complaine, and is carefull for our good, knowing that affliction is better for vs then proſperitie, or elſe he would ſend vs deliuerance; for it is all one with him, and he delights not in the affliction of his people.

Fourthly, this ſerues to arme vs againſt all carnall and ſlauiſh feare, whereby mens hearts are oppreſſed, either in regard of death, or of the day of iudgement: for though the deuill rage againſt vs, yet when death commeth, God is our father, who knoweth our wants, and the way to comfort vs, and is both willing and able to ſaue vs. In a word, this meditation ſerueth to ſtirre vs vp to all dutifull obedience in the whole courſe of our liues: for who can be but thankfull to ſuch a father, who knowes all his wants, and as he is able, ſo alſo he is willing and readie to make ſupplie thereof: this therefore ſhould enlarge our hearts to bleſſe God, that is ſuch a father vnto vs in Chriſt.

Verſ. 9. After this manner therefore pray yee: Our Father which art in heauen, halowed be thy name.

Our Sauiour Chriſt hauing forbidden his Diſciples all carnall and ſuperſtitious kinds of praying, doth here preſcribe vnto them a right holy forme of true prayer; but before we come vnto it, he giues them this commandement, After this manner therefore pray yee. S. Luke hath it thus; When you pray, ſay, Our Father, &c. In which words Chriſt inioynes his Diſciples to vſe a right and holy forme of praier, the patterne whereof is after ſet downe. Now becauſe this point is controuerſall, I will briefly ſet downe how farre forth this praier of Chriſt is preſcribed vnto vs; to wit, for matter and forme we muſt imitate and follow it in all our praiers, but we are not tied to the very words of this praier, but may freely vſe them, or other words at our pleaſure: for our Sauiour Chriſt oftentimes praied in other words, and ſo did the Apoſtles, as we may ſee by Pauls praiers in his Epiſtles, wherein he obſerueth the matter and maner of this praier, but yet vſeth other words: yea, S. Luke ſetting downe this very forme of praier, doth ſomewhat alter from the words of S. Matthew.

Vpon this commandement it may well be demanded, whether it be profitable and neceſſarie to vſe a ſet forme of prayer, either priuately or publikely in the ſeruice of God? Anſw. It is both lawfull to vſe a ſet forme of prayer, either publikely or priuately, yea it is both profitable and neceſſarie (as I ſay) for ſome perſons, and the ſame hath been vſed in the Church; for the proofe whereof conſider theſe reaſons: I. That which God hath ordained is both profitable and neceſſarie: but God hath ordained that men ſhould vſe a ſet forme of prayer, for the Prieſts were inioyned a ſet forme of prayer in bleſſing the People, Num. 6. 23, 24. and the 92. Pſalm is a ſet prayer for the Sabbath day; yea, all the Pſalmes of Dauid (ſome fewe Pſalmes of doctrine only excepted) are ſet formes of prayers to be vſed in the Church of God for euer: and in this place Chriſt preſcribeth a ſet forme of Prayer, not only for the matter and manner, but alſo for the words, and the like did Iohn Baptiſt when he taught his Diſciples to pray. II. Reaſon. In man there be ſundrie wants in prayer, as ignorance in the vnderſtanding, diſtractions in the minde, obliuion in the memorie both of Gods commandements and promiſes; in the heart is much deadneſſe, dulneſſe, and diſtruſt; in the tongue many wants, in want of ſuch conuenient vtterance as ſhould be in him that would ſpeake vnto God; and in moſt men there is that baſhfulneſſe, that they cannot vtter and diſpoſe the deſires of their heart before others in that order which were meete. Now to make ſupplie of all theſe wants, a ſet forme of prayer is to be vſed, whereunto all the powers of bodie and ſoule may be well helped. III. Reaſon. The ancient Church of God, long before the time of Poperie, vſed a ſet forme of praier: indeed for the firſt three hundred yeeres after Chriſt, by reaſon of continuall perſecution, they could not doe ſo; but after thoſe times there was a ſet forme of prayer vſed in al Churches, in ſo much as the ſouldiers in the field had their ſet praiers. And in many Councels it was decreed, that no Church ſhould vſe any forme of praier, but ſuch as was allowed and appointed, & that for theſe cauſes: firſt, that there might be an vniformitie in the ſolemne worſhip of God: and ſecondly, that the ignorance and negligence of many Paſtors might be preuented, who otherwiſe would haue omitted this dutie in their congregation: and therefore there was then ſet downe a generall forme of Confeſſion of ſinnes, of praier and thankſgiuing, and of adminiſtration of the Sacraments.

Now conſidering ſet praier is a thing ſo requiſite, and hath beene of ſuch long vſe in former ages, I thinke it not amiſſe the ſame to be both profitable and good; whereby we may ſee how blinde and baſe they are who teach that ſet prayer is an abominable Idole, and as loathſome vnto God, as ſwines fleſh was to the Iewes. [illegible] their principall reaſons againſt ſet praier, and they be two. I. To read a Sermon penned by an other is no preaching, and therefore to repeate a ſet prayer is not prayer. Anſ. The reaſon is naught: for in reading a penned ſermon a man cannot expreſſe the gift of propheſie; but in reading a ſet praier he may ſhew the gift of praier, as namely, a touched heart for his ſinnes, an hungring deſire after grace, & a thankfull heart for Gods mercies; and herein doth praier conſiſt, and not in words. II. Reaſon. We muſt pray freely as his ſpirit mooueth vs; and therefore to vſe ſet formes of praier, is to ſtint and quench the good motions of the ſpirit. Anſwer. This reaſon were ſomewhat, if euery one receiued ſuch a portion and meaſure of the ſpirit as did inable him thereunto: but ſeeing in this life we haue but the firſt fruits thereof and not the tenths (as one ſaith) we are to vſe all good helps to ſupply vnto our wants: for in the practiſe of holy duties we are like vnto a man that is newly recouered of ſome grieuous ſickneſſe, who can walke in his chamber, yet not by himſelfe alone, but either with his ſtaffe, or leaning vpon another mans ſhoulder: euen ſo we being weake and feeble in prayer, had need of the helpe of ſet formes of prayer, to hold vp our feeble hands vnto God: & therefore it is requiſite for ſuch to vſe ſet formes of praier, at leaſt for the matter and order thereof in their owne hearts; yea and many times it is needfull for ſome, to vſe ſet praiers for words: for many that haue true grace in their hearts, want vtterance to expreſſe it: if they might not vſe ſet formes of praier, they ſhould be depriued of many great comforts, eſpecially, when they pray with others. So then if the heart be rightly prepared thereto, ſet prayer doth not quench but helpe the weake gifts of the ſpirit both in the heart and tongue.

By this then we ſee, that neither our Church nor any other, where a ſet forme of diuine ſeruice is eſtabliſhed, is therefore to be blamed; becauſe the ſame is both neceſſarie and profitable. Secondly, here we ſee, that it is meete and neceſſarie we ſhould haue ſome ſet forme of prayer in our houſes according to our peculiar eſtates, whereby we may expreſſe vnto God our peculiar wants, and craue ſupply thereof particularly: ſome thinke we muſt onely praie vpon extraordinarie inſtinct and motion of the ſpirit: but ſeeing many be our wants, that vnleſſe we prepare our ſelues beforehand, we cannot pray aright; and therefore to auoid many diſtractions and lets in our minde, heart, and vtterance; it ſhall be found needfull to preſcribe vnto our ſelues a ſet forme of prayer: we are content to keepe a ſet order for candle and apparell, and why ſhould we not doe it in praier which concernes the comfort and refreſhing of our ſoules?

A ſecond thing to be gathered from this commandement is this; That the Lords praier is the moſt excellent forme of prayer that is, or can be made by any creature: for it was indited and propounded by the ſonne of God, who is the wiſedome of the father. Now the excellencie of it ſtands in theſe things: I. in the pithie ſhortneſſe of it: for in few words it compriſeth endleſſe matter: II. in the perfection of it: for it containeth in it whatſoeuer is to be asked in prayer; in which reſpect it is well called of one the abridgement of the whole Goſpel; III. in the order thereof, which hereafter we ſhall ſee in the reſolution of it: IV. in the acceptation it hath with God the Father: for it containeth the words of Chriſt his ſonne, in whom the Father is well pleaſed.

The Lords praier a moſt excellent forme of praier.

Vſe.1. The excellencie of this praier ſheweth plainely, that if any ſet forme of praier may be vſed, then this may, beeing indited by the Mediatour of the Church. And therefore the Anabaptiſts of our daies are fouly deceiued, who denie the vſe hereof for a praier, when as before this time for the ſpace of fifteene hundred yeares after Chriſt, there was neuer any that diſallowed it. Secondly, hence we ſee that the practiſe of thoſe preachers is commendable, who vſe to conclude their prayers with the Lords prayer: for hereby, as by a moſt perfect and excellent prayer, the wants and imperfections of our praiers are ſupplied. Thirdly, whereas ſome would gather from the perfection and excellencie of this praier, that it alone is ſufficient to be vſed, they are deceiued; for Chriſts intent was rather to commend this prayer vnto vs for matter and manner, then for the words thereof. Againe, though it be a moſt perfect prayer, yet it is onely generall; but euery true beleeuer muſt haue particular prayers, whereby in ſpeciall forme and manner his particular eſtate and condition may be made knowne vnto the Lord, yet ſo as they be alwaies ſuitable vnto this forme here preſcribed. And thus much of the Commandement: Now followeth the prayer it ſelfe.

Our father which art in heauen, halowed be thy name, &c.

This prayer hath three parts; I. a preface; II. the petitions; III. the concluſion. The Preface in theſe words: Our Father which art in heauen. In the handling whereof, as alſo in the reſt of this prayer, I will firſt propound the Meaning, then the Inſtructions.

I. The Meaning. Our Father] This title Father, properly belongs to God, who is a Father ſimply, by creation giuing beeing to all things, and preſeruing them by his prouidence. Men indeede are called fathers, but that is onely ſecondarily, becauſe in ſome properties of fatherhood they reſemble God. Now this title is giuen to God, ſometime ſimply conſidered without perſonall relation; as, Deut. 32.6. Doe ye ſo reward the Lord, O fooliſh people? is not hee thy Father that hath bought thee? Otherwhile it is giuen to the particular perſons in Trinitie; as firſt and principally to the firſt perſon, who is commonly called the Father. And the second person in Trinitie is sometime called Father, as Isa. 9. 6. the Father of eternitie: because he is the ground of our adoption, whereby we become eternally the sonnes of God; and therefore hee is brought in thus complaining of reproach; Behold, I, and the children which the Lord hath giuen me, are as signes and wonders in Israel: for the author to the Hebrews expounds that place of Christ, Heb. 2. 13. and he is said to haue seede, Isa. 53. 10. And the holy Ghost may proportionally be called Father, because with the Father and the Sonne he giues beeing to all things. But in this place by Father, is meant properly the first person, who is first and chiefly the Father of Christ, and in Christ our father. He is the Father of Christ, first by nature, begetting him as he is the Sonne, of his owne substance before all worlds, by communicating vnto him his whole essence or Godhead. Secondly, he is the father of Christ, as Christ is man, by the grace of personall vnion: for the manhood of Christ doth wholly subsist in the Godhead of the second person, & therefore Christ as he is man (I say not his manhood, which is a nature, not a person) may well be called the Sonne of God. And in this relation of himselfe to the first person, Christ saith, My Father is greater than I, Ioh. 14. 28. God the Father is our father, not by nature, or in regard of personall vnion, but by the grace of Adoption in Christ: for God sent his Sonne made of a woman (that is, incarnate) that we might receiue the adoption of sonnes. And this grace wee receiue, when we truely beleeue in his name, Ioh. 1. 12. and Gal. 3. 26. God for Christs sake being content to receiue vs for his sonnes and daughters.

Gal.4.4.

Which art in heauen.] God is said to bee in heauen, not as though he were included in the circle of the heauens: for the heauens, and the heauens of heauens are not able to containe him, 1 King. 8. 27. and indeede he is neither included nor excluded any place, being infinite, and so euery where; but because his maiestie and glorie is most eminent in the highest heauens to his Saints and Angels: and thence doth he manifest himselfe vnto vs in his power, wisedome, iustice, and mercie, while we are on earth: for heauen is his throne, and earth his footestoole, Isa. 66. 1. So that the meaning of this preface is this: O Lord God, which art the father of our Lord Iesus Christ, and in him our most mercifull father by adoption and grace, thou art a most glorious God which dwellest in heauen, and from heauen manifest thy glorious power, and mercie, thy wisedome, iustice, &c.

The instruction.

To whom we must pray.

I. This title Father, here giuen to God, teacheth vs to whom we must direct our prayers, not to Saints or Angels, or any other creature, but to God alone. Reasons. I. This is a perfect patterne of true prayer, wanting no direction for the right performance of this part of Gods worship: now this directs vs onely vnto God in prayer. II. God onely is the author and giuer of all good things, Iam. 1. 17. and therefore we must aske them of him alone. III. The Lord onely who is infinite and omnipotent can heare all mens prayers at all times, and in all places: and therefore hee alone is to bee prayed vnto, and not Saints departed, as the Papists teach.

The order of praier in God.

II. By this title we may see, in what order we must direct our praiers vnto God: for as the word of God reuealeth God vnto vs, so must we pray vnto him: now the Scripture reuealeth God vnto vs, to be one in essence, and three in person, viz. the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost; whereof the Father is first, the Sonne is the second, the holy Ghost the third in order, though not in time or greatnesse. Thus and no otherwaies must we conceiue of God, neither seuering the Godhead from the persons, nor the persons from the Godhead. And thus also must we worship him, euen one God in three persons, and three persons in one God. And yet seeing the father is first in order, the Sonne the second, & the holy Ghost the third, therefore when we pray to God, wee must obserue this order, directing our prayers to God the Father, in the mediation of the Sonne, by the assistance of the holy Ghost, as Christ here teacheth vs to say, Our father.

Quest. May not we direct our prayers to the Sonne, or to the holy Ghost by name? Answ. Yes we may; for Stephen praied to the Sonne, Act. 7. 59. Lord Iesus receiue my spirit: and Christ bids his Disciples, Go teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost, that is, calling vpon the name of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghost. Obiect. But in this perfect platforme, we are taught to pray to the Father alone. Answ. Though the Father alone be here named, yet the other two persons are not hereby excluded: the Father indeede is most vsually named, because he is the first in order, but yet with him alwaies is implied the Sonne, and the holy Ghost: for as all the three persons subsist in one and the same diuine nature or Godhead, and are not seuered in will, in counsell, or in outward actions, as creation, preseruation, and redemption, saue onely that they are distinguished in the manner of working: so likewise must they be all conceiued in our minds together when we pray, and none seuered out though they be not named: we must pray to all though we name but one, hauing in that one relation to the rest in our minde and heart. And if we conceiue aright of the order of the persons in Trinitie subsisting in the vnitie of essence, we may safely name in our prayers which person we will, so that withall we include the rest in our minde; and may also (if we name all) place them in such order as best fitteth our present occasion; as the Apostle doth in his benediction, 2. Cor. 13. 13. The grace of our Lord Iesus Christ, and the Loue of Mat.28.19.

God the Father, and the communion of the holy Ghoſt be with you all. Amen. Where he placeth the ſecond perſon before the firſt, becauſe by the grace of Chriſt we come to bee partakers of the loue of God the father.

Whence we haue boldnes with God in praier.

II. Herein this title Father, ſee the true ground of that boldneſſe wherewith Gods children come before God in prayer; namely, their intereſt in the couenant of grace in Chriſt, in whome God becomes their father. The Scripture mentioneth two couenants, one of works, which ſaith, Doe this, and thou ſhalt liue; the other of Grace, concerning reconciliatiō by the Meſſias through faith: for it ſaith, Beleeue in the Lord Ieſus, and thou ſhalt be ſaued. Now the couenant of workes through the corruption of our fleſh, driues vs from God, and throwes vs to hell: but the couenant of grace ſheweth our reconciliation to God in Chriſt: for a God was in Chriſt, and reconciled the world vnto himſelfe, not imputing their ſinnes vnto them; for which the firſt couenant would haue condemned them. And when we truly beleeue in Chriſt we performe the condition of this couenant, & ſo through b faith in him haue peace with God; yea, c boldneſſe, and entrance with confidence. And therefore when we come to God in prayer we muſt ground vpon this couenant in Chriſt, and ſo ſhall we go boldly to the throne of grace: bring faith in Chriſt, then is God thy father, and ſo thou ſhalt be welcome: hence it was that the Prophets and holy men vnder the Lawe, doe ſo often intreate the Lord in their prayers to remember his couenant made with Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, which was the couenant of grace, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, Gal. 3. and Rom. 4.

How to diſpoſe our ſelues towards God in praier.

III. In this title Father, we are taught how to diſpoſe our ſelues towards God when we pray vnto him; namely, as children before their father for our whole behauiour both outward and inward. And this ſtandeth ſpecially in foure things: 1. in reuerence both inward and outward, like as gracious children come before their earthly parents: 2. In true humilitie from our hearts, renouncing our ſelues, our merits and our owne wills, and relying wholly on Chriſts righteouſneſſe, and on the will of God in him: 3. In true conuiction and ſorrow of heart for our owne ſinnes, whereby we haue offended God, who hath been ſo gracious and mercifull a father vnto vs in Chriſt: 4. In a ſound purpoſe of heart to breake off the courſe of all ſinne, and to walke before God in new obedience to all his commandements. This is ſuch behauiour as becommeth Gods children in praying, and therefore muſt we labour to conforme our ſelues when we come before God, or elſe we ſhew our ſelues not children but rebells and traytors. Aboue the reſt of all vnreuerend behauiour in prayer, beware of pride, of hardnes and vnfruitfulneſſe of heart, and hauing the leaſt purpoſe to liue in ſinne: for as Dauid ſaith, If I regard wickedneſſe in my heart, God A will not heare my prayer. [illegible] (ſo ſaith he) I will waſh my hands in innocencie, and ſo will I compaſſe thine altar. [illegible] Pſal. 17. diſclaiming his owne righteouſneſſe [illegible] and Pſal. 51. Pſal.26.6.

Thus much of the title Father. Now we are to ſee how we muſt applie it to our ſelues in prayer: Our father, that is, my father in Chriſt, and not mine onely, but the father of all that truly beleeue in him.

Hence we learne ſundrie inſtructions. I. That when we pray, wee muſt applie to our ſelues all the promiſes of God in Chriſt, touching righteouſneſſe & life euerlaſting: for B he that makes them is our father, and therefore they belong to vs that be his children. Theſe promiſes are many and excellēt. And that they muſt be applied to our ſelues in praying is granted on all parts; but how, there is the controuerſie. The Papiſts ſay, we muſt apply them to our ſelues by hope; we ſay, by faith, which is the ground of things hoped for, laying hold on them for our ſelues particularly, as Thomas did on Chriſt: a My God, and my Lord: which I prooue thus: Whatſoeuer we aske in prayer, we muſt b beleeue that God will grant it for his Sonnes ſake: but this wee cannot doe vnleſſe wee beleeue that God is our father in Chriſt, and Chriſt our redeemer: and therefore wee muſt C firſt by faith lay hold vpon the maine promiſes of righteouſneſſe and life euerlaſting in Chriſt, which is the ground of all other bleſſings wee receiue from God. O (will ſome ſay) this is hard to doe. Anſw. Yet we muſt doe our endeauour herein, and ſtriue againſt doubting, vſing the meanes whereby we may come to that meaſure of grace, to ſay with Paul; I liue now by faith in the ſonne of God, who hath loued me, and giuen himſelfe for me: doing this in ſinceritie, God accepteth the will for the deed, euen our deſire and endeauour to apply Chriſt and his benefits for application it ſelfe: And if we continue in this vſe of meanes, he that hath begun in vs this good deſire, will finiſh it in the fruits of grace and full aſſurance.

We muſt pray for others.

II. This teacheth vs when we pray, to bee D mindfull of Gods whole militant Church and people: for we muſt ſay, Our father. Indeed it is not vnlawfull to apply this title in prayer to our ſelues particularly, for God ſaith of euery one that truly beleeueth, Thou ſhalt call mee my father, Ier. 3. 4. and ſo did c Chriſt, and his d Apoſtles apply to themſelues this title in their prayers. But yet Chriſt would haue vs alwaies to pray for our brethren, whereby we are aſſured from this his direction that they likewiſe pray for vs. This was Dauids vſuall practiſe no doubt, for when hee prayed e moſt earneſtly for the pardon of his owne perſonall ſinnes, he then forgets not Zion, but prayes the d Lord to doe well to Zion, and to build the walls of Ieruſalem. Now if in euery prayer wee make, we muſt haue reſpect to the Church of God, then VII-vndoubtedly in the courſe of our liues we muſt imploy our ſelues to ſeeke the good of others, eſpecially of Gods Church: for our conuerſation muſt expreſſe the truth of our deuotiō. Euerie one will ſay, this is the Miniſters duty, which is moſt true; but yet it is not his onely: for as in the naturall bodie euery member imployes it ſelfe for the good of the whole bodie, ſo muſt it be in the myſticall bodie of Chriſt: for the meaneſt Chriſtian hath ſome gift of the ſpirit; and the manifeſtation of the ſpirit (whereſoeuer it is) is giuen to profit withall. The common ſaying is, Euery man for himſelfe, and God for vs all; but this is a graceleſſe ſaying, flat againſt the communion of Saints, wherein euery one ſeeks an others good.

Brotherly loue needefull in praier.

III. Hence we learne, how we muſt come affected towards our brethren when wee pray to God, namely, louingly and peaceably, as to children of the ſame father: when we come to the Lords Table we make conſcience of loue and amitie with all men; and ſo ſhould we doe in prayer, for therein we bring a ſpiritual ſacrifice vnto God, and therefore we muſt be [a] reconciled to our brethren when wee offer it: for when mens hearts be full of malice, or their hands full of blood, [b] God will not heare them, though they make many prayers. If therefore we call vpon God as on our father, we muſt bee ſure to loue his children as our brethren; for [c] this commaundement we haue of God, that he which loueth God, ſhould loue his neighbour alſo; and he is not of God, that loueth not his brother, 1. Fatherhood in God is equall towards all true beleeuers.

IIII. Here we ſee that all true beleeuers whether high or lowe, poore or rich, are in equall condition in regard of God; for God is no reſpecter of perſons: and here Chriſt teacheth euerie one to ſay, Our father. In earthly kingdomes there be differences of eſtates and degrees, ſome be noble, ſome be baſe, ſom rule, others ſerue and obey: but with God in Chriſt there is neither bond nor free, &c. Coloſſ.3.11. The beleeuing ſhepheard may call God his father, as well as the beleeuing King, and haue as good a place in Chriſts kingdom. Which ſerues notably both to incourage the poore to embrace the Goſpel in ſincerity, ſeeing their mean outward eſtate cā nothing preiudice or hinder their high acceptance with the Lord, if they be faithfull; as alſo to admoniſh the rich & noble in this world, not to be puffed vp with theſe outward things to contemne the poore; for theſe things giue thē no title to the kingdome of God: nay, [h] not many noble, nor mightie after the fleſh are called, but God hath choſen the poor of this world, that they ſhould bee rich in faith, Iam.2.5.

Which art in heauen.] Theſe words ſhew towards what place we muſt diſpoſe our ſelues in prayer: our father to whome we pray is in heauen, and therefore thither muſt we direct our hearts, our eyes, our hands, and all that is in vs. Indeede the Iewes vnder the Law looked towards the Temple, and in the Temple towards the mercie-ſeate, becauſe the Lord had there promiſed the manifeſtation of his preſence; and therefore [l] Daniel turned his face towards Ieruſalem when he prayed in Chaldea: but now in the newe Teſtament difference of place in reſpect of Gods preſence, is take away and we are not tied in prayer to looke Eaſt or Weſt, North or South; but in all may now euerie where and euery way lift vp pure hearts and hands vnto God: towards heauen thou muſt diſpoſe thy heart, becauſe thy father to whom thou praieſt is there: & look which way thou wilt, or goe whether thou wilt, heauen is not nearer nor further off. Which ſhewes euidently two notable groſſe Popiſh fooleries in the matter of Gods worſhip; the firſt is, their going on pilgrimage from place to place to ſerue God the better: for God whome thou muſt worſhip is in heauen, in reſpect whereof all places are alike, goe whether thou wilt thou art not nearer, and ſtirre no foote, thou art not further off. Their ſecond foolerie, which is alſo abominable before God, is to worſhip God in an Image, at Croſſes, and in Crucifixes, &c. theſe they vſe to put them in minde of God, and of Chriſt; but this they learne by the precepts and traditions of men, and therefore it is but meere vaine and fooliſh worſhip in the ſight of God: Chriſt teacheth vs to ſet our hearts towards heauen, and not to pore on dumme Images here on earth.

Two popiſh fooleries.

II. Inſtruct. Is God in heauen? then when we pray we muſt come before God with all reuerence, feare, and trembling; for hee is in heauen a moſt glorious God, full of all maieſtie and power: Eccles.5.1. Be not raſh with thy mouth, nor let thine heart bee haſtie to vtter a word before God: why ſo? for hee is in heauen, & thou art vpon earth, therefore let thy words be few. Now this reuerence muſt ſhewe it ſelfe; firſt, in the holy diſpoſition of the heart and affections towardes the Lord, when the minde is not carried away with by-thoughts, but applyeth it ſelfe wholly and onely to the preſent ſeruice it hath in hand: ſecondly, in the comely geſture of the body beſeeming ſo holy an action, done to ſo high a maieſtie. Thirdly, in the humble and reuerend vttering of our requeſts, hauing before hand wel conſidered the things we are to vtter before God. But goes the caſe thus with men in their ordinarie prayers? nothing leſſe; for beſide the multitude that pray without vnderſtanding, euen the better ſort in the time of prayer haue their minds running vpon other matters, ſome about their profits, others about their ſports, or ſuch like: and is not this phariſaicall praier, wherein the lipps drawe neere to God, but the heart is farre remooued? Againe, many ſhew no reuerence in geſture or in ſpeach; ſome diſdaine to bowe to God in prayer, and others doe ruſh vpon God in many words without premeditation. But all theſe ſinne grieuouſly, for howſoeuer irreue-

Reuerence required in praier.

How it muſt be ſhewed.

rent pr[illegible] troubles few mens conſcience, becauſe it is [illegible] eaſily diſcerned, beeing againſt the firſt table, [illegible] it is to be eſteemed as a diſgrace vnto the Almightie: and being careleſſely practiſed, when it is once knowne, it is plaine mockerie of Gods maieſtie, worſe then mocking of father or mother: and therefore we muſt with all carefulneſſe avoid it, and ſet our hearts with all reuerēce towards God in praier.

What we muſt aske of God in praier.

III. Hence we muſt learne to aske of God in prayer heauenly things eſpecially: theſe earthly bleſſings may be asked, ſo farre forth as they are helps to further vs towards our euerlaſting inheritance in heauen, to which we are called, 1.Pet.1.3,4. But to be euer grouelling in the earth, is againſt the nature of him that hath a father in heauen.

Our affection towards heauen.

IIII. Our principall care muſt be how to come to heauen, for there our father is: ordinarily a child deſires to be with his father, and is beſt pleaſed on his mothers lappe, or in his fathers armes: herein therefore we muſt teſtifie our ſelues to bee the ſonnes and daughters of God, by our vnfained deſire to be in heauen where our father is. It is vnnaturall for a child not to be delighted with his fathers houſe, and ſo it argues them to be void of grace, that haue no affection towards heauen and heauenly things: let vs therefore delight to pray, whereby we may creepe into our fathers boſome, and though our bodies be on earth, yet in affection and deſire let our ſoules mount vp to heauen: here we are but pilgrims, if God be our father, our hearts muſt be vpon our home which is heauen where our father is.

A double prop to our praiers.

Now the words of this preface thus opened, containe a twofold notable ground & proppe to all our prayers: to wit, that God is both able and willing to heare and helpe when wee pray: for his beeing in heauen, imports that he is almightie, and therefore can heare and helpe vs: our God is in heauen, and he doth whatſoeuer hee will. And beeing a father, yea our father in Chriſt: he muſt needes be willing and readie to graunt our requeſts: for no father is ſo tenderly affected towards his naturall ſonne, as the Lord our God is towards all his children in Chriſt, Pſal.103.13. As a father hath compaſſion on his children, ſo hath the Lord compaſſion on all that call vpon him: Luke, 11. 13. If you that bee euill can giue good things to your children, much more ſhall your heauenly Father giue the holy Ghoſt to them that aske him: and hence it is that Chriſt ſaith, Whatſoeuer you aske the Father in my name hee will giue it you, Ioh.16. 23. Of theſe two muſt euery one bee perſwaded that prayes aright: euerie one will graunt that God is able to heare and helpe; but of his willingnes thereunto none can be aſſured but hee that is the child of God, who knoweth God to be his father. Yet here muſt none deceiue himſelfe, to thinke that whatſoeuer hee askes on his owne head, God will graunt it, for if we aske amiſſe we ſhall not receiue, & therefore we muſt carefully marke and obſerue the direction of Gods word both for the things we aske, and for our manner of asking.

Pſal.115.3.

Halowed be thy name.

Thus much of the preface: here begin the petitions, which are ſixe in number; whereof the three firſt concerne God, the three latter concerne our ſelues. Againe, of thoſe which concerne God, the firſt concernes Gods glorie it ſelfe, the other two the means wherby Gods glorie is manifeſted and inlarged among men: for Gods name is then glorified among men, when his kingdome doth come, and his will is done.

Now this petition for the glorifying of Gods name, is rightly ſet in the firſt place: for Gods glorie is the abſolute ende of all things; Prou. 16.4. The Lord made all things for his owne ſake, yea euen the wicked for the day of euill: & therefore it muſt be preferred before all things: before life it ſelfe, yea before ſaluation which is life eternall: Ioh.12.27,28. our Sauiour Chriſt preferres the glorie of his fathers name before his owne life. And Paul preferres it afore his owne ſaluation: for he profeſſeth that for Gods glorie in the ſaluation of the Iewes, hee could wiſh himſelfe ſeparate from Chriſt, Rom.9.3.

In this petition, as in the reſt, we are to obſerue this order: firſt ſhew the meaning of the words; then propound the vſes.

Gods name.

I. The meaning. Name] The word aſcribed to God, is here taken generally; firſt, for God himſelfe; as Pſal.20.1. The name of the God of Iacob defend thee: that is, the God of Iacob defend thee: Rom.10.13. Whoſoeuer ſhall call vpon the name of the Lord ſhall be ſaued; that is, vpon the Lord. Secondly, it here betokens any thing whereby God may be knowen, as men are by their names: and thus it comprehends, I. his diuine attributes; as Iuſtice, mercie, power, wiſedome, &c. II. his word, the holy Scriptures which reueale to men the true knowledge of God. III. Gods Iudgements, publike or priuate; for thereby he makes knowne his preſence, his power, and iuſtice. IV. his works and creatures: for all theſe beare a ſtampe of Gods name, and in them may the inuiſible things of God bee ſeene, Rom.1.20.

Two kinds of honour.

Halowed, or ſanctified] To halowe Gods name, is to glorifie Gods name; as Ioh. 28. and this we do, when we giue vnto him the higheſt honour that may be: the higheſt I ſay, because there are two kinds of honour; Firſt, the honor of religion, when we giue our hearts to God, louing him, fearing him, truſting and delighting in him aboue all; which wee teſtifie by all outward adoration preſcribed in Gods word: this is the higheſt honour of all. Secondly, there is the honour of ſocietie, which paſſeth betweene man and man, in commonwealths; and it conſiſteth in the acknowledgement of preheminence and ſuperioritie in an other, either by word or geſture, ciuilly: thus ſubiects honour Princes and Magiſtrates; and inferiours their ſuperiours. This is due to the creature: the former to the creator onely, and that is the honour we here pray for.

1. Religious.

That we may yet the better vnderſtand the meaning of this petition, we muſt know that Gods name is halowed or ſanctified of vs two waies: either in God himſelfe, or in his workes. In himſelfe by three actions: 1. when we conceiue God in our minds, and acknowledge him as he hath reuealed himſelfe in his word; to wit, creator and gouernour of all things, moſt holy, moſt wiſe, iuſt, mercifull, &c. 2. When we ſanctifie the Lord in our hearts; that is, when we loue him aboue all, and feare him aboue all, and put our truſt in him in all eſtates. 3. When we praiſe and laud the name of God, for his goodnes: yea, though we ſhould neuer taſte of his ſpeciall fauour, yet for his generall mercie, iuſtice, and moſt wiſe prouidence, we ought to extoll the Lord with our mouthes.

Gods name is halowed or ſanctified in his creatures, by three ſpeciall actions: 1. When we acknowledge the wiſdome of God, and his powerfull hand in euery creature. 2. When we haue a reuerend eſtimation of the creatures, and vſe them in Chriſtian ſobrietie, in regard of the ſtampe of Gods power and wiſdom which appeareth in them. 3. When we ſanctifie our moderate vſe of them, by the word and praier, as God requireth, 1. Tim. 4. 5. See the practiſe hereof in the word of God, which is his owne ſolemne ordinance, whereby he makes himſelfe knowne vnto his Church: Therein we ſanctifie and halow Gods name: I. when we acknowledge the wiſdome, mercie, and power of God in it: II. when we haue a reuerent eſtimation of the word, in regard of the glorious Image of God which appeareth in it: III. when we vſe it in a ſanctified and holy manner, comming vnto it reuerently with prepared hearts, hungring after the graces of God which are wrought thereby, and giuing our ſelues in heart and life to be framed and ruled thereby. And thus we ſanctifie God in afflictions (for they are his workes) when we labour to ſee the hand of God therein, in iuſtice, mercie, & great wiſdome chaſtening vs; when we haue a reuerend regard to the hand of God appearing in them, and labour to be humbled thereby for the increaſe of our repentance, & the exerciſe of our faith and patience.

Thus then in this petition we deſire in mind, in heart, and life, to glorifie God both in himſelfe and in his workes: and the meaning of it may be thus expreſſed: O Lord, open our eyes that we may know thee aright, and may diſcerne thy power, wiſedome, iuſtice, and mercie: and inlarge our hearts that we may ſanctifie thee in our hearts, by making thee our feare, loue, ioy, and confidence: And open our lippes that we may bleſſe thee for thine infinite goodneſſe: yea, O Lord, open our eyes that we may ſee thee in thy workes, and ſtrike our hearts with reuerence of thy name appearing in them: and graunt that when we vſe any one of them, we may honour thee in our ſober and ſanctified vſe thereof.

The vſes. 1. wants to be bewailed.

Sinnes prophaning Gods name.

I. Here we are to call to minde our wants; and to humble our ſoules for thoſe ſinnes, whereby we haue hindred Gods glorie or prophaned his name: and theſe eſpecially are foure: I. Pride of heart: a vile affection whereby we ſeeke our owne praiſe and glorie, & not Gods. This is naturall, and ſo the more hardly diſcerned; but while it is nouriſhed, Gods glorie is neglected, and therefore when we deſire to glorifie Gods name, we muſt acknowledge and bewaile this inward corruption. II. Want of zeale, coldneſſe of heart towards God. This is an inward corruption which debaſeth the Lord in our hearts, and takes away that high eſteeme of God which ought to be in vs. This cauſeth vs to omit to glorifie God, and to defend the cauſes of God, and the honour of his name, when wicked men diſgrace and reproch the ſame: he that hath any inſight into his owne eſtate may perceiue this in himſelfe: now it mightily hinders the glorie of God, and therefore we muſt vnfainedly bewaile it in our owne hearts. III. Hardneſſe of heart, whereby we are hindred from the true knowledge of God in his word, and from diſcerning his wiſedome, power, iuſtice, mercie, &c. in his workes, though we haue them before our eyes: hence it comes, that either we neglect the word, and paſſe by the workes of God without conſideration; or if we vſe them, yet it is without glorie to God, or profit to our ſoules. Mark. 6. 52. Chriſts owne Diſciples conſidered not the miracle of the loaues, becauſe their hearts were hardened; they diſcerned not, or at leaſt remembred not the power of God in that miracle, though themſelues were inſtruments about it, and they might perceiue the food to increaſe in their hands. IV. Prophaneneſſe and impietie in life: for God is glorified, when we bring forth the fruits of grace, Ioh. 15. 8. and our good workes cauſe others to glorifie God, Matth. 5. 16. And therefore our prophane life is a reproach vnto the Lord, and cauſeth others to diſhonour and blaſpheme his name, Rom. 2. 24. Now this prophaneneſſe appeareth, either in mens ſpeech, by blaſpheming the name of God, abuſing his titles, attributes, his word, his creatures, or any work of his prouidence: or in their conuerſation, when they diſpoſe the whole courſe of their liues to wrong ends, ſeeking themſelues and not Gods glorie.

Theſe are the ſpeciall ſinnes againſt Gods glorie, which we are to ſee and to bewaile in our owne hearts: If we ſee them not in our ſelues our caſe is the worſe, and we muſt ſuſpect our ſelues the more: if we perceiue them in vs, we muſt be humbled for them, yea aſhamed and confounded in our owne hearts, thinking euill of our ſelues by reaſon hereof: & then ſhal we be able to ſay with ſome truth of heart, O

Lord, hallowed be thy name. And indeed till we be inwardly humbled for theſe corruptions in ſome meaſure, the heart can neuer ſpeake theſe words as a ſonne and daughter of God ought to doe.

Graces enabling vs to glorifie God.

2. Vſe. Graces to be deſired.

Secondly, this petition teacheth vs, earneſtly to deſire of God thoſe ſpirituall graces whereby we may glorifie his name in our ſelues and others. The graces enabling vs hereto, are theſe eſpecially. I. The true knowledge of God, as he hath reuealed himſelfe in his word, and in the workes of his power and prouidence: for he that knowes not God cannot poſſibly glorifie his name. II. To ſanctifie God in our hearts, by louing, fearing, and truſting in him aboue all. This makes greatly for his glorie, when we depend vpon him in ſoule and bodie for all goods things. III. The calues of our lippes, which is a ſacrifice of praiſe to God for all his mercies: Pſal. 50.23. He that offereth praiſe ſhall glorifie mee. IV. To ſee Gods hand in all his works, how mightie, iuſt, and gratious the Lord is. V. To reuerence the workes of God for his iuſtice, mercie, power, &c. appearing in them. VI. To vſe all his creatures reuerently, ſanctifying the ſame vnto our ſelues by the word and prayer.

Theſe graces we muſt hunger after, and labour to haue a liuely feeling of in our hearts; and ſo ſhall we ſanctifie Gods name, and honour him in all his works. And hereby we ſhall know our ſelues to be the ſonnes and daughters of God; we may indeede belong to God in his ſecret counſell; but without theſe ſanctified affections, we are not effectually called, and ſo indeed not actually become Gods children.

III. Vſe.

3. Vſe. Duties to be practiſed.

Duties whereby we may glorifie god.

Thirdly, whenſoeuer we take of God in praier, we muſt vnfainedly endeauour to practiſe in our liues; as therefore we pray that Gods name may be hallowed, ſo we muſt be carefull to ſanctifie the ſame in our conuerſation. For this end we muſt haue regard to theſe things.

1 1.Tim.6.1.

I. That our liues be vnblameable, not ſtained with any ſinne, that as Paul ſaid of earthly ſeruants, They muſt count their maſters worthie all honour that the name of God be not euill ſpoken of: ſo the ſame may be verified in euery one of vs towards the Lord our maſter in heauen. Away therefore with all Idolatry, blaſphemous oathes, and curſed ſpeaking, with Sabbath breaking, and all other ſinnes againſt the ſecond Table: for a prophane life brings great reproach vpon the name of God which men profeſſe.

II. We muſt propound the right end of our life euery day in our calling and conuerſation, to wit, Gods honour and glorie, and not our owne praiſe, wealth, pleaſure, or dignitie.

III. When God offers occaſion by any worke of his prouidence, we muſt endeauour therein to glorifie and magnifie God: for example, if God ſendes a grieuous dearth and famine of bread among vs, or the plague of peſtilence, as he hath done ſundrie times; then muſt we ſtriue herein to glorifie and praiſe Gods name: firſt, by labouring to ſee the hand of God ſmiting vs for our ſinnes: ſecondly, by reuerencing the worke of God, eſteeming it as his hand vpon vs: thirdly, by humbling our ſelues vnto God, & renewing our repentance for our ſinnes, that haue brought Gods iudgements vpon vs. Thus ſhould we glorifie God in his Iudgements: but alas, ſuch is our blindneſſe and ſecuritie, that though Gods hand be vpon vs, yet few lay it to heart; where is he that ſaith, a What haue I done? nay, though God himſelfe call vnto weeping and mourning, and to girding with ſacke cloath, (as the Prophet b ſpeaketh) yet behold, ioy, and gladneſſe, eating, and drinking; ſo as Gods name is diſhonoured in his iudgements. So when Gods bleſſings are vpon vs, we ſhould glorifie his name, by labouring to ſee his hand of mercie; and eſteeming of them reuerently, with praiſe and thankſgiuing to God that is the giuer: but herein alſo men diſhonour God, by poring vpon the meanes, praiſing their owne wit, and induſtrie, and ſo ſacrificing to their nets, as the c Prophet ſaith.

Motiues to glorifie god.

Now becauſe this dutie is of great weight and importance, I will adde ſome ſpeciall reaſons to moue vs hereunto. I. From the neceſſitie hereof in Gods Church and children: for Gods name is diſhonoured ouer all the world. In the great dominions of the Turke, God is acknowledged, but yet out of the Trinitie. And the Iewes confeſſing God, denie Chriſt. The Papiſts in word confeſſe and acknowledge the Trinitie, but yet by their Idolatrie they greatly robbe God of his glorie, they robbe Chriſt of his offices, and giue diuine worſhip vnto creatures. And in the boſome of the Church are many Atheiſts, blaſphemers, oppreſſors, drunkards, adulterers, & voluptuous perſons, whoſe bellie is their God; all which, though they will profeſſe God in word, yet by their workes they denie him: ſo that vnleſſe Gods children ſeeke to maintaine and aduance Gods glorie, it is like to be trampled and troden vnder foote.

II. There is great danger to Gods children in omitting and neglecting this dutie; for by calling they are brought neare vnto God: now God will be glorified in all that come neare him: if we doe not honour him according to our profeſſion, his hand will be vpon vs for his glorie in our confuſion: hence it was, that God ſlew d Nadab and Abihu the ſonnes of Aaron for offring ſtrange fire before the Lord: and he debarred e Moſes and Aaron out of the promiſed land, becauſe they glorified him not at the waters of ſtrife. This made the wrath of God to burne like fire againſt the houſe of f Eli, for the iniquitie of his ſonnes, which their Father ſaw to be there, and yet ſtaied them not, and ſo honoured them aboue the Lord. We had neede therefore to looke vnto our ſelues, that we glorifie God

in his life and in his workes, as his hand will be vpon vs in ſending loſſe of goods, or calling, or ſome other way for the glorie of his iuſtice: for God will not looſe his glorie. III. If wee ſay, Halowed be thy name with our mouth, and ſeeke not his honour in our life, we bewray in our ſelues damnable hypocriſie, and make profeſſion of that ſinne which the Lord vtterly deteſteth: we eſteeme very baſely of diſſemblers among men: but much more odious is this ſame in the matters of God; and therefore let the practiſe of our liues, ſhew the ſinceritie of our hearts, when we pray for the glorifying of Gods name.

Fourthly, this petition teacheth vs, that we our ſelues muſt be halowed and ſanctified; for elſe we cannot halow Gods name: They that beare the veſſels of the Lord, in his ſanctuarie, muſt be cleane, Iſay. 52. 11. How much more ought they to be holy, that beare the glorious name of God? When Ananias doubted of going to Paul, the Lord tels him, g he is a choſen veſſell vnto mee to beare my name: alluding to that ſtate of ſanctification, whereto the Lord had lately called him, whereby hee made him a fit inſtrument for the glorie of his name, in the miniſterie of the Goſpel. And the ſame ſtate muſt we labour after, if we would be anſwerable to that we ſeeme to deſire in this petition. We muſt therefore labour to be new creatures, changed in minde and heart, for an vnholy perſon cannot truely deſire the glorie of God: but when we once feele the grace of ſanctification, then will the deſire of Gods glorie breed in our hearts, and we ſhall know how worthy the Lord is to haue all glorie giuen vnto his name.

g Act.9.15.

Fiftly, if we compare this petition with the reaſon wherewith Chriſt concludes this praier, wee ſhall ſee that the praiſe and honour of God, is the beginning and end of Chriſts praier, and ſo as it were the firſt and laſt thing with Chriſt: whence we learne, that wee ought to be more frequent and plentifull in thankſgiuing vnto God, then in petition and requeſt. Thus we deale with thoſe that be bountifull vnto vs on earth, we giue them many thankes for one good turne; and therefore ſhould we much more abound in thankſgiuing to our heauenly Father, from whome we receiue euery good gift that we enioy. It beſeemes not the childe of God to be alwaies and onely begging, as though he had nothing: but withall, he muſt be plentifull in thanks and praiſe, for that argues he hath a taſte of Gods mercie towards him: this made Dauid ſay, h Praiſe is a comely and pleaſant thing; it well i becommeth vpright men to be thankefull. Our life of glorie ſhall be ſpent in praiſing God, and therefore we ſhould inure our ſelues thereto, in this time of grace: and indeede, according to our thankſgiuing is our grace; little praiſe, little grace; but he that abounds in thankſgiuing, abounds in Gods bleſſings. Againe, heartie thankſgiuing for that we haue, is an effectuall prayer for more bleſſings.

i Pſal.33.1.

Laſtly, the place wherein this petition is ſet in this praier, teacheth vs to ſeeke the glorie of God ſimply and abſolutely before all other things. This ought to be the affection of Gods child, though he ſhould receiue no bleſſings from God; for looke what God prefers in his direction, that muſt we alwaies prefer in all our actions, though no good ſhould follow vnto vs thereupon: for this ende, God giues vs time to liue in this world, that we might glorifie God in our places and callings; and hee that imployeth himſelfe otherwayes, prophaneth Gods name, & tranſgreſſeth this heauenly order here ſet downe by Chriſt, who is the wiſdome of his Father.

Gods glorie muſt bee ſought abſolutely.

V. 10. Thy kingdome come.

The Coherence. Chriſt hauing taught vs to pray for the ſanctifying of Gods name, in the former petition, doth in this, and the reſt which follow, as it were expound the ſame, by directing vs to the meanes whereby Gods name is halowed of vs: for then doe we glorifie Gods name, when he ſets vp his kingdome in vs, and we ſuffer him to rule in our hearts, when we doe his will, depend vpon his prouidence for the things of this life, truſt in his mercie for the pardon of our ſinnes, and on his power and ſtrength againſt temptation. Now of them all, this ſecond hath the neareſt dependance vpon the former, as beeing an eſpeciall meanes thereof: for men ought to glorifie Gods name on earth, but of themſelues they cannot doe it, till God rule in their hearts by his word and ſpirit, and ſo ſet vp his kingdome in them.

The meaning. Gods Kingdome is two-fold; Generall, and Speciall. Gods generall kingdome, is his abſolute power and ſoueraigntie, whereby he ruleth all things in heauen, in earth and in hell, euen the deuills themſelues: Pſal. 103. 19. The Lord hath prepared his throne in heauen, his kingdome ruleth ouer all: and this we acknowledge in the ende of this prayer, For thine is the kingdome. Now this we pray not for, becauſe it is alwaies euery where, no creature can hinder it, no not all the deuils in hell, for euery creature is ſubiect hereunto, and can doe nothing but that which God either willeth or permitteth: k according to his will hee worketh in the armie of heauen, and in the inhabitants of the earth; and none can ſtay his hand, nor ſay, what doeſt thou?

Gods kingdome two-fold.
1. Generall.

k Dan.4.32.

Gods ſpeciall kingdome is that, whereby he ruleth his elect and choſen people, working his will not onely by them, as he doth in his generall kingdome, by the deuills themſelues; but in them alſo, by his holy ſpirit: and it is called ſpeciall, becauſe it is not exerciſed ouer all the world, but onely ouer the Elect, whom he hath ordained to eternall life.

2. Speciall.

This ſpeciall kingdom of God is two-fold; either of grace, or of glorie. The kingdome of grace, Gods kingdome of grace.

is a ſpirituall eſtate, wherein God maketh men willingly ſubiect to his written word, by his ſpirit. I call the kingdome of grace a ſpirituall ſtate, both becauſe it is principally exerciſed in the conſcience, and alſo becauſe this regiment in the conſcience, is by the ſpirit of God. Secondly, I ſhew wherein it conſiſts, namely, in a voluntarie ſubiection of the whole man in ſoule, and bodie, and ſpirit, to the will of God, reuealed in his word, Pſalm. 110.3. The people ſhall come willingly in the day of aſſembling thine armie, in holy beautie. And this ſubiection ſtands in three things; in Righteouſneſſe, Peace, and Ioy in the holy Ghoſt, Rom. 14. 17. First, In Righteouſneſſe, which is firſt in Chriſts righteouſneſſe imputed; and ſecondly, in the righteouſneſſe of a good cōſcience, the ground whereof, is ſanctification by the ſpirit, which Chriſt giues to them, whom he doth iuſtifie. In Peace, that is peace of conſcience towards God, and peace with Gods Church, yea, and all creatures, ſo farre forth as is needfull for them. Now vnder peace, we muſt comprehend loue and all duties of loue: for as righteouſneſſe concernes the perſon in ſoule and bodie, ſo peace reſpects all duties and actions of the life: Righteouſneſſe is the root, from whence ſpringeth this peace with euery action thereof, for when the heart is ſanctified, the life is reformed. Laſtly, In ioy in the holy Ghoſt: this is a fruite of both the former, reſpecting eſpecially the ſtate of affliction; for when a man is iuſtified and ſanctified, & hath peace towards God, then will he haue his ioy & ſpirituall delight in God, in all eſtates: yea, though grieuous afflictions light vpon him for Gods cauſe, yet he beareth them with inward ioy and delight, knowing that the ſpirit of glorie and of God, reſteth vpon him, and that he ſhall be glorified with Chriſt, if he ſuffer with Chriſt: which things, while he bearneth together, hee little eſteemeth the afflictions of this life, in reſpect of the glorie that ſhall be reuealed: l For his light affliction which is but for a moment, cauſeth vnto vs a farre moſt excellent and eternall weight of glorie. These are the branches of this ſpirituall ſubiection, which whoſoeuer hath, is a good ſubiect in the kingdome of grace: as the Apoſtle ſaith in the next verſe, m he that in theſe things ſerueth Chriſt, is acceptable vnto God, and approoued of men.

l 2.Cor.4.17

m Rom.14.18.

Gods kingdome of glorie.

The kingdome of glorie, is the bleſſed eſtate of Gods elect in heauen, whereby God in Chriſt becomes all things vnto them immediately, 1. Cor. 15. 28. This eſtate of glorie is a ſubiection alſo, but not ſuch a ſubiection, as it is indeed a glorious regiment: for there we raigne with Chriſt, in whom, and through whom, God himſelfe becomes honour, peace, health, foode, raiment, and all things needfull to the perfection of felicitie. Now theſe two being Gods kingdome, differ thus; The ſtate of grace is the beginning and entrance to the ſtate of glorie, and the ſtate of glorie is the perfection of the ſtate of grace. This ſtate of glorie is the citie, and the ſtate of grace, as it were, the ſuburbs of it. In this life, we liue in the kingdome of grace; but the kingdome of glorie is reſerued for the life to come: and this ſpeciall kingdome of God in both theſe eſtates, doe we here pray for.

Thy kingdome] This imports that there is another kingdome, euen the kingdome of Satan, which is a kingdome of darkneſ, full of all diſorder & confuſion, through ſinne, which greatly hindereth and annoyeth Gods kingdome of grace eſpecially.

Come] That is, to vs men in the world; and then it commeth, when God doth erect and eſtabliſh the ſame in their hearts: now vnto perfection it comes by fiue degrees: 1. When God giues vnto men the outward meanes of ſaluation, wherein he doth reueale his grace and fauour in Chriſt; as the Goſpel preached, which is therefore called the word of the kingdome, Matth. 13. 19. And ſo Chriſt (hauing relation to his preaching, which he confirmed by miracles among the Iewes) ſaith, The kingdome of God is come vnto you, Luk. 11. 20. and beeing demanded by the Phariſies, when the kingdome of God ſhould come? he tells them, it is among them, Luk. 17. 21. meaning, that it was brought vnto them, by the miniſterie of Iohn Baptiſt, of himſelfe, and of his Diſciples, although indeed it were without profit to many of them. 2. When the word preached inlightens the mind, ſo as a man knowes and vnderſtands the myſteries of the Goſpel, which is the law of this kingdome. 3. When a man is thereby regenerate, and ſo brought into this kingdome: for by regeneration we haue effectuall entrance into the ſtate of grace, wherein Chriſt rules in vs by his word and ſpirit, and we yeeld ſubiection vnto him. 4. At the end of this life, when the bodie goeth to the earth, but the ſoule to God that gaue it, being tranſlated to the ioyes of heauen, in the glorie of this kingdome. 5. At the laſt iudgement, when bodie and ſoule beeing vnited againe, are both made partakers of the glorie of this kingdome: and this is the full and perfect comming of it.

So then our requeſt to God in this petition, is to this effect; O Father, let thy kingdome come to vs that be Pilgrimes and ſtrangers here on earth; prepare vs for it, and intitle vs into it, that be yet without; rule vs by thy ſpirit, that we may be ſubiect to thy will, while we are as yet in this eſtate, that our ſoules after this life, and both ſoule and bodie at the day of iudgement may be fully glorified. yea Lord haſten this glorie to vs, and to all thine Elect.

The Vſes. 1. Wants to be bewailed.

The wants we are to bewaile in this petition, either concerne our ſelues, or others. First, we muſt lament and bewaile for our owne miſerable eſtate by nature; whereby we are the ſeruants of ſinne, and in thraldome and bondage vnder Satan: ſinne leads vs into bondage, dage: he that committeth ſinne, is the ſeruant of ſinne; and where ſinne raigneth, there the deuill hath dominion. And hence it comes that we rebell ſo much againſt the kingdome of God, and refuſe to ſtoope to the ſcepter of his word. Indeede this bondage is weakned in Gods children, but none is wholly freed from it in this life, as Pauls complaint declares, Rom. 7.14. The Lawe is ſpirituall; but I am carnall, ſold vnder ſinne. The naturall man is dead in ſinne, and feeles it not; we therefore muſt labour to feele in our ſelues this ſpirituall bondage vnder ſinne, and when we feele it, we muſt bewaile it, and ſo ſhew ſome life of grace to be in vs. This Paul did, Rom. 7.24. O wretched man that I am; who ſhall deliuer mee from the bodie of this death! Looke as the priſoner feeles his bolts and fetters, ſo ſenſibly ſhould we feele the chaine of ſinne, wherewith our ſoules are kept in bondage; and till we feele it, and bewaile it, the kingdome of Chriſt doth not come vnto vs; we muſt therefore euery day cry vnto Chriſt our Lord, that he would ſhew himſelfe to be our Redeemer, by breaking the fetters of ſinne, wherewith our ſoules are kept in bondage, and giuing vs that free ſpirit, which may fully erect this bleſſed kingdome in our hearts; for where the ſpirit is, there is libertie, 2. Cor. 3.17.

2 Secondly, we muſt bewaile the ſinnes of all the world in the tranſgreſſion of Gods lawe, whereby God is diſhonoured, and his kingdome hindered, and the kingdome of darkenes furthered: 2. Pet. 2.7,8. Iuſt Lot vexed his righteous ſoule with the vncleane conuerſation of the wicked of his time. 1. King. 19.10. When Elias ſaw the children of Iſrael forſake Gods couenant, breake downe his altars, and ſlay his Prophets with the ſword, then he became verie zealous for the Lord of hoſts. Pſal. 119.136. Mine eyes (ſaith Dauid) guſh out with riuers of water, becauſe they keepe not thy Lawe. verſe 139. My zeale hath euen conſumed me, becauſe mine enemies haue forgotten thy lawe. Mark. 3.5. Chriſt mourned for the hardneſſe of the hearts of the people; and Luk. 19.41,42. he wept ouer Ieruſalem that they knewe not the day of their viſitation. Now looke how theſe were affected with the raigning ſinnes of their times, ſo muſt we alſo mourne for their ſinnes that raigne among vs: as atheiſme, and prophaneneſſe, contempt of Gods word, blaſphemie, Sabbathbreaking, oppreſſion, crueltie, and pride. All good ſubiects are grieued much when they ſee forraine enemies diſplay among them banners of victory; how much more then ought the godly to grieue, when they ſee impietie practiſed with an high hand, which is as it were a flagge of defiance in the kingdome of Chriſt, and a ſpeciall enſigne of Satans triumphing in the increaſe of his kingdome of darknes? When the deuill ſees one that hath liued in ſinne, but caſt a looke toward the kingdome of Chriſt, he rageth greatly, and laboureth by all meanes to turne him backe: and when we ſee thoſe that haue made profeſſion of religion, returne againe to the luſts of their former ignorance, it ſhould grieue our ſoules, and cauſe vs to pray, thy kingdome come. Do we perceiue the Turke, or Pope, or any inſtrument of Satan, either by ſubtilty or tyrannie, to hinder the Goſpel preached, which is the ſcepter of Chriſts kingdom, and the arme of God, whereby he pulles men from the kingdome of darkeneſſe? O then we ſhould mourne. Or do we ſee the want of Gods ordinance in preaching, ſacraments, and diſcipline, which ſerue for the furtherance of Chriſts kingdome, or the Lords people committed to ignorant or idle Miniſters, to ſcandalous teachers, either for life or doctrine? In all theſe we haue cauſe of mourning, and they ſhould ſtirre vp our hearts to crie vnto the Lord, Thy kingdome come.

2. Vſe. Graces to be deſired.

As we muſt mourne for the wants and hinderances of Chriſts kingdom, ſo we muſt hereby learne to haue our hearts inflamed with ſpirituall deſires after all helpes and furtherances vnto Gods kingdome, both in our ſelues and others: as 1 Firſt, for the preaching of the Goſpel, and all other diuine ordinances, whereby Gods kingdome is erected and maintained: our hearts deſire to God muſt bee, that theſe may be ſet vp and continued, where they are wanting, and that God may bleſſe them, where they are vouchſafed. 2 Secondly, that God would enlighten the eies of our minds, that we may ſee the wonders of his Law, as Dauid [illegible] that ſo the Lords ordinance may bee [illegible] vnto vs. 3 Thirdly, that we may be wholly ſubiect vnto Chriſt, and that in conſcience, not onely in outward behauiour, but in minde, and heart, in will, and in all our affections: we muſt make ſure this holy deſire be in vs indeed, and therefore muſt denie our ſelues, to ſubiect our ſelues wholly vnto God, as a willing people to ſerue him, and none but him; and then we may be ſure his kingdome is come vnto vs. 4 Fourthly, we muſt deſire to be diſſolued, and to be with Chriſt in the kingdome of glorie, for this ende, that we may make an ende of ſinning, & become more obedient ſubiects vnto Chriſt, yea, wholly ruled by him, though for the good of others, we muſt be content to liue. 5 Fiftly, that Chriſt would come in iudgement, when all things ſhall be ſubdued vnto God, and all his obedient ſubiects ſhall be fully glorified. This we may deſire in heart, though we muſt leaue the time to Gods good pleaſure, ſtill waiting for it by faith in his promiſe. 6 Sixtly, that God would inlarge his ſanctuary here on earth, gather his elect more and more, and ſtill defend and maintaine his Church in euery place in the world: when theſe deſires affect our ſoules, then may we truely ſay, Thy kingdome come.

3. Vſe. Duties to be practiſed.

Whatſoeuer we aſke in prayer, that muſt we endeauour after in life and conuerſation, els we Dauids [illegible] the [illegible] kingdome.

1 mocke God, ſaying well, and doing nothing. Firſt therefore, as wee ſay, Thy kingdome come, ſo muſt we ſeeke to meet it, and ſtriue to enter into it: for this ende God giues vs time to liue in this world, that here we might enter the gate of grace, and wait for the fruition of glorie: and therefore we muſt diligently frequent the ſuburbs of this heauenly Ieruſalem, euen the preaching of the word, and therein labour both for true humiliation, and conuerſion, or elſe wee cannot enter into this kingdome, Matth. 18.3. Ioh. 3.5. Firſt, we muſt haue the pride of our hearts pulled downe, and become as litle children, being humbled in our ſelues through the knowledg of our ſinnes, and the feeling of that miſerie which is due vnto vs for them: yea, wee muſt confeſſe them vnto God, and crie vnto him for mercie, and by this means lay aſide this burthen, which hinders our entrance into the gate of grace. Secondly, we muſt be conuerted and changed by the renewing of our minds, our hearts muſt cleaue vnto God, and we muſt carrie therein a reſolute purpoſe not to ſinne: when theſe things be in vs, we enter into Gods kingdome; but till wee endeauour after them in ſome truth, we ſay in vaine, Thy kingdome come.

2 Secondly, wee muſt bee carefull to bring forth the fruits of Gods kingdome, for therefore doth he ſend it among men; and for want hereof, doth he take it from them, Matth. 21. 43. Now theſe fruits are Righteouſneſſe, peace, & ioy in the holy Ghoſt, Rom. 14.17. whereof we haue a ſpoken before: all which, wee muſt labour to find in our hearts, and to expreſſe in our liues, elſe this kingdome ſhall be taken from vs, and we ſhall neuer ſee the glorie of it.

a In the meaning of this petition.

3 A ground of contentation.

Thirdly, hence we muſt learne to bee contented in all eſtates of this life whatſoeuer, the hope of the glorie of this kingdome which we pray for, muſt ſwallow vp all the ſorrows that earthly calamities can bring vpon vs: This it was that made the Patriarks to walk contented in the State of Pilgrimes and ſtrangers here on earth, Heb. 11. 13, 14. Yea, this renues b the inner man, it cheeres the heart, and keepes it frõ fainting, though the outward man periſh, to looke after the ioyes of this kingdome, which are the things not ſeene: and therefore Chriſt herewith comforts his Diſciples againſt the ſorrowe of affliction, ſaying, Feare not little flocke, it is your Fathers good pleaſure to giue you the kingdome, Luk. 12. 32.

b 2.Cor.4. 16.18.

4 Fourthly, wee muſt all labour in our places and callings to bring one another into this kingdome, one neighbour an other, and one friend another, Ezek. 18. 30. Returne (ſaith the Lord to the houſe of Iſrael) and cauſe one another to returne. This the Prophet Iſay noteth as a practiſe of the ſubiects of this kingdome, that they ſhall ſay one to an other, come, let vs goe up to the mountaine of the Lord, Iſa. 2.3. But maſters of familyes eſpecially, muſt looke to the practiſe of this dutie, & labour to bring Gods kingdome into their families: for this end they muſt ſee to theſe things; Firſt, that there be no manifeſt or open ſinne permitted in their families: rid thy houſe of ſuch a perſon, if thou canſt not reforme him, Pſal. 101.7. Secondly, inſtruct thy family in the way of the Lord, that they may know to liue righteouſly & vprightly both before God and man. Thirdly, ſet vp and maintaine the priuate worſhip of God in thy family, ioyne thou with them in holy duties, eſpecially in daily calling vpon the name of God. In regard of theſe and ſuch like duties it is, that the c Scripture aſcribes ſaluation to a family, where the maſter or the gouernour of the houſe is conuerted to the faith. And for the practiſe hereof, the holy Patriarks are commended to all poſteritie: God ſaith of Abraham, d I know him that he will command his ſonnes, and his houſhold after him, that they keepe the way of the Lord: and e Iacob commanded his family to put away their ſtrange gods, and to cleanſe themſelues: and f Ioſhuah profeſſed publikely, that hee and his familie would ſerue the Lord.

5 Prepare to die.

Fiftly, hence we muſt learne, euery day to prepare our ſelues to die, for by death our ſouls enter into the glorie of this kingdome, which we pray may come vnto vs; and therefore wee muſt bee readie to receiue it euery day, that whenſoeuer our King commeth vnto vs, either by death, or in the laſt iudgment, we may paſſe from grace to glorie. And indeede wee cannot with comfort make this petition, vnleſſe wee bee in ſome meaſure prepared for death, and that euery day. Now beeing prepared we muſt waite, as Iob g did, all the daies till our changing come. Looke how the godly in the olde Teſtament looked for Chriſts firſt comming in the fleſh, ſo muſt we waite for his comming to vs, either by death, or iudgement, neither muſt any thing diſmay vs in this waiting, no not death it ſelfe; for the ſooner we die, the ſooner wee may enter into glorie. And here wee may take a viewe of the monſtrous hypocriſie of the world: for who will not ſay theſe words, Thy kingdome come? but yet the moſt men neglect to prepare themſelues for entrace into this kingdome, yea many contemne the word and praier, which are the meanes whereby wee haue admittance into the ſtate of grace, and are prepared for the kingdome of glorie.

g Iob 14.14. Luk.2.25.

6 Sixtly, wee may here learne of our Sauiour Chriſt the practiſe of humilitie, and in all things to giue all glorie to God; for though this kingdome pertaine equally to him (as he is God) with the Father: yet becauſe he hath it from the Father, as he is the Sonne, therefore hee will haue it wholly attributed vnto him; for he teacheth vs to ſay, Our father, thy kingdome come.

7 Laſtly, here obſerue the neceſſitie of this petition, in reſpect of our outward eſtate; for the comming of this kingdome to any eſtate, is a ſpeciall cauſe of proſperitie and happines ſtie is; for where this kingdome is, Gods hand of bleſſing and protection is in a ſpeciall manner: where the Lord reigneth, and his glorious and bleſſed Angels, which are mightie in ſtrength and power, keepe watch and guard in that Kingdome, and about that people who haue the Lord for their King and God. Hence it is, that this our Kingdome hath ſo long enioyed peace and protection from many dangerous aſſaults, becauſe we embrace and profeſſe the Goſpel, which is the ſcepter of Gods Kingdome; and if we could doe it in ſinceritie, and walke worthie of the Lord our King, our proſperitie ſhould be as the floods, and our peace as the Sunne and Moone in heauen. And therefore they that loue the peace of this kingdom, muſt embrace and obey the goſpel, and pray for the happie and flouriſhing eſtate thereof, for therein ſtands our peace.

Gods kingdome brings proſperitie.

Thy will be done, in earth as it is in heauen.

The Coherence. This petition dependeth on both the former thus; as a meanes whereby we doe that which we deſire in the firſt petition; for Gods name is glorified, when his will is done: and as a manifeſtation of that which we deſire in the ſecond petition; for there we pray, that Gods kingdome may come vnto vs, and beare rule in our hearts by his word and ſpirit: now here we craue that we may doe his will, and ſo teſtifie our ſelues to be his loyall ſubiects.

The meaning. This petition is propounded in a compariſon, which naturally ſtandeth thus; As thy will is done in heauen, ſo let thy will bee done in earth: And it hath two parts; The firſt reſpects the grace of obedience which we pray for, Thy will be done in earth: The ſecond ſhewes the right manner of performing it, as it is in heauen.

For the firſt, Thy will, &c. Gods will is onely one, conſidered in it ſelfe, as God is one; yet for our vnderſtanding, it may be thus diſtinguiſhed: it is either abſolute, or reuealed. Gods abſolute will, is the will of his good pleaſure, whereby according to his eternall counſell, he determines of all things, what ſhall be done, or what ſhall not be done, and in what manner. This abſolute will extendeth ouer all creatures, and ouer all their actions; Epheſ. 1.11. being predeſtinate according to the purpoſe of him that worketh all things after the counſell of his owne will. Rom. 9.19. who hath reſiſted his will? Matth. 10.29. Without the will of God, a ſparrow cannot fall to the ground. And this abſolute will of God is hidden from vs, till God reueale it by the euent. Gods reuealed will, is the ſacred doctrine of God in his word, whereby he ſignifieth vnto man, ſo farre as concernes his happineſſe and ſaluation, what he ought to doe, or what he ought not to doe. This is Gods abſolute will, but ſuch as concernes obedience pertaining man; reuealing vnto him, not what he ſimply and abſolutely willeth to be done, for that muſt needes be done; but what is pleaſing or diſpleaſing vnto him, done by man, and what he will haue man to doe, or not to doe, if he deſire to come to life, and would not be condemned. And this reuealed will comprehendeth both the Law and Goſpel, yea both their commandements, prohibitions, threatnings, exhortations, promiſes, and ſuch like, whereto the Apoſtle hath relation, when he ſaith, Proue what is the good will of God, and acceptable, Rom. 12.2.

Now this diſtinction of Gods will being according to the Scripture, hath his vſe in this place; for when we ſay, Thy will be done, we meane not the abſolute, but the reuealed will of God. Reaſons. 1. The abſolute will of God is alwaies done, and cannot be withſtood: a My counſell ſhall ſtand (ſaith the Lord) and I will doe whatſoeuer I will: and againe, b who hath reſiſted his will? Whereas his abſolute will is alwaies done, his reuealed will is generally tranſgreſſed by men, and men doe that which ſeemeth good in their owne eies, notwithſtanding God reuealeth his will to the contrarie. 2. A man may ſometimes diſſent from the abſolute will of God without ſinning, ſo be it he ſtill ſubmit himſelfe to the will of God, reſting therein, when it is reuealed. Thus c Abraham prayed for the ſafetie of Sodome (yet ſubmiſſiuely) which God willed and decreed to deſtroie: and d Dauid prayed for the life of his child, which God would haue to die: and our e Sauiour Chriſt prayed for the remouall of that cup which God had abſolutely decreed he ſhould drinke of, yet ſubmitting his will vnto his fathers. And f Paul according to his Apoſtolike function, deſired to preach the Goſpel in Bythinia, but the ſpirit ſuffered him not; which ſheweth plainely it was not the will of God that he ſhould preach there, and yet he deſired it religiouſly without ſinne, as did the reſt before mentioned. And as mans will, ſo his affections may diſſent from Gods abſolute will without ſinne: Chriſt as the ſonne of God, knew his Fathers will concerning the deſtruction of Ieruſalem, and yet g he wept for it, in a tender compaſſion ouer their miſeries to come: and ſo the brethren at h Ceſarea, wept and lamented for Pauls going to Ieruſalem, though Agabus propheſied that God would haue it ſo: neither muſt this ſeeme ſtrange vnto vs, for two things may remaine both good, and yet differ one from another; and ſo may the creatures will differ from Gods abſolute and hidden will, and yet both remaine good.

Branches of Gods reuealed will.

Hauing found that this petition muſt be vnderſtood of the reuealed will of God, we now come to ſearch out the ſpeciall branches of Gods reuealed will; which we ſhall finde in ſeuerall places of the holy Scripture. The firſt, is the conuerſion of a ſinner, Ezech. 33.11. As I liue (ſaith the Lord) I will not the death of a ſinner, but that the wicked turne from his way and liue. The ſecond is, that we denie our ſelues, and relie wholly on our Sauiour Chriſt Ieſus for life and ſaluation; Ioh. 6. 40. This is the will of God, that he that ſeeth the Sonne, and beleeueth in him, ſhould haue euerlaſting life: and I will raiſe him vp at the laſt day.

3 The third is our ſanctification in ſoule, and bodie, and ſpirit; 1. Theſſ. 4. 3. This is the will of God, euen your ſanctification.

4 The fourth, is that euery one that liues in the Church of God, beſide his generall calling of a Chriſtian, ſhould haue a particular calling to liue in, wherein he muſt ſeeke the glorie of God, in the good of others; 1. Cor. 7. 20. Let euery man abide in the ſame vocation wherein hee is called, and therein walke with God, v. 24.

5 The fifth part of Gods will, is to ſubiect our ſelues vnder the hand of God in all croſſes and afflictions whatſoeuer: when the brethren at Cæſarea ſaw Pauls reſolution to goe to Ieruſalem, notwithſtanding the bonds that there remained for him, they ſaid (as it were expounding this petition) The will of the Lord be done, Act. 21. 14.

Obedience two-fold. Euangelicall. Be done] According to the Scripture there be two degrees of doing Gods will; the firſt is preſcribed in the Goſpel, to wit, a ſincere endeuour and ſtrife according to all the power of grace that God hath giuen vs, to doe the will of God; and this ſpecially is here meant. Legall. The ſecond is commanded in the Law, and it is a fulfilling of Gods wil, doing that which God commandeth in that manner of perfection which he commandeth: but this is not attained vnto in this life: and therefore our deſire of God in this petition is, that he would giue vs grace, ſincerely to endeauour to doe his whole will here on earth, and to haſten that time and ſtate vnto vs, wherein we ſhal doe it perfectly as the Law requires.

1. Vſe. Wants to be bewailed both in our ſelues and others.

Hindrances to obedience. I. This petition teacheth vs to bewaile our naturall diſpoſition, whereby we are prone to rebell againſt the will of God, beeing wholly bent to diſobedience in doing that which is euill.

II. We muſt bewaile our naturall hypocriſie, euen that which remaineth in vs after grace receiued: for though we may ſay theſe words, yet we can not poſſibly haue our hearts affected with ſuch a perfect deſire after obedience to Gods will as we ought to haue.

III. Though we haue neuer ſo much grace, yet here we muſt labour and bewaile our want of obedience in all good duties: for though we giue our ſelues to doe good things, yet the beſt of vs all faile in the manner of doing of them, as in hearing the word, in receiuing the Sacraments, and prayer; ſo as we muſt be humbled for our wants, and confeſſe that we are vnprofitable ſeruants, when we haue done all that is commanded vs, Luk. 17. 10.

Secondly, we muſt bewaile the ſinnes of others, whereby they diſobey the will of God, and ſo rebell againſt him; hereby God is diſhonourable, and therefore in zeale of Gods glorie, and loue to our brethren, we muſt be grieued when others ſinne. Thus was Dauid affected, Pſal. 119. 136. and Paul, 2. Cor. 12. 21. I feare leſt when I come vnto you, my God abaſe me among you, and I ſhall bewaile many of them that haue ſinned already.

2. Vſe. Graces to be deſired.

Deſires furthering our obedience. As we muſt bewaile the wants that hinder the doing of Gods will in our ſelues and others, ſo we muſt ſtirre vp our hearts vnto heauenly deſires after thoſe graces whereby Gods will may be done.

1 As firſt, that we may haue grace to denie our ſelues, our owne wills and affections: for naturally we are herein vnlike God, and like the deuill: and this muſt euery one learne that would be Chriſts Diſciple, Luk. 9. 23.

2 Secondly, that God would incline and diſpoſe our hearts towards his holy word, that we may not onely know, but obey Gods reuealed will. This was Dauids vſuall requeſt, Pſalm. 119. 27. Make me to vnderſtand the wayes of thy teſtimonies; and 36. Incline my heart vnto thy teſtimonies. For how ſhould we doe the will of God, vnleſſe we know it? and how ſhall we know it, vnleſſe our hearts affect the meanes of grace and of obedience.

3 Thirdly, that God would haſten that time and ſtate vnto vs, wherein we ſhall perfectly doe the will of God: that is our ſtate of glorie.

4 Fourthly, that vnder euery croſſe which God ſhall lay vpon vs, we may poſſeſſe our ſoules with patience, and ſo ſubiect our ſelues to Gods abſolute will. Thus Paul prayes in behalfe of the Coloſſians, that God would ſtrengthen them by the power of his might, vnto all patience and long ſuffering with ioyfulnes, Col. 1. 11.

5 Fifthly, that God would turne the hearts of men from ſinne, and bring them euery where to the obedience of his will.

3. Vſe. Duties to be practiſed.

Duties furthering our obedience. Becauſe we muſt ſeeke to practiſe that which we aske in prayer, therefore hereby we are alſo taught to practiſe among our ſelues theſe good duties:

1 Firſt, to prooue what is the good will of God, and acceptable, Rom. 12. 2. We muſt by often triall of our actions by the word of God, because [illegible] Gods will, [illegible] in all things makes perfect; and therefore in all our affaires we muſt conſult with God, whether the things we goe about be agreeable to his will. Moſt men will haue an eye to the lawes of the land in their bargaines in buying and ſelling; and why ſhould we not be as wiſe for our ſoules in the matters of God? Doe we not diſſemble with God, when we ſay with our tongues, Thy will be done, and yet in life and conuerſation, haue no regard to ſquare our wayes thereby?

2 Secondly, we muſt be ſincere in the matter of ſinne, making conſcience of euery euill way; yea, euen of the firſt motions vnto ſinne, that neuer come to conſent: for this petition for obedience, reſpects not onely our words and deeds, but our ſecret thoughts: for euen they muſt be brought to obedience to God, 2. Cor. 10.5.

3 Thirdly, we muſt ſeeke to cut off all things that hinder vs from doing Gods will; we muſt mortifie and crucifie the luſts of the fleſh, and all ſinfull motions of our corrupt hearts; for theſe make vs rebels againſt God in tranſgreſſing his will. This is a hard thing to doe, and vnto a naturall man of himſelfe altogether impoſſible; and therefore wee muſt vſe ſpirituall meanes; for the deedes of the fleſh muſt bee mortified by the ſpirit, Roman. 8.13. Now the ground of this worke is the death of our Sauiour Chriſt, applied by faith to our corrupt harts; for the old man is crucified with him, (as the Apoſtle Paul ſaith) that the bodie of ſinne might bee deſtroyed, that henceforth wee ſhould not ſerue ſinne, Roman. 6.6. This therefore muſt wee do, if we thinke our ſelues to haue part in Chriſt; we muſt perſwade our hearts, that when our Sauiour Chriſt was vpō the croſſe in our room and ſtead, bearing the puniſhment of our ſins, then were we, in regard of the old man, crucified with him; the vertue and efficacie whereof, we ſhall vndoubtedly find in our ſelues, for the mortifying of ſinne, when we doe truely beleeue; for our fellowſhippe with Chriſt begins in his death; and if we be dead to ſinne, how can the motions thereof yet liue and raigne in vs? When a malefactor is put to death, he ceaſeth from his badde courſes; and ſo, if our corruption be crucified with our Sauiour Chriſt, it muſt not raign in our hearts, to bring forth the fruits of ſinne. Let vs therefore meditate on the death of our Sauiour Chriſt, and apply it to our ſelues by faith, and conſider the vileneſſe of our ſinnes, in the bitterneſſe of his paſſion; and then no doubt we ſhall be mooued to ſtriue againſt euill motions; for if we be Chriſts we haue crucified the fleſh with the affections and luſts, Gal. 5.24.

4 Fourthly, we muſt not liue inordinately, but in that ſort which God inioyneth Chriſtians in his word: euerie one muſt haue a double calling; the generall calling of a Chriſtian, common to all that liue in the Church, concerning the ſeruice of God, in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe; & a particular lawfull calling, in ſome ſet ſtate of life, tending to the good of the Church, common wealth, or family, wherin a man muſt glorifie God in the good of men: this is to liue in order, and he that wanteth both, or one of theſe, liues inordinately, for God would haue euery man to abide in that vocation wherein he hath called him: euery one therefore according to his gift and grace receiued of God, muſt liue in a lawfull calling, and he that doth not ſo, reſiſteth Gods will. Whereby wee ſee, that wandring beggers are not to bee ſuffered in Church or commonwealth; for they liue without any calling, and ſo tranſgreſſe Gods will: yea, their courſe of life is here alſo condemned, that ſpend their liues in ſports & gamming; for ſuch a life is rebellion againſt God, who will be glorified in workes done by vertue of our lawfull calling.

5 Patience vnder the croſſe.

Fifthly, it is the will of God, that through manifold afflictions we ſhould enter into his kingdome; and therefore when any croſſe befalls vs walking in our lawfull callings, we muſt endeauour to ſubiect our ſelues patiently to the will of God therein: in proſperitie we are cheerefull and thankefull, but when affliction comes, our nature would repine: O remember, we ſay in all theſe times, Thy will be done; and therefore in the moſt bitter croſſes that can befall vs, we muſt labour to ſay with Iob, The Lord giueth, and the Lord taketh away: bleſſed be the name of the Lord, Iob 1.21. So did the Prophet Dauid, being baniſhed his kingdome by his owne ſonne, 2. Sam. 15.26. But if he thus ſay, Behold, I haue no delight in thee, behold, here I am, let him doe to me as ſeemeth good in his eies: and, chap. 16.10,11. when Shemei curſed him, hee ſtaied Abiſhai from reuenge, vpon conſideration of Gods will to haue it ſo, ſaying, Suffer him to curſe, for the Lord hath bidden him.

In earth as it is in heauen.

Hauing ſpoken of the grace of obedience deſired in this petition, wee now come to the manner how it muſt be performed, to wit, in earth as it is in heauen: that is, of vs men liuing on earth, as the bleſſed Angels and glorified Saints doe it in heauen: for the [a] Angels, that excell in ſtrength, doe Gods commandements, in obeying the voice of his word. And becauſe this expoſition is generally receiued, I will not ſtand to prooue it: this onely wee muſt remember, that here wee pray not to performe obedience equall in nature and degree, to the obedience of the Saints and Angels in heauen, but that it is like vnto it; for this note of compariſon here imports a likeneſſe and reſemblance, and not equalitie.

Reſemblance of mans obedience to the Angels.

Now this likeneſſe here ſtands in 4. things:

1 Firſt, in cheerefulneſſe and willingneſſe, for the holy Angels obey the commandements of God freely, and readily, without murmuring or conſtraint: for this cauſe they are ſaid to ſtand before God, Iob 1.6. and to behold his face, Matth. 18.10. to expreſſe their voluntarie ſeruice vnto God; and ſo ſhould Gods children obey God, as Paul ſpeaketh of [b] Philemons beneficence, it muſt not be as it were of neceſſitie, but willingly. As in the caſe of Almes-giuing, [c] God loues a cheerefull giuer, ſo in all other matters he likes a cheerefull doing; and therefore he ſaith, [d] if there be firſt a willing minde, it is accepted according to that a man hath. In this regard Peter beſought the Elders, [e] to feede the flocke of God, depending on them; and caring for it, not by conſtraint, but willingly; not for filthie lucre, but of a readie minde: and the Apoſtle

b Philem. 14.

c 2. Cor. 9.7.

d 2. Cor. 8.12.

e 1. Pet. 5.2.

f 1.Cor.9.17 Paul saith, If I doe it willingly, I haue a reward. This vertue the Prophet David expressed notably, Psal.40.6,7,8. when God as it were bored new eares in his soule, then he said, Loe I come, I desired to doe thy will.

2 Secondly, in [illegible]: for the Angels preferre to doe the will of God, before all other things: and therefore they stand gazing in his presence continually, as it were waiting when he speaketh: and the like affection for obedience vnto God, must be in all his children. Thus g Abraham readily rose early at Gods command, and would haue killed Isaac, testifying thereby, that he preferred obedience vnto God, before the dearest thing in the world: this also we may see in David, Psal.119.14. I haue had as great delight in the way of thy testimonies, as in all riches: and verse 127. I loue thy commandements aboue gold, yea aboue most fine gold. And in our Sauiour Christ, who said, when hee was wearie and hungrie, My meat is to doe the will of him that sent me, and to finish his worke, Iohn 4.34.

g Gen.22.16

3 Thirdly, in speed and quicknesse: for the Angels doe Gods will without all delay or slacknes, which the Scripture signifies by the wings & flying, which it ascribeth vnto them: and the like alacritie should Gods children shewe in their obedience vnto God, Psal.119.60. I made hast and delaied not to keepe thy commandements.

4 Fourthly, in faithfulnesse: the Angels doe not Gods will by halues or peece-meale, but thoroughly and perfectly, wheresoeuer God imployeth them: and so should we be faithfull in doing Gods will, endeauouring to yeeld sincere obedience, not to some, but to all Gods commandements which concerne vs, Psal.119.6. I shall not be confounded when I haue respect vnto all thy commandements. 2 Kin.23.25. King Iosias turned to the Lord, with all his soule, with all his heart, and with all his might, according to all the Law of Moses: an example to be followed of all Gods children, that so they may be like to the blessed Angels.

The 1. Vse. Wants to bee bewailed.

5 First, this perfection of Angelicall obedience here propounded for our imitation, must teach vs to acknowledge and bewaile the naturall hardnesse, disobedience and frowardnesse of our hearts, in yeelding obedience vnto the will of God: if we feele not this dull and vntoward heart, [illegible] of grace [illegible] it [illegible] and bewaile it vnto God, so must we doe, if we say in truth, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heauen.

6 Secondly, we must here also bewaile the want of sinceritie and faithfulnesse in doing Gods will: our strained and halfe obedience, shewes how farre we come short of this Angelicall example: many content themselues with the outward seruice of the bodie, and neuer regard the inward worship of the heart: and of them haue respect to outward duties of pietie, that concerne God, but for vprightnesse and mercie towards men, they little regard; this the Angels doe not.

Isa.29.13.

2. Vse. Graces to be desired.

Hence also we must learne to pray for the spirit of freedome, whereby we may be deliuered from the bondage of corruption, and so may freely, and cheerefully, and heartily endeauour to doe Gods will: Psal.51.12. Restore to me the ioy of thy saluation, and stablish me by thy free spirit: the holy Ghost is therefore called the free spirit, because he giues libertie from the bondage of sinne, and makes the heart free, and forward, and cheerefull in Gods seruice: for where the spirit of the Lord is, there is libertie, 2 Cor.3.17.

3. Vse. Duties to be practised.

Imitation of the Angels.

Because we must practise the good things we pray for, therefore here we are taught to frame our liues to an holy imitation of the blessed Angels. Though we come farre short of the measure of their obedience, yet we must endeauour after their manner of obedience in readinesse, &c. and so by following them, beginne our heauen in this world. This will not stand with their humour who account it a shame in religion, to be so precise: but such as call God father in sinceritie, must set before them the obedience of the holy Angels, as a patterne for their imitation. Now in them we may obserue these things for vs to follow.

1 First, they desired to looke into the mysterie of our redemption wrought by Christ, 1 Pet.1.12 although it concerneth them not as it doth vs: for they neuer fel, & they are established by another grace then of redemption: now herein we must follow the Angels, or (if it were possible) go beyond them: for Christ tooke not the Angels but the seed of Abraham: his redemption concernes vs, and therefore we much more must be diligent searchers out of this mysterie in the Gospel.

2 Secondly, the Angels are maintainers of true religion, and of the worship of God: for the law was giuen by Angels, Gal.3.19. The most of Daniels visions were shewed by an Angel; and so was the reuelation vnto Iohn, Reuel.1.1. a The Angels brought the Apostles out of prison to preach the Gospel sundrie times. They are enemies to Idolatrie: for, Apoc.19.10. when Iohn would haue worshipped the Angel, he forbad him, saying, See thou doe it not, worship God. herein also we must be followers of Angels, by furthering the Gospell & true worship of God to the uttermost of our power, by hindring all Idolatry, & shewing our selues enimies to all the enemies of God & of his truth.

a Act.5.19. and 12.7.8. and 16.26.

3 Thirdly, the Angels were alwaies seruiceable vnto Christ: they brought the tidings of his birth to the shepheards, Luk.2.9.10. They ministred vnto him in his temptation, Matth.4.11. in his Agonie, Luk.22.43. in his resurrection, Matth.28.2. and ascension, Act.1.10. and so should we performe vnto Christ all the seruice we can.

4 Fourthly, they spend their time in praising and lauding the name of God: and so should we labour to haue our hearts inlarged for his glorie, and our mouthes filled with his praiſes.

5 Fiftly, they be ſeruiceable for our good, if we be Gods children, though they be farre better then we are, Heb. 1. 14. They are Miniſtring ſpirits, ſent forth to miniſter for their ſakes which ſhall be heires of ſaluation. Pſal. 91. 11. They are as nurces to beare Gods children in their hands. Pſal. 34. 7. The Angel of the Lord pitcheth round about them that feare him. And all this they doe vnto vs of loue, as though it were not inioyned them: So we after this example muſt imploy our ſelues in ſoule and bodie, calling, credit, and all we haue for the good of men.

6 Sixtly, the Angels are ioyfull when ſinners are humbled and conuerted from ſinne vnto God: Luk. 15. 10. and they are grieued when men by ſinne diſhonour God. And the like affections ſhould be in vs; we ſhould mourne for all ſinne in our ſelues and others, whereby God is diſhonoured; and haue our hearts to leape for ioy, when ſinners repent and turne vnto God. In the world to come we ſhall be like the Angels of heauen in glorie, Matth. 22. 30. we muſt therefore here teſtifie this hope by beginning our heauen vpon earth, in becomming like to the Angels, though not in glorie yet in obedience.

Vſe. Here laſtly obſerue, what honour we are to giue to the Angels of heauen, namely, the honour of imitation, becomming like vnto them in obedience, and treading in the ſteps of their vertues: but for the honour of inuocation, that is due to God alone, and we muſt not giue it to Angels: damnable therefore is the doctrine and practiſe of the Church of Rome, who pray vnto the Angels, and giue vnto them the honour of God in religious worſhip.

Verſ. 11. Giue vs this day our daily bread.

The Coherence. Hitherto we haue handled the petitions that concerne Gods glorie; now we come to the petitions that concerne our ſelues, as the word Vs, doth plainely ſhew, in theſe three which follow: and they depend vpon the former, as an explication of the manner of our obedience; for there we asked grace to doe Gods will; and here we pray for thoſe bleſſings and mercies wherein we may expreſſe our obedience: for we doe Gods will when we depend vpon his prouidence for the bleſſings of this life; when we relie vpon his mercie, for the pardon of our ſinnes; and truſt in his power for ſtrength againſt temptation and deliuerance from euill. Now then to come particularly to this fourth petition: hauing in the former craued grace to doe Gods will in our particular callings, here we pray for ſuch ſufficiencie of all temporall bleſſings, whereby we may glorifie God therein.

In the handling of this petition, fiue points are to be conſidered: 1. what we aske, Bread. 2. what bread we aske, daily bread. 3. whoſe bread, our's. 4. for what time, this day. 5. to whome, to vs. 6. whence we would haue it, by gift from God, giue vs.

For the firſt. The thing we aske is Bread. But what is meant by Bread, is not agreed vpon: ſome expound it ſpiritually of Chriſts bodie and blood, the foode of the ſoule in the word and ſacraments. But the vnfitneſſe of this expoſition we ſhall ſee by the weakneſſe of their reaſons alleadged for it. Firſt, they ſay, it is not meete that in ſo heauenly a prayer, we ſhould aske ſo baſe a thing as materiall bread of our heauenly Father. Anſ. If God command vs to aske him bread, and to depend vpon him for it, we muſt not iudge baſely of it: now in this chapter God commands vs to depend vpon him for foode to eate; yea, 1. Pet. 5. 7. we muſt caſt all our care on him: and Iacobs practiſe in praying for bread to eate, Gen. 28. 20. and Agurs praying for a competencie in outward things, Prou. 30. 8. declare plainely the lawfulneſſe thereof. Secondly, (they ſay) we muſt firſt ſeeke Gods kingdome and his righteouſneſſe, and then all theſe things ſhall bee caſt vpon vs, 33. Anſw. Diſtruſtfull, and diſtracting care is there onely forbidden, but a moderate care is there allowed, and therefore prayer for them is vndoubtedly lawfull.

Eraſmus.

The ſecond opinion touching Bread is of the Papiſts, to wit, that here we aske not onely all neceſſarie ſuſtenance for the bodie, but much more all ſpirituall foode, namely, the bleſſed Sacrament, which is Chriſt the bread of life. But neither is this ſo fit: for firſt, we prayed for ſpirituall things directly in the ſecond petition. Secondly, ſacramentall bread cannot here be meant, becauſe it was not ordained when Chriſt taught his Diſciples this praier. Thirdly, their expoſition is againſt their owne practiſe: for if by bread were meant Chriſt in the Sacrament, then the people ſhould be fedde therewith euery day, which they barre them from.

Rhem. on this place.

3 Concertation.

The third opinion is, that by bread is meant corporall food & bleſſings neceſſarie to temporal life onely: & this I take to be the truth for theſe reaſons which alſo make againſt the former expoſitions. Firſt, S. Luke the beſt interpreter of our Sauiour Chriſt, expounds the words, of bread that ſerues for the day; that is, for euery day, Luk. 11. 3. and therefore it muſt needs be bodily: for ſpirituall food once truly receiued, ſerues not for a day, but for euer, Ioh. 4. 14. Secondly this is a perfect platforme of praier, and therefore muſt containe petition for temporall bleſſings, els it were not perfect: now we cannot comprehend our requeſts for temporall bleſſings vnder any other petition but this onely: and therefore Chriſt here propoundeth them.

What is meant by Bread.

Now properly, bread importes that ſubſtance made of graine which is fit and conuenient for mans bodily nouriſhment, ſuch as Melchiſedek brought out to Abraham & his companie, with wine for their refreſhing, Gen. 14. 18. and ſuch is meant in Scripture where bread is oppoſed to wine or water. But more generally it is taken for all kinde of foode whatſoeuer, whereby life is preſerued: in which ſenſe goates milke is called bread, Prov. 27. 27. and the fruit of trees, Ier. 11. 19. and all things that paſſe to and fro in trafficke, Prov. 31. 14. Now in this place it muſt be taken in a generall ſenſe, not onely for bread, but for all other neceſſarie foode, and for raiment alſo, with health, peace, libertie, and all other things that are meete and needfull for the good outward eſtate of man, of family, or common wealth.

1 Beware of couetouſneſſe. The vſes. 1. In that Chriſt bids vs pray for bread and not for dainties, hereby he would teach vs to beware of couetouſneſſe, the common ſinne of our nature whereby we are diſcontent with our eſtate, and murmure with the Iſraelites, if we haue no more but Manna: but we muſt ſtriue againſt this corruption, and ſay with Dauid, Lord, incline my heart vnto thy teſtimonies, and not vnto couetouſneſſe, Pſal. 119. 36.

2 Learne ſobrietie. Secondly, we muſt hereby alſo learne to practiſe ſobrietie and moderation in diet, apparell, and all other things appertaining to this life, vſing them ſo as we may be the fitter for our callings, and the ſeruice of God, and ſo bettered thereby and not made worſe.

3 Contentation. Thirdly, this muſt teach vs contentation with that place and ſtate of life, and meaſure of wealth which God giues vs: for we muſt aske bread onely, that is, things neceſſarie; and therefore if God giue vs things neceſſarie, we muſt be therewith content, and our couetous minde muſt not be raunging beyond that which God beſtowes vpon our ſober vſe of lawfull meanes within our callings, that muſt we iudge to be our portion: 1. Tim. 6. 8. If we haue food and raiment, let vs therewith be content. This was Pauls practiſe, Phil. 4. 12. I can abound euery where in all things I am inſtructed both to be full and to be hungrie, to abound and to haue want. The a Iſraelites in the wilderneſſe were not content with Manna, but would needs haue fleſh to eate, and God gaue them their deſire, but while the fleſh was in their mouthes, his wrath fell vpon them: therefore let vs ſeeke after no more then God giues vpon our ſober vſe of lawfull meanes, leaſt in ſeeking more we draw Gods curſe vpon vs. But alas, few are content with their eſtate, the yeoman will be like the gentleman in attire and diet, and the gentleman like the noble man: hence comes vſurie, oppreſſion, iniurie, and much vngodlineſſe; hence it comes that Gods iudgement of dearth is increaſed vpon the poore, becauſe men make no conſcience of the meanes, ſo they may ſtore vp and inrich themſelues, and get what is their [illegible] a Numb. 11. 18. 33.

A beware of Gods curſe with thine aduancement; vnleſſe God change thine eſtate, reſt contented with that which is preſent, and be thankfull for it. For better is a little with the feare of God, then great treaſure and trouble therewith, Prov. 15. 16. now what trouble like the wrath of God, and therefore be content with that which God ſendeth by the vſe of lawfull meanes.

4 Chance confuted. Fourthly, muſt we aske of God euery bit of bread we eate? then away with all chance and fortune, and let vs learne to acknowledge Gods prouidence in all things.

5 Merit confuted. Fiftly, muſt Gods children aske of God their daily foode and receiue it as a gift of mercie from the hands of their father? then away with merit by mans workes, for if bread be of mercy, B life euerlaſting cannot be of merit on mans part.

6 Laſtly, this petition miniſtreth vnto vs a notable ground of contentation againſt diſtruſtfull care, for that which Chriſt bids vs aske, God vndoubtedly will giue, becauſe it is according to his will: and therefore the child of God may aſſure himſelfe of things ſufficient for this life, in the ſober vſe of lawfull meanes, and looke if temporall bleſſings faile, for a good ſupply in ſpirituall graces.

Of vſing Gods creatures to our delight. Here a queſtion may be asked, ſeeing wee aske of God but bread onely, that is, things neceſſarie for this life, whether may we vſe the creatures of God for our delight? Anſw. We C may vſe the outward bleſſings of God for our honeſt delight, Eccleſ. 5. 17. Behold what I haue ſeene good, that it is comely to eate and drinke, and to take pleaſure in all his labour, wherein man trauaileth vnder the ſunne, yet three rules muſt be obſerued, leaſt we abuſe our libertie in this delight: 1. we muſt aske God to giue vs not onely things neceſſarie, but for delight. 2. in our delight and pleaſure, we muſt ſo moderate our affections, that they be not taken vp with theſe earthly things, nor hereby withdrawne or hindered from things heauenly and ſpirituall. 3. Our principall ioy muſt be in ſpirituall foode, euen in Chriſt crucified, and in our true communion with him in his bodie and D bloud: all our delight muſt ſtoope to this, and out of Chriſt wee muſt count nothing ioyfull.

II. II. Point. What bread: daily bread. The word in the originall ſignifieth bread for ſubſtance, or day by day, that is, ſuch bread as ſerueth to preſerue health and life from day to day: this Origen calls [illegible] bleſſings and mercies whereof we [illegible]

We may pray for temporall bleſſings. The vſe. In this ſecond point we learne two things: Firſt, that it is lawfull to aske temporall bleſſings at the hands of God, for here our mercifull Father and Chriſt bids vs ſo to doe, which ſerueth to confirme the former expoſition.

A moderate care for temporall things lawfull. Secondly, that we ought to vſe a moderate care for our bodily life and health, by the vſe of all lawfull meanes, ſo as we may be able to walke in our callings [illegible] doe. The ſixt commandement ſaith, Thou ſhalt not kill; where the Lord enioyneth vs by all good meanes to preſerue our owne and our neighbours life: and this we muſt doe for two cauſes eſpecially: firſt, that we may doe all the good we can to the Church, Commonwealth, and family whereof we are members: ſecondly, that we may haue a ſufficient time to prepare our ſelues for heauen: for death will come, and the day of iudgement; and after death there is no wiſedome, nor counſell, nor worke, nor inuention: therefore now muſt we prepare our ſelues for God, that we may be readie to receiue him at his comming; and he that is prepared for the Lord hath liued well and long enough, but without this our life is ſpent in vaine.

VIII. Point. Whoſe bread doe we pray for; our owne, not other mens. But how doth bread or any other temporall bleſsing become ours? Anſ. Firſt, when we haue true right thereto before God: ſecondly, when we haue lawfull poſſeſsion thereof before men. Our right before God is needefull, for we loſt all in Adam, and haue recouery of our right in the creatures onely in Chriſt Ieſus, when by faith we become his members: 1. Cor. 3. 22. All things are yours, and ye are Chriſts. And yet for all this, the child of God may not vſe all things as his own though he haue right thereto in Chriſt, vnleſſe by Gods prouidence he haue alſo lawfull right thereto or poſſeſsion thereof before men, as by lawfull gift, purchaſe, labour, or ſuch like. Indeed right in Chriſt is the chiefeſt title, but yet right before men is alſo neceſſarie: for Chriſtian libertie doth not aboliſh good order in ciuill eſtates, but eſtabliſh them rather; Chriſt is no enemie to Ceſar, & therefore the Scripture inioyneth euery man to eate his owne bread, 2. Theſſ. 3. 12. ſuch therefore, hee hath right in Chriſt by faith, and alſo in ciuill by Gods prouidence in ſome honeſt meanes allowed of men: for by good order eſtabliſhed among men, we are put into poſſeſsion of thoſe things whereto we haue right in Chriſt.

The vſe. Here wee learne to receiue our bread from God, or any other temporall bleſsing we enioy, as a fruit of Chriſts paſsion; and indeede Chriſt crucified, is the foundation of euery good gift and bleſsing of God. As for infidels and wicked men who poſſeſſe and vſe many temporall bleſsings, it muſt be granted that they haue right thereto before men: but yet hauing no part in Chriſt crucified, they want the true foundation, and ſo are no better then vſurpers before God, for which one day they ſhall be called to a reckoning. If this point were learned, men would ſhewe more conſcience in getting and more reuerence and thankfulneſſe in vſing Gods temporall bleſsings, then vſually they doe: there would be leſſe riot and exceſſe in diet and attire, and leſſe abuſe of all Gods creatures; for the meditation of the price of our redemption would reſtraine vs from diſhonouring God in any of his bleſsings.

II. This petition for our owne bread, teacheth vs that euery one ſhould haue a lawfull calling, and therein ſo imploy himſelfe, that he may eate his owne bread, 2. Theſſ. 3. 12. No man ought to liue out of a lawfull calling, nor ydlely therein; the maſter muſt baniſh idleneſſe out of his family, and the magiſtrate out of the commonwealth: vagrant perſons ought not to be tolerated, for ſuch eate not their owne bread.

III. Here is condemned all fraud, iniuſtice, and crueltie, in the getting of temporall bleſsings; for we pray for our owne bread, but that which is ſo gotten, is not our owne, but others: neither will the gameſters gain, nor that which is got by lotterie, ſtand with this petition: for this is not to labour the thing that good is, as the Apoſtle requireth, Eph. 4. 28. neither are they ſanctified meanes of getting. Queſt. If this bread be our owne, what neede we to aske it? Anſ. We aske it for two cauſes though it bee our owne: for in bread there be two things, the ſubſtance of bread, and the bleſsing of God therein, which in Scripture is called the ſtaffe of bread, which is that vertue and power therein, whereby it nouriſheth: for herein it fareth with bread, as it doth with an old man, take away his ſtaffe, and he cannot ſtand but falleth; ſo take away Gods bleſsing from bread, and it becomes vnprofitable, and nouriſheth not. Now becauſe wee may haue the ſubſtance of bread, and yet want the bleſsing, (for we may haue our garners full, and yet be poore: we may eate and not be ſatisfied; fill our bellies, and yet be hungrie) therefore we pray vnto God for bread, that ſo we may haue not onely the ſubſtance, but the bleſsing of God therewithall: for which cauſe Princes muſt as well make this petition as the poore beggars.

IV. Point. For what time doe we aske bread; not for a moneth or a yeere, but for this day, as Luke hath it, according to the day, that is, preſent and ſufficient for this preſent day.

The vſe. In this circumſtance of time, we are taught, firſt, to bewaile our diſtruſtfulneſſe in Gods prouidence for temporall bleſsings, as foode, raiment, &c.

Secondly, to acknowledge Gods particular prouidence vpon vs for this day, whereon we muſt depend and caſt our ſelues continually for all things needefull, though we ſee no meanes thereof. Thus did Abraham when he was about to ſacrifice his ſonne; for when Iſaac asked, where is the ſacrifice? Abraham anſwered, my ſonne, God will prouide, Gen. 22. 8. and ſo he did, verſ. 13. whereupon Abraham in memoriall of this ſingular worke of Gods prouidence called the name of the place, Iehouah-iireh, God will prouide, v. 14. It muſt be our care for euery thing in the way of obedience, to depend vpon Gods prouidence for all things needefull, endeuouring to ſee this diſpoſing hand in all things that fall out, good or badde.

Thirdly,

A moderate care for this life.

Thirdly, a moderate care in ſeeking for the bleſſings of this life: we muſt haue care to prouide things honeſt and neceſſarie; and for this ende muſt exerciſe our ſelues in the vſe of lawfull meanes, otherwiſe we ſhall tempt God: but yet our care muſt be ſo moderate, that we ſtill depend vpon our heauenly fathers care and prouidence for vs, who bidds vs aske him bread for euery day: and thus we ſhall haue enough, when as diſtruſtful and immoderate care ſhall helpe vs nothing. When the Iſraelites liued by Manna, which God gaue them from heauen, they were commanded to gather but for one day, and to reſerue none of it till the morrowe; whereby God would teach them to depende vpon his daily prouidence: which while they did, they had ſufficient, and that which was good; but when through couetouſneſſe they would needes gather more then for the day, and ſo reſerued of it till the morning; Gods curſe light vpon it; d for it was full of wormes and ſtanke: and afterward when they beganne to diſlike Manna, and were not content with his prouidence, but e luſted after fleſh, he gaue them their deſire, but withall his wrath fell vpon them while the fleſh was betweene their teeth before it was chewed, v.33. and ſo it will be with vs if wee diſtruſt in God: but if we learne and practiſe this dependance on Gods particular prouidence, wee ſhall haue experience of his goodneſſe, though ordinarie meanes faile, either by ſupply, as 1.King.17.6. or by patience to beare the wante.

e Num.11.4.

Sanctification of our foods.

Fourthly, here we haue a good ground of that holy practiſe of Gods children ſanctifying their meate and drinke by praier and thankſgiuing: for heere we are taught to pray for temporall bleſſings, and therefore when we haue the and vſe them, we ſhould glorifie God by prayer and thankſgiuing for his bleſſing vpon the: the reaſons hereof is great: for firſt, hereby we are diſtinguiſhed from bruit beaſts, who liue vpon Gods bleſſing, but yet cannot praiſe him as man may doe: ſecondly, hereby we teſtifie our right and intereſt into Gods creatures by Ieſus Chriſt, which we loſt in Adam; for true praier is a fruite of faith, and by faith we are made partakers of Chriſt Ieſus: thirdly, ſuch is our corruption by nature, that we are prone to abuſe all Gods bleſſings, and therefore wee muſt pray for grace to vſe them ſoberly and thankefully.

Fiftly, here we may learne how to frame our daily praiers to God; for this circumſtance of time muſt be referred to euery petition; and therefore this muſt be our practiſe, euery day to pray for grace to glorifie Gods name, to yeeld obedience to his will, to haue our ſinnes forgiuen, and ſo for the reſt.

V. Point. For whom doe we aske bread, not for our ſelues alone, but for our brethren: Giue vs: which ſerueth to teach vs brotherly loue, which ſeeketh not her owne things onely, but is bountiful towards others ſeeking their good alſo. And indeed here we are but ſtewards of Gods temporall bleſſings, and therefore may not imploy them as we will, but for his glorie who is our abſolute Lord: now his direction is to this effect; firſt, we ſhould glorifie God with our temporall goods, imploying them for the maintenance of his worſhip and of true religion. Secondly, that we ſhould imploy the for the common good, in the releefe of the poore, and other neceſſarie duties for the common wealth. Thirdly, that we ſhould prouide for our owne, eſpecially them of our family, that we may liue in peace and quietneſſe, and ſo the better prepare our ſelues for the life to come.

How to glorifie God with temporall goods.

VI. Point. From whom muſt wee looke to receiue our bread; namely from God: for wee ſay vnto him that is our father in Chriſt, Giue vs: which teacheth vs, that though we be his children, and ſo haue right to temporall bleſſings, yet whatſoeuer we haue, we muſt know it comes from God, and muſt receiue and vſe it as from his hand. And this we ſhall doe if wee ſanctifie the creatures of God vnto our temporall vſe: for euerie creature of God is good if it be ſanctified in his vſe. Now the creature is ſanctified not as man is, when the ſpirit of God worketh in him, aboliſhing corruption and renewing grace; nor yet as the elements in the Sacraments are ſanctified, which are ſet apart by God to an holy & ſpirituall vſe, to be ſeales and pledges of grace; but when it is made fit to our temporall ciuill vſe; which is done by the word and prayer, 1.Tim.4.5. Where, by the word is meant; firſt, the word of creation, whereby God in the beginning framed the creature for mans vſe, and gaue him power and ſoueraignitie ouer it: ſecondly, the word of reſtitution, whereby after the fall and after the flood he granted vnto man the vſe of his creatures, Gen.9.3. thirdly, the word of the Goſpel concerning our Chriſtian libertie, wherein he hath inlarged our vſe in the creatures of God, Act.10.15. And by prayer, we deſire God to giue his power vnto the creatures, and his bleſſing vpon them to ſerue for our good and comfort; as alſo to giue vs grace to receiue them as from his hand, and to vſe them to his glorie. If we could learne and practiſe this dutie, we ſhould haue more comfort in the creatures then yet we haue; yea it would reſtraine vs from fraud, oppreſſion, crueltie, and from pride and vanitie in getting and vſing all Gods bleſſings: for if we were perſwaded that all temporall bleſſings came from his hand, how durſt we ſinne againſt him either in getting or vſing of them?

How the creature is ſanctified.

Gen.1.28,29.

Secondly, in that after our labour and diligence in our callings we muſt ſtill pray to God to giue vs bread, we muſt learne to obſerue that order of cauſes which God hath ſet in the producing of all temporall bleſſings for this life: for not onely foode and raiments, but our labour and diligence there about are ſecondarie cauſes, cauſe, depending vpon the bleſſings of God, which is the firſt cauſe of all things, and giuing all things their goodneſſe; for in comming from God that meate doth feede vs, and cloath that doth keepe vs warme. If he ſay vnto ſtones, become bread, they ſhall feede vs, Matth. 4. 4. yea in the want of bread hee can preſerue ſtrength for many daies, Exod. 34. 28. and 1. King. 19. 8. yea, if he ſpeake the word, poyſon ſhall become bread and nouriſh vs: but without his bleſſing nothing can doe vs good: Pſal. 127. 1, 2. Except the Lord build the houſe, they labour in vaine that build it: we therefore muſt learne to relie vpon Gods prouidence for a bleſſing on all our labour and ſtudie, and wait for his bleſſing in all the meanes we vſe for our good and comfort: for he is our life, our health and preſeruation.

The order of cauſes in temporall bleſſings.

V. 12. And forgiue vs our debts, as we forgiue our debtors.

1. The Coherence. Chriſt hauing taught vs in the former petition to pray for temporall bleſſings, & for grace to relie vpon Gods prouident diſpenſation for the things of this life, doth in this petition and the next, direct vs to aske ſpirituall bleſſings for our ſelues; to wit, remiſſion of our ſinnes, and ſtrength againſt temptation: and the reaſon of this order is this: Chriſt makes the former petition a ſteppe vnto theſe; for a man muſt reſt vpon Gods prouidence for the preſeruation of his bodie, that will relie vpon his mercie for the ſaluation of his ſoule: he that cannot be perſwaded that God will giue him bread, will hardly be reſolued that hee will forgiue him his ſinnes.

Worldlings want faith.

Where, firſt we may note what is the faith of worldlings; they doe not truſt in God for foode, raiment, and other temporall bleſſings: how then can we ſay that their faith is ſound for eternall mercies? Iſay. 28. 16. He that beleeueth will not make haſt, but will ſtay Gods leaſure, waiting for his bleſſings whereof hee ſtands in neede: But is this the practiſe of the worldling? no verily; for let a croſſe come, and men will not ſticke to vſe vnlawfull meanes for their deliuerance: & ſo they deale, when hope of gaine is offered, making little conſcience of fraud, lying, oppreſſion, &c. and ſo making haſt to be rich, they ouerrunne the prouident hand of God, that would lead them by ordinarie lawfull meanes.

Right vſe of temporall bleſſings.

Secondly, hence we learne how to enioy and vſe all temporall bleſſings, foode, raiment, and ſuch like; namely, as helpes and meanes to draw vs towards Gods mercie in Chriſt. Thus did Iacob, Gen. 28. 20. 21. If God will be with me, and giue me bread to eate and clothes to put on,——then ſhall the Lord be my God. Ioh. 6. 27. Chriſt bids thoſe whome hee had fed miraculouſly, when they ſought him afterward

A for outward things, that they ſhould not labour for that foode which periſheth, reſting therein, but for that which endureth vnto euerlaſting life; leading them from bodily care and labour to that which is heauenly and ſpirituall.

To come to the petition; wherein we will handle firſt the neceſſitie of it; then the meaning; and laſtly the vſes.

Why Gods children muſt daily pray for pardon.

For the firſt: This petition may ſeeme to be needleſſe, for they that make it are Gods children, who haue all their ſinnes forgiuen them, both paſt, preſent, and to come. Anſ. This indeede muſt be the daiely petition of all Gods children in this world, and the neceſſitie of it is great; for how ſoeuer in the purpoſe of God all ſinnes are pardoned to true beleeuers, yea B all ſinnes paſt repented of, are ſo forgiuen that they ſhall neuer be againe imputed; yet ſinnes preſent and to come are not actually pardoned till they be repented of. This experience teacheth, for who can feele the aſſurance of mercie for any ſinne committed, before he haue repented of it? and though true repentance once had, ſet vs for euer in Gods fauour, yet it muſt bee daiely renued for our daily falls, or els we cannot know it to be true. Hence it is, that Paul intreats the Saints of God in Corinth (though they had truely repented at their conuerſion) to bee reconciled vnto God, 2. Corinth. 5. 20. meaning, by renewing their repentance. And Dauid was the true childe of God, yet beeing left vnto himſelfe, hee fell C into two grieuous ſinnes, wherein he lay almoſt a whole yeare without repentance; during all which time, he had not pardon of them actually: for Nathan rebuked him to bring him to repentance, and vpon his confeſſion pronounced them pardoned; yea, and Dauid himſelfe afterward, for the fuller aſſurance of mercie to his ſoule, moſt earneſtly intreated pardon hereof at the hands of God, Pſal. 51. So that this petition is moſt neceſſarie, as well for actuall pardon of ſinnes preſent, as for the more full aſſurance of ſinnes paſt.

The meaning. This petition is propounded in the forme of a compariſon, which naturally ſtandeth thus; As wee forgiue our debters, ſo forgiue thou to vs our debts: and it hath two D parts, a requeſt for pardon, and a reaſon thereof. Our requeſt for pardon is this, Forgiue vs our debts. In the word debt is a figuratiue kinde of ſpeach, taken from bargaining, wherein God is reſembled to the Creditour, Man is the debter; the Law is the bond or obligation; and ſinne is that debt of ours, for which we ſtand bound to God by the law: this appeares by this, that in the Euangeliſts the word ſinne and debt are vſed promiſcuouſly: as Luk. 11. 4. compared with this of Matthew, and Luk. 13. 4. Now ſinne makes vs debters vnto God, not for that we owe it vnto him, for we are bound by the law to yeeld the contrarie obedience; but becauſe vpon default of obedience vnto God whereto we are bound by the law, we are bound for our ſinnes vnto puniſhment, which is as it were a ſecond debt. Euen as a man that is bound in an obligation to another, through default of performing the condition thereof, is bound to pay both the principall and the forfeiture: the puniſhment of ſinne which is eternall death, beeing that forfeiture whereto we ſtand bound before God for want of obedience which is as it were the principall.

Remiſſion of ſinnes is not our whole iuſtification.

The conſideration of this reſemblance for which ſinne is called a debt, ſerues to direct vs in ſome points of religion: as firſt it confutes their opinion, who hold that our whole iuſtification conſiſts in the remiſſion of ſinnes, and that the ſame is wrought by the ſhedding of Chriſts blood alone: for we owe to God a double debt, firſt obedience, and for default thereof we ſtand bound to puniſhment: theſe two debts are different and diſtinct one from another, and they muſt both be paid, and Gods iuſtice ſatisfied either by our ſelues or by a ſuretie, before we can be accepted as righteous vnto life: Now we our ſelues can diſcharge neither; therefore Chriſt our ſuretie muſt doe both: and ſo he hath: for our ſecond debt of ſinne whereby we ſtand bound to puniſhment, Chriſt diſcharged by his death and paſſion, wherein he made his ſoule a ſacrifice for ſinne: and our debt of obedience in perfect loue to God and man, he alſo paid to God in fulfilling the law for vs: whereupon it is true, [c] that the righteouſneſſe of the Law is fulfilled in them which walke not after the fleſh, but after the ſpirit. But (ſay they) the Scripture euery where aſcribes our whole redemption and iuſtification to Chriſts blood-ſhedding, and to his death and paſſion. Anſ. Chriſts blood-ſhedding muſt be conſidered two waies: firſt, as a part of his paſſion whereby we are diſcharged from puniſhment: ſecondly, as a part of his obedience, wherein he teſtified ſingular loue both to God his father, and vnto mankind: for in ſuffering he obeied, and in obeying he ſuffered: now becauſe his blood-ſhedding is a part of both, therefore is our whole redemption aſcribed thereunto, not excluding, but including his actuall obedience therein, it being a part thereof.

[c] Rom. 8. 4.

Secondly, debt in this place betokening ſinne as it binds vnto puniſhment, ſheweth plainly that ſinne and puniſhment go alwaies together: and therefore the Popiſh doctrine is falſe and erronious which parteth them aſunder, by making ſome ſinnes veniall, not deſeruing the puniſhment of death, which is the wages of ſinne.

Rhem. on 1. Ioh. 1. ſect. 3.

Forgiueneſſe of ſinne deſcribed.

Forgiue vs] This forgiueneſſe here asked is a free and full diſcharge from ſinne and the puniſhment thereof, without any ſatisfaction on our part; and this God doth, when he is content for Chriſts ſake, not to impute ſinne vnto vs, but to account it as not committed, and the puniſhment thereof as not due vnto vs; being fully and freely contented with the all-ſufficient ſatiſfaction made by Chriſt in his death and paſſion. This forgiueneſſe Hezekiah expreſſed when he ſaid to God, [d] Thou haſt caſt all our ſinnes behinde thy backe: and Micah, ſaying, [e] Hee will ſubdue our iniquities, and caſt all our ſinnes into the bottome of the ſea. So that our requeſt to God is this, that whereas our ſinnes binde vs vnto puniſhment, the Lord would be pleaſed for his Sonnes ſake, freely to remit all our ſinnes, and neuer to impute them vnto vs, and to be fully contented with the ſufferings of Chriſt, that the puniſhment of our ſinnes be neuer laid vpon vs.

[d] Iſa. 38. 17.

[e] Mich. 7. 19.

Queſt. But of what ſinnes doe we here aske pardon? Anſ. Both of ſinnes paſt and preſent: for howſoeuer the child of God hath his ſinnes paſt fully pardoned at once on Gods part, vpon his true repentance; yet he is not able ſo to receiue pardon as God giues it, but muſt receiue it by little and little, and as it were drop by droppe: this we may ſee in Dauid, who had the pardon of his ſinne pronounced by [f] Nathan the Prophet, & yet after that he penned the 51. Pſal. wherein he begges mercie and forgiueneſſe moſt earneſtly for that ſinne which God had alreadie pardoned, aiming no doubt at a more full and comfortable aſſurance of Gods pardon in his owne heart: for this cauſe alſo in his old age he praies for the pardon of the ſinnes of his youth, Pſal. 25. 7. Againe, here we pray for the pardon of ſinnes preſent, both that they may be actually forgiuen; and alſo that our hearts and conſciences may be ſetled in the aſſurance thereof.

[f] 2. Sam. 12. 13.

Wants to be bewailed. Securitie in ſinne.

The vſes. Firſt, by this petition, we are taught to bewayle our carnall ſecuritie; for naturally we goe on from day to day, in following the pleaſures and profits of this world, and neuer thinke of our debt to God by ſinne, til the euill day of death or diſtreſſe approach vnto vs, like to deſperate bankrupts that neuer regard their debt, till the ſergeant be vpon their backe. This is that ſinne which Chriſt foretold ſhould raign in the latter daies, Matth. 24. 39. and I appeale to the conſcience in the view of all eſtates and conditions, whether it be not ſo: for though iniquitie doe abound, yet no man ſaith, what haue I done? Ier. 8. 6. yea, this is the ſinne of many profeſſors, for the nature of man is prone to incroach vpon Gods fauour. But we muſt know, that this ſecuritie cannot ſtand with this petition, for here we are taught to call to mind our ſinnes, euery day praying for the pardon of them.

Our reſt in diſtreſſe.

Secondly, here we ſee whereon we muſt rely and ſettle our hearts in all eſtates, in affliction, temptation, and death it ſelfe; namely, on the meere mercie of God in Chriſt, by faith in his blood for the pardon of our ſinnes: Looke to the praiers of all the Saints of God in Scriptures, and we ſhall finde that they made this their rocke & anker of ſtay in all diſtreſſe. Dan. 9. 18. 19. O Lord, heare and behold.... not for our owne righteouſneſſe, but for thy great tender mercies: deferre not, for thy owne ſake, Oh my God. This we must obserue, to arme vs against the damnable doctrine of the Church of Rome; for they will grant that in his first conuersion a man must relie onely on Gods mercy in Christs blood; but after a man is made the child of God, hee may rest vpon his owne good merits, so it be in modestie and sobrietie. But this is the right way to hell, flat against this petition: for how can we dreame of any merit, when as we must euery day aske mercie and forgiuenesse: for to aske mercie and to plead merite, are contraries: now by our daily sinnes we adde debt to debt, and so must still plead mercie and not merite, euen after we are conuerted and sanctified; euer praising God that hath deliuered vs from the slauish bondage of that proud Synagogue.

Thirdly, here we see what we must doe in respect of our daily sinnes whereunto we fall; we must not lie in them, but renue our estate by true humiliation and repentance. Also if thou be crossed in the things of this world, the way of comfort and deliuerance is to be learned here: for as thou doest daily aske bread, so thou must aske forgiuenesse for thy sinnes, and when they are pardoned, thou hast title and interest to all Gods blessings. Now this daily humiliation stands in three things: 1 in examination of our selues for our debt vnto God by sin: 2. in confessing our debt vnto our creditour, yeilding our selues into his hands: 3. in humbling our selues vnto him, crauing pardon and remission earnestly for Christs sake, as for life and death: herein the children of God are presidents vnto vs: Psal. 32. 5, 6. Dauid in great distresse found no release while he held his tongue, but when he humbled himselfe and confessed against himselfe, then he found mercie and ease; whereupon he professeth that he will be a patterne to euery godly man for their behauiour in the time of distresse.

Fourthly, here we haue a notable remedie against despaire, wherewith the deuill assaults many a child of God, when through infirmity they fall into some grieuous sinne, or commit the same sinne often, which greatly wounds the conscience: for here Christ bids vs aske forgiuenesse of our daily sinnes whatsoeuer they be, or how often soeuer committed. And no doubt, he that bids vs forgiue our brethren that sinne against vs, though it were seauen times in a day, if they seeke it at our hands, will much more forgiue vs. This must not embolden any to sinne presumptuously, for the Lord hath saide, Hee will not be mercifull unto that man, Deut. 29. 19. but if any fall through infirmity, hereon he hath to stay himselfe from despaire.

Fifthly, hereby we see that no man possibly can fulfill the law, for the Apostles themselues were commanded to aske pardō of sinne euery day; whereby it is plaine they could neuer fulfill the law, and therefore much lesse can any other.

Sixthly, that which we pray for, we must in all godly manner endeauour after. And therefore as we pray for pardon of sinne euery day, so must we daily vse the meanes whereby God giues assurance of remission to his children, as heare the word, receiue the Sacraments, and pray vnto God publikely and priuately, endeauouring to resist all temptations, and to glorifie God by new obedience: for it is grosse hypocrisie to aske the pardon of sinne, and still to liue in the practise of it.

Endeauour to get pardon.

Lastly here we see we must pray not onely for the pardō of our own sins, but of our brethrens also, Forgiue vs: whereby Christ would teach vs to be careful of the saluation of our brethren & neighbours; the good estate of their soules should be deare and precious vnto vs; and if this were so, happie would it be with the Church of God: but, alas, men are so far from care of the saluation of their neighbours, that men of the same family are carelesse of one an others soules; masters regard not their seruants, nor parents their children; indeede they will prouide for their bodies and outward state, but for their soules they haue no care; wherein they bewray themselues to be cruell and mercilesse, hauing more care of their hoggs and bruit beasts then of their children and seruants: for when their hoggs haue all needfull prouision, their children & seruants soules shal want instruction.

We must be carefull of the saluation of others.

As we also forgiue our debters.] These words are here propounded as a condition of the former petition; and they include a reason thereof, as Luk. 11. 4. Forgiue vs our sinnes, for euen we forgiue euery man that is indebted vnto vs. And this Christ addeth for waightie causes, euen to crosse the fraud and hypocrisie of our corrupt hearts, who would haue forgiuenesse of God, and yet would not forgiue our brethren, nor yet leaue off the practise of sinne our selues. But this condition imports, that we must exercise mercie towards our brethren, and so breake off the course of our sinnes, if we look for mercy at Gods hands. Now the words here vsed are comparatiue, betokening a likelihood and similitude between Gods forgiuing and ours; which must be rightly vnderstood, because our forgiuenesse is mingled with much corruption through want of mercie: and therfore we must not vnderstand it of the measure of forgiuenesse, nor yet of the manner simply, but especially of the very act of forgiuing, for thereto sometimes must similitudes be restrained; as Mat. 9. 29. According to your faith be it vnto you. And the force of the reason stands in the circumstance, thus; If we who haue but a drop of mercie, doe forgiue others; then doe thou who art the fountaine of mercies forgiue vs: but we forgiue others; therefore doe thou forgiue vs.

How man forgiueth.

Touching our forgiuing others, three questions must bee scanned: I. How can any man pardon a trespasse, seeing God onely forgiueth sinnes? Ans. In euery trespasse which one doth to his neighbour, be two things: the loſſe and dammage whereby he is hindered in bodie, goods, or name; and an offence againſt God, by a practiſe of iniquitie againſt his law. Now as a treſpaſſe is a dammage vnto man, ſo may a man forgiue it: but as it is a ſinne againſt God in the tranſgreſſion of the morall law, ſo God onely pardoneth it. As when a man hath his goods ſtollen, that dammage done to him a man may remit; but the breach of the eight commandement therein, God onely can forgiue.

How farre we are bound to forgiue.

II. Queſt. How farre is a man bound to forgiue others that treſpaſſe againſt him. Anſw. There is a threefold forgiueneſſe, of reuenge, of puniſhment, and of iudgement. Forgiueneſſe of reuenge, is when a man is not deſirous of reuenge, nor nouriſheth inward grudge, but forbeares to render ill for ill, to those that wrong him: this is principally here meant; for we muſt [a] forgiue our brethren, in reſpect of reuenge: for vengeance is mine, I will repay, ſaith the Lord, Rom. 12.19. Forgiueneſſe of puniſhment, is the remitting of that puniſhment which another mans wrong-doing iuſtly deſerueth: this is not alwaies to be granted, eſpecially in the caſe of offences, which may tend to the publike hurt; for elſe it were ill ſtate of magiſtracie vnlawfull, whoſe office it is to puniſh offences. The forgiueneſſe of iudgement, is the remitting of that cenſure which an euill deede doth iuſtly deſerue; neither is this here meant, for hauing lawfull publike cenſure, we may freely cenſure that which is euill done.

a Mark.11.25.

How we muſt forgiue the obſtinate.

III. Queſt. Whether muſt wee forgiue thoſe that wrong vs, if they will not confeſſe their fault, nor aske forgiueneſſe? Anſw. We muſt forgiue them freely, in reſpect of reuenge. Obiect. But it is ſaid, If hee repent, forgiue him, Luk. 17.3. therefore, vnleſſe he repent, we neede not to forgiue him. Anſw. In that place it is meant of Eccleſiaſticall cenſures, that theſe muſt proceede no further after the party offending doth repent.

How we become debters againſt our neighbours.

Debters] Hereby is not meant ſuch as we count debters in the ciuill ſtate, that is, ſuch as owe vs money, graine, &c. but any one that doth vs iniurie, or wrong: for no mans eſtate is ſo lowe, but in ſome degree God hath giuen one or moe of theſe foure things; honour, life, goods, or good name; and he that hinders his neighbour in any of theſe, is a debter before God, and ſo ſtandeth, till he make recompence to the partie, and repent towards God: yea further, we muſt know that beſides the endammaging of our neighbour in theſe things, the very omiſſion of preſeruing and furthering our neighbours life, honour, goods, and good name, makes vs alſo debters before God.

Theſe words thus vnderſtood, muſt be cōceiued as a reaſon drawn, not from the cauſe, or like example, but from the ſigne and pledge of Gods forgiueneſſe; for God hath made a promiſe to forgiue vs, if wee forgiue our brethren their treſpaſſes, Mark. 11.25. From whence mercifull men may gather aſſurance of pardon with God, from that inclination to compaſſion and readineſſe, which they finde in their owne hearts, to forgiue others that wrong them: for Chriſt teacheth them to reaſon thus: If wee be thoſe to whome thou haſt promiſed pardon, when they aske it, then Lord pardon vs, but wee are ſuch, for we feele our hearts inclined vnto mercie: therefore Lord pardon vs. So that this reaſon ſerueth to moue vs to pray to God for pardon with confidence and aſſurance: yea further, they include a profeſſion to God of new obedience in amendment of life; for vnder one dutie of mercy towards our neighbour, is comprehended the whole practiſe of repentance, and the performance of our vow made in baptiſme.

Remiſſion & repentance go together.

Vſe. I. Marke here, that asking pardon of God, and teſtimonie of repentance goe together: he that receiues the one muſt expreſſe the other; for where God giues pardon, there alſo he giues grace to repent: and mercie is not granted, but on condition of repentance. Act. 2.37.38. when the Iewes that were pricked in conſcience at Peters ſermon, asked what to doe to finde mercie, Peter ſaid, Amend your liues, &c. And therefore when he perceiued want of repentance in Simon Magus, he tels him, [b] Thou art yet in the gall of bitterneſſe, and in the bond of iniquitie, though hee had formerly baptized him. Whereby we ſee, Firſt, with what affection we muſt come to God, when we pray for the pardon of our ſinnes: namely, with humble & contrite hearts, hauing a true purpoſe not to ſinne wittingly, and willingly, but to obey God in all his commandements: and the want of this, is the cauſe of that ſmall cōfort in praier, which many finde in themſelues: for the promiſe of pardon is not giuen, where the condition of repentance is not performed. Secondly, this ſhewes the groſſe and fearefull errour of the blind world, who ſing this ſong while they liue in ſinne, to their owne hearts; God is mercifull: Chriſt is a Sauiour; but thus truſting to Gods mercie they deceiue themſelues, for they truſt to nothing; for mercie is not due, where repentance is wanting: nay, the Lord hath ſaid, [c] Hee will not be mercifull to that man that ſhall bleſſe himſelfe in his heart, ſaying, I ſhall haue peace though I walke after the ſtubbornneſſe of mine owne heart, &c. Let vs therefore ſee to this, that we practiſe repentance, when we pray for pardon; and looke to the purpoſe of our heart againſt ſinne, when we wait for mercie to our ſoules. We may not ſeuer thoſe things which God hath ioyned, but looke how heartily we deſire mercie, ſo earneſtly muſt we hunger after grace to repent: if we truely ſeeke both, we ſhall haue both; but if we let ſlip repentance in our ſelues, wee ſhall come ſhort of mercie with the Lord.

b Act.8.23.

c Deut.29.19,20.

II. The ioyning of this condition, implying repentance, to the petition, and the dependance of it on the former, teacheth vs, euery day to renue our repentance, and to humble our ſelues for our ſinnes, ſeeking for a new ſupplie of grace, that ſo our purpoſe not to ſinne, may be more and more confirmed in our hearts, which is the infallible ſigne of a new creature.

The practiſe of true repentance.

III. Here we ſee wherein the practiſe of true repentance ſtandeth; namely, in exerciſing mercie, loue, peace, reconciliation, and forgiueneſſe: for though forgiueneſſe be onely named, yet vnder it all other fruits of repentance are vnderſtood. Indeed to heare the word, to receiue the Sacrament, to preach and pray, be excellent workes; but yet the heart of man may more eaſily diſſemble in them, then in the duties of the ſecond table: the moſt infallible marke of true grace, is the practiſe of the loue of God in workes of loue and mercie to our brethren: Iam. 1. 27. Pure religion and vndefiled before God, is to viſit the fatherleſſe, &c. Iam. 3. 17. The wiſedome that is from aboue, is firſt pure, then peaceable, gentle, eaſie to be intreated, full of mercie and good fruits. And hence it is, that loue is called the fulfilling of the law, Rom. 13. 10.

A true ſigne of pardon of ſinne.

IV. Chriſt knitting our forgiuing our brother, with Gods forgiuing vs, doth here affoard vnto vs a notable ſigne of pardon of ſinne; namely, a readie and willing minde to forgiue our brother offending vs: our inclination to mercie in ſuppreſſing the deſire of reuenge when we are wronged, giues aſſurance to our conſcience that we ſhall finde mercie at Gods hands: whereby it is plaine, that the child of God may know his owne eſtate before God, in regard of his mercie in Chriſt, euen by diſcending into his owne heart, and there finding the affection of mercy, in forgiuing thoſe that haue wronged him: and this we muſt labour for, if we would know Gods mercie in Chriſt to belong vnto vs.

Deſire of reuenge muſt be auoided.

V. Hereby we are admoniſhed, to beware in our ſelues, of the common ſinne of this age, ingraffed in our nature; to wit, deſire of reuenge, ſpite, and grudging vpon euery occaſion: for when we pray vnto God with ſuch malitious hearts, we doe in effect deſire the Lord to exerciſe his wrath, and to reuenge his iuſtice on vs. And vndoubtedly many a man doth fearefully curſe himſelfe in his owne praiers, while he is cruelly minded towards his brethren; and God oftentimes ſaith Amen to ſuch curſes moſt deſeruedly, ſeeing men are ſo cruell to their own ſoules to curſe themſelues: and therefore we had need to looke to our hearts, when we pray to God, that we forgiue men, if we would be forgiuen of God.

to reconc-with brethren.

VI. Here note a generall groſſe abuſe in this age: moſt men will ſeeke to be reconciled to their brethren, with whom they are at variance, when they come to the Lords table: but at all other times they take their pleaſure, thinking they may well enough performe all other duties of religion, though they retaine malice and enuie towards their brethren. But here we may obſerue, that we ought to be reconciled with our brethren, whenſoeuer we goe to God in praier: for elſe, if we come in malice and enuy towards our brethren, we curſe our ſelues and ſinne againſt our owne ſoules. In praier we bring the ſacrifice of our hearts, and the calues of our lippes vnto God; but before we offer it, we muſt reconcile our ſelues vnto our brethren, as we o heard before.

o chap. 5. 23, 24.

An euidence of our hypocriſie.

VII. Here alſo we may ſee the groſſe hypocriſie of our nature, for ſo oft as we make this petition, we make profeſſion of reformation of life in new obedience, (for this one branch of brotherly reconciliation here profeſſed, doth preſuppoſe our conuerſion from all ſinne, ſith that true repentance for one ſinne, cannot ſtand with a purpoſe to liue in any other.) And yet behold, though men ſay this praier often, yet ſtill they continue in their old ſinnes, as in blaſphemie, drunkenneſſe, whoredome, oppreſſion, lying, fraud, &c. as though it were nothing to diſſemble with God: but God is not mocked, either amend thy wicked conuerſation, or leaue off to make this holy profeſſion.

Mans naturall crueltie.

VIII. In that Chriſt tieth our dutie of forgiuing our brethren, to ſo waightie a condition, as is our forgiueneſſe with God: hereby he would acquaint vs with the horrible crueltie of our nature, and proneneſſe to reuenge: we muſt therefore take notice of it, & labour to ſee and to bewaile this corruption of our hearts; and on the other ſide, to hunger after loue, mercie, gentleneſſe, meekeneſſe, and to endeauour to practiſe the ſame continually.

How to get and keepe peace of conſcience.

Laſtly, ioyne both parts of this petition together, and they ſhew vs a way how to keepe true peace of conſcience for euer; namely, Firſt, we muſt call vpon God for the pardon of our ſinnes euery day. Secondly, we muſt follow after peace with men, in the practiſe of forgiueneſſe and reconciliation when offences grow; for when we are at one with God and man, we haue a bleſſed peace: and hence will follow peace in our owne hearts, which is that peace which the world cannot giue; which while we retaine, we neede not to feare any euill, no not death it ſelfe: for if God be with vs, who can be againſt vs?

V. 13. And lead vs not into tentation: but deliuer vs from euill.

Coherence.

These words containe the ſixt and laſt petition, which is not needleſſe as ſome may thinke, but for waightie cauſe ſet after all the former, though a man had the fruition of all the graces there deſired: to wit; Firſt, to teach vs who they be that are moſt troubled with temptations, namely, the children of God, that ſet themſelues to ſeeke his glorie, to aduance his kingdome, to doe his will, to depend vpon his prouidence, and to relie vpon his mercie for the pardon of their ſinnes; theſe of all others are moſt ſubiect to temptation, and beeing eſcaped out of the Deuills ſnare, he beſtirres himſelfe by all poſſible meanes to bring them in againe: grieuous temptations doe alwaies accompanie remiſſion of ſinne, which is ioyned with indeauour to glorifie God, as both the word of God, and Chriſtian experience do fully witneſſe: which muſt be well obſerued, both to ſtay the minde of thoſe that are deepely humbled through Satans temptations, thinking that they are not the children of God, becauſe they are ſo troubled with ſinne and Satan, when as the caſe is cleane contrarie; for ſpirituall temptations, if they be reſiſted with godly ſorrow, are rather a ſigne of Gods loue, becauſe the deuills hatred is moſt toward them whome God loues beſt; and on whome God ſhewes mercie, towards them will the deuill exerciſe his malice. As alſo this diſcouereth the follie of thoſe that ſooth vp themſelues in this fond conceit, that God ſurely loues them, and they are deepe in his fauour, becauſe they are freed from temptations; when as indeed they ought rather to ſuſpect themſelues to be vnder the power of Satan: for when the ſtrong man armed keepeth the hold, the things that hee poſſeſſeth are in peace, Luk. 11. 21. whereby is ſignified, that the wicked of the world beeing poſſeſſed of Satan, are at peace in themſelues in regard of temptations: for what needes he to trouble them which are alreadie at his command? but let them beginne to repent, and to ſeeke mercie for their ſinnes, with endeauour to leaue them, and they ſhall ſoone finde that Gods fauour is not enioyed without the deuils malice.

Watchfulnes againſt ſinne.

Secondly, this petition is ioyned with the former, to teach vs, that as we muſt be carefull to begge mercie and pardon for our ſinnes alreadie paſt, ſo we muſt be watchfull to preuent ſinnes to come: he that ſaith, Forgiue vs our treſpaſſes, muſt pray alſo, not to be lead into temptation: and therefore as we would not haue our conſciences pricked with the ſting of our old ſinnes, ſo we muſt be carefull we fall not into them againe, neither be ouercome with new temptations.

The meaning. The words themſelues containe one onely petition, (though ſome haue thought otherwiſe) conſiſting of two parts: the firſt is the petition it ſelfe, And lead vs not into temptation: the ſecond, is the expoſition thereof, But deliuer vs from euill: for in effect it is thus much, That we be not lead into temptation, deliuer vs from euill.

Temptations twofold.

1. Good.

For the firſt, that we may rightly vnderſtand it, we muſt ſearch out two things: Firſt, what a temptation is: Secondly, what it is to be lead into temptation. There be two ſorts of temptations, Good, and Euill. I call that a good and holy temptation, when as God tempts a man; and it is an action of God whereby he prooueth and trieth man, to make manifeſt vnto man himſelfe and vnto others, what is in his heart: for God knoweth well enough before he trie him. Thus he tempted Abraham by the offering of his ſonne, Gen. 22. 1, 2. and the Iſraelites, by ſending falſe Prophets among them, Deut. 13. 3. And in this ſenſe afflictions are called temptations, Iam. 1. 2. becauſe God trieth man by affliction, as gold is tried in the fire: and all theſe are good, both in reſpect of the author, which is God; and of the ende, which is the good of his ſeruants: Iob. 23. 10. He knoweth my way and trieth me, and I ſhall come forth as the gold.

2. Euill.

An euill temptation, is a wicked motion, allurement, or perſwaſion, whereby a man is prouoked to ſinne againſt God in the tranſgreſſion of ſome commandement. Example. When a man is in diſtreſſe, he ſhall finde prouocations to impatience, diſtruſt, and murmuring againſt God; as alſo to vſe vnlawfull meanes to helpe himſelfe: and in proſperitie, he ſhall finde ſundrie allurements to preſume vpon Gods mercie in ſome euill courſe, to neglect the ordinarie meanes of grace and ſaluation; as the word, prayer, &c. all theſe and ſuch like, are euill motions, ariſing partly from our owne corruption, and partly from the ſuggeſtion of the deuil, who by himſelfe, and by his inſtruments, thus ſeekes to draw men from their dutie to God: and theſe euill temptations be they, which in this petition we pray againſt.

To be lead into temptation.

II. Point. What is it to be lead into temptation? Anſ. A man is lead or carried (as the words import) into temptation, when the temptation poſſeſſeth him, and holds him after it hath aſſaulted him: for we muſt know that in euery temptation there be two actions; one of God, whereby in his iuſt iudgement he leaues a man to himſelfe, or to the malice of Satan: another, of man himſelfe, whereby beeing left of God, he enters into the middeſt of the temptation, as it were plunging himſelfe into it.

4. degrees in temptation.

For the better conceiuing hereof, we muſt know that a temptation hath foure degrees, by which it proceedeth, till it bring a man vnto deſtruction, vnleſſe it be cut off; to wit, Suggeſtion, Delight, Conſent, and Perfection, Iam. 1. 14, 15. Suggeſtion, is when the minde conceiueth a wicked thought, put in by Satan, or ariſing from naturall corruption; Delight, is when the euill thought conceiued, and for a time retained in the minde, deſcendeth to the heart, and there pleaſeth the will, and delighteth the affections; Conſent, is when the will yeelds to the euill motion, and the heart reſolues to practiſe it; Perfection, is when a ſinne is often committed and by cuſtome becomes as it were ripe, whereupon followes deſtruction. Now in the firſt and ſecond of theſe degrees, a man is ſaide to be tempted onely; for ſuggeſtion and delectation doe not defile the heart; but when the will conſents, then the temptation takes hold vpon him, and poſſeſſeth him: and by often practiſe he is plunged into it, intangled and inſnared, and held captiue vnder it. Now then (to applie this to the point in hand) a man is lead into temptation, when he is left of God to an euill motion ſuggeſted into his minde, ſo as he giues conſent vnto it, and goes one to the practiſe of it. See this in Iudas, Ioh. 13. 2. Satan caſt this euil motion into his heart, Iudas betray thy maſter: this he thought vpon, and was delighted with the gaine that he hoped to reape thereby: and here God left him to himſelfe for his hypocriſie and other ſinnes, and then Satan entred into his heart, got conſent of will, and ſo carried him to the practiſe of this treaſon. Hereto alſo the Apoſtle ſeemes to allude, 1. Tim. 6. 9. They that will be rich fall into temptations and ſnares, being left of God to their corruption in couetouſneſſe.

Whether Gods children be lead into temptation.

But ſome will ſay, that Gods owne children haue beene thus carried into temptation, as Dauid in the caſe of his adulterie and murther, 2. Sam. 11. and Peter in denying his maſter, Matth. 26. 70. 74. Anſw. It may ſeeme they were carried into temptation, for their euill motions were not onely receiued with delight, but conſented vnto and practiſed: yea, Dauid lay in his ſinne almoſt a whole yeare. But wee muſt conſider, that they were the children of God by adoption and regeneration, and therefore howſoeuer God left them to be tempted, yet he forſooke them not wholly or finally, but ſtill loued them, ſo as they were not carried into temptation with full conſent of heart: but Gods ſauing grace remained in them, which when God ſtirred vp, they were recouered by repentance. Indeede they went as farre as they could, and in regard of themſelues, farre enough to haue cut off their ſaluation; but that was laid vp with God in Chriſt, for his foundation remaineth ſure, and whome he loues, he loues to the ende, his gifts and calling are without repentance. So then, to be lead into temptation, is to bee carried into it with full conſent, beeing left of God vnto the malice of Satan, and the powerfull working of a mans owne corruptions: and Chriſts meaning is, as if he had taught vs to ſay thus; O Lord, wee are euery way ſubiect to temptations; and by our ſinnes we deſerue to bee left therein, to the malice of Satan, and to the power of our owne corruptions; yet wee beſeech thee not to forſake vs in any temptation, but giue an happie iſſue thereto, ſtill vpholding vs by thy grace.

How God leads into temptation.

Queſt. How can God lead a man into temptation and yet not be the author of ſinne? Anſw. Well enough; for as temptation is a puniſhment of ſinne, ſo God may lead a man into it by permiſſion, leauing the partie to himſelfe, and Satans malice, for ſome former tranſgreſſion. Againe, God neuer puts any euil motion into a mans minde, but yet he ſuffers Satan to doe it; and though the deuil be a moſt wicked inſtrument, yet ſuch is Gods power and wiſedome, that he can vſe him without ſinne, in a good manner, and to a good ende.

Bellarm. de iuſtif. l. 3. c. 14.

Vſe. 1. This petition ſerues to confute a groſſe errour of the Papiſts, who teach that a man truely iuſtified before God, may finally fall from grace, and be condemned: as alſo the opinion of ſome Proteſtants, who though they will not ſay that the child of God may finally fall away and periſh, yet they hold that hee may wholly fall away for a time, and that euerie grieuous ſinne which he commits, cuts him off totally, till hee doe repent; for looke what the child of God asketh in prayer, according to Gods will, that ſhall be granted him; but in this petition hee asketh preſeruation frō totall and finall apoſtacie, and that according to Gods will, by the teaching of Chriſt himſelfe, Lead vs not into temptation: and therefore it ſhall be graunted. Indeed it ſtands with the will of God, and the good of his children, that ſometime they ſhould be buffeted by Satan in temptation; and therefore we pray not here to be freed from all aſſaults, but that wee be not wholly left vnto our ſelues, nor forſaken of God, but ſo preſerued by his grace, that we be not ſwallowed vp in temptation; and this petition beeing according to Gods wil, ſhal be graunted to him that asketh in faith, 1. Ioh. 5. 14. And hence it is, that he that is once the child of God indeed, ſhall ſo remaine for euer, and cānot finally or totally fall away frō grace. Dauids fall & Peters were great & fearefull, but yet therein they were not wholy forſaken of God, vnleſſe it were in their owne feeling for a time.

The child of God cannot wholly fall from grace.

Obiect. But Dauid by his two ſinnes became guiltie of Gods wrath, and ſo loſt his right of this prerogatiue in beeing the child of God. Anſw. If we conſider the deſert of thoſe ſins, that vndoubtedly ſhould haue beene his eſtate; but yet in regard of Gods election and free grace of adoption, wherein God changeth not, as alſo in regard of the inward ſeedes of Gods grace in his heart, he remained ſtill the child of God, though the ſignes of Gods fauour were changed into the ſignes of his anger and diſpleaſure. Ob. But by ſuch ſinnes a man looſeth the graces which formerly he had. Anſw. The graces of God in man are of two ſorts: ſome are neceſſarie to ſaluation, as faith, hope, and charitie, without which no man can be ſaued: others be very excellent and profitable, but not of like neceſſitie with the former; as the ſenſe and feeling of Gods loue and fauour, peace of conſcience, ioy in the holy Ghoſt, alacritie in praier, courage and boldneſſe with God: and theſe latter may be loſt, but the neceſſarie graces cannot, howſoeuer they may be greatly weakned; for ſo it was with Dauid, by his fall he loſt for a time the feeling of Gods fauour, the ioy of the ſpirit, &c. but faith, hope, and loue, were not extinguiſhed, but ſore weakned and couered, as fire in the aſhes.

Vſe 2. Wants to be humbled.

Here alſo wee are taught to mourne for the corruption of our nature, whereby we are prone to yeeld vp our ſelues to euery temptation of ſinne and Satan, and be ſlacke and negligent in reſiſting: wee doe not watch and pray againſt temptations diligently, nor ſhunne the occaſions of ſinne, as we ought to doe: nay, we offer our ſelues into temptation, and miniſter occaſion vnto Satan, and to our owne corruption to aſſault vs often. This we ſhall finde to bee true in our ſelues, if we ſearch out throughly our owne eſtate; and therefore it ſhould grieue our hearts when we feele the lawe of our members rebelling againſt the lawe of our mindes, and leading vs captiue into ſinne.

3. Vſe, Graces to be deſired.

Graces helping againſt temptation.

Here alſo we muſt learne to deſire of God all ſuch graces as may helpe vs againſt temptation, and they are many: I. Spirituall heede and watchfulnes to preuent temptations, & to auoide the occaſions thereof. II. Grace to pray in the time of temptation, that God would leſſen and moderate the violence and force thereof. III. That in temptation God would be ſo farre from withdrawing his grace from vs, that he would thē adde grace to grace, euen newe grace vnto the former. IV. That in the continuance of temptation, when it abideth long vpon vs, God would ſtrengthen vs to hold out. V. That he would giue vs patience to beare the irkeſomeneſſe and burthen of it. VI. That in the ende of it, God would giue a comfortable iſſue, for his glorie, and our owne good.

4. Vſe. Here alſo we are let to ſee, how great our weakeneſſe is; euen when wee be Gods children, and haue true grace; for wee muſt daily pray, that God would not leade vs into temptation: whereby we import, that of our ſelues we are ſo farre from withſtanding a temptation, that if God ſhould leaue vs, we would giue vp our ſelues as ſlaues vnto the deuill. Here then behold thine eſtate and condition whatſoeuer thou art, conſidered in thy ſelfe; if God leaue thee, thou canſt not ſtand in any temptation, but muſt needes fall into the bondage of Satan: yea, ſo exceeding great is our weakeneſſe in our ſelues, that in temptation there doth ſcarce appeare any difference betweene the child of God, and a wicked one; for both are ſubiect to the temptation of Satan: nay the child of God is vſually more aſſaulted then the wicked: when the euill motion ariſeth, or is ſuggeſted into the minde, the wicked receiue it, and delight therein: ſo did Dauid, and ſo doe we all: the wicked giue conſent of will, ſo doe the godly, if God leaue them: the wicked fall to practiſe ſinne, and ſo doe the godly, if God keepe backe his grace from them: the wicked lie in ſinne, and ſo doe the godly, till the Lord by grace doe raiſe them vp. Where then is the difference? Surely the perſons themſelues doe differ in temptation, for the wicked is carried with violence into ſinne, and without reſiſtance in temptation; but the godly hath ſome reſiſtance in himſelf, when he giues conſent to ſinne; the euill that he doth, he would not doe: Roman. 7.19. But the maine difference, is Gods grace and mercie vouchſafed to the childe of God, but denied to A the wicked; for if wee eſcape temptation, it is of grace and mercie; if we ſtand in temptation, and yeeld not to euill ſuggeſtion; if we denie conſent of will, or be kept from the practiſe of ſin, it is all of grace: and if we be fallen into ſinne, and riſe againe by true repentance, that alſo is Gods ſpeciall grace, without which vndoubtedly we ſhall runne on with the wicked vnto deſtruction. Here therefore we muſt learne to renounce all confidence in our ſelues, and to walke in all humilitie before God, relying wholly vpon his grace and mercie in Ieſus Chriſt: we muſt make his arme our ſtrength, and his grace our ſheild, to defend vs from temptation. Thus was Dauids practiſe, B who in all trouble and diſtreſſe had recourſe to God, calling him, his hope, fortreſſe, and deliuerer, Pſal. 91.2,3. his ſecret or hiding place, who preſerueth him from trouble, and compaſſeth him about with ioyfull deliuerance, Pſal. 32.7. and when his enemies encreaſed, yet the Lord was his buckler, his glorie, and the lifter vp of his head, Pſal. 3.2,3. And thus ſhould we reſt vpō God, conſidering that if wee receiue a good thought, we can hardly retaine it; and when euill motions come, wee cannot of our ſelues reſiſt them.

Difference between the godly and wicked in temptation.

Satan is limited in his tempting.

5. Vſe. Hence we alſo learne, that in temptation, Satan can go no further then God permits him: he could not touch Iobs goods, his children, nor his bodie, till God gaue him C leaue, Iob. 1.12. and 2.6. neither could the legion of deuils enter into the heard of ſwine, til Chriſt bad them goe: we therefore muſt bee patient in temptations, and beare them as comming from Gods hand; neither muſt we feare the deuil ouermuch, though he pinch our ſouls by his violent aſſaults, nay though he ſhould torment & poſſeſſe our bodies really, for whatſoeuer he doth, is by Gods permiſſion: only we muſt be carefull to pleaſe God, and to relie on him, who will ſhortly tread Satan vnder the feet of all his children, Rom. 16.20.

Mark. 5.12, 13.

6. Vſe. That which we aske of God in praier, wee muſt ſincerely endeauour after in life; and therefore as we pray to God not to be carried into temptation, ſo muſt we ſeeke to arme D and furniſh our ſelues with grace, that we may be able to encounter with our ſpirituall enemies, and ſo withſtand their aſſaults. This is the Apoſtles counſell, Eph. 6.11, 12, 13, &c. Put yee on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to ſtand againſt the aſſaults of the deuill, &c. then after he nameth thoſe Chriſtian vertues, which as ſpirituall armour the child of God muſt take vnto him, and arme his ſoule withall, if hee would perſeuere in grace vnto the ende. The firſt part of this armour, is truth or veritie, wherewith the loynes muſt be girt about: and this is an excellent grace, whereby a man profeſſeth true religion, and endeauoureth himſelfe in the practiſe of all the duties of religion in ſinceritie: his ſpeeches and his actions are ſutable, proceeding from an honeſt heart, that truely mindeth whatsoeuer the tongue vttereth, or the members of the bodie doth practise. 2 The second part is iustice or righteousnesse, when a man leads his life so vnblameably and vprightly, that he can truely say with the Apostle Paul, I knowe nothing by my selfe, 1.Corinth.4.4. Indeede the best Christian hath his faults and failes; but yet he must not liue in knowne sinnes; for then he cannot say, I know nothing by my selfe. 3 The third, is the preparation of the Gospell of peace, wherewith the feete must be shod. By Gospel of peace, is meant the glad tidings of saluation by Christ reuealed in the Gospel, which promiseth pardon of sinne, and life euerlasting by Christ; and commandeth vs by way of thankefulnesse, to deny our selues, to take vp our crosse and to followe Christ: now, when we finde our affections thus cleauing vnto Christ, though it be thorough tribulation, then haue we put vpon our feete this spirituall furniture. 4 The fourth is the shield of faith, by which a man laies hold on the mercie of God in Christ for his saluation, and vnder it shrouds himselfe against the fierie darts of Satan. 5 The fifth, is hope, by which we wait for that saluation which we apprehend by faith. 6 The sixt, is the word of God, which wee must make a rule and square to all our thoughts, words, and deedes, seeking to subdue thereby all contrarie motions that would take place in our hearts. 7 The last is prayer, whereby we betake our selues to God in all estates, crauing mercie for the pardon of our sins, and strength of grace to resist temptation, and an happie deliuerance out of the middest of it. And hee that can take to himselfe these excellēt vertues, and put vpon him this compleat armour of Christianitie, is readie and fit to meete with any temptation whatsoeuer; and howsoeuer he may be assaulted, yet he cannot be ouercome, neither shall the gates of hell euer preuaile against him to hinder his saluation.

But deliuer vs from euill.

These words containe the second part of this petition; which is added as an exposition of the former: for then we are not lead into temptation, when God deliuers vs from it, giuing strength to withstand, & a good issue out of it.

Euill comprehendeth all our spirituall enemies.

The meaning. Some think, that by euill here is meant Satan onely, that euill one, as he is called Matth.13.13. But we are to enlarge it further to comprehend all our spirituall enemies: for first, this title euill is not onely giuen to Satan, but to sinne also, Rom.12.9. Let vs abhorre that which is euill: 1.Pet.3.11. Eschewe euill. And to the world: 1.Ioh.5.19. The whole world lieth in euill: Gal.1.4. Christ gaue himselfe, to deliuer vs from this present euill world. And to the flesh: that is, the corruption of our nature; for that is the euill treasure of the heart, Matth.12.35. Secondly, that aduantage which the Deuill hath against vs, is by the world, the flesh, and sinne; and therefore with that euill one the Deuill, sinne, the world, and the flesh must be vnderstood. Indeede the Deuill is that maine and principall euill, and greatest tempter against whom we pray chiefly; but yet we also pray against sinne, the flesh, and the world, because they are Satans agents and instruments in temptation against vs. We pray not to be deliuered from Satans presence, for that is not possible, while we liue in this vale of teares, wher the deuil is a Prince, with an infinite multitude of wicked spirits, all which bestir themselues to get aduantage against Gods child; neither is his presence so dangerous, though it were visible. But here we haue a greater matter in hand which we pray against, euen Satans sleights and policies which he exerciseth against Gods children for their ruine and destruction: they indeed are many, but here I will propound fiue most dangerous policies of Satan, which we are to watch against.

Satans policies against Gods children.

I. Policie. When men haue many good things in them, as knowledge in the mysterie of saluation, beside other morall vertues, as temperance, iustice, &c. then the deuill laboureth that concupiscence may still raigne in their hearts, by their lying and liuing in some one sinne or other, whereto they are naturally inclined. Caine no doubt was brought vp in the knowledge and seruice of God, as wel as Abel; for he offered sacrifice vnto God (though not with the like truth of heart that Abel did) but herewithall the deuil so wrought, that the horrible sinne of hatred and malice should possesse his heart, which brought him to kill his brother, and so to destruction: so Iudas no doubt had excelent gifts of wisdome and prouidence, and therefore among all the Disciples hee was made as it were the Steward of our Sauiour Christs familie; hee had questionlesse much knowledge, and his carriage was such in his profession, that the Disciples knewe not hee should be the traytor, but euery one was afraid of himselfe, when our Sauiour Christ said, One of you shall betray me, Ioh.13.21. yet for all this, the deuil so wrought in his heart, that the concupiscence of couetousnesse should raigne in him, which mooued him to betray his master, & so brought him to perditiō. And this course Satan holds to this present day in the bosome of the Church of God; he labours by might and maine to hold the professors of religion in some one sinne or other: and therefore we must alwaies pray as here wee are taught, that this naturall concupiscence may be daily mortified and made weake, so as it bud not forth in any branch of sinne raigning in vs.

II. Policie. When Satan cannot procure some grosse corruption to raigne in the child of God, then hee labours to get him to commit some offence and sinne, whereby the name of God may bee dishonoured, his profession disgraced, his conscience wounded, and Gods children offended. Thus he dealt with Dauid in his ſinnes of adulterie and murther, 2. Sam. 11. and ch. 12. 9. and with Peter in the deniall of his maſter, Mat. 26. 74. We therefore muſt pray according to this petition, that wee may a be ſanctified throughout, and that our whole ſpirit, and ſoule, and bodie, may be kept blameleſſe vnto the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: and that b our hearts may be eſtabliſhed in euery good word and worke: God deliuering vs from euery euill work, and preſeruing vs vnto his heauenly kingdome, 2. Tim. 4. 18.

a 1. Th. 5. 23.
b 2. Th. 2. 17

III. Policie. When the child of God is fallen into any ſinne, then the deuill labours to caſt him aſleepe therein, that he might lie in it without remorſe, and ſo neuer repent of it: thus he dealt with Dauid, who lay in his ſinne of adulterie and murther without repentance, one whole yeare almoſt: and thus hee hath dealt with the nation of the Iewes, blinding their eyes, and hardening their hearts, frō the knowledge of the Meſſias, whome they crucified, euen vnto this day: and thus hee dealeth with many Chriſtians in the Church of God. In regard whereof, we muſt pray in temptation as Dauid did, that he would not forſake vs ouerlong, Pſal. 119. 8. but though in iuſtice he may leaue vs to our ſelues for a time, yet he would pleaſe to reuiue his mercies towards vs, and repayre vs by his grace.

IV. Policie. When the Lord vouchſafeth to men the meanes of ſaluation, as the word and Sacraments, and chaſtiſements for ſinne, then Satan labours to make the ſame void and of none effect, that ſo they may not onely miſſe of ſaluation, but be condemned more deepely for the neglect and contempt of the meanes vouchſafed vnto them: this Paul knew well, and therefore he ſent Timothie to the Theſſalonians to knowe their faith, leaſt the tempter had tempted them, and ſo their labour vpon them had beene in vaine, 1. Theſſ. 3. 5. For this cauſe he is called that euill one, who ſteales away the ſeed of the word from out their hearts, Matth. 13. 19. and that enuious man who ſoweth tares among the ſeede, ver. 28. Here therefore we muſt pray againſt this practiſe of Satan, that as the Lord vouchſafed the meanes of grace vnto vs, ſo he would giue his bleſſing withall, that they may be profitable vnto vs; for without this, the meanes will turne to our deeper iudgement.

V. Policie. When he cannot worke his will in their ſoules inwardly, as he deſires, then he aſſailes to doe them miſcheife by ſome outward ſatanicall operations; as poſſeſſion, witchcraft, or ſtriking their bodies with ſtrãge diſeaſes, or abuſing their dwelling places with fearefull noiſes and apparitions: thus he plagued c Iob, in his goods, and in his bodie, when he could not preuaile againſt his ſoule: & when he could not preuaile againſt Chriſt by temptation, then he vexed him by tranſportation, Matth. 4. 5. 8. and thus he bound a daughter of Abraham eighteene yeare, Luk. 13. 16. Here therefore wee pray for the comfort of Gods prouidence, and for the preſence and aſſiſtance of the good angels, that we may be preſerued, though not from temptation, inward in minde, yet from ſuch bodily and outward abuſes and iniuries, as the deuill would inflict vpon vs: for herein he is curbed and reſtrained ordinarily, in reſpect of that malice and crueltie which hee beares to the children of God: whereupon (I take it) the child of God may lawfully pray againſt all outward croſſes and afflictions, ſo farre forth as they are euill, and proceede from that euill one, the deuill: for this is Gods promiſe to the godly perſon, Pſal. 91. 10. There ſhall none euill come vnto thee, neither ſhall any plague come neere thy Tabernacle; that is, ſo farre forth as it is euill: for otherwaies it is moſt true, that many are the troubles of the righteous, becauſe it is many times good for them to be afflicted, Pſal. 116. 71.

c Iob 1. & 2.

How far we may pray againſt croſſes.

Pſal. 34. 19.

VI. Policie. Laſtly, Satan labours to bring Gods children to ſome fearefull and miſerable ende; not ſo much for the bodily death, as in regard of the inward horror and terror of conſcience: for though he ſeldome ſpares any man, yet he reſerues the extremitie of his power and malice to a mans laſt gaſpe. Indeede he is many times reſtrained, ſo as many a child of God can ſay at his ende, in deſpite of Satan, d Lord, now letteſt thou thy ſeruant depart in peace: but where hee is not reſtrained, there he labours to bring men either to preſumption, or deſpaire. Here therefore wee are taught to pray to God for a good and comfortable death in the Lord, and that we may be ſo preſerued therein, and inabled by grace, that our ende may neither bee euill to our ſelues, nor in appearance; but that we may haue both time and grace to prepare our ſelues, ſo as though our death be neuer ſo ſudden, yet we be not vnprepared: for though ſudden death be verie vncomfortable, yet is it neuer dangerous for him that is readie for the Lord: but the vnprepared death is the plague of plagues, for after it there is no time nor meanes allowed vnto man to alter the ſtate of his ſoule, Eccleſ. 9. 10.

d Luk. 2. 29.

Pray for a comfortable death.

Vſes. 1. That which we here pray for, we muſt endeauour to practiſe; and therefore our ſpeciall care muſt be to reſiſt the deuill, and to keepe our ſelues from the aſſaults of Satan vnto ſinne, whether they come from our owne corruption, or from this euill world: 1. Ioh. 5. 18. Hee that is borne of God ſinneth not, but keepeth himſelfe that the wicked one toucheth him not. This we ſee may be done, and it is a notable ſigne of our adoption and regeneration: now the way to doe it is ſet downe by the Apoſtle Paul, 1. Tim. 1. 18, 19. Fight the good fight: which he expounds in the words following, which preſcribe two duties; hauing faith, and a good conſcience. To haue faith, is to hold and maintaine true religion in life and death, renouncing all hereſie whatſoeuer, whether of Iewes, Turkes, Papiſts, or any other: which, whoſoeuer would doe, muſt not content himſelfe with a ſhewe of godlineſſe in profeſſion; but muſt get the power of religion faſt rooted in his heart, which he muſt expreſſe in his conuerſation. And for this ende theſe rules muſt bee remembred: Firſt, we muſt haue in our hearts ſincere loue to God in Chriſt, and to his Church, and true religion: Chriſt muſt haue the chiefe place in our heart, and our loue to God in him muſt be ſo ſtrong, that it muſt overwhelme all other affections; ſo as we may truely ſay with Paul, I count all things loſſe, and doe iudge them to be dongue, that I might winne Chriſt: and this muſt be the order of our loue, we muſt loue God and Chriſt for themſelues, and the Church of God, and true religion, for Gods ſake. Secondly, we muſt not onely know and beleeue that Chriſt died for our ſinnes, and roſe againe for our iuſtification; but wee muſt labour to feele the power and efficacie of his death, killing ſinne in vs, and the vertue of his reſurrection, raiſing vs vp to newneſſe of life: he that hath onely a ſhewe of religion, may make profeſſion of faith in Chriſts death and reſurrection: but herein ſtands the power, when we be made conformable vnto his death, in regard of the death of ſinne, and knowe the vertue of his reſurrection, by our holy endeuour in newe obedience, and doe frame our ſelues to his example in all ſuch things wherein hee left himſelfe a patterne vnto vs. Thirdly, we muſt not content our ſelues to knowe and profeſſe that God is mercifull; but withall we muſt take obſeruation of his louing fauour towards vs particularly, adding one obſeruation to an other, that ſo our hearts may be rooted and grounded in the loue of God. A man may make profeſſion of Gods grace and mercie, from a ſleere generall conceit and apprehenſion of it in his braine; but herein ſtands the power & pith of true religion, when a man by obſeruation and experience in himſelfe, knows the loue of God in Chriſt towards him. And thus is faith and true religion held and maintained.

Phil.3.8.

To haue a good conſcience (which is the ſecond thing in this Chriſtian fight) is to preſerue and keep our conſcience ſo, as it may excuſe vs, and not accuſe vs vnto God, in reſpect of liuing in any ſinne, howſoeuer there may be infirmities in vs: to this ende we muſt obſerue theſe rules.

How to keepe a good conſcience.

Firſt, wee muſt haue a double calling; the generall calling of a Chriſtian, wherein wee muſt ſerue God; and a particular calling, according to our place & gifts, wherein we muſt exerciſe our ſelues for the good of men. Theſe two muſt not bee ſeuered ſo as either be wanting: but he that would keepe a good conſcience, muſt practiſe his generall calling in doing the duties of his particular calling: it is an eaſie thing to profeſſe Chriſtianitie in the Church, and many a man doth ſo, that keepes no good conſcience in his priuate calling at home: but this is the euidence of a good conſcience, whē a man ſhews himſelfe a Chriſtian in his calling at home, and conuerſation among his brethren.

Secondly, we muſt alwaies be exerciſed in doing ſome good dutie, either of our generall or particular calling, or in ſome commendable furtherance thereunto: for idleneſſe is the deuills pillow, whereon men either plot or deuiſe ſome euill, or are lulled aſleepe in ſecuritie: but diligence in our calling is our way, wherein we haue promiſe of protectiō by Gods Angels from the deuil, Pſal. 91.11. but if we be out of our calling, we lie open to the hurt of the enemie: when Peter without warrant from his calling generall or particular would needes goe warme himſelfe in Caiphas hall, what fell out? vpon a ſmall aſſault by a ſilly maide, he denied Chriſt in moſt fearefull manner, Ioh.18.25,26.

Idlenes Satans pillow.

Thirdly, in euery eſtate of life we muſt labour to ſee a ſpeciall prouidence of God, and therein to reſt contented be it better or be it worſe. It is an eaſie thing to ſee & acknowledg Gods mercie in health, peace, and plentie, and to reſt contented therewith: but if wee would haue peace towards God in our owne hearts, we muſt labour to quiet our ſelues with his diſpoſing hand in the day of trouble, ſickeneſſe, or any other diſtreſſe of life or death.

Fourthly, whatſoeuer we would doe when we die, that we muſt now begin, and continue doing it euerie day while we liue; to wit, repēt of our daily ſinnes and leaue them, deſire earneſtly to be reconciled to God in Chriſt, and ſteadfaſtly to beleeue all his gracious promiſes: he that hath theſe graces ſhal die in peace; and therefore if we would liue in peace of conſciēce, we muſt labour for them euerie day.

Fiftly, in all ſocieties and conuerſings with men, we muſt be carefull either to doe good vnto them, or to receiue good from them: for where neither of theſe is, there Satan ſhews his preſence, and therefore we muſt ſhunne ſuch companie as giue themſelues to plot or practiſe ſome iniquitie: for euill conuerſings corrupt good manners.

How wee muſt keepe companie.

Sixtly, we muſt lead our liues not after our owne fancie, but according to the rule of Gods word: wee muſt liue by faith and not by ſight: when we ſee no ſignes of Gods fauour, but rather of his anger and indignation, yet thē muſt we truſt in him, and relie vpon his mercie: this is againſt reaſon, yet a worke of faith, which is the euidence of things which are not ſeene, Heb. 11.1.

2. Vſe. If we pray God to deliuer vs from euill, then we muſt beware of all Satanicall practiſes, as meanes of helpe in any diſtreſſe; this is groſſe hypocriſie, to pray againſt the euills of Satan, and to giue our ſelues to the practiſe of them: herein many offend; for the Papiſts ſay this prayer, but yet their religion in many things is a groſſe practiſe of magicke & ſorcerie: for firſt, the conſecration of their hoſt in the

maſſe is plaine coniuration; and ſo are their exorciſmes in hallowing ſalt, bread, and water: their caſting out of deuils by certaine words, & by the ſigne of the croſſe, the application of reliques, and ſuch like: nay come to our ſelues, what is more common among vs then to vſe charmes and Amulets, & to ſeeke to wiſemen and ſorcerers when any ſtrange affliction doth befall vs? And the ſetting of a figure though it be not groſſe magicke, yet therein is a cloſe & priuie worke of the deuill; his hand is deepe therein: and the Church in former times hath condemned it for witchcraft: for charmes, characters, and amulets, be but the deuills watchword and ſacraments to ſet him a working; & what though the words vſed be good, yet therein is Satans deeper policie, who turnes himſelfe into an Angel of light, and ſo faire ſhewes worketh the greater miſchiefe. But what horrible impietie is this, that when God giues vs occaſion to come vnto him, we leaue him, & runne for helpe to his profeſſed enemie?

2. Cor. 11.14.

Places haunted by euill ſpirits muſt be ſhunned.

Vſe. This branch of the petition ſerueth to direct vs what to doe in this caſe; ſay that a dwelling houſe or ſome other place is by Gods permiſſion, haunted and abuſed by ſome euill ſpirit, whether may a man lawfully frequent or abide in ſuch a place? Anſw. By this petition its plaine he may not; for here we pray to bee deliuered from euill, and therefore wee may not voluntarily thruſt our ſelues into ſuch a place as is haunted by the deuil: would we come within the compaſſe of the lyons paw, or within the chaine of a mad dog, or a hunger-bitten beare? why then ſhould wee raſhly thruſt our ſelues into the danger of the deuill, who like a roaring lyon ſeeketh continually whom hee may deuoure. Many ignorant people are ſo bold-hardie, that they will raile vpon, and defie the deuill, & command him to be gone: But without a calling thereunto we may not ſo doe. Indeed, if by Gods prouidence wee be called to liue in ſuch places neceſſarily, then this we may doe, we muſt not reaſon with the deuill, but betake our ſelues to God by humble and earneſt praier, and complaine of Satans vexation, making God our ſhelter and defence both for ſoule and bodie: els if we preſume to meddle with him without a calling from God, we may iuſtly be foyled and abuſed by him (as the ſonnes of Sceua were) becauſe we haue no promiſe from the Lord to be protected from him.

Act. 19.14.16.

For thine is the kingdome, & the power, and the glorie, for euer: Amen.

Theſe words containe the reaſon of the former ſixe petitions: touching which wee muſt obſerue two things in generall: firſt, that they are not a reaſon to mooue God whoſe will is vnchangeable, but to perſwade the child of God that prayeth thus, that God will graunt his requeſts. Secondly, that this reaſon is not peculiar to the laſt petition, but generally belonging to them all: as, hallowed be thy name, becauſe thine is the kingdome, power, and glorie, and ſo for the reſt.

1 The meaning. Kingdome.] This here imports three things: Firſt, that he is all-ſufficient of himſelfe to doe all things whatſoeuer, needing no helpe nor inſtrument beſide his ſoueraigne will, Gen. 17. 1. I am God all-ſufficient. Secondly, that he hath a ſoueraigne right and title to all things in heauen and earth; as a King hath to thoſe which belong to his territories and iuriſdiction. Thirdly, that he hath ſoueraigne rule and authoritie ouer all things in heauen & earth, gouerning them as he pleaſeth, & bringing them into an abſolute ſubiection.

What Gods kingdome imports.

2 Further, the kingdome of God is twofold; The kingdome of his prouidence, whereby he rules and gouernes all things in heauen and earth, euen the deuill and all his angels & inſtruments: and the kingdome of grace, whereby he gouernes his Church by his word and ſpirit: & both theſe are here to be vnderſtood. Thine.] The kingdom is here called Gods for two cauſes. Firſt, to ſhew that God hath his kingdome of himſelfe and from himſelfe alone; thus, the kingdome of grace, and of prouidence are both his. Secondly, to diſtinguiſh God from earthly kings, for though they haue a kingdome, power, and glorie, as Daniel telles Nebuchadnezzar, yet they haue all theſe frō God, not of themſelues; but God hath them of himſelfe, and not from any other. 3

Gods kingdome twofold.

Now becauſe our nature is blinde in the things of God, I will here propound ſome reaſons to prooue that God hath ſuch a ſoueraign kingdome, as alſo to ſhew the excellencie of it.

Proofes of Gods ſoueraigne kingdome.

1 Firſt, this appears by that excellēt order which God hath ſet in all his works by their creation; for how fitly doe times and ſeaſons, as ſpring time and ſummer, autumne and winter ſucceed one another? how ſweetely doe the heauenly creatures, the ſunne, moone, and ſtarres, ſerue for the creatures here belowe, as hearbs, and plants, how doe theſe ſerue for beaſts and foules? and all of them for the vſe of man? as this prooues againſt the Atheiſt that there is a God, ſo it ſhewes the ſoueraigntie and moſt wiſe regiment of his kingdome. When a man ſees a great armie in good array, and euery one keeping his place and ſtanding conſtantly, hee will preſently commend the wiſedome and authoritie of the leader: why then ſhould we not acknowledg the power and ſoueraignty of the almightie, in that conſtant ſtation of the creatures in that ſweete order which they obſerue from the creation?

2 Secondly, the terror & accuſation of a guiltie conſcience doth argue euidently the abſolute ſoueraigntie of Gods kingdome, for when a man hath committed ſome grieuous ſinne, either againſt the lawe of nature or the written word of God, though it be ſo ſecretly that no

A man know of it, yet will his conſcience accuſe and fright him; which he would not doe, vnles he were to anſwer for that fact to God the ſoueraigne Lord of all.

Thirdly, men of death, that is, ſuch as by ſome notorious crime deſerue death, though through the ignorance or negligence of Magiſtrates they be let to eſcape, yet ordinarily they are ouertaken with ſome fearefull iudgement, and one way or other meete with their deſert: which is a ſpeciall worke of Gods ſoueraigne prouidence.

Fourthly, the Goſpel preached is as contrary to mans corrupt nature, as fire is to water; and yet hath it in all ages wonne men vnto it, to profeſſe it, and to loue it ſo, as they haue beene content for the Goſpels ſake, to forſake houſe and lands, wife, and children, yea and life it ſelfe. This no word of man could euer doe, & therefore it argues plainely that ſome ſupernaturall power worketh with it, which drawes the heart of man vnto it.

B Here ſome may ſay, that the Deuill hath a kingdome contrarie to Gods kingdome wherein he raigneth; and therefore Gods kingdom is not abſolute. Anſ. If we regard the malice of Satan, or the practiſe of the wicked, it may ſeeme Gods kingdome ſhould not be abſolute, becauſe they continually rebell againſt his reuealed will: but conſider the power of God, which ouerruleth Satan and al his inſtruments, C diſpoſing moſt wiſely of all their workes, to his owne glorie, the good of his Church, and their owne ruine; and then we ſhall plainely ſee that God ruleth ouer all; for howſoeuer the deuill and his angels, and all other his inſtruments oppoſe themſelues vnto the word of God, which is the law of his kingdome of grace, yet God willingly permits all ſuch workes, and reſtraines them all at his pleaſure, ſo as that which comes to paſſe againſt Gods reuealed will, is not contrarie to his abſolute will.

Thine is the power.] By power is meant an abilitie in God whereby he can doe whatſoeuer he will, and more then he will doe: for the better conceiuing of it, note theſe two things. First, that God is not onely powerful, but euen power it ſelfe in regard of his nature as hee is D goodneſſe and wiſedome, &c. Men and Angels are called powerfull, as receiuing power from God; but God onely is power it ſelfe, becauſe his nature is infinite in power, as in all other properties. Secondly, that power and will in God are one and the ſame: for our better conceiuing of them, they may be diſtinguiſhed, but in themſelues they differ not; for Gods willing of a thing is the effecting and doing of it. It is not ſo in vs; for we will many things which we cannot doe: but whatſoeuer God willeth that he doth; and that which he cannot doe, he cannot will. The Scripture ſaith, God cannot lie, nor denie himſelfe, nor die, &c. now as he cannot doe theſe things, ſo neither can hee will them: for they are no workes of power, but of weakeneſſe and frailty, and therefore is God omnipotent becauſe hee can neither doe nor will the ſame. Thine is, &c. Here alſo we ſay Gods power is his owne, that is, of himſelfe alone, not receiued from any other, as is alſo ſaid of kingdome, and glorie, to diſtinguiſh the true God from al creatures who haue not power, and kingdome, and glorie of themſelues, but from God, wheras al theſe are of himſelf alone.

Gods glorie.

And the glorie.] By glorie is meant excellencie and maieſtie: and this propertie rightly ariſeth from the two former; for ſeeing he hath an abſolute ſoueraigntie ouer all things, and power anſwerable to diſpoſe and gouerne them at his pleaſure; therefore of right all glorie, and maieſtie, and excellencie belongs vnto him: B yea, the glorie of all creatures is from him; ſo that ſinnefull man muſt ſay with Daniel, Vnto vs belongs ſhame and confuſion, Dan. 9. 7. but vnto God be honour, and glorie, and power, and dominion for euermore.

A ground of truſt in God.

The vſe. I. This reaſon thus conceiued and vnderſtood, containes a notable ground of truſt and confidence in God, and of prayer to God in all diſtreſſe of life and death; for we haue a father whoſe is kingdome, power, and glorie: now his power aſſures vs that he is able to helpe vs: and is he our King, and we his ſubiects? then he is willing to helpe vs. Is glorie his? why, what can make more for his glorie then to ſhew mercie to his people, in hearing their prayers, and C helping them in diſtreſſe? Pſal. 50. 15. I will heare thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie my name.

II. Theſe words are a notable forme of giuing thanks and praiſe to God: for when the heauenly creatures are ſaid to giue thankes to God, they doe it to this effect, Reu. 4. 9. 11. Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receiue honour, and glorie, and power. Againe, Phil. 4. 6. Be diſtruſtfull in nothing, but in all things let your requeſts bee made knowne to God with giuing of thankes; where we ſee prayer and thankſgiuing muſt goe together. Now this beeing a perfect forme of praier, muſt needes comprehend thankſgiuing with petitions: as therefore in the ſixe petitions Christ taught vs to aske all needefull things of God, ſo in this reaſon hee D teacheth vs how to giue thāks: for theſe three, kingdome, power, and glorie, doe generally comprehend all matter of praiſe and thankſgiuing vnto God: yea, it is a ſumme of all the Pſalmes of praiſe; and therefore when Dauid bleſſed God, it was to this effect, 1. Chron. 29. 11, 12. Thine O Lord is greatneſſe, and power, and glorie, and victorie, and praiſe; for all that is in heauen and earth is thine: thine is the kingdome, O Lord, and thou excelleſt as head ouer all: both riches and honour come from thee, and thou reigneſt ouer all: and in thine hand is power, and ſtrength, &c.

We muſt be frequent in praiſing god.

This point well obſerued, directeth vs in two Christian duties: firſt, that we muſt be earneſt and frequent in giuing praiſe & thanks to God; for the firſt thing we aske, is grace to glorifie Gods name, and the laſt thing wee here doe, is to aſcribe glorie to God indeede.

How to praiſe God.

Secondly, here we ſee in what maner we muſt giue thankes to God, namely, in euery bleſſing we muſt aſcribe kingdome, and power, and glorie vnto God: as in the vſe of meate and drinke, firſt, therein labour to ſee, and accordingly to aſcribe the kingdome to God; that is, acknowledge Gods ſoueraigntie in that creature; that the right and intereſt thereto belongs to God, and that thou haſt it from him and not of thy ſelfe. Secondly, ſee and acknowledge the power and prouidence of God in that creature: his prouidence, in that thou haſt it; and his power, in that it ſerues for thy good, and comfort in thy nouriſhment and refreſhing. Thirdly, when thou art comforted therewith, giue honour and glorie to God; ſo thou ſhalt be truly thankfull. And thus muſt we be thankefull to God for his word, and all other bleſſings that we enioy. Yea, this direction muſt we obſerue for our behauiour in affliction; we muſt labour to ſee and acknowledge Gods soueraigntie & power ouer vs as we are his creatures, and that hee hath right to diſpoſe of vs at his pleaſure, and therefore we muſt humble our ſelues vnder his hand, deſiring grace ſo to behaue our ſelues therein, that we may glorifie his name. And thus ſhall we honour God euen in affliction.

How to obtaine our requeſts in praier.

III. Here we ſee a way whereby we may obtaine the things we aske of God: namely, we muſt confeſſe our owne vnworthineſſe, taking ſhame and confuſion to our ſelues, and giue all praiſe and honour and glorie to God. Thus did Iacob, Gen. 32. 10. I am not worthie of the leaſt of all thy mercies, and of all the truth which thou haſt ſhewed vnto thy ſeruant: ſo, Dan. 9. 7. To thee, O Lord, belongeth righteouſneſſe, but vnto vs open ſhame. And thus comming in humilitie of heart, renouncing our ſelues and all that we can doe, and endeauouring to giue all glorie to God, we ſhall finde mercie with the Lord for the obtaining of all our requeſts.

IV. Is kingdome, power, and glorie Gods? then is he to be feared aboue all creatures: for howſoeuer Satan and earthly Monarchs haue dominion and power, yet it is not of themſelues, but from God; they can doe nothing but by power and permiſſion from God; but God of himſelfe can puniſh and deſtroy.

Laſtly, hereby we muſt be mooued to loue God, and to yeild obedience vnto him in all good duties; for to ſuch will he ſhew his soueraigntie and power for all good things, that ſo they may giue the glorie of all to God that giues them.

Amen, what it ſignifies here.

Amen.] We haue heard the preface, and the petitions of this praier: now we come to the third part of it, which is the Concluſion, in this word, Amen: which is as much as verely, truely. It is commonly taken to be a word of wiſhing in this place, importing as much as, So be it, I wiſh it be ſo, or ſuch like. But we muſt know, that it hath here a further vſe, to wit, not onely to expreſſe our deſire of the things we aske, but alſo to teſtifie our faith in aſſurance of receiuing them according to our deſire: for ſo it is vſually taken in the new Teſtament, where it is vſed to affirme or aſſeuere a thing with vehemencie and certentie. Againe, our Sauiour Chriſt giuing both direction and incouragement to praier, ſaith thus; Whatſoeuer you deſire when yee pray, beleeue that yee ſhall haue it, and it ſhall be done vnto you, Mark. 11. 24. where he ſhewes two principall things required in praier; the firſt, an earneſt deſire of the grace and bleſſing we aske; the ſecond, is faith whereby we beleeue that God wil graunt vs the things we aske. Now our deſires were ſufficiently expreſſed in the ſixe petitions: and therefore, this beeing a perfect platforme of praier, here vndoubtedly is propounded the teſtification of our faith, to this effect: As we haue craued theſe things at thy hands, O Lord, ſo doe we beleeue that in thy good time thou wilt for Chriſts ſake, graunt the ſame vnto vs. So that it is not here to be taken, as it is commonly, onely for a bare aſſent of the people anſwering the Miniſter in the congregation; but for a part of the praier both to Miniſter and people that pray in faith, whether publikely or priuately: and that ſo much more excellent then the former, by how much our faith excelleth our deſire: yea, it is the ſeale of our hearts, which we muſt ſet to euery petition, for to ratifie and confirme the ſame vnto our ſelues; as when we ſay, Halowed be thy name, our hearts muſt ſay, Amen: that is, as I deſire grace to glorifie thy name, ſo I beleeue Lord, thou wilt enable me thereunto: and ſo for the reſt.

Pardon of ſinne muſt be beleeued particularly.

The vſe. I. From the vnion of this word with the petitions, we learne, that euery child of God muſt beleeue particularly and certeinly the pardon of his owne ſinnes, and endeauour by grace to attaine thereunto, if as yet he cannot be perſwaded of it. This the Papiſts denie, teaching that a man muſt onely beleeue in generall, that remiſſion of ſinnes belongs to Gods Church, and hope well for himſelfe; and they make it preſumption for a man to arrogate particular certeinty vnto himſelfe. But it is no preſumption, becauſe we muſt beleeue to receiue from God that we aske according to his will: now God bids vs aske forgiueneſſe of our particular ſinnes, and therefore we muſt beleeue it, and ſo by faith may be aſſured of it: as for their generall faith, it differeth not from the faith of deuills, for they beleeue there is remiſſion of ſinnes in Gods Church. And to ſay we hope wel when we are not aſſured by faith, is to bewray both ignorance and negligence in the matter of our ſaluation; for faith is the ground of things hoped for, and therefore their hope without faith muſt needs be blinde preſumption. And here further we may note, that by their opinion they aboliſh a great part of the Goſpel; for with the gracious promiſes promiſes of mercie in Chriſt made therein, the Goſpel commandeth euerie penitent perſon that beleeueth, to apply the ſame promiſes particularly to himſelfe; and this part of it they cut off, and ſo depriue the child of God of all true comfort.

Concil. Trid. ſeſſ. 6. cap. 9. & can. 14.

II. This teſtification of our faith ioyned to our requeſts, ſhewes that all prayer ought to be made in a knowne tongue, for els the aſſent and affiance of the heart cannot be giuen together. Ob. The word here vſed is an Hebrewe word, which was vnknowne to the Greeke Churches, now if one word of maine vſe in prayer, may be in an vnknowne tongue, why may not many, and ſo a whole prayer. Anſw. Though this word Amen be hebrew, yet by vſe it become as familiar and well knowne in the Greeke Church, and ſo in other Churches, as any word of their own dialect; as many Latine words (as niſi prius, and other tearmes of law) by common vſe, become familiar and well knowne in our Engliſh tongue.

The vſe of the Lords prayer.

The principall vſe of prayer is, to be a patterne and direction whereby the Church of God, and euerie member of it, may frame their praiers to God on any occaſion. And becauſe many through ignorance faile in this point, therefore I will ſtand ſomewhat to ſhewe, how the Lord prayer muſt be made a patterne to our prayers. For this end we muſt apply the ſeuerall petitions of this prayer, both to the ſpeciall times of prayer, as morning and euening; and alſo to the ſpeciall occaſions whereupon wee pray: which may be reduced to ſome of theſe three, to wit; 1. ſome waightie buſines we haue in hand: 2. ſome affliction we are in, or in danger of: 3. or in regard of death.

Now to applie the petitions to each of theſe ſeuerally. I. In the morning. A fit praier for that time, before we ſet vpon the duties of our calling, may be thus framed from theſe petitions: 1. we muſt deſire the Lord to giue vs grace to ſeeke the aduancement of his glorie that day following, in the duties of our calling and in euery thing we take in hand. 2. that he would rule in our hearts by his grace, and guide vs by his word that whole day: 3. enable vs to doe his will that day and not our owne, euen with readines and delight: 4. ſtrengthen vs to depend vpon his prouidence that day for all things needefull for this life: 5. that he would humble vs in our ſelues for our ſinnes, and giue vs repentance for them and pardon in Chriſt Ieſus, that ſo no iudgement light vpon vs for them, and that our hearts may bee enclined to loue and mercie towards our brethren as wee deſire mercie with God for our owne ſoules. 6. That God would ſtrengthen vs againſt temptation, that neither the world, the fleſh, nor the deuill preuaile againſt vs. And of all theſe we muſt gather aſſurance, becauſe all soueraigntie, and power, & glorie, belongs to God.

II. At euening alſo, wee may fitly applie theſe petitions for the comfortable commending of our ſelues to God that night: 1. intreating God to bleſſe our reſt vnto vs, that thereby wee may be fitter to glorifie God. 2. That we may reſt and ſleepe ſafely as his true ſubiects, vnder his gracious regiment. 3. That we may doe his will as well in reſt as in labour, in the night and ſecretly, as in the day and ſight of men. 4. That he would bleſſe our reſt and ſleepe, that it may comfortably ſerue for the preſeruation of our liues. 5. That he would forgiue the ſinnes of the day paſt, that ſo no curſe, terrour, nor feare meete with vs for them the night following. 6. That he would keepe vs in our reſt from all ſinnefull luſts, from all wicked motions and ſuggeſtions either waking or ſleeping.

How to pray in waightie affaires.

III. When we enterpriſe any waightie matter or buſines of our callings, wee may fitly applie theſe petitions in prayer to God for abilitie and good ſucceſſe therein: for whatſoeuer we take in hand, we muſt doe it in the name of the Lord: 1. we muſt pray that in this whole buſineſſe our hearts may be ſet ſincerely to ſeeke the aduancement of Gods glorie. 2. That the Lord would vouchſafe to guide and gouerne vs in doing the worke whatſoeuer it be. 3. That in doing of it, we may make conſcience to doe the will of God and to obey him, from the beginning to the ende of it. 4. That we may by faith relie vpon Gods prouidence, for the iſſue and effect of our whole endeauour. 5. That none of our ſinnes may bring a curſe vpon vs in the worke. 6. That neither Satan nor any other enemie of our ſoules, may hinder vs by temptation, but that God would deliuer vs from them all.

How to pray in affliction.

IV. When any affliction lies vpon vs and ours, we may hence frame holy requeſts to God: Intreating, 1. that we may honour God by patience and obedience in that affliction, and not diſhonour him. 2. That God would ſhewe in vs the power of his gratious regiment in that affliction, and not ſuffer Satan or our owne corruption to raigne in vs. 3. That we may obey God therein, as well as in any other eſtate of peace or eaſe. 4. That we may ſee his prouidence therein and be patient, relying alſo vpon the ſame hand of God for our deliuerance. 5. That our ſinnes may not turne it into a curſe, but that we hauing the pardon of our ſinnes, may make good vſe thereof, for our humiliation and reformation. 6 That we may not in that our weakenes be aſſaulted of Satan aboue our ſtrength, but that God would deliuer vs from all temptations.

In the houre of death.

V. In the houre of death wee may moſt comfortably commend our ſelues to God following theſe petitions: praying, firſt, that we may glorifie God in ſickenes and death, as well as in life & health. 2. That God would now ſhew the comfortable work & regiment of his word and ſpirit in our hearts, euen aboue all that we haue felt in the time of our health. 3. That we may as readily and cheerefully obey God dying as liuing. 4. That God would giue his bleſſing vpon all meanes we ſhall vſe for our comfort or recouerie, making vs contented with his prouidence euen in death it ſelfe. 5. That we may be truely humbled for our ſinnes, and hauing comfortable aſſurance of mercie & pardon, may with ioy render vp our ſoules into the hands of God in the moment of death. 6. That ſeeing Satan is moſt buſie and malitious in our greateſt weakeneſſe, it would pleaſe the Lord to magnifie his mercie in ſtrengthening our ſoules againſt all the aſſaults of ſinne and Satan. Thus we ſee how in all eſtates of life & death, we may haue ſweet and comfortable recourſe to God following theſe petitions: wee muſt therefore labour to know and vnderſtand this heauenly prayer, that ſo we may vſe it on all occaſions to the glorie of our God, and the comfort of our ſoules; we cannot giue more euident teſtimonie of the grace of Adoption, then by the ſincere exerciſe of the gift of prayer, when we can come with boldneſſe into the preſence of our heauenly Father: and therefore we muſt giue our ſelues to the ſerious and often imitation of this heauenly patterne, and not content our ſelues to ſay ouer the words, but from a feeling heart powre out our ſoules before God, according to the meaning of this prayer in all eſtates.

A patterne of a godly life.

2. Vſe. Theſe petitions may ſerue for a notable direction according to which wee may frame our whole liues: for what wee aske of God in prayer, that muſt we endeauour to practiſe in our liues: and therefore according to our requeſts in theſe petitions muſt we ſpend our time in a godly endeauour after theſe ſixe things: 1. Our cheife care and endeauour muſt bee euery day to bring ſome glorie to God. 2. Wee muſt euerie day yeeld vp our ſelues in ſoules and bodies vnto God, ſubmitting our ſelues in all things vnto his godly regiment. 3. We muſt endeauour to doe his will in all things, euery day, making conſcience of all ſinne whereby we rebell againſt him. 4. Wee muſt apply our ſelues faithfully to our callings, yet ſo as we ſtill depend vpon Gods prouidēce for a bleſſing in euery thing we take in hand. 5. Wee muſt humble our ſelues euery day before God in regard of our daily offences, ſtill confeſſing our ſinnes and crauing pardon for them at the hands of God. 6. We muſt daily flie to God for helpe and ſuccour in our ſpirituall combate with ſinne and Satan, ſtriuing manfully againſt our owne corrupt nature, againſt the world and the deuill.

Notes of Adoption out of the Lords praier.

3. Vſe. This prayer of Chriſt, miniſters moſt heauenly comfort to euery child of God, by certifying him of his Adoption: for out of euery petitiō he may gather a ſpeciall note thereof. As, 1. an earneſt and heartie deſire in all things to further the glorie of God. 2. A care and readines to reſigne our ſelues in ſubiection to God, to bee ruled by his word and ſpirit, in thought, word, and deede. 3. A ſincere endeauour to do his will in all things with cheerfulneſſe, making conſcience of euery thing we know to be euill: this is an infallible note of the child of God. 4. Vpright walking in a mans lawfull calling, and yet ſtill by faith to relie vpon Gods prouidence, beeing well pleaſed with Gods ſending whatſoeuer it is. 5. Euery day to humble a mans ſelfe before God for his offences, ſeeking his fauour in Chriſt vnfainedly, and ſo daily renuing his faith & repentāce. 6. A continuall combate between the fleſh and the ſpirit; corruption haling and drawing one way, and grace reſiſting the ſame & drawing another way: where this ſtriuing and reſiſtance is in mind and heart, there is the ſpirit, for els all would goe ful ſway with corruption. Hereby then make ſearch in thy ſelfe for theſe graces of God, and if thou finde them in thee, comfort thy ſelfe in aſſurance of thine Adoption; and though thou canſt not find them all, yet if there be an vnfained deſire after them when thou putteſt vp theſe requeſts vnto God, comfort thy ſelf, for thou art the child of God; for without the ſpirit of prayer, which is the ſpirit of adoption, we cannot call God father, nor ſay hallowed be thy name, from a true heart, vnfainedly deſiring Gods glorie.

Markes of a carnall man.

4. Vſe. Out of theſe petitions we may obſerue the plaine markes of a carnall man: as, 1. To neglect the glorie of God, and to ſeeke his owne praiſe and glorie. 2. To followe the ſway of his owne corruptions, ſuffering them to be his guide, and to neglect to yeeld ſubiection and obedience to the word of God. 3. To make no conſcience of ſinne if it fit his humour, ſo his owne will be ſatisfied, he cares not for the doing of Gods will. 4. Not to reſt on Gods prouidence for the things of this life, but wholly to relie vpon the meanes; if they faile, his heart is downe, and his hope is gone. 5. To goe on in ſinne, without remorſe, or humbling himſelfe vnto God: this impenitence is a plaine marke of a carnall man. 6. To runne headlong into temptation, without feare or feeling; ſo as he findes no occaſion to pray for deliuerance from ſinne: he that hath any of theſe ſixe things raigning in him, is a carnall man; therefore trie thy ſelfe, if thou finde them in thee, turne vnto God by true repentance.

And looke what wee haue ſaid of prayer, according to the patterne of the former petitions, may alſo be ſaide of thankſgiuing, after the example of theſe words, For thine is the kingdome, the power, and the glorie. Wee haue ſhewed the vſe of them before, and ſo accordingly in all Gods bleſſings and workes of his prouidence, for which we muſt giue thankes, we muſt firſt labour to ſee therein the ſoueraigntie & power of God, & then we muſt aſcribe the ſame to God, with all glorie, and praiſe, and thankſgiuing. And not onely giue aſſent, but with affiance of heart waite for the fruition of euery grace and bleſsing we aske of God, according to his will. Amen.

V. 14. For if yee doe forgiue men their treſpaſſes, your heauenly Father will alſo forgiue you.

V. 15. But if you doe not forgiue men their treſpaſſes, no more will your heauenly Father forgiue you your treſpaſſes.

Theſe two verſes containe a reaſon of the fift petition, concerning the forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes; which is propounded with a limitation and condition of our forgiuing them that treſpaſſe againſt vs: the reaſon here is, becauſe in this behalfe, we ſhall finde ſuch meaſure with God, as we mete out vnto our brethren.

For the meaning of the words three points muſt be diſcuſſed. Firſt, whome this reaſon doth concerne, namely, priuate men for priuate treſpaſſes: it reacheth not to Magiſtrates and publicke perſons in their function, who be the Miniſters [a] of God to take vengeance on them that doe euill: for to ſuch the Lord ſaith, Thine eye [b] ſhall not ſpare the offender: but according to the qualitie of the offence, muſt he execute iudgement vpon offenders, for the remouing of euill. And ſo muſt parents and maſters deale in their families, and Miniſters in their publike diſpenſation of the word: for elſe offences would ſo abound, that there could be no liuing for Gods people in the world.

II. Point. How doe theſe depend one vpon an other, our forgiuing of men, and Gods forgiuing vs? Anſw. We muſt not conceiue that our forgiuing men their treſpaſſes, is a cauſe why God forgiues vs: for we are by nature dead in ſinne, and can not doe any good thing of our ſelues, till we be enabled thereunto of God: but our forgiuing is a ſigne that God hath forgiuen vs, beeing indeed a fruit of our reconciliation with God: for it is a ſigne of true repentance, which is a fruit of faith, whereby we apprehend the mercie of God for the pardon of our ſinnes in Chriſt.

III. Point. How ſhould our forgiueneſſe, goe before Gods forgiuing vs? for ſo the words ſeeme to import, If you forgiue—your heauenly Father will forgiue you, &c. Anſ. The pardon of ſinne which God giues muſt be conſidered two waies: firſt, as it is giuen in heauen; ſecondly, as it is reuealed and aſſured to the conſcience of man: now the pardon of ſinne in heauen alwaies goes before our forgiuing others; but our aſſurance of pardon with God, followes after our forgiuing of men: for a mans ſinnes may be forgiuen with God, and yet he may long remaine without the aſſurance thereof in his owne conſcience. This we may ſee in Dauid, for when Nathan ſaid, [c] The Lord hath put away thy ſinne, no doubt it was forgiuen in heauen; but yet his [d] earneſt prayer for pardon afterward, ſhewes plainly that he did not vpon Nathans ſpeach receiue the comfortable aſſurance of pardon in his owne conſcience. This then is Chriſts meaning, that if we forgiue men their treſpaſſes, God will aſſure vs in our conſcience that he hath forgiuen vs; otherwiſe, if we will not forgiue, God will denie vs that aſſurance.

[c] 2.Sam.12.13.

Priuate wrongs muſt be forgiuen.

The vſe of this point is firſt and chiefly this: we muſt learne to forgiue and forget all priuate wrongs & iniuries done vnto vs whether great or ſmall, without deſire of reuenge. The reaſons to mooue vs hereunto are theſe.

Motiues.

1 Firſt, it is Gods commandement here expreſſely inioyned, which muſt needs bind the conſcience to obedience.

2 Secondly, if we will not forgiue men, God will not forgiue vs: this Chriſt inforceth by doubling the ſentence: now without Gods forgiuenes there is no ſaluation, and therefore we muſt be readie to forgiue, as we tender our owne ſaluation.

3 Thirdly, the frailty of our nature is ſuch, that we our ſelues are ſubiect to offer wrong to others: this is intimated in this phraſe, Except yee forgiue men their treſpaſſes; ſo that euery man is prone to treſpaſſe againſt others: and therefore as we would be forgiuen when we treſpaſſe, ſo muſt we alſo forgiue men their treſpaſſes.

Rules of forgiuing.

Now for the better performing of our dutie herein, theſe rules muſt be obſerued. I. We ſhall perceiue in ſundry men many wants and frailties, which mens lawes puniſh not; as in old men frowardnes; in others haſtineſſe; & in ſome ambition and deſire of praiſe: now theſe and ſuch like we muſt in loue paſſe by, without taking notice thereof. Prov. 19.11. It is the glory of a man to paſſe by an offence. II. Rule. If men giue vs ſome light occaſions of offence, as vpbraid vs with our ignorance, vnſkilfulnes, baſenes, pouertie, or ſuch like, we muſt lightly paſſe them ouer, preferring the bond of peace before outward reputation. III. Rule, Though a man doe vnto vs that which is indeede flat iniurie, yet if it doe not manifeſtly hinder Gods glorie, or too much preiudice our good eſtate; by hurting our good name, our goods, or life, we muſt cauſe our priuate griefe and hurt to yeeld to publicke peace. IV. Rule. If men doe vs ſuch great wrongs as manifeſtly hinder Gods glorie, and our good eſtate in life, goods, or name; then we muſt vſe the helpe of the Magiſtrate, and the lawfull defence of lawes prouided for that ende. Alwaies remembring, that in ſeeking to right our ſelues, we lay aſide all malice, hatred, and deſire of reuenge, and with a ſingle heart propound Gods glorie in the reformation of the partie that doth vs wrong.

Remiſſion & reformation go together.

Secondly, in this reaſon perſwading to forgiueneſſe, we may ſee that pardon of ſinne before God, and reformation of life go together: for here by this one branch of a reformed life in brotherly forgiueneſſe, is vnderſtood all of the ſame kind: but where is no reformation of life, there is no pardon of ſinne before God. Wouldeſt thou therefore be aſſured in thy conſcience of Gods ſpeciall fauour towards thee in Chriſt? then reforme thy life by euery law of God; for this will giue thee aſſurance from God: but if thy life be vnreformed, thy hope of pardon is a meere conceit of thine owne braine: and therefore if thou want reformation, now beginne; and if thou haue begunne, then hold on, and doe it more and more, for thy more full aſſurance.

v.16. Moreouer, when ye faſt, looke not ſowre as the Hypocrites: for they diſfigure their faces, that they might ſeeme vnto men to faſt. Verily I ſay vnto you that they haue their reward.

Of Faſting.

Our Sauiour Chriſt, hauing rectified the abuſes in Almes-giuing, and in praier, doth here come to a third Chriſtian dutie, namely, Faſting; wherein as in the former, firſt he ſeekes to reforme abuſes, and then preſcribes the true manner thereof. But before we come to theſe particulars, I will in generall handle the doctrine of Faſting, for the better vnderſtanding of this text, and exerciſe of this dutie. And firſt we muſt know, that Chriſt here ſpeakes not of a ciuill faſt, appointed by Magiſtrates in their dominions for ciuill reſpects; but of a religious faſt, reſpecting the worſhip of God: which appeares by this, that he ioyneth the doctrine of faſting to the doctrin of prayer, which is a ſpeciall part of Gods holy worſhip.

Of a religious faſt fiue points.

1 What kind of worke faſting is.

Now touching a religious faſt, I will here handle fiue points. Firſt, what kinde of worke a faſt is. The Scripture ſpeakes of two kinde of workes; ſome commanded of God; others left indifferent. Workes commanded, be good workes, and parts of Gods ſeruice, because he commandeth them, as prayer, thankſgiuing, Almeſdeedes, &c. Workes indifferent, be in themſelues neither good nor euill, becauſe they be neither commanded of God, nor forbidden; as to eate, drinke, buie, ſell, &c. And to this kind of workes muſt we referre faſting; for it is not ſimply commanded of God, and ſo no part of his worſhip in it ſelfe, more then eating is. And yet conſider faſting in it circumſtances; to wit, as a meanes to further and to teſtifie our humiliation in repentance, and our zeale in prayer, and ſo it is a good worke: for in that vſe, and to that end God commandeth it, and it is a part of his worſhip. If it be ſaid, there is no commandement for it in the new Teſtament: I anſwer, if we conſider it in the forenamed vſe and ende, there is: for the ſame commandement that inioyneth praier, and humiliation, inioyneth faſting; becauſe it is a meanes to further them both: for euery commandement includeth all neceſſarie furtherances to the maine dutie. Againe, we haue in the new Teſtament examples of ordinarie faſting, which are without all exception, in our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles, with the occaſions thereof ſet downe whereupon they faſted. Now this is a Rule in Diuinitie, that the ordinarie examples of the godly approoued in Scripture, being againſt no generall precept, haue the force of a generall rule, and are to be followed.

How faſting is commanded in the new Teſtament.

How examples are a rule.

In performing a religious faſt 3. things.

II. Point. How a religious faſt is to be performed. In a religious faſt three things are required. Firſt, Abſtinence from meate & drinke for one day, at leaſt till the euening; for abſtinence from morning till noone is no faſt. When Heſter required the Iewes to faſt for her, ſhee forbids them [a] to eate, or to drinke, during the faſt. And when Dauid faſted and praied for his child begotten in adulterie, he would [b] eate nothing till hee had ended his humiliation perceiuing that the childe was dead. This is a thing granted by all Proteſtants. And the very names of faſting vſed in the old and new Teſtament, import a totall abſtinence for that time: which muſt be obſerued, to diſcouer the abſurditie of Popiſh faſts, wherein they allow men to drink oft if they will, and eate alſo, ſo it be not fleſh: but in faſting, abſtinence muſt be vſed from all meate and drinke, ſo farre as health & ſtrength will ſuffer. Secondly, Abſtinence from all delights of nature, whereby the outward man may be cheered and refreſhed, as muſicke, ſweet ſmells, ſoft apparell, recreations, and ſuch like. This Daniel obſerued for three weekes of daies; I ate (ſaith he) no pleaſant bread, neither came fleſh or wine in my mouth, neither did I anoint my ſelfe at all: and the like may we ſee in many examples of the old Teſtament. They caſt [d] duſt and aſhes vpon their heads in ſtead of anointing themſelues with oyle; and for ſoft apparell, they put on [e] ſackcloth next their skin; they [f] waked when they ſhould haue ſlept; and lay vpon the ground in ſtead of beds: the [g] bridegroome went out of his chamber, and the bride out of her bride-chamber: for mirth there was mourning, and [h] howling in ſtead of ſinging. Thirdly, a man muſt humble and afflict his bodie in faſting; and therefore muſt be ſparing in his diet and delights before the day of faſting; for a man may ſo pamper and fill himſelfe, that he ſhall not neede to eate or drinke for one whole day; but ſuch perſons faſt not: the time of our faſt muſt be a [i] time of our humiliation: men muſt afflict themſelues therein, as [k] Ezra ſaith, they muſt beate downe the bodie, and bring it into ſubiection, as [l] Paul did: for

The ends of a religious faſt.

III. Point. Touching the right ends of a religious faſt: which be foure eſpecially. I. To be a ſpurre and prouocation to true humiliation and repentance: for this cauſe the m Niniuites did not onely faſt themſelues, but cauſed their beaſts to be without foode and water, that by hearing their lowing and bleating for meat, they might more deepely bee humbled by the conſideration of the deſert of their own ſinnes, and ſo more vnfainedly repent. This ſtands with good reaſon: for a mans abaſing and pinching of his bodie, ſhewes him his vnworthineſſe of the comforts of Gods creatures by reaſon of his ſinnes; it leades him to ſee his deſert of Gods wrath by reaſon of his tranſgreſſion, and ſo his heart is more deepely ſtricken with conſcience of his owne ſinnes: whereupon he doth more freely confeſſe thẽ vnto God, and more carefully turne from them afterward.

m Ion.3.7.

II. A religious faſt ſerues for an outward teſtimonie and profeſſion of our humiliation and repentance: for by our abſtinence from the delights of nature, and the comforts of the creatures, we ſolemnly profeſſe our vnworthineſſe thereof, and of all Gods bleſſings: for this the Lord bids, proclaime a faſt, when he would haue his people to teſtifie their humiliation.

Ioel 1.14.

III. It ſerues to ſubdue the fleſh, and the corruption of nature: this ende is neceſſarie, for the ſoule worketh by the bodie; the inclination of the affections is greatly ſwaied by the bodily conſtitution, and the ſoule is ſtained with many ſinnes, by reaſon of the diſtemper of the body. But yet this end is not ſo generall as the two former: for there be two ſorts of men in Gods Church; ſome of ſo weake a conſtitution of bodie, that their ordinary ſobrietie and temperance in diet doth ſufficiently ſubdue the rebellion of the fleſh; now theſe neede not to faſt for this ende: others there be, whoſe ordinarie temperance and ſobrietie will not ſerue to tame the rebellion of their fleſh; and theſe are they that muſt vſe religious faſting, for the ſubduing of the fleſh to the ſpirite, beſides their ordinary moderation in diet.

IV. Faſting ſerues to prepare vnto prayer, and to further vs therein; for firſt it cauſeth watchfulneſſe, and cuts off drowſineſſe, and ſo makes a man the more liuely and freſh in prayer, whereupon our Sauiour often ioynes theſe together, watch & pray. Secondly, it makes vs feele our wants and miſeries, and ſo brings vs to ſome conſcience of our ſinnes; whereupon the heart is more deeply humbled, and ſo ſtirred vp more feruently to call for mercie; and for this cauſe the Scripture many times ioynes prayer and faſting together.

Math.26.41.

IIII. Point. The cauſes or occaſions of a religious faſt, which may iuſtly moue vs thereunto: and they be ſeauen. Firſt, when we our ſelues haue fallen into any grieuous ſinne or ſinnes, whereof our conſcience accuſeth vs, & whereby we procure the wrath of God againſt vs; then to reforme our ſelues, and to eſcape the wrath of God, we haue neede to giue our ſelues to prayer and faſting: 1. Sam. 7.6. The Iſraelites hauing fallen to Idolatrie, put away their ſtrange gods, and turne vnto the Lord with weeping and faſting: and when they kept the feaſt of Expiation, which was a type of their forgiueneſſe by the Meſſias, then they humbled themſelues in faſting before the Lord, Leuit. 16. 29.

Secondly, when ſome among vs fall into any grieuous ſinne, though we our ſelues be cleare from it, yet then we muſt faſt; becauſe for the ſinnes of others, Gods iudgements may iuſtly fall vpon vs. Hence it was that Paul blameth the Corinthians, o becauſe they ſorrowed not for the ſinne of inceſt committed among them. And in this regard, euery godly perſon ought to humble himſelfe, becauſe of the grieuous ſinnes of Atheiſme, blaſphemie, oppreſſion, &c. which abound among vs.

o 1.Cor.5.2.

Thirdly, when the hand of God in any iudgement lies vpon vs: ſo did the p Iſraelites, when they fell in battel before the Beniamites: and ſo ought we to doe for many iudgements of God that haue lien long vpon vs.

p Iudg.20.26.

Fourthly, when the hand of God in any fearefull iudgement lies heauie vpon thoſe among whome we liue, though we our ſelues be free: in this caſe Dauid oft times humbled himſelfe, not onely when his child gotten in adulterie was ſicke, 2. Sam. 12. 16. but euen when his enemies were ſicke he faſted, Pſal. 35. 13.

5

Fiftly, when Gods iudgements are imminent, and as it were hang ouer our heads: ſo did q Iehoſaphat, when his enemies came againſt his countrie: and in this regard we ought to humble our ſelues, for the profeſſed enemies of Gods grace, are daily plotting our ſubuerſion.

q 2.Chr.20.3.

Sixtly, when we ſtand in neede of ſome needfull bleſſing of God, eſpecially ſuch as concerne ſaluation: thus r Cornelius beſought the Lord in prayer and faſting, when he deſired true reſolution concerning the Meſſias; ſo ought we to doe, to get aſſurance of our reconciliation with God, in the pardon of our ſins.

r Act.10.30.

Seuenthly, for Gods bleſſing & good ſucceſſe vpon the miniſterie of the Goſpel; ſo did the Church for Paul and Barnabas, when they ſent them to preach, Act. 13.3. and ſo ought we to doe at this day. Theſe be the iuſt occaſions of faſting mentioned in the word, whereto we may referre the reſt; and when any of theſe befall particular perſons, families, congregations, cities, countreys or kingdomes, then they ought to humble themſelues in faſting before the Lord.

Remiſſion & reformation go together.

Secondly, in this reaſon perſwading to forgiueneſſe, we may ſee that pardon of ſinne before God, and reformation of life go together: for here by this one branch of a reformed life in brotherly forgiueneſſe, is vnderſtood all of the ſame kind: but where is no reformation of life, there is no pardon of ſinne before God. Wouldeſt thou therefore be aſſured in thy conſcience of Gods ſpeciall fauour towards thee in Chriſt? then reforme thy life by euery law of God: for this will giue thee aſſurance from God: but if thy life be vnreformed, thy hope of pardon is a meere conceit of thine owne braine: and therefore if thou want reformation, now beginne; and if thou haue begunne, then hold on, and doe it more and more, for thy more full aſſurance.

v.16. Moreouer, when ye faſt, looke not ſowre as the Hypocrites: for they disfigure their faces, that they might ſeeme vnto men to faſt. Verily I ſay vnto you that they haue their reward.

Of Faſting.

Our Sauiour Chriſt, hauing rectified the abuſes in Almes-giuing and in praier, doth here come to a third Chriſtian dutie, namely, Faſting: wherein as in the former, firſt he ſeekes to reforme abuſes, and then preſcribes the true manner thereof. But before we come to theſe particularly, I will in generall handle the doctrine of Faſting, for the better vnderſtanding of this text, and exerciſe of this dutie. And firſt we muſt know, that Chriſt here ſpeakes not of a ciuill faſt, appointed by Magiſtrates in their dominions for ciuill reſpects; but of a religious faſt, reſpecting the worſhip of God: which appeares by this, that he ioyneth the doctrine of faſting to the doctrin of prayer, which is a ſpeciall part of Gods holy worſhip.

Of a religious faſt fiue points.

1 What kind of worke faſting is.

Now touching a religious faſt, I will here handle fiue points. Firſt, what kinde of worke a faſt is. The Scripture ſpeakes of two kinde of workes: ſome commanded of God; others left indifferent. Workes commanded, be good workes, and parts of Gods ſeruice, becauſe he commandeth them, as prayer, thankſgiuing, Almesdeedes, &c. Workes indifferent, be in themſelues neither good nor euill, becauſe they be neither commanded of God, nor forbidden: as to eate, drinke, buie, ſell, &c. And to this kind of workes muſt we referre faſting; for it is not ſimply commanded of God, and ſo no part of his worſhip in it ſelfe, more then eating is. And yet conſider faſting in it circumſtances; to wit, as a meanes to further and to teſtifie our humiliation in repentance, and our zeale in prayer, and ſo it is a good worke: for in that vſe, and to that end God commandeth it: and it is a part of his worſhip. If it be ſaid, there is no commandement for it in the new Teſtament: I anſwer, if we conſider it in the forenamed vſe and ende, there is: for the ſame commandement that inioyneth praier, and humiliation, inioyneth faſting; becauſe it is a meanes to further them both: for euery commandement includeth all neceſſarie furtherances to the maine dutie. Againe, we haue in the new Teſtament examples of ordinarie faſting, which are without all exception, in our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles, with the occaſions thereof ſet downe whereupon they faſted. Now this is a Rule in Diuinitie, that the ordinarie examples of the godly approoued in Scripture, beeing againſt no generall precept, haue the force of a generall rule, and are to be followed.

How faſting is commanded in the new Teſtament.

How examples are a rule.

In performing a religious faſt, 3 things.

II. Point. How a religious faſt is to be performed. In a religious faſt three things are required. Firſt, Abſtinence from meate & drinke for one day, at leaſt till the euening; for abſtinence from morning till noone is no faſt. When Heſter required the Iewes to faſt for her, ſhee forbids them [a] to eate, or to drinke, during the faſt. And when Dauid faſted and praied for his child begotten in adulterie, he would [b] eate nothing till hee had ended his humiliation perceiuing that the childe was dead. This is a thing granted by all Proteſtants. And the very names of faſting vſed in the old and new Teſtament, import a totall abſtinence for that time: which muſt be obſerued, to diſcouer the abſurditie of Popiſh faſts, wherein they allow men to drinke oft if they will, and eate alſo, ſo it be not fleſh: but in faſting, abſtinence muſt be vſed from all meate and drinke, ſo farre as health & ſtrength will ſuffer. Secondly, Abſtinence from all delights of nature, whereby the outward man may be cheered and refreſhed, as muſicke, ſweet ſmells, ſoft apparell, recreations, and ſuch like. This Daniel obſerued for three weekes of daies: [c] I ate (ſaith hee) no pleaſant bread, neither came fleſh or wine in my mouth, neither did I anoint my ſelfe at all: and the like may we ſee in many examples of the old Teſtament. They [d] caſt duſt and aſhes vpon their heads in ſtead of anointing themſelues with oyle: and for ſoft apparell, they put on [e] ſackcloath next their skin: they [f] waked when they ſhould haue ſlept, and lay vpon the ground in ſtead of beds: the [g] bridegroome went out of his chamber, and the bride out of her bride-chamber: for mirth there was mourning, and [h] howling in ſtead of ſinging. Thirdly, a man muſt humble and afflict his bodie in faſting: and therefore muſt be ſparing in his diet and delights before the day of faſting; for a man may ſo pamper and fill himſelfe, that he ſhall not neede to eate or drinke for one whole day; but ſuch perſons faſt not: the time of our faſt muſt be a [i] time of our humiliation: men muſt afflict themſelues therein, as [k] Ezra ſaith, they muſt beate downe the bodie, and bring it into ſubiection, as [l] Paul did: for s Leu.16.29.

The time of a religious faſt.

V. Point. The time of a religious faſt: this now is free in regard of conſcience. Indeede in the old s Teſtament, they had a ſet time of faſting, to wit, the tenth day of the ſeauenth moneth: but in the new teſtament, there is no ſet time which bindes the conſcience; onely men muſt faſt as iuſt occaſion is offered. If it be ſaid, that diuerſe reformed Churches haue ſet times of faſting: I anſwer, thoſe faſts are ſet for orders ſake, and not to binde conſcience; and they are ciuill faſts and not religious, for the Church may alter them at her pleaſure. The time of a religious faſt, is the time of mourning, which is vncertaine vnto any Church, & therefore the time thereof cannot be ſet; which muſt be marked, because the Church of Rome doth herein erre, in that they bind mens conſciences to their ſet times of religious faſts. *Tolet. inſtr. The kinds of a religious faſt.

VI. Point. The kinds of a religious faſt: and they are two; priuate and publike. A priuate faſt, is that which is performed priuately, either by one man alone, for ſome of the forenamed occaſions peculiar to himſelfe, as Cornelius did (Act. 10. 33.) when hee deſired to knowe the true Meſſias; or by a priuate family, vpon peculiar cauſes mouing them thereto, and ſo did Heſter faſt with her maides, Heſter, 4. 16. This was foretold by t Zacharie, The land ſhall bewaile, euery familie apart, the familie of the houſe of Dauid apart, and their wiues apart, &c. A publike faſt, is that which is performed publikely, by diuers families aſſembling, in one or in many congregations: and this publike faſt is appointed partly by the Church, & partly by the Magiſtrate: the u Church muſt iudge of the time and occaſion thereof: and the u Magiſtrate muſt authorize and proclaime it. Againe, a religious faſt may be diſtinguiſhed otherwaies, in reſpect of the time of continuance, and manner of abſtinence therein: for ſometime a religious faſt is only from one meale for one day, as Iudg. 20. 26. ſometime it is from one meale for many dayes together, as 1. Sam. 31. 13. they faſted ſeauen dayes together for Saul and Ionathan; abſtaining from their dinners, & taking ſome refreſhing in the euening: and ſo Daniel faſted for three weekes of dayes, that is, each day from morning till night, Dan. 10. 3. And ſometime it is from all kinde of ſuſtenance for many dayes together: ſo Heſter and her maides faſted three dayes, Heſt. 4. 16. Now the two former may be vſed of vs as occaſion ſerueth; but this laſt is very dangerous, for it is not with vs in this regard, as it was with the Iewes; they liued in hot countries, and ſo had cold ſtomacks, by reaſon whereof they might faſt three daies without any great inconuenience: but we that liue in colder clymates, haue hotter ſtomacks, and ſo haue neede of more and oftener refreſhing then they had; neither can we faſt ſo long without endangering life and health: now faſting muſt bee to humble & afflict the body, but not to deſtroy it.

2.Chr.20.3.

Thus much of faſting in generall: now I come to Chriſts doctrine of faſting here propounded. And firſt, of his reformation of the abuſes thereof then vſed among the Iewes: When yee faſt looke not as the hypocrites, &c. Queſt. How doth this agree with the commandement of God, Ioel. 1. 13, 14. where he bids them howle and crie in their faſt: which cannot be without a mournfull countenance; and indeed in a true faſt rightly celebrated, the ſorrowe of the heart muſt needs be teſtified by ſome conuenient ſignes and geſture in the bodie. Anſw. Chriſt doth not here ſimply condemne a ſorrowfull countenance in faſtings, when as iuſt occaſion of ſorrow therein is offered; for y Nehemiah looked ſad: but onely the hypocriſie of the Phariſies; who when they faſted had a ſad countenance, without a ſorrowfull heart; for all their heauie lookes, they had no broken ſpirits: this therefore Chriſt ſaith, carrie not a ſad and heauie looke, when thou haſt no ſorrowfull mourning heart; minde not thy outward countenance, in reſpect of thy heart and conſcience. For they disfigure their faces, &c. This alſo may ſeeme not blameworthy, for Gods children haue in their faſts diuers wayes disfigured their faces, and beene approoued: Ezra y pluckt off the haire of his head and of his beard: and z Ioſhuah and the Iſraelites fell to the ground vpon their face, and put duſt vpon their heads, which could not but disfigure their faces. Anſw. The Phariſies are blamed for disfiguring their faces, in diuers reſpects, and that iuſtly; for firſt, this was the chiefe and onely thing they looked to in their faſts, euen the outward ſhewe thereof, which God hateth. Againe, the word tranſlated disfigure, ſignifieth the very aboliſhing of their colour and viſage, which is farre more then the auncient Iewes euer vſed to doe; they indeed humbled their bodies & teſtified their ſorrowe which God approoued: but they ſought not to deforme their naturall complexion; they pined not themſelues to make their faces pale, that ſo men might the better take notice of their much faſting, as theſe Phariſies did; and ſuch were they in Pauls time, who ſpared not their bodies, Col. 2. 23. Thus much for the meaning.

z Ioſh.7.6.

The words thus explained, containe two parts; a commandement, and a reaſon thereof. The commandement forbiddeth fained mourning in faſting, Looke not as the hypocrites: as if he ſhould ſay; The hypocriticall Scribes and Phariſies when they faſt, make an outward ſhew of contrition and ſorrow, when as indeed their hearts are no whit humbled; but you ſhal not doe ſo. The reaſon of the former prohibition is drawne from the practiſe of hypocrites, which is ſet out by the ende and fruite thereof: their practiſe is to disfigure their faces, therein is all their ſorrow: their ende is oſtentation, that they might be ſeene vnto men to faſt. And the fruit is anſwerable, verily I ſay vnto you they haue their reward, that is, reputation and praiſe of men. Thus then we ſee that Chriſt condemnes not righteous faſting, nor godly ſorrow therein, no nor yet the ſeemely ſignes of godly ſorrow; but onely hypocriticall faſting, when men haue mournefull lookes, without humble and contrite hearts.

The Vſes. 1. Here obſerue the practiſe of theſe Scribes and Phariſies in Chriſts time: they did not onely faſt often, as a twice a weeke, but they were carefull in obſeruing all outward rytes and ſignes pertaining to a religious faſt: yet as in the two former duties of Almes-deeds and prayer, ſo in this, the principall thing is wanting; that is, truth and ſinceritie of heart; for their ſower look came not from ſorrowfull hearts; they were whole and righteous in their owne conceit, and ſo needed not the Phiſition Chriſt Ieſus, nor amendment of life. Now in them we may ſee a true patterne of the propertie of naturall men in matters of religion, they more buſie themſelues about the outward worke, then inward truth; they content themſelues with outward rytes and ceremonies, and little regard the true worſhip of the heart. See this in b Ahab, who humbled himſelfe outwardly in great meaſure, for feare of puniſhment, but hee contented himſelfe therewith, and neuer came to true humiliation of heart, in ſorrow for ſinne, for hee continued ſtill in his old ſinnes; and the Iſraelites, both in the wilderneſſe, and in the land of Canaan, when God afflicted them, would humble themſelues and ſeeke his fauour; but yet not in conſtant ſinceritie and truth, for as Dauid c ſaith, They flattered him with their mouth:---for their heart was not vpright with him: they performed the outward ceremonies, and d ſo drew neere to God with their lips, but their heart was farre from him. And thus it goeth generally with naturall men: the whole religion of the Papiſts ſtands in outward ceremoniall actions, partly Iewiſh, and partly Heatheniſh; and when they haue obſerued them, they looke no further. And ſo it fareth with many among vs, that profeſſe true religion: for the ignorant ſort (which are very many euery where) content themſelues with the outward actions of religion; as comming to Church, hearing the word read, and ſometime preached, and receiuing the Sacrament, once or twice a yere; and when the worke is done (though without vnderſtanding) yet all is well, they thinke God is ſerued well enough. Yea many that haue knowledge, doe yet reſt in the outward actions of religion; for doe not ſome eſteeme the conſcionable endeuour of morall obedience to be but preciſeneſſe? and ſo though they beare ſome ſhewe of religion, yet they reproach the power of it in others. And another ſort doe onely ſo farre forth maintaine and profeſſe religion, as it ſtandeth with the good of their outward eſtate, and their peaceable fruition of wealth, honour, and delights, and ſo make a policie of religion and pietie. But let all theſe take heed vnto their ſoules, and betime repent, for theſe practiſes make them hypocrites in religion, whoſe ende will be damnation: and therefore bring thy heart to God with thy outward worſhip, and content not thy ſelfe with the ſhewe of godlineſſe, but get the power of it, and ſhew it in thy conuerſation; and embrace religion for it ſelfe, and not for the world.

Secondly, is the Phariſies faſting condemned of Chriſt, becauſe they reſted in the outward worke, and did it in oſtentation, for the praiſe of men? then doubtleſſe Popiſh faſting is abhominable, becauſe it aboundeth with more abuſes: for I. In religious faſts, they allow one meale, ſo it be not fleſh; and beſides that, drinking of any kind of wines, or drinke, taking of electuaries, & ſtrong waters, conſerues, and ſuch like, at any time of the day; which is a mock-faſt, and nothing elſe. II. They make diſtinction of meates neceſſarie to a faſt; and that not for ciuill ends, as Magiſtrates may doe, or for temperance ſake, as priuate men may doe, but for conſcience ſake, which is a doctrine of Deuils, as the e Apoſtle ſaith. III. They bind men in conſcience to many ſet daies of faſting, and make the omiſſion thereof a deadly ſinne; wherein they take away our Chriſtian libertie: for there was no want of care in our Sauiour Chriſt, to appoint all good meanes for mortifying of the fleſh; and yet hee preſcribed no ſet faſts in the new Teſtament. IV. They make faſting meritorious, teaching, that a man thereby may ſatisfie Gods iuſtice; whereby they doe blaſphemouſly derogate from the all-ſufficiencie of Chriſts obedience and paſſion. Now ſeeing they haue thus defaced religious faſting, let vs learne by Chriſts command, not to faſt as the Papiſts doe.

Thirdly, Chriſt ſaying to his Diſciples, when ye faſt, takes it for granted, that ſometimes they faſted, and ſo ought to doe: and here he blames the Phariſies, not for faſting ſimply, but for their hypocriſie therein: whereby we ſee, that Chriſt requires of all the godly, that when iuſt occaſion is offered, they ſhould faſt, either publikely, or in priuate. And if Chriſt blame the Phariſies for their bad manner of faſting, then much more will hee blame them that faſt not at all, though neuer ſo iuſt occaſion be giuen vnto them: for in this age [illegible] different, [illegible] neceſſarie [illegible] God doth many times [illegible] iudgements, as we may ſee [illegible]. Wherefore to mooue our hearts hereunto, let vs conſider theſe reaſons: Firſt, we haue herein the worthie preſidents of moſt holy men in times paſt, who carefully performed this dutie, when occaſion was offered; as Daniel, Dauid, Ezra, Nehemiah, our Sauiour Chriſt, and his Apoſtles, eſpecially, f Paul who [illegible]: now their examples muſt be a cloud of witneſſes vnto vs, for we come farre ſhort of them in many graces of God, and in obedience, and therefore had more need to humble our ſelues.

Chriſt requires faſting on iuſt occaſion.

Secondly,

2 Occaſions of faſting. Secondly, we haue among vs continuall occaſions of faſting, both in publike, and priuate: as, 1 I. Gods iudgements preſent: for when haue we beene free from ſome one of theſe, either famine, or peſtilence, or vnſeaſonable weather? 2 II. Gods iudgements imminent and hanging ouer our heads; for our profeſſed enemies watch for our ſubuerſion, and we are in danger to haue the kingdome of heauen taken from vs, in the power of the Goſpell, the comfort of praier and of the Sacraments, becauſe we doe not bring forth the fruits thereof. 3 III. We haue our owne corrupt natures to ſubdue, and many ſinnes to break off, with particular iudgements vpon our ſelues to remooue; for any one whereof we haue great need to faſt often. 4 IV. Though we had no ſuch cauſe in regard of our ſelues; yet the horrible ſinnes that abound in our land, are cauſe ſufficient to bring vs on our knees. Paul c feared hee ſhould be humbled at Corinth, in bewailing many that had ſinned: and ſhall not the common Atheiſme, the contempt of Gods word and iudgements, the blaſphemies, oppreſſion, and fearefull ſecuritie of this age cauſe vs to waile and mourne? 5 V. We ſhould oft humble our ſelues for the Church of God, and for the continuance of the Goſpell in ſinceritie among vs, and to our poſteritie: hereby we ſhall beſt expreſſe zeale for Gods houſe, which ſhould eate vs vp, as it is ſaide of d Chriſt, and of e Dauid: Gods Ieruſalem ſhould be our f chiefe ioy: and we muſt teſtifie it by g praying for the peace thereof: Chriſt prayed and h faſted when he choſe his Apoſtles for the planting of his Church: much more therefore muſt we do it for the continuance of it.

Fourthly, Chriſt here diſalloweth not onely the affectation of praiſe in theſe Phariſies, but the diſguiſing of their faces by a kinde of pining of themſelues; whereby he would teach vs, that a true faſt ſtands not in the afflicting and weakning of the bodie. Now albeit few offend this way at this day, for moſt are giuen too much to pamper the fleſh; yet here may fitly be ſhewed, what care men ought to haue of their bodies. Of care for the bodie. And firſt of all, a two-fold care muſt be auoided; as well an immoderate care to pamper the bodie with meate and drinke; for that makes the heart heauie, and the head drouſie, and hereby luſt is kindled, and ſinne cheriſhed; which the Apoſtle forbids, Rom.13.14. as alſo too little care, whereby the bodie is pined and pulled downe to ouermuch weaknes, which is one thing here reprooued. The care required is that moderate regard vnto the bodie, whereby it is ſo ſuſtained by meate and drinke, that it may alwaies become the temple of the holy Ghoſt; and a fit inſtrument for the ſoule vnto workes of righteouſneſſe, and the worſhip of God. Now he that would thus order his bodie, muſt doe two things: 1 Firſt, he muſt obſerue perpetuall temperance in foode and raiment, taking that which may well ſuffice nature, but not fulfill the luſts thereof. Secondly, if this will not ſerue to ſubdue the fleſh, but that it will ſtill rebell againſt the law of the ſpirit of life, (as in ſome it will not) then faſting muſt be vſed, in which the bodie is to be afflicted, and the ſoule humbled, for the ſubduing of the rebellious fleſh: but yet herein wee muſt beware, that wee deſtroie not our health, our ſtrength, or our conſtitution; for thus we neglect our life, which is a ſinne of murther: wherein (though few) yet ſome doe offend, who in the meane time liue in the practiſe of foule and groſſe ſinnes otherwaies.

Fifthly, here note how farre the Phariſies goe in outward humiliation: they are content to afflict their bodies, euẽ to the diſfiguring of their complexion; but yet they will not repent and leaue their ſinnes, no though Iohn Baptiſt, and Chriſt preach repentance vnto them: wherein behold the propertie of our corrupt nature in Gods ſeruice, if outward actions and bodily exerciſes will ſerue the turne, we can be content to beſtow much coſt, to take great paines, and to endure ſome affliction; but yet ſtill we deſire to liue in our ſinnes. This is euident in Poperie, for who are more auſtere to their owne bodies, in watchings, wandring, in whipping thẽſelues, faſting, &c. and yet where is more abhominable filthineſſe then among them? and this makes that religion ſo embraced becauſe in diſpenſing with ſinne, for the performance of theſe bodily actions, it fits ſo well to our corrupt nature. Wherefore let vs take notice of this our corruption, and though we muſt not neglect the humbling of the bodie vpon iuſt occaſion; yet let vs principally looke to the mortifying of ſinne, and the obedience of the heart.

Outward exerciſes mo embraced then waightie duties.

v. 17. But when thou faſteſt, annoint thine head, and waſh thy face,

18. That thou ſeeme not vnto men to faſt, but vnto thy Father which is in ſecret: and thy Father which ſeeth in ſecret, will reward thee openly.

Chriſt the true Doctor of his Church, hauing in the former verſe ſought to reforme the exerciſe of Faſting, from Phariſaicall abuſes, doth in theſe two verſes ſeeke to reſtore the ſame to his right vſe: not ſo much intending to command vs to faſt, as to bring vs to the right manner of faſting.

The Expoſition. When thou faſteſt, &c. It ſeemeth that Chriſt here ſpeaketh eſpecially of a priuate faſt, for beſides that he vſeth words of the ſingular number, Thou, Thine, &c. he inioyneth neth the concealing of it from others, which cannot be done in a publike faſt: and yet the maine thing here inioyned, is the approbation of the heart vnto god, which muſt be obſerued in all religious faſts, as well publike as priuate. Anoint thine head, and waſh thy face: Here Chriſt alludeth to the cuſtome of the Iewes, who to ſhewe their cheerefulneſſe, vſed to anoint their heads with ſweete oyntments, and to waſh their faces; as wee may ſee by Naomies command to [a] Ruth, and by [b] Davids practiſe, when he perceiued his child was dead, and would teſtifie that he had ceaſed from mourning for it: alſo by the ſpeech of Chriſt, iuſtifying the woman that annointed his feete with oyntment, Mine [c] head thou diddeſt not annoint; but ſhee hath annointed my feete with oyntment: for as David ſaith, God giues oyle to make the face to ſhine, Pſal. 104. 15. But yet theſe words are not to be taken properly, neither do they binde vs to annoint our heads when we faſt, as may appeare by theſe reaſo͂s: 1. If the words ſhould bee taken properly, then ſhould Chriſt condemne all the faſts of holy men in the olde Teſtament, who vſed neither oyntments nor waſhings, but abſtained from all ſuch bodily delights for that time. 2. Chriſt ſhould command contraries, namely, the vſe of ſuch things in faſting, as were more proper feaſting, wherein men vſe to be ioyfull and cherefull. 3. He ſhould inioyne that to ſome countries, which were not in their power, or at leaſt could not be vſed of them without exceſſiue charges; as in this or other colde countries, where ſweete oyles are rare and coſtly. The true meaning therefore muſt bee gathered out of the circumſtances of the place: now Chriſts intent is here, as in the former points of Almſdeedes, and prayer, to preſcribe vnto men the approuing of their hearts vnto God in faſting, by auoiding oſtentation therein, and deſire of the praiſe of men: and therefore he names ſuch behauiour, as doth no way intimate a faſt vnto others; meaning thereby, that we ſhould conceale our priuate faſts from men: as if he ſhould ſay, when thou faſteſt priuately, ſo carrie thy ſelfe, that it may not appeare to men thou faſteſt, and in all thy faſts ſeeke onely to approoue thy heart vnto God.

[b] 2.Sam.12.
[c] Luk.7.46.

Priuate worſhip muſt be concealed.

The words thus explained containe two parts; a commandement, and a reaſon thereof. The commandement is two-fold: Firſt, that we ſhould conceale our faſts from men, intimated by waſh thy face, and annoint thy head: ſecondly, that we ſhould ſeeke to approoue our ſelues not to men, but to God in our religious faſts, in theſe words, That thou ſeeme not to men to faſt, but to thy Father which is in ſecret. In this firſt branch of this commandement we may learne, that the priuate worſhip of God muſt bee performed priuately vnto God, and concealed from men: for that which is here ſaid of priuate faſting, which is a meanes to further our prayers, is true of prayer it ſelfe, and of euery part of Gods priuate worſhip, for there is the ſame reaſon of all: as may thus appeare; Firſt, in all actions of Gods worſhip, there muſt be obſerued an holy comelineſſe and decencie, which is then done, when they be performed with fit and conuenient circumſtances; that is, publike actions of worſhip, with publike circumſtances, and priuate actions with priuate circumſtances: as publike prayer muſt bee made of a publike perſon in a publike place, with an audible and loud voice; and priuate prayer muſt be made in a priuate place, by priuate perſons, with a ſtill and lowe voice; and other ſeemely priuate geſtures. Secondly, when priuate worſhip is performed with publike circumſtances; there are many occaſions giuen to ambition, pride, and hypocriſie; but beeing done priuately, theſe occaſions are preuented, & the heart is more free to ſeeke the approbation of God onely.

Directions for vs in Gods worſhip.

1 Of priuate preparation to Gods publike worſhip.

This doctrine ſerues to direct our practiſe in Gods worſhip; as firſt, that we muſt not reſerue our priuate preparation to Gods publike worſhip, til we come to the publike congregation; but prepare our ſelues at home priuately in our chamber or cloſet: for though to pray euery where be lawfull, yet becauſe conuenient circumſtances muſt be obſerued in all our actions of worſhip, therefore priuate praier in a publik place is not ſo ſeemely nor conuenient; for publike circumſtances doe not beſeeme priuate worſhip. Queſt. What if a man wanted time, or had forgot to prepare himſelfe before hand? Anſw. Slight pretences cannot iuſtifie any diſorder in Gods worſhip; and yet if a man will needes there performe his priuate preparation, he muſt conceale all outward ſignes of prayer, and only lift vp his heart vnto God: for a good dutie may become offenſiue by inconuenient circumſtances. Secoudly, this ſhewes how Chriſtian families muſt order their priuate exerciſes of religion, namely, ſo priuately for voice and geſture, that they may conceale the ſame from others, beſide their family preſent: and ſo muſt particular perſons praying alone, obſerue ſuch circumſtances as may conceale their prayers from others: for all occaſions of oſtentation muſt be avoided, that ſo the heart may apply it ſelfe wholly towards the Lord.

2 How priuate families muſt worſhip god.

The heart muſt be approoued to God in faſting.

That thou ſeeme not to men to faſt.] This is the ſecond branch of Chriſts commandement, wherein we learne a ſecond duty in a religious faſt; namely, that therein we ſeeke to approoue our ſelues and our actions onely to God: for which ende, we muſt obſerue three things. 1. With our faſting we muſt ioyne a conuerſion of our heart from ſinne vnto God: Ioel 2. 12. Turne you vnto mee with all your heart, and with faſting: there God hath ioyned them together, and they may not be ſeuered. Now that our hearts may turne to God in faſting, we muſt haue ſpeciall regard to our behauiour both before, in, and after our faſt, whether publike or priuate. Before the faſt, wee muſt prepare our ſelues thereto in an holy manner, by a ſerious conſideration of the cauſes and occaſions of our faſt: a worthy example hereof we haue in [a] Iehoſaphat, who conſidering a fearefull iudgement to be at hand, in the approaching of his enemies, was ſore afraid, and thereupon ſet his heart to ſeeke the Lord, and proclaimed a faſt. In faſting we muſt labour to haue more tender affections, and deeper humiliation then ordinarie: 1. Sam.7.6. the Iſraelites humbling themſelues in faſting for their idolatrie, in Miſpah, drewe water, and powred it out before the Lord: which words import their deepe humiliation, whether it were by abundãt weeping, (as ſome expound the place) or by powring out water indeede, to ſignifie, that they powred out their ſoules before the Lord. After the faſt, we muſt labour for reformation and amendment of life, that our behauiour both towardes God and man, may be euerie way better then before. A notable example hereof we haue in the Iewes, who hauing renued their couenãt with God, vpõ their [a] humiliation, did not onely [b] write it, and [c] ſeale vnto it; but bound themſelues thereto by [d] curſe and oath. 2. That wee approoue our ſelues and our action to God in faſting, wee muſt bee ſure we propound vnto our ſelues therein the right ends of a religious faſt, which we haue before propounded: for if we faile therein, and propound other endes vnto our ſelues, we corrupt the whole action vnto our ſelues. 3. With our faſting we muſt ioyne the duties of the ſecond table, in the workes of iuſtice, mercie, and loue to our brethren: for without theſe, our loue to God is not ſincere: nay, God rejects that bodily humiliatiõ, which is ſeuered from the exerciſe of mercie and compaſſion, as we may ſee at large, Iſa. 58.3.4. &c. I ſhewed before that we had iuſt cauſe to humble our ſelues; which when we do, we muſt be carefull thus to approoue our hearts vnto God.

How the heart may turn to God in faſting.

Thus much of the commandement: nowe followeth the reaſon thereof, drawne from the promiſe of Gods reward to them that faſt in an holy manner: And thy father which ſeeth in ſecret, will reward thee openly: that is, ſeeing thee aymed onely to approoue thine heart and action vnto God in faſting, will giue thee an open reward at the laſt day.

This text the Papiſts doe notably abuſe, to prooue two hereticall concluſions touching faſting. Firſt, that faſting in it ſelfe for any good ende, is a part of Gods worſhip, becauſe it hath a promiſe of open reward, euen life euerlaſting, made vnto it, as before was made to prayer & Almes-deedes; and therefore muſt needes be of the ſame nature with them: for things indifferent, and bodily exerciſes, profit little, that which hath the promiſe is a part of godlineſſe, 1. Tim.4.8. Anſ. This promiſe is made to him that faſteth, not to the worke; and that not ſimply for his exerciſe of faſting, but for his repentance, conuerſion, and inuocation, which go with faſting, and are furthered thereby. But

A they alleadge, that [e] Anna ſerued God with faſting and with prayer. Anſ. In the old teſtament, faſting was a part of Gods worſhip; for it was commanded to be performed the tenth day of the ſeauenth moneth: and then alſo was the making and performing of vowes, a part of religious worſhip, commanded of God. Now in all likelihood Anna had bound her ſelfe by vow to God, to that courſe of prayer and faſting, & therefore was approoued of God therein. But now in the newe Teſtament, we haue no commandement for ſet faſts or vowes, and therefore the caſe is not the ſame, and ſo her example cannot prooue the thing for which they al-
B leadge it: indeede we haue the vow of morall obedience made in baptiſme, but that euery one is bound to performe that takes God for his God, though he ſhould not vow it. Againe, a man may be ſaid to ſerue God in prayer and faſting as Annah did, becauſe prayer is a true part of Gods worſhip, and though faſting in it ſelfe be not the worſhip of God, yet beeing ioyned with prayer, it is a notable furtherance thereunto: and beeing ſo performed vpon iuſt occaſion, it is a part of his worſhip, becauſe he requires it.

The ſecond concluſion which the Papiſts would gather hence is; that Faſting ſatisfieth Gods iuſtice, and merits remiſſion of ſinnes and life euerlaſting; becauſe this promiſe of open reward is here made vnto it. Anſw. Wee muſt know, that the promiſes of God for remiſſion
C of ſinnes and life euerlaſting, being grounded vpon Chriſt, are onely made to them that bee regenerate and beleeue in Chriſt; and ſo they are not made to him for his works ſake, but for his faith whereby he is in Chriſt, and ſo indeed are made vnto him for Chriſts ſake onely, in whome we graunt, that God of his free grace makes himſelfe a debter by his promiſe to euerie beleeuer that doth any good worke; yet the debt is not due to vs for any thing we doe, but due to Chriſt, who hath merited it, & in Chriſt due to vs. But it will be ſaid, that workes are oft mentioned with Gods promiſes, and eſpecially faith, which is a worke. Anſ. True: but yet the reward promiſed is not giuẽ for works
D ſake, nor yet for faith; but for Chriſts ſake, whoſe merit imputed to vs is receiued by faith, which faith we teſtifie by works: and ſo according to our faith and works, we receiue a reward of God, but not for them: as Chriſt ſaid to the Centurion, [f] As thou haſt beleeued, ſo be it vnto thee. Thus then muſt we conceiue of this promiſe made to faſting; though in it ſelfe it be a bodily exerciſe: yet beeing done in obedience to God vpon iuſt occaſion, by him that beleeueth in Chriſt, and beeing ioyned with prayer and conuerſion to God, it is a worke of faith, and ſhall haue a reward.

Now this gracious promiſe made to faſting in this holy manner, muſt ſtirre vs vp to a loue of this exerciſe, and to the practiſe of it, ſo oft as iuſt occaſion is giuen. And vndoubtedly one ſpecial cauſe of the continual renuing of Gods iudgements among vs is, becauſe we humble not our ſelues by praier & faſting vnder Gods mightie hand. It were therefore to be wiſhed, in regard of the manifold iuſt occaſions, that publike faſts were more often commanded by publike authoritie, and priuate faſts more conſcionably vſed in euerie familie.

And thus much of the fourth part of Chriſts Sermon, containing a reformation of abuſes in Almes, Praier, & Faſting: out of all which we muſt learne this one thing which Chriſt principally intends; to wit, in all holy duties to avoide hypocriſie, endeauouring to doe them with that ſimplicitie and ſinceritie of heart, whereby we truly deſire to haue God and not man the ſeer and approuer of them. And ſo ſhall our works be not onely good in themſelues, but in vs, and acceptable vnto God: otherwiſe, if we doe them in oſtentation, or for other ſiniſter reſpects, the hypocriſie of our harts defiles our good works, and ſo makes them vnacceptable vnto God, and vnprofitable to our ſelues.

v.19. Lay not vp treaſures for your ſelues vpon the earth, where the moth and canker corrupt, and where theeues digge through and ſteale.

20. But lay vp treaſures for your ſelues in heauen, where neither the moth nor canker corrupteth, and where theeues neither dig through nor ſteale.

Fift part of Chriſts Sermon.

Here beginneth the fifth part of this excellent Sermon, and it continueth to the ende of this chapter, wherein our Sauiour Chriſt intendeth to reforme his hearers of couetouſnes, and to worke in their hearts a moderate care and deſire of wordly things. Now the order of this diſcourſe is this; Firſt, he laies downe the ſubſtance of his perſwaſion, and then enforceth & amplifieth the ſame. The ground & ſubſtance of Chriſts perſwaſion conſiſts in a double commandement: the firſt ſhewes what wee muſt not doe in reſpect of treaſures, v.19. the ſecond what we muſt doe, ver.20. both which he enforceth by their ſeueral reaſōs, in the ſame verſes: as alſo with a reaſō cōmon to the both, v.21.

For the firſt commandement, Lay not vp treaſures, &c. The meaning. The word here tranſlated laie vp, is more ſignificant in the original, then our engliſh doth expreſſe, for it imports two things: Firſt, to gather together: ſecondly, to hoard or heape vp in ſtore things gathered, againſt the time to come: ſo Rom.2.5. Thou heapeſt vp vnto thy ſelfe, &c. Treaſures, that is, worldly wealth in aboundance, precious

A things ſtored vp; as ſiluer, gold, pearls, &c. Vpon earth: here Chriſt aimes not ſo much at the place, as at the kind of treaſures; for heauenly treaſures may bee laid vp while we are here on earth; and therefore he forbids hoarding of earthly treaſures. For your ſelues: that is, reſpecting your priuate gaine and benefit, all reſpect to the good of the Church and common wealth laid aſide. So then the words beare this ſenſe; Take heede that you gather not riches together, to hoard vp here below for your owne priuate vſe and benefit alone, making them your treaſures in which you put your truſt and place your ioy and delight.

3. things allowed about wealth.

B But yet that wee may not miſtake the meaning of our Sauiour Chriſt, I will diſtinctly ſet downe what things Chriſt forbiddeth not, pertaining to the gathering or keeping of worldly goods; and then what it is which he doth directly forbid. There be three things reſpecting the world, which Chriſt forbiddeth not: viz. I. Diligent labour in a mans vocation, whereby he prouides things needfull for himſelfe, and thoſe that depend vpon him; for elſe he ſhould be contrarie to himſelfe, inioyning man to eate his bread in the ſweate of his face, Gen. 3. 19. & commanding that he that will not labour ſhould not eate, 2. Theſſ. 3. 10. II. The fruition and poſſeſſion of goods and riches; for they are the good bleſſings of God, beeing well vſed, and haue been poſſeſſed of Gods children, as Abraham, Iob, Salomon, &c. III. The gathering and laying vp of treaſures is not ſimply forbidden, C for the word of God alloweth hereof in ſome reſpect, 2. Cor. 12. 14. The father muſt lay vp for the children: and the Diſciples vnderſtanding of the generall famine, by the propheſie of Agabus which ſhould be in al the world, [a] gathered prouiſion aforehand for the brethren in Iudea: and [b] Ioſephs provident wiſedome is commended by the holy Ghoſt, for hoarding vp the corne in Egypt againſt the time of dearth, for the common good: and the [c] temple of God had his treaſurie by Gods appointment, for the vpholding and repaire thereof; ſo that Chriſt doth not ſimply forbid all gathering & laying vp of treaſure or wealth.

Practiſes of couetouſnes here forbidden.

D What is it then, which Chriſt here forbids? Anſ. Sundrie practiſes of couetouſneſſe, whereof the firſt is, exceſſiue ſeeking of worldly wealth, when men keepe no meaſure nor moderation therein; although God gaue ſufficient, yet they are not content, their deſire is ſo vnſatiable. And that we may ſee the dāger of this practiſe, I will here ſhewe how farre forth a man may ſeeke for, and lay vp worldly wealth: for the better vnderſtanding whereof, this diſtinction of worldly goods muſt bee laid downe for a ground; They are either neceſſarie, aboundant, or ſuperfluous. Neceſſarie goods are of two ſorts; either neceſſary to mans nature, without which no man can liue, nor family ſtand; as meate, drinke, apparell, lodging, &c. or neceſſarie to a mans ſtate and condition of life, without which he cannot exerciſe the duties of his calling wherein God hath placed him; as bookes to a ſtudent, tooles to a trades-man, &c. Now here ariſeth the queſtion: How much of theſe things are to be counted neceſſarie, and ſo may be prouided for, and laid vp? Anſ. The opinion and iudgement of the couetous man muſt bee no rule in this caſe: for his corrupt heart is vnſatiable, like the ſea which cannot be filled, & like the [d] fire, that neuer ſaith, it is enough. Now becauſe of the diuerſitie of mens eſtates, by reaſon of their difference in properties & conditions, there can be no certain rule ſet down; for that which is enough for one, will not ſuffice another: and therefore the iudgement and practiſe of the godly wiſe, who know how to vſe the creatures as bleſſings of Gods prouidence, muſt bee our rule to iudge what is neceſſarie: other rules we haue not in the word, but what they iudge needeful according to the word, that muſt be eſteemed neceſſarie, and accordingly prouided. Yet further this may here be added, that things muſt not be deemed neceſſarie, onely in regard of the preſent vſe, but alſo with reſpect to the time to come, wherein they may be needefull. Example. A trades-man hauing nothing beſides his trade to liue vpon, may prouide for things neceſſarie while his ſtrength continueth, to maintaine himſelfe in old age, when thorough decay of ſtrength or ſight he is not able to worke. And ſo a man hauing many children, may in the vſe of lawfull meanes prouide for their portions before hand, that when their age requireth, he may therewith diſpoſe of them in ſome good ſtate of life. The ſecond ſort of worldly goods is Abundance, whereby I meane that plentie and ſtore, which ſerues not onely for neceſſitie but for comelineſſe and delight. The third ſort is Superfluitie, whereby I meane ſuch abundance, as a man hath neither vſe of for the preſent, nor in any likelihood ſhall haue for the time to come.

2. Abundãce.

3. Superfluitie.

A rule for prouiſion of worldly things.

Now theſe grounds thus premiſed, I ſet downe this rule touching mans prouiſion for worldly wealth. Things neceſſarie for mans perſon and calling, a man may ſeeke for and lay vp; but for abundance, and for ſuperfluities, no man ought to labour or bee carefull: hereto Chriſt hath put this barre, Lay not vp treaſures for your ſelues: and Salomon praies as directly againſt ſuperfluitie, as againſt pouertie, Pro.30.8,9. Giue mee not riches, nor pouertie (ſaith hee) but feede mee with food conuenient for mee: and he renders this reaſon againſt abundance, leaſt I be full and denie thee, & ſay, who is the Lord? Now hence I reaſon thus; looke what we may aske of God, that onely muſt we ſeeke for, and no more: but we may only aske for things neceſſarie; for to pray for abundance wee haue no warrant, and therefore we muſt onely ſeek for neceſſaries, and not for abundance. Hereto the Apoſtles rule agreeth well, [e] If we haue foode and raiment, let vs herewith bee content, for they that would be rich or abound (as the word ſignifieth) fall into temptation and ſnares. Queſt. If we may not pray for aboundance, what muſt we doe, if God giue abundance? Anſ. If God bleſſe vs with abundance, vpon our moderate labour and care in our lawfull callings, we muſt receiue it thankefully, and as good ſtewards lay it vp to bee beſtowed on good vſes, either in our families, or in the Church and common-wealth, as God in his prouidence ſhall offer vs iuſt occaſion.

Motiues to contentation.

Now this beeing euident, that we muſt onely ſeeke for things neceſſary, and no more; then we muſt all learne to beware of carking care, and be contented with things neceſſarie, when God giues them. And to mooue vs hereunto, conſider the reaſons following: First, it is Gods commandement, that we ſhould be contented 1 with things neceſſarie, 1.Tim.6.8. and therefore we muſt make conſcience of obedience in the practiſe of contentation. 2 Secondly, they that are greedie after abundance, haue many temptations to bad dealing, and ſo can hardly keepe a good conſcience: they fall into ſnares (as the [f] Apoſtle ſaith) and into many fooliſh and noyſome luſts, which drowne men in perdition & deſtruction. 3 Thirdly, in time of perſecution (which oft accompanies the Goſpel) the richer a man is, the more danger he is in to forſake the truth; for the heart of man is naturally ſo glued to the world, that without Gods ſpeciall grace, it wil ſooner forſake Chriſt, then worldly wealth: this we may ſee in Demas, who to embrace the world, forſooke Paul, 2.Tim.4.10. whereupon Chriſt ſaith, How hardly can a rich man enter into the kingdome of heauen. And thus much of the firſt practiſe of couetouſneſſe, which is exceſſiue care and labour after worldly goods.

Mark.10.23.

The ſecond practiſe of couetouſneſſe.

The ſecond practiſe of couetouſneſſe which Chriſt here forbids, is when men ſeeke onely or principally for worldly goods, neglecting ſpirituall graces in regard thereof. This appeares by the oppoſition of the next verſe vnto this, lay not vp for your ſelues earthly treaſures, but lay vp for your ſelues treaſures in heauen. This was Eſaus practiſe, who ſould his birthright for a meſſe of pottage, Heb.12.16. and the ſinne of the Gadarens, that vpon the loſſe of their ſwine deſired Chriſt to goe out of their coaſts, Luk.8.37. And this is the ſinne of our age, wherein many things, nay almoſt euerie thing, which may yeeld profit or delight, is cared for aboue the word: or els how could there be ſo much preaching, and ſo little profiting, but that mens thoughts & delights are taken vp with earthly things? but this is a prepoſterous and diſordered care, which euerie one muſt labour to reforme, as Chriſt commands, v.31.

The third practiſe of couetouſneſſe.

The third practiſe of couetouſneſſe here forbidden, is to put truſt and confidence in worldly things treaſured vp; this is the Idolatrie of the heart, for looke whereon a man ſets his heart, that he makes his God: & therefore is couetouſneſſe neſſe called idolatrie, Col. 3. 5. Hence it is that Chriſt makes it ſo hard a thing for a rich man to enter into heauen, Matth. 19. 23, 24. becauſe they [a] truſt in their riches: and if we marke wel, we ſhall finde it commonly true, that rich men are proud hearted and ſecure, not regarding Gods iudgements, nor the meanes of their ſaluation; for they [b] take not God for their ſtrength, that truſt in their riches. Dauids counſell therefore muſt be followed, [c] If riches encreaſe, ſet not your heart thereon.

he fourth practiſe of couetouſnes.

The fourth practiſe here forbidden, is when men lay vp for themſelues onely, without regard to the Church or Common-wealth, or releefe of the poore. This is a deuilliſh practiſe: for euery one is but a ſteward of that hee hath, to diſpence the ſame for Gods glorie to the good of others. The poore are Gods poore, & members of his familie, and therefore he requires, that euery ſteward in his family ſhould ſee they haue their portion: God will call the rich to their account, when this will not be taken for good diſpoſing, to ſay I kept my riches to my ſelfe: ſo much will the ſlothfull ſeruant ſay, that hides his talent in a napkin. And therefore let vs learne to make conſcience hereof, with the reſt of theſe bad practiſes.

Where the moath and canker corrupt, and where theeues digge through and ſteale. Theſe words containe a ſpeciall reaſon of the former commandement, to this effect: Earthly treaſures, as riches, raiment, &c. are ſubiect to bee carried away by theeues: and therefore wee muſt not vnconſtantly or principally ſeeke after them, ſet our hearts vpon them, or hoard them vp for our ſelues.

The Expoſition. The word tranſlated moth, ſignifieth a worme that eateth the fineſt cloath, and conſumeth the beſt garment: yet here it muſt be taken more largely, for any worme that doth deſtroy or conſume any creature. And ſo the word tranſlated canker, muſt bee largely taken, for any thing that by ruſt or fretting doth eate into and conſume mettall, or any other creature.

he vanitie of the creatures.

Here then Chriſt noteth a two-fold vanitie of the creatures, both in reſpect of their nature, and of abuſe: for their nature, they are ſubiect to corruption by ruſt, moth, and canker, be the treaſures neuer ſo pure and coſtly, as gold, ſiluer, pearles, &c. for the heauens themſelues are ſubiect to vanitie. And for abuſe, they are ſubiect to the iniuries of vngodly perſons, theeues may ſteale them, and couetous perſons may hoard them vp that they ſhall ſerue for no vſe. Now if all earthly creatures be ſubiect to vanitie both by corruption and abuſe, then we muſt not make them our chiefe treaſures, but ſeeke for them and vſe them in a moderate and ſober manner. Queſt. But whence came this vanitie vpon the creatures? Anſw. God hath ſubiected them vnto it for the ſinne of man, Rom. 8. 20.

The conſideration hereof muſt let vs ſee the grieuouſneſſe of our ſinnes, and the greatneſſe of Gods anger due thereunto, in that he hath imprinted the ſtampe of his wrath vpon euerie creature for the ſinne of man, by ſubiecting it to this two-fold vanitie. And therefore when we ſee a moath vpon apparell, or ruſt and canker vpon mettal, or other creatures corrupting them, we ought rather to be humbled for our ſinnes, then to ſuffer our hearts to be drawn to immoderate deſire and delight after earthly things. Secondly are the creatures that neuer ſinned, ſubiect to vanitie for mans ſinne? then how vaine a thing is man, that by his tranſgreſſion bringeth vanitie vpon the creatures! let vs therefore in them behold our owne vanity, and when we pitie them, learne to lament our own iniquities.

v. 20. But lay vp treaſures for your ſelues, &c. Chriſt hauing ſhewed what wee muſt not doe in reſpect of treaſures here on earth, and knowing mans inclination to be ſuch, that hee will needes haue ſomething for his treaſure, doth here come to the ſecond branch of his commandement; ſhewing what treaſure wee muſt lay vp for our ſelues, and enforceth vs thereto by a ſpeciall reaſon. The treaſures we muſt lay vp are, treaſures in heauen. Queſt. How ſhould we lay vp treaſures in heauen, for we cannot of our ſelues come there; no man can ſaue himſelfe, the beginning, progreſſe, & accompliſhment of our ſaluation is of God in Chriſt wholly? Anſ. It is vſuall with God in Scripture, to aſcribe the worke of the principall efficient cauſe, to the inſtrument thereof. Thus in the laſt ver. of Obadiah, Preachers, are expreſſely called Sauiours: and, 1. Tim. 4. 16. In doing this thou ſhalt both ſaue thy ſelfe, and them that heare thee: and, 1. Cor. 4. 15. I haue begotten you through the Goſpel: and yet both ſaluation and regeneration are the workes of God alone, onely Preachers are the inſtruments thereof. So in this place, to make vs rich with heauenly treaſures, is the worke of God alone; for wee rather treaſure vp vnto our ſelues wrath againſt the day of wrath, by our tranſgreſſions: and yet becauſe we are inſtruments by his grace, in the vſe of meanes to get this treaſure; therefore he giueth this commandement vnto vs, as though the work were wholly ours, though himſelfe be the principall author.

Obadiah.

Rom.2.5.

But yet that we may the better conceiue of, and practiſe this commandement, two points are to be conſidered. Firſt, what this treaſure is: Secondly, how a man muſt lay it vp for himſelfe: both theſe we muſt mark with reuerence, becauſe they are points of great waight and moment, in the practiſe whereof ſtandeth our ſaluation. For the firſt. In ſearching it out, we will firſt conſider, what is erroniouſly thought to be this treaſure which Chriſt would haue vs to lay vp. The Church of Rome hath for many hundred yeares, abuſed the world hereabouts, making the ouerpluſ of Chriſts merits, and of the merits of Saints and Martyrs, to bee the trea-

What the Papiſts make the true treaſure. Aquin.ſuppl. ad 3.part. Summ.q 25. Tollet.inſtr. Sacerd.l.6.c. 25.

ſure of the Church, which beeing gathered together and put into a ſtore-cheſt, is (ſay they) in the Popes cuſtodie; and hee alone hath the plenary opening and ſhutting of this cheſt, and the ordering and diſpoſing of theſe merits: by vertue whereof he giues out indulgences and pardons, when and to whom hee will. And hereby indeede he maintaines and vpholds his kingdome: for hereby comes in his wealth & reuenewes.

Anſwer.

But this cannot be the true treaſure, nay, it is corrupt and deceitfull for two cauſes: for firſt, hereby they abaſe the true treaſure which is Chriſts merits, by adding ſupply thereto from the merits of Saints: for if Chriſts merits receiue increaſe from the merits of men, then it is not al-ſufficient of it ſelfe, and ſo but a poore treaſure. Secondly, hereby they make the merits of Saints departed, to be the merits of others which liue long after them, by the Popes application; which is a thing impoſſible and abſurd: for no man can merit of himſelfe: but ſay he could, yet ſhould his merits be for himſelfe alone and for none others: for euerie man in regard of ſaluation is a priuate man, and the reward of his workes he doth that way can onely redound vnto himſelfe, only Chriſt Ieſus our Mediatour, God & man, who was by God himſelfe made a publike perſon for this end, can merit for others.

The true treaſure.

The true treaſure then (to let the other paſſe) is in a word, the true God, that one onely eternall eſſence in three perſons, who made all things, and gouernes all things: in him alone is all goodneſſe and happines to be found. Gen. 15. 1. I am thy buckler, and thine exceeding great reward, ſaith God to Abraham: and Pſal. 16. 5, 6. The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance (ſaith Dauid), I haue a goodly heritage: which is as much as if he had ſaide, The Lord is my treaſure. I will not ſtand on this, for men by the light of nature haue ſeene and ſaide thus much.

How God is our treaſure.

This rather is to be conſidered, how God becomes our treaſure. And for this ende, wee muſt conceiue of God, as hee hath reuealed himſelfe vnto vs in Chriſt: for out of Chriſt he is not our God, and ſo not our treaſure: but God incarnate is our true treaſure. Coloſ. 2. 3. In whome, that is, in Chriſt, are hid all the treaſures of wiſedome and knowledge. Coloſſ. 3. 3. Our life, euen eternall life, is hidden with Chriſt in God, as in a treaſure. 1. Cor. 1. 30. Chriſt is made vnto vs of God, wiſdome, righteouſneſſe, ſanctification, and redemption: and, Ioh. 1. 16. Of his fulneſſe, as out of a full treaſure, we all receiue grace for grace. Now we muſt not reſt in his incarnation, but conceiue further of him as he was crucified for vs in our nature, and is ſet forth vnto vs in his word and Sacraments; for his obedience, death, and paſſion is our treaſure, which is reuealed and applied in the word of promiſe, and in the Sacraments; and this is that thing prepared of God for them that loue him, which eye hath not ſeene, eare hath not heard, neither euer entred into the heart of natural man to conceiue, 1. Cor. 2. 9. But why (will ſome ſay) ſhould Chriſt crucified be called our treaſure? Anſw. Becauſe hee is the fountaine and ſtore-houſe of all true bleſſings conuaied from God to man. Wouldeſt thou haue remiſſion of ſinne, and righteouſneſſe with God? why, Chriſt was made ſinne for vs, that wee might bee made the righteouſneſſe of God in him, 2. Cor. 5. 21. Wouldeſt thou haue life euerlaſting? This ſame Ieſus Chriſt is verie God, and life eternall, 1. Ioh. 5. And hee that hath him hath life, 1. Ioh. 5. 12. Wouldeſt thou haue comfort in diſtreſſe, and true delight in temporall bleſſings? then get Chriſt Ieſus, for he is life in death; and without him, the good things of this life be no bleſſings vnto vs.

How to lay vp Chriſt crucified for our treaſure.

II. Point. Hauing found what this treaſure is, let vs now ſee how euery one muſt lay it vp for himſelfe: for ſo Chriſt here commandeth, lay vp for your ſelues, &c. That wee may lay vp Chriſt crucified for our treaſure, wee muſt bee carefull to doe fiue things, intimated in the parable of him that bought the field wherein the hidden treaſure was: 1. we muſt finde this treaſure: 2. we muſt value it: 3. obtaine and get it: 4. aſſure it to our ſelues: 5. vſe it as a treaſure.

How to find the true treaſure.

I. Dutie. We muſt needes finde this treaſure firſt of all, elſe we cannot value it, nor obtaine it, we cannot aſſure it to our ſelues, nor vſe it: And thus much is implyed in that parable, where it is called an hidden treaſure; for we cannot haue a thing that is hid before wee finde it. Now the finding of this treaſure ſtands in Gods reuealing of it vnto vs, letting vs ſee that naturally we want it, and making vs feele that wee are poore without it, and therefore ſtand in great neede of it, whereupon we beginne to ſeeke it.

A twofold illumination.

Euery reuealing of this treaſure is not the finding of it, for God enlightens the minde of man two wayes: firſt, generally, whereby a man in reading the word is able to conceiue the true ſenſe and meaning of it. Secondly, more ſpecially, when beſide the generall ſenſe, God makes a man feele the truth and power of the word in his owne conſcience: and in this ſpeciall illumination ſtands the true finding. This indeede is a great bleſſing of God, but not common to all: for our naturall eyes cannot diſcerne it, and the more we are dazeled with the ſight of worldly treaſures, pompes, and vanities, the blinder we are about this ſpirituall treaſure; yea this treaſure is hid from many that are able to expound the word of God truely; as Chriſt ſaith, [a] theſe things are hidde (ſometimes) from the wiſe and prudent, and reuealed vnto babes: for till the Lord giue this ſpeciall illumination whereby a man ſees his owne miſerie in himſelfe, and his great neede of Chriſts righteouſnes, Chriſt is a hidden treaſure vnto him. In regard whereof we muſt deſcend into our own hearts, and there trie whether by the ſenſe of our owne miſerie in our ſelues, and our earneſt deſire and hungring after Chriſt, God hath reuealed this treaſure vnto vs, that we may ſay, [b] we

[b] Ioh.

A ſee, with the Iewes, and yet be blind, vnleſſe we truly feele the want of Chriſt in our own ſouls: oh therefore labour for this ſpeciall illumination: for the doctrine of the Goſpel will neuer be ſweete and pleaſant to vs, till wee finde this precious treaſure hid therein.

w to va- e the true ſure.

II. Dutie. Hauing found this treaſure, we muſt highly prize and value it, euen aboue all that we haue or can get; nay more worth then all the world beſides. So did the man in the parable, Mat. 13.44. eſteeme the treaſure hid in the field aboue all his goods: And [c] Paul ſo eſteemed of Chriſt crucified, that hee counted all things loſſe for the excellent knowledge ſake of Chriſt, and iudged them as doung that hee might winne Chriſt. B This high eſteeme of Chriſt is needfull, if euer we meane to lay him vp for our treaſure; and then haue we made good progreſſe in this heauenly purchaſe, when wee truely value Chriſt in our hearts at ſo high a rate: and therfore wee muſt endeauour our ſelues hereunto, and labour ſo to frame our whole conuerſation in ſpeeches and in action, that they may teſtifie at how high a rate we value Chriſt. And becauſe the word of God reueales Chriſt Ieſus vnto vs, in which regard it is [d] called a treaſure, therefore it alſo muſt be highly valued, euen aboue all earthly things. Thus Dauid did, Pſal. 119.72. The Lawe of thy mouth is better vnto me then thouſands of gold and ſiluer: verſ. 127. I loue thy commandements aboue gold, yea, aboue much fine gold: C hereof Wiſedome ſaith, [e] My fruite is better then gold, euen then much fine gold, and my reuenues better then fine ſiluer. It were happie for vs if wee did thus value the word of God. Many holde there is but one truth, and ſo that bee knowne it is no matter whence it is learned, whether out of Gods word, or the writings of men: but they are farre deceiued, for the Scriptures of God onely, are that truth which is according to godlineſſe; and they alone diſcouer vnto vs this heauenly treaſure, and therefore they muſt haue the preheminence in our hearts, and be eſteemed farre aboue all the writings of mē: which if we would doe, we ſhould feele that power and comfort of the word in our harts, which naturally we lack.

w to va- e the word f God.

w to get he true eaſure to ur ſelues.

D III. Dutie. Hauing found out and rightly valued this true treaſure, we muſt ſeeke to get it for our ſelues, and make it our owne: ſo did the man in the parable (Matth. 13.44.) when hee had found the treaſure hid in the field; and ſo Chriſt here commandeth, lay vp treaſures for your ſelues. Now that we may get this treaſure to our ſelues; we muſt conſcionably vſe ſuch meanes as God hath appointed for this purpoſe: to wit, I. heare the word of God preached with all reuerence, care, and diligence, labouring to mixe it with faith in our hearts: II. receiue the Sacraments with all reuerence and due preparation: III. pray to God in faith earneſtly and conſtantly for the pardon of our ſinnes, & the fruition of this treaſure. The reaſon hereof is plaine: for the word and Sacra- A mēts are as it were the Lords two hands, wherewith he reacheth out this heauenly treaſure & all ſpirituall bleſſings vnto vs; and our faith is the hand of our ſoule wherewith wee receiue thē, now by our prayers we teſtifie this faith, & ſanctifie vnto our ſelues the two former meanes.

How to make this treaſure ſure to our ſelues.

IV. Dutie. Hauing gotten this treaſure, we muſt labour to make it ſure vnto our ſelues. And to this purpoſe we muſt followe Pauls counſell and charge to rich men: 1. Tim. 6. 17, 18, 19. Charge the rich men in this world, that they bee not high minded, neither truſt in vncertaine riches, but in the liuing God: that they doe good and bee rich in good workes——: laying vp in ſtore for themſelues a good foundation againſt the time to come, that they may obtaine eternall life: B where marke how by truſting in God, and by liberalitie and bountie, we are exhorted to lay a good foundation. What (will ſome ſay) muſt we be ſaued by our Almes-deedes, and good works? Anſ. Not ſo: for the [f] ground of our ſaluation is Gods election and loue in Chriſt, which hee himſelfe hath laid vp in heauen for vs. But the foundatiō which we muſt lay vp for our ſelues, is in our owne conſcience, for our aſſurance in Gods foundation: and this we lay by our good workes of loue, mercie, and iuſtice; all which be fruits of faith: and beeing done in faith and with ſingleneſſe of heart to Gods glorie, they are ſure teſtimonies of our portion in the true treaſure Ieſus Chriſt: for hereby we knowe we are C tranſlated from death to life, becauſe wee loue the brethren. 1. Ioh. 3.14.

How to vſe Chriſt as our treaſure.

V. Dutie. Hauing got this treaſure ſure to our ſelues, we muſt vſe it as a treaſure. Hereunto three duties are required: 1 I. We muſt haue our conuerſation in heauen, for there Chriſt our treaſure is: and where our treaſure is, there will our hearts bee: and if our hearts be on Chriſt in deſire, in ioy, and delight, it cannot be but our liues will be holy and heauenly, though our bodies bee here on earth: but let vs beware that our affections be not ſet on things belowe, for then is not Chriſt our treaſure at all. 2 II. We muſt turne our earthly goods into heauenly treaſures. This we doe by employing them in works of mercie, for hee that giues vnto the D poore, lends vnto the Lord, Prou. 19.17. ſo that the mercifull man hath the Lord for his debter: for the Lord ſends the poore mā as his meſſenger vnto the rich, to borrow of him ſuch things as the poore man lacketh; and the Lords returne of paiement is in heauenly bleſſings: and therefore Chriſt himſelfe as it were explaning this point, [g] bids, ſell that yee haue, and giue almes: make you bagges which waxe not old, a treaſure that cannot faile in heauen, where no theefe commeth, neither moth corrupteth: This then is the Lords owne direction, for this happie exchange of earthly goods for heauenly treaſures, then which, who can wiſh a better increaſe. 3 III. We muſt rather part with all that wee haue, then with Chriſt Ieſus; friends, goods, countrey, libertie, nay our owne life, and deereſt hearts blood muſt all go for this treaſures ſake: ſo doth the good purchaſer part with all he hath to buy the field in which this treaſure is, Matth. 13.44. but if we will rather part with Chriſt then with ſome or with all of theſe, then we vſe not Chriſt as the the true treaſure. Thus we ſee how Chriſt becomes our treaſure; let vs therefore make conſcience to practiſe theſe fiue duties ſo long as we liue: for when Chriſt becomes our treaſure marke what will follow; we ſhall finde in our hearts ſuch ſweet content therein, that neither proſperitie ſhall lift vs vp too high, nor aduerſitie caſt vs downe too lowe; nothing ſhall daunt vs while we haue this treaſure ſure; no kind of death, no not the day of iudgement.

Thus much of the commandement, nowe followeth the particular reaſon thereof: where neither moth nor canker corrupteth, &c. This reaſon is drawne from the vnchangeable certaintie and ſafetie of this treaſure: earthly treaſures are ſubiect to corruption, & to loſſe by ſtealth; but this heauenly treaſure is free from all ſuch things, for the higheſt heauen is not ſubiect to corruption, nor to the violence of theeues and robbers; and therefore our treaſure muſt be there. Queſt. Why ſhould the higheſt heauens be free from that vanity, whereto all creatures els are ſubiect by the ſinne of man? Anſ. The heauens aboue which we looke vpon, and the earth below, with all creatures in them, belonged to man by the right of creation, but the higheſt heauen is the throne of God: Now when man fell, he was puniſhed not onely in his owne perſon, but in all the creatures that belonged vnto him, which by his ſinne were made ſubiect to vanitie: But the higheſt heauen was free from that curſe, becauſe it did not belong to man by the right of creation, but is a ſupernaturall gift, whereto wee haue right & title onely by the grace of Adoption and redemption in Chriſt Ieſus: now ſith man had no right thereto by creation, it was not meete that the ſinne of man ſhould make it ſubiect to vanitie, or corruption. If therefore the ſafetie of an enduring ſubſtance can allure our hearts to loue and like, then let vs ſet our ſelues for this heauenly treaſure.

How the higheſt heauen is free from vanitie.

v. 21. For where your treaſure is, there will your heart bee alſo.

This verſe containes a reaſon of the former commandements, cōmon to thē both; tending to perſwade vs to the obedience of them both. The reaſon ſtandeth thus; Where your treaſure is, there will your hearts be alſo: But your hearts ſhould not be on earth, but in heauen: Therefore lay not vp treaſures vpon earth, but in heauen.

The expoſition. By treaſure (as we ſaid before) muſt be vnderſtood things pretious and excellent in our eſtimation laid vp for time to come, wherein we repoſe our truſt, and take a ſpeciall ioy and delight. By heart we muſt conceiue, not onely the affections which are ſeated in the heart, as loue, ioy, care, deſire, and delight; but the more inward powers of the ſoule in thought and imagination; yea and the effects hereof in action, as labour, ſtudie, and endeauour: As if he ſhould ſay; your treaſure and your heart are ioyned together, looke where that thing is wherein you truſt and take chiefe delight, and thereon wil your thoughts runne; your loue, feare, deſire, and care will draw vnto it; and your chiefeſt paines, ſtudie, and endeauour will be after it.

The vſe. Doe heart and treaſure goe together? Then here firſt wee learne to ſearch out and trie the ſtate of our owne hearts: for though it be a bottomleſſe gulfe, [h] and deceitful aboue all things, ſo as none can thoroughly knowe it, yet if we apply this ſentence aright vnto our ſelues, we ſhall be able to giue true iudgement of the ſtate of our owne heart. An earthly treaſure, and an earthly heart; but heauenly treaſure, and an heauenly heart; theſe cannot bee ſeuered: therefore looke whereon thou ſpendeſt thy thoughts, and ſetteſt thy loue, thy care and delight, and beſtoweſt thy wit, induſtrie, and labour, and thereby iudge of the diſpoſition of thy heart. If the thing bee earthly and worldly, then thy heart is earthly and carnall: thou maiſt plead that thou heareſt the word, receiueſt the Sacraments and prayeſt often; yet all this will not prooue thee to haue Chriſt Ieſus for thy treaſure: for thine heart being ſet vpon the world, there vndoubtedly thy treaſure is, and that prooues thy heart to bee earthly and carnall. And on the contrarie, if thy principall thoughts, thy cheife loue, ioy, and delight be one Chriſt crucified, and thy ſpeciall care and induſtry be after his merits & righteouſnes, then is Chriſt thy treaſure, and thine heart is heauenly.

[h] Ier.17.9.

How to trie the ſtate of our owne heart.

Secondly, hereby wee may know whether we haue any portion in heauen: for look where our heart is there our portion is: If our heart in thoughts, deſire, and induſtrie, be ſet on earthly things, then is our portion vpon earth: but if we minde heauenly things, if wee delight in them, and labour after them, then is our portion in heauen. It is not the exerciſe of religious actions now & then, but the ſetling of the hart either on earth or heauen, that ſhewes where our portion is.

The knowledge of our title to heauen.

Thirdly, this coupling of the heart and treaſure together, teacheth vs not to regard this world nor temporall life, in reſpect of heauen and life eternal; nay, in this regard we muſt deſpiſe the world and temporall life; ſo far forth as it may be done without ingratitude to God, and without hatred of the worke of his hands, and of his temporall bleſſings: for as earthly creatures, are the workemanſhip of God, ſo temporall life is his good bleſſing, giuen vs as a time wherein wee are to prepare our ſelues for life eternall; and therefore ſimply wee may not deſpiſe it, but onely in reſpect of life eternall. Now we muſt ſhew this high reſpect to heauen and to life eternall, aboue that we haue to this world and temporall life, by heauenly meditations, and by ſpiritual deſires, ioy, and delight: for if heauen be our treaſure, then muſt our delight be drawne from worldly things, and ſet on heauen.

V. 22. The light of the bodie is the eye: if the eye be ſingle, thy whole bodie ſhall be light:

23. But if thine eye be wicked, then all thy bodie ſhall be darke. Wherefore if the light that is in thee be darknes, how great is that darkenes?

These two verſes haue ſundrie expoſitions, which we muſt diſcuſſe, before we can ſee the ſcope and coherence of them in this place. Of ſundrie which I take to miſſe the right ſcope of Chriſt in this place, I will onely touch one, which is the moſt probable: and then ſet down that which I take to be the beſt. By ſingle eye, ſome vnderſtand a liberall minde: and by the wicked eye, an enuious and couetous minde: and ſo they make Chriſt here to ſpeake of liberalitie and couetouſneſſe. Now it is true that the words will beare this ſenſe, for Salomon puts the good eye, for the liberall and mercifull perſon: Prou. 22. 9. Hee that hath the good eye, he ſhall be bleſſed: for he giueth of his bread vnto the poore: and the euill eye, for the couetous perſon: Prou. 28. 22. A man of a wicked eye haſteth vnto riches. But though the words will beare this interpretation, yet it is not (as I take it) the proper meaning of Chriſt in this place: for here, the light of the bodie, the ſingle eye, and the light that is in vs, be all put for one and the ſame thing. Now the light that is in vs, is the vnderſtanding and iudgement of the minde. Again, the eye is here called the light of the whole bodie: but the liberall minde cannot be the light of the whole body for all actions, but for works of mercie and bountie.

The true meaning.

To come therefore to that which I take to be Chriſts true meaning: The words containe in them diuers ſimilitudes. In the firſt words, The light of the bodie is the eye, is a parable taken from a candle in an houſe; for as a burning candle ſet vp in an houſe, lighteth the houſe & all that be in it; ſo the light of the eye, (which is the vnderſtanding) lighteth the whole body, and giueth direction to the whole man, in all his actions. In the next words, If thine eye be ſingle, &c. to the ende of the 23. v. is a ſecond ſimilitude, which ſtandeth thus: If a man haue a good and cleare bodily eye, hee can guide himſelfe in the right way, and keepe his feete from ſtumbling and from falling: but if his eye be dimme and darke, then hee cannot walke without ſtumbling: and if he want an eye, or that his eye be ſtarke blind, then of himſelfe he cannot walke without ſtumbling and wandering: ſo in like manner, if the vnderſtanding which is the eye of the minde, be ſound and cleare, able to iudge of good and euill, then is the whole life well ordered: but if the iudgement be corrupt, then is there much diſorder in the life: and if it be cleane put out, then is there nothing but brutiſh confuſion.

The ſingle eye.

Thus ſtand the compariſons in theſe words: Now the meaning of them is this. The firſt words are plaine, The light of the bodie is the eye, that is, the eye giues light for the direction of the bodie; as a light in an houſe directs the houſholders in their affairs. If thine eye be ſingle &c. By eye here is meant the minde, reſembled by the bodily eye: and the ſingle eye is the vnderſtanding minde, able to iudge of good and euill, of things to be done, and not to be done; Thy whole bodie ſhall be light: by bodie is meant, the life, and by light is meant, well ordered and directed: for the minde is to the life for the directing of it, that which the eye is to the bodie for the ordering thereof. But if thine eye be wicked, &c. The wicked eye is the corrupt minde, hauing the vnderſtanding darkned, and iudgement ſo depraued, that it cannot rightly diſcerne of good and euill, what is to be done, and what is left to be vndone. Then all thy bodie ſhall be darke: that is, thy whole life in all thine actions ſhall be full of ſinne and diſorder. Wherefore if the light that is in thee be darkeneſſe; that is, if the naturall light of reaſon and iudgement left in man after the fall, be quite extinguiſhed. How great is that darkeneſſe? that is, wonderfull ſhall his corruption and diſorder be; yea ſo full of confuſion, that there ſhall be no difference betweene his life and the life of a bruit beaſt. And this I take to be Chriſts proper meaning.

The coherence.

Now the words thus explaned, depend vpon the former as an anſwer to a ſecret obiection, which the heart of man might frame vnto it ſelfe, againſt thoſe two commandements, to this effect: If there be ſuch neceſſitie of laying vp treaſures in heauen, and of auoiding to lay vp treaſures in earth, then why doe not the moſt wiſe and learned men of our time doe ſo: for they ſeeke more for earthly treaſures then for heauenly? Hereto Chriſt anſwers thus, as if he had ſaid; maruell not at this, for they want the ſingle eye, the vnderſtanding minde to diſcerne of things that differ, they cannot iudge aright of the true treaſure, and ſo not knowing the heauenly, they ſeeke the earthly treaſure onely. Now that wee may perceiue the words of Chriſt thus to anſwer the former obiection, we muſt know that Chriſt doth here preſuppoſe thus much; that euery mans eye is either ſingle, corrupt, or blind; and the ſingle eye which is a good vnderſtanding, befalls not all men, no not all wiſe and learned men, but them only to whome God in mercie giues it. But the corrupt eye befalls euery man naturally. And ſome by ſinne put out the light of nature, and ſo become ſenſeleſſe in ſpirituall things. And hence it is, then all men naturally wanting the ſingle eye, and hauing the corrupt eye, yea many hauing the blind eye, doe not diſcerne of the true treaſure, and ſo leaue the heauenly, and giue themſelues wholy to the earthly.

Thus we ſee both the meaning and the coherence, leading vs to the maine cauſe of couetouſnes, with the blind eye of the minde not able to diſcerne of true ſpirituall treaſure. Now in the words theſe three points are to be handled: I. The ſingle eye with the fruits thereof: II. The wicked eye with his fruits. III. The darke and blind eye with the fruits thereof.

The ſingle eye.

What is true heauenly wiſdome.

I. Point. The ſingle eye is the minde of man indued with ſome portion of true heauenly wiſdome; and the fruits of it, is to giue the bodie light. To know the ſingle eye the better, we muſt ſearch out what true wiſedome is. This true heauenly wiſedome is no common gift, which euery profeſſor may haue, but a ſpeciall gift of God in Chriſt, peculiar to them that do truely beleeue in him. 1. Cor. 1. 30. Chriſt is made wiſdome vnto vs of God; not only becauſe he is the matter of our wiſedome, we beeing then onely truely wiſe, when we know Chriſt and him crucified; but alſo becauſe hee is the roote from whence all our wiſedome ſprings: for being ingraffed into Chriſt by faith, we become, as it were, [a] fleſh of his fleſh, and bone of his bones, and ſo are not onely made iuſt by the imputation of his obedience, but doe alſo receiue inherent holines and wiſdome from him; our wiſedome and holineſſe beeing deriued from his, as the branch is from the ſtocke, and the fruit from the roote. And this wiſdome befalls not at all to the Deuill and his Angels, though they know much, nor to all that are Chriſtians in name: but onely to the members of his myſticall bodie by faith.

a Eph.5.30.

The actions of true wiſdome.

1

This heauenly wiſdome hath two actions: Firſt, to diſcerne aright of things that differ, and to diſtinguiſh one thing from another ſpiritually; this Paul praied for in the behalfe of the Philippians, Phil. 1. 9. that their loue might abound more and more in knowledge, and in all iudgement or [b] ſenſe, that ſo they might diſcerne things that differ: that is, good from euill, and heauenly from earthly; what to doe, and what to leaue vndone, which is a propertie of men of age in religion, who through long cuſtom attaine hereunto, Heb. 5. 14. And hence it is that the child of God can I. diſcerne the voice of Chriſt, the true ſhepheard, from the voice of all falſe teachers. II. By this gift of diſcerning, hee can put a difference betweene the water of Baptiſme, and all other water; and betweene the bread and wine in the Lords table, and common bread and wine. III. Hereby the Church, and euery true member of it is enabled to iudge rightly of croſſes, diſtinguiſhing fatherly chaſtiſements, from Gods plagues and curſes for ſinne. IV. Hereby hee can diſcerne the things of God, euen his owne election, his vocation, adoption, and iuſtification: theſe and ſuch he can perceiue in himſelfe more or leſſe. V. In a word, hereby he can diſcerne the true treaſure, from worldly; hereby he knowes the excellencie of heauenly things, aboue earthly. Theſe things the naturall man cannot; but the ſpirituall man diſcerneth all things, 1. Cor. 2. 15. looke whatſoeuer befalls him, therein he can ſee the hand of God working for his good; therein he can diſcerne Gods wiſdome, power, and prouidence: in all which we may perceiue the moſt excellent vſe of this heauenly wiſdom.

2. action of true wiſdom.

The ſecond action of this heauenly wiſedome, is to iudge, determine, and giue ſentence of things, what is to be done, what is not to be done; what is good, and what is euill in practiſe and behauiour. And here this one thing muſt be remembred, that the principall point of this wiſedome, is to determine of true happineſſe, whereto the whole life of man ought to be directed: which happineſſe, is the loue and fauour of God in Chriſt. Herein Dauid ſhewes his heauenly wiſedome, farre differerent from the wiſdome of the world, Pſal. 4. 6. Many ſay, who will ſhew vs any good? there is the worldlings happineſſe; But Lord lift thou vp the light of thy countenance vpon vs; there is true happineſſe: ſo Paul comming among the wiſeſt of the Gentiles, profeſſeth, that hee eſteemed to knowe nothing but Chriſt, and him crucified: 1. Cor. 2. 2. for whoſe excellent knowledge ſake, he thought all things to be loſſe, Phil. 3. 8. And the ſame ſhould be our wiſedome; for though a man had all humane learning and policie, yet if hee faile in this, rightly to determine of true happineſſe, all his wiſedome would prooue fooliſhneſſe; for [c] the wiſedome of this world is fooliſhneſſe with God: and therefore if any man ſeeme to be wiſe in this world, let him be a foole, that he may be wiſe; that is, a foole to the world, in eſteeming the knowledge of Chriſt crucified onely true wiſdome; and the fauour of God in him, true happineſſe; that ſo hee may be wiſe indeede in the ſight of God. Another chiefe part of this heauenly wiſedome, is a ſpirituall and godly prouidence, whereby we forecaſt by all meanes how to compaſſe and come by true happineſſe: herein the power of heauenly wiſdome is ſhewed. And without this, though otherwiſe a man diſcerne the right, yet his knowledge and wiſedome is imperfect and vnprofitable. And thus we ſee the actions of this heauenly wiſedome, whereby we may deſcribe it thus: It is a gift of Gods ſpirit to them that are in Chriſt, whereby they are enabled to diſcerne of things that differ, and to iudge and determine what is that true happineſſe, whereto the life of man ought to tende: and withall to forecaſt and prouide by what good and lawfull meanes it may be compaſſed. And he whoſe minde is endued herewith in ſome meaſure, hath the ſingle eye.

It is true wiſdome to diſcerne of true happines.

Spirituall prouidence.

True wiſdom deſcribed.

The fruit of the ſingle eye.

Now the fruit of this ſingle eye is, to make the whole bodie light; that is, to bring the whole life in good order, guiding it in the paths of righteouſnes, and making it to abound in good works, Prov. 8. 19. 20. My fruit (ſaith wiſdome) is better then fine gold: I cauſe to walke in the way of righteouſneſſe, and in the midſt of the paths of iudgement. Prov. 16. 23. The wiſe heart guideth the mouth wiſely, and addeth doctrine vnto his lips.

We muſt labour to get heauenly wiſdome.

The vſe. 1. Conſidering the mind indued with this wiſdom is thus commended, we muſt hereby learne, to labour for it in a ſpeciall manner: beſide this commendation of it by our Sauiour Chriſt, which ſhould be a ſpurre to prouoke vs to this dutie, the ſingular commoditie that redounds hereby to ſoule and bodie muſt moue vs to affect it. Now that we may the better obtaine this heauenly wiſdome, we muſt be carefull of theſe two things eſpecially. First, to get the feare of God into our hearts, which is the beginning of this heauenly wiſdome, Pſal. 111. 10. Now this feare of God, is a reuerend awe of the heart towards God, whereby a man is fearfull to offend, and carefull to pleaſe God in all things. And this ſhall we get, if we receiue the word of God with reuerence, and applie it to our owne ſoules when we haue it, trembling thereat when it toucheth our conſciences, and humbly ſubmitting our ſelues vnto it without raging or repining; ſaying as Hezekiah did to the Prophets reproofe, d The word of the Lord is good. Secondly, we muſt wholly cloſe vp our eyes, (the eyes of our minde I meane) & ſuffer our ſelues in all things to be ouerruled and ordered by the written word of God. This was e Dauids practiſe; he gaue himſelfe to continuall meditation in the word of God; hee made it a f lanterne to his feete, and a light vnto his paths. And hereby hee became g wiſer than his enemies and got more vnderſtanding then all his teachers. Wouldeſt thou then be truly wiſe? become a foole to the world, leane not to thine owne wiſedome; but make Gods word thy whole direction.

How it is gotten.

Secondly, hereby we are taught to walke wiſely in our whole conuerſation, that ſo it may appeare we haue this ſingle eye: hereto h Paul oft exhorteth vs. And thus we walke when we practiſe euery action of our life in wiſdome, according to theſe foure rules, which are to be obſerued in euery good action. I. The thing we doe muſt be iuſt. II. The meanes of effecting it muſt alſo be iuſt. III. We muſt keepe our ſelues therein, within the compaſſe and limits of our calling. IIII. We muſt doe the thing with an honeſt, vpright, and ſingle heart. And that we may worke wiſely according to theſe foure rules, we muſt euer haue the word of God, to tell vs what is iuſt, what meanes be iuſt, what be the precincts of our calling; and when we worke with an vpright and ſingle heart: ſo doing, our works ſhall be in wiſdome, and we ſhall haue the approbation and praiſe of God.

h Col. 4. 5. Eph. 5. 15. How to walke wiſely.

How to ſeaſon naturall wiſdome.

Thirdly, ſeeing this ſingle eye of ſpirituall wiſdome, makes our life to ſhine with righteouſneſſe, we muſt learne to ſeaſon our naturall wit, with this ſpirituall wiſdome. Naturall wiſdome is a commendable gift of God, but without this ſpirituall wiſdome it is fooliſhneſſe in the things of God, yea very corrupt in naturall actions; and therefore we muſt ioyne therewith this heauenly wiſdome, which may ſeaſon it and make it holy; and ſo ſhall the vſe of it tend to Gods glorie. It is the miſerie of this age, that men of excellent parts for naturall wiſdome, haue no regard to ſeaſon the ſame with ſpirituall wiſdome; hereby come many aberrations in matters of great importance, for it is iuſtice with God to curſe their proceedings, that deſpiſing the heauenly, leane altogether to their owne wiſdome.

The practiſe of ſpirituall prouidence.

Fourthly, ſeeing ſpirituall prouidence in forecaſting how to compaſſe true happineſſe, is a ſpeciall part of true heauenly wiſdome; we muſt become carefull practitioners hereof in our liues, that ſo we may attaine to true happineſſe. When the i rich mans ground brought forth much fruit, how prouident was hee to lay vp ſtore for the time to come: yet God calls him but a foole, becauſe he had no regard or forecaſt to the ſtate of his ſoule. And the fiue virgins are therefore called k fooliſh, becauſe they contented themſelues with blazing lampes, and had no forecaſt for oyle in their veſſells: and ſo many at this day content themſelues with an outward profeſſion, and doe not prouide for the graces of ſaluation. But though a man had all the wiſdome of the world, and by his witte could compaſſe vpon earth what his heart could wiſh, yet if he faile in prouiding for true happineſſe, all his wiſdome is but madneſſe: ſee this in l Achitophel, whoſe counſell for worldly things was like the oracle of God, yet wanting this ſpirituall wiſdome to forecaſt for true happineſſe to his ſoule, his ende was both ſhamefull and fearefull: m for in a diſcontent, hee went and hanged himſelfe. Let vs therefore practiſe this wiſe forecaſt for true happineſſe, and neuer be well till we get aſſurance hereof; then doe we ſhew our ſelues truely wiſe. If we faile in this, we faile in all; and therefore like the wiſe Virgins, let vs get oyle in our veſſels, the ſauing graces of Gods ſpirit into our hearts, that when our bridegroome Ieſus Chriſt ſhall come, we may enter with him into glorie. And thus much of the ſingle eye, with the fruits thereof.

The wicked eye with the fruits thereof.

The ſecond point to be handled, is the wicked eye, with the fruits thereof, in theſe words, But if thine eye be wicked, thy whole bodie ſhall be darke. This wicked eye, is the minde of man hauing ſome light of vnderſtanding in it by nature, yet maruelouſly blinded and darkened by the corruption of ſinne through Adams fall.

The corruption of the minde by Adams fall.

And for our better inſtruction herein, we muſt know, that the minde of man by Adams fall receiues a twofold blemiſh: firſt, it hath loſt the gift of diſcerning & iudging in ſpiritual things miſtaking euill for good, earthly for heauenly, things to be refuſed, for things to be choſen. This is plaine by our blindneſſe and ignorance in the true knowledge of God, & of our ſelues.

Mans ignorance touching God.

Firſt, touching God, howſoeuer the minde of man by nature know there is a God, yet naturally man will not acknowledge the preſence of God, for if he did, he would not without remorſe or feare commit thoſe ſinnes in Gods ſight, which he is afraid and aſhamed to doe in the ſight of many men. 2 Againe, the minde by nature will not acknowledge Gods particular prouidence; for in the time of want or diſtreſſe when means faile, his heart is dead within him: and the promiſe of helpe from man doth more cheere him, then his hope in God; which ſhewes plainely that he truſteth more in the creature, then in his creatour. 3 Thirdly, the minde of man by nature doth not acknowledge Gods iuſtice, for naturally man thinkes, that though he ſinne, yet he ſhall ſcape puniſhment, as Deut. 26.16. 4 Fourthly, though man know God muſt be worſhipped, yet naturally the minde diſcerneth not of Gods right worſhip; herein the fooliſh heart is full of darkeneſſe, and turneth God into an Idol, Rom. 1. 21 23. And in a word, the naturall man perceiueth not the things of God, neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned, 1 Cor. 2.14. which ſhewes plainely that herein he hath a wicked eye.

2 The blindnes of mans mind in the knowledge of himſelfe.

a Rom.1.22.

Secondly, for our ſelues, the minde herein wants the gift of diſcerning: for, I. no man naturally knowes the blindneſſe of his owne minde, a they thinke themſelues to be wiſe, when in the things of God they be ſtarke fooles: II. man cannot diſcerne aright of his owne ſinne, nor ſee the vileneſſe of them naturally, though his conſcience oft accuſe him; for if he did, he would not ſinne as he doth: III. man naturally doth iudge amiſſe of his owne frailtie and mortalitie, for there is no man ſo aged, but hee thinkes he may liue longer. This Moſes ſaw when b hee prayed God to teach them ſo to number their daies, that they might applie their hearts vnto wiſdome. IV. Naturally men cannot diſcerne aright of the ſcope and ende of their liues: for whereas we ought to aime at the glorie of God and the good of our brethren, to ſerue God in doing good; by nature we little thinke on this, but wholly ſeeke our owne good, and our own praiſe. V. We cannot naturally diſcerne of our owne true happineſſe: for doe we not meaſure it by outward things? eſteeming the rich and honourable happie, and the poore man miſerable? By all which it is more then euident, that the minde hath loſt the gift of right diſcerning.

b Pſal.90.12.

II. Blemiſh of the mind by nature.

The ſecond blemiſh of corruption in the minde is, in reſpect of it ſlauiſh ſubiection vnto thoſe things which it ſhould rule and direct; A for naturally it is ſubiect to theſe three vnmeet guides: I. to the corrupt will and affections: II. to the wicked temptations of the deuill caſt into it, yea and that ſo farre, that ſuch as the temptation is, ſuch is the mind that is tempted: III. to the world, and the ill examples therein: for naturally men ſway with the times, and thinke the common courſe the ſafeſt. And in this reſpect alſo is it here called a wicked eie.

The fruit of a wicked eye.

Now the fruit of it is, to make the whole bodie darke; that is, the whole life of man full of diſorder and vnrighteouſnes. And how ſhould it be otherwiſe, whe̅ that which ſhould diſcerne betweene good and euil, and direct accordingly, is diſabled thereunto.

The vſe. I. Seeing by nature we haue this B euill eye (for that Chriſt taketh granted) we muſt labour diligently to diſcerne it in our ſelues, and to finde that naturally we cannot iudge aright of God and of our ſelues. This is the firſt ſtep to true knowledg, to diſcerne of our owne naturall blindnes; and till we perceiue it in our ſelues in ſome meaſure, we know nothing as we ought to know. Alſo whe̅ we ſee it, we muſt bewaile our miſerie in this behalfe, that we haue a minde ſo corrupt, that it cauſeth diſorder in our whole life; yea, we muſt tremble and feare at this wicked eye. Bodily darkenes cauſeth feare, but farre more dangerous is this ſpirituall darkeneſſe, for hereby the ſoule is kept from the ſight of God vnder the power of Satan. We therefore diſcerning in C our ſelues this wicked eye, muſt follow the counſell of our Sauiour Chriſt, Reuel. 3. 18. Buy of mee eye ſalue, that thou maieſt ſee: that is, we muſt get of him the inlightning of his ſpirit, in the holy miniſterie of his word; for this is that anointing which teacheth vs all things, 1. Ioh. 2. 27. which when we doe truly receiue, then doth our wicked eye become ſingle.

Secondly, hereby we ſee that the courſe of the world, in regard of the ſtate of their minds, is iuſtly to be reproued; for euery where both young and old content themſelues with this wicked eie: if they can ſay, there is a God, and this God is to be worſhipped, to be loued, and feared, and that we muſt loue our neighbour as our ſelues, and liue well, they ſeeke no further: D and yet if a man were brought vp in the wilderneſſe, hee might ſee all this by the light of nature; the wicked eye ſeeth thus much: but we muſt not content our ſelues herewith, for if there be no more, the life is full of darkneſſe ſtill; and the ſoule may goe to vtter darkneſſe with all this. We therefore muſt remember to get the ſingle eye, elſe we are no ſchollers in the ſchoole of Chriſt. Indeede ſome pleade, that Preachers can ſay no more in effect but this, Loue God aboue all, and thy neighbour as thy ſelfe; but theſe men know not what they ſay, bleſſing themſelues in their ignorance: they muſt know that grace muſt be put to nature, and ſanctifie it; and ſpirituall knowledge ioyned with naturall, or elſe we [illegible] with the wicked eye. If we haue no more but a generall confuſed knowledge in morall points, that ſerues not to ſaue vs, but to make vs without excuſe at the laſt day. Againe, another common faile worthy reproofe is this, that men content themſelues with naturall reformation; they will graunt that God is to be worſhipped, and loued, that we muſt liue well, deale iuſtly, and loue our neighbours: but the blind eye ſeeth thus much. The meere ciuill man wil goe thus farre, and yet his life is nothing but darkenes: all this reformation is but naturall. We therefore muſt labour for renued hearts, by the ſpirit of God, and reformed liues according to the Goſpel; for howſoeuer a ciuill conuerſation may commend vs vnto men, yet it will not ſaue vs in the day of the Lord.

Be not ſelfe wiſe in the matters of ſaluation.

Thirdly, is this euill eye in euery one by nature? then beware we be not wiſe in our ſelues, and from our ſelues, in matters of ſaluation; herein the word of God muſt be our wiſedom: Deut. 12.8.--11.-- Yee ſhall not doe euery man that which ſeemeth good in his owne eyes---but that which I command you. Farre be it therefore from vs to appoint to our ſelues, how we will worſhip God, or how we will be ſaued: & yet ſuch is our blind preſumption, that we wil be our owne maſters in theſe things. The Turke hath his religion, the Iewe his, and the Papiſt his, all ſwaruing from the truth of God: & yet euery one of theſe look to be ſaued in their religion: each one of theſe haue a different manner of worſhipping God, & all ſwaruing from the true worſhip: and yet they all perſwade themſelues that God is well pleaſed with their ſeruice. And thus it goes with naturall men among vs, though otherwiſe ſufficietly wiſe for worldly things; they reſolue vpon their owne courſe for the ſaluation of their ſoules, let the preacher ſay what he will: ſome thinke, if they repent at their ende, and then commend their ſoules to God, it is ſufficient; others looke to be ſaued by their wel-doing, and others by their faith (as they call it:) but in truth, by their owne good meaning, and intent to liue well; for what faith haue they that know not Gods word and promiſes? Thus by their owne wiſdome will men be ſaued, and hereby the deuill deſtroies many a ſoule: but let God be wiſe and euery man a foole, and let vs ſubmit our ſelues in the things of God, wholly to be ruled and guided by his written word, leaſt Iewiſhly and Popiſhly, we going about to ſtabliſh our owne conceits in the matters of ſaluation, doe plunge our ſoules into the pit of deſtruction.

The eye of faith muſt be ſought.

Fourthly, is the eye of the minde naturally corrupt? then muſt we labour for a better eye; that is, the eye of faith, by which we relie on Gods mercie for our ſaluation, and on his prouidence for all needfull things in life & death. This eye makes ſupplie to that which is wanting to naturall knowledge; hereby we diſcern rightly of God, and of our ſelues; this enables vs to ſee a farre off: yea, hereby we ſee things inuiſible, for it is the euidence of things which are not ſeene, Heb. 11. 1. hereby Abraham ſaw the day of Chriſt, and was glad, Ioh. 8. 56. and all the Patriarkes ſaw the promiſe of God a farre off, Heb. 11. 13. This will inable vs to walke in their ſteps towards the heauenly citie; & therefore let vs get this faith, that ſo becomming children of the promiſe, we may be counted for the ſeede. And thus much for the wicked eye.

3. The blind eye.

The third kind of eye, is the blind eye, which is ſet out with the fruits therof, in theſe words, wherefore, if the light that is in thee be darkeneſſe, how great is that darkeneſſe? For the better diſcerning of the ſtate of man with this blind eye, we muſt ſee what is meant by light, and alſo by darkeneſſe. By light is meant that knowledge of God, of iuſtice, and of good & euill, which is in the minde by nature: now though this cannot be quite put out (for the moſt wicked wretch, and the veriest Atheiſt that liues, hath ſome conſcience remaining, which is a worke of this light) yet it may be ſo buried and couered, that no light ſhal appeare, nor any vſe be made of it, and then is it ſaid to be darkenes, which is the ſtate of thoſe that are giuen vp to a reprobate ſenſe, as when a man denies there is a God, or that the Scriptures be the word of God, or ſuch like; in theſe men naturall light is become darkeneſſe. And the cauſe of this change in them, is their corrupt will and rebellious affections, which outruling naturall knowledge and conſcience, cauſe men to giue themſelues to actuall ſinnes, whereby at length they come to commit ſinne greedily and without remorſe, yea, euen againſt conſcience, and the light of nature, and ſo bury them both in ſuch ſort, that they haue no more vſe of them, then if they were quite put out. 1

The fruit of the blind eie

Now where the light of nature is thus put out, the fruit of it is moſt palpable darkeneſſe; How great is that darkeneſſe? that is, there is nothing in that mans life, but brutiſh confuſion in helliſh actions, of pride, couetouſneſſe, enuie, blaſphemie, and vnnaturall vncleanneſſe; as Rom. 1. 27. 29. &c.

A motiue to conſider our natural vileneſſe.

The vſe. Conſidering the light of nature may be thus put out, we muſt hereby be admoniſhed, Firſt, to enter into a ſerious conſideration of our owne vileneſſe; for naturally we haue in vs (euen the beſt of vs all) ſuch rebellious luſt, and damnable deſires, as vnleſſe they be reſtrained, or renewed by grace, wil darken, and as good as put out the light of nature. This ſhould make vs vile in our own eyes, that nouriſh ſuch corruptions, and eſteeme ſo of ſinne, which will put out that light which yet Adams fall left in vs.

To mortifie corrupt deſires.

Secondly, hereby we are admoniſhed to haue ſpeciall care to mortifie our corrupt deſires, and our vnruly affections, that els will extinguiſh in vs the light of nature. Before the fall, the mind ruled & directed the wil and affections; but now theſe inferiour powers rule, or rather ouerrule the minde, and vtterly peruert the regiment thereof: they caſt a miſte, and a vaile ouer the eye of the minde that it can ſee nothing in the waies of righteouſneſſe: and therefore as we tender the ſaluation of our ſoules, we muſt renounce our owne naturall wills and corrupt deſires, and ſtriue to bring them into ſubiection vnto the word of God. Many men thinke much to be croſſed of their naturall deſires and delights, but it is happie for the ſoule, when God in his prouidence doth breake men of their wills: for the will vnſubdued caries the whole man headlong into all diſorder. This muſt be conſidered of them which haue knowledge and learning, for vnleſſe the will and affections be ruled by the word, all knowledge is made fruitleſſe: out of the heart (ſaith [a] Salomon) come the iſſues of life, if it be kept with watch and ward, and ordered by Gods word; otherwiſe hence come the iſſues of death, when the raines of the affections are let looſe after the corrupt deſires of nature: & therefore as we reſpect woe or ioy ſo muſt we haue regard to our wil and deſires.

[a] Prou.4.23.

The illumination of the Goſpel may be put out.

Thirdly, if the light of nature may be turned into darkeneſſe, then may the illumination of the Goſpel be put out and turned in darkenes; for the knowledg of the Goſpel is not naturall, and therefore not ſo deepely imprinted in the vnderſtanding, vpon the bare knowledge of it. Experience ſheweth this to be true, in all thoſe temporizers which begin in the ſpirit, and end in the fleſh: and the author to the Hebrewes ſhewes fiue degrees of apoſtacie, by which the illumination of the Goſpel is turned into darkeneſſe, Heb. 3. 12. ſaying, Take heed leaſt there be in any of you an euill heart of vnbeleefe, &c.
1 where the firſt degree, is conſenting vnto ſinne beeing deceiued with the temptation of it.
2 The ſecond is, hardneſſe of heart, vpon many 3 practiſes of ſinne. Thirdly, the heart beeing hardened, becomes vnbeleeuing, and calls the 4 truth of the Goſpel into queſtion. Fourthly, by vnbeleeuing it becomes euill, hauing a baſe 5 conceit of the Goſpel. Fiftly, this euill heart brings a man to apoſtacie, and falling from God, which is the extinguiſhing of the light of the Goſpel. We therefore to preuent this fearefull eſtate, muſt embrace the Goſpel, and practiſe the counſell there ſet downe; euen by looking carefully euery one to his owne heart and life, and by mutual admonition and exhortation one of another, verſ. 13. that ſo the firſt ſtep of this apoſtacie, which is the deceitfulneſſe of ſinne, take no place in vs.

Fiue degrees of apoſtacie.

Sauing grace can not be loſt.

Fourthly, ſeeing the light of nature may be put out, whether may not true faith, and other ſauing graces be quite loſt? Anſw. There is no grace of God, but conſidered in it ſelfe, it may be loſt; for it is a creature, and ſo is changeable, for nothing is vnchangeable in it ſelfe, but the Creatour: but in regard of the promiſe of God, touching the preſeruation of ſauing grace vnto the ende, in ſuch as be in Chriſt: hence it comes that faith, hope, and charitie, cannot be loſt; for the gifts and calling of God are without repentance in Chriſt. God indeede gaue to Adam true and perfect grace, whereby he might haue ſtood if he would; but becauſe he decreed to permit the fall, to make a way for his mercy in Chriſt, therefore he left man in the hand of his owne counſell, and ſo he fell from his created integritie: but now in Chriſt God workes both the will and the deede, ſo as hee which doth truly beleeue, [b] is as mount Zion, which cannot be remoued, but ſtandeth faſt for euer: for he is built vpon the [c] rocke Chriſt Ieſus, and ſo can neuer fall: the gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt him. God giues a ſecond grace vnto the firſt, and by vertue hereof it becomes vnchangeable, though in it ſelfe conſidered, it might be loſt. Againe, I anſwer thus; that as the light of nature is not quite put out but onely buried, in ſuch ſort as it is without vſe, and ſeemes extinguiſhed; ſo the grace of faith, by the practiſe of ſinne may be hidde and couered, ſo as it ſhall not appeare for a time: but yet it cannot be quite put out, where it is once truly wrought. And thus much of the blinde eye, with the fruite thereof.

[c] Mat.16.18.

Now to ende this place, wee muſt remember that the ſcope of Chriſt in theſe two verſes, is to ſhew that the euill and blinde eie of man by nature, whereby he is diſabled to diſcerne rightly of things that differ, is the cauſe why in ſeeking after treaſure, he leaueth the heauenly, and ſeeketh earthly treaſure onely. And hereby we muſt be admoniſhed to labour for this gift of diſcerning, by the illumination of the ſpirit in the word, as we ſhewed before, that ſo the eye being ſingle, the whole bodie may bee light: that is, ſo ordered, that with peace and comfort wee may walke on in the way of life: whereas otherwiſe we walke in darkeneſſe, and feare no danger till we fall into it irrecouerably.

V.24. No man can ſerue two Maſters: for either hee ſhall hate the one, and loue the other; or elſe he ſhall leane to the one, and deſpiſe the other. Yee cannot ſerue God and Mammon.

Here Chriſt meeteth with a ſecond obiection, which the carnall heart of man might frame againſt the former cõmandements, verſ. 19. and 20. for whereas Chriſt had forbidden the treaſuring vp of worldly riches, and commanded the ſeeking of heauenly treaſure; ſome man might flatter himſelfe with this perſwaſion, hee might ſeeke both, and lay vp both treaſures for himſelfe in earth, and in heauen alſo. To this Chriſt anſwers, No: that is impoſſible; and he prooues it thus: No man can serue two masters: But to seeke heauenly and earthly treasures, is to serue two masters, to wit, God and Mammon: and therefore no man can seeke them both. The first part of this reason is fully set downe, and prooued in the text, by the effect of such seruice in contrarie affections and behauiour: for either he shall hate the one, and loue the other, &c. The assumption and conclusion are necessarily implied in the last words, Ye cannot serue God and Mammon: wherein Christ applyes the former argument.

The Exposition. No man can serue two masters. This may well be doubted of; for experience shewes, that by their mutuall consent, one Factor may serue diuers Marchants. Hereto some answer thus, that it is implied, the masters must be of diuerse and contrarie qualities; as when one saith, come and doe this, the other saith, doe it not: and then no man can serue them both; and thus the words containe an holy truth. But yet because no clause is expressed, implying contrarietie in the masters, therefore I take it, the words must bee taken as a common prouerbe among the Iewes, which Christ laies downe for the ground of his reason. Now in a prouerbe it is not requisite it should be alwaies true, but for the most part, and ordinarily: as Luk. 4.24. No Prophet is accepted in his owne countrie: that is, ordinarily. For either he shall hate the one] that is, the one master commanding him; either disliking that he should be his master, or displeased with his commandements; And loue the other; that is, the other master in whome he taketh delight, and is well pleased with his commandements. Or else he shall leane to the one, and despise the other. These words are an application of the former, shewing how it may appeare, that a seruant hates one master, and loues an other; namely, his leaning to the one, declares his loue vnto him, that is, his applying of himselfe to respect his masters pleasure, and to doe his commandement: And his despising the other, declares his hatred, when he hath no regard to his commandements. Yee cannot serue God and Mammon. By Mammon hee meaneth riches, lucre, and gaine: now he saith not, Ye cannot serue God & haue riches; for Abraham, Iacob, and Iob, were very rich, and yet serued God sincerely: but ye cannot serue God, and serue riches: that is, giue your selues to seeke riches, and set your hearts vpon them, and serue God also.

In the words thus explained, we may obserue sundrie instructions. First, here Christ sheweth what it is to serue God: a point much spoken of, but little knowne, and lesse practised. To serue God therefore, is to loue God and to cleaue vnto him. Euery one will say, he loueth God, and euer hath done; but beware herein of spirituall guile, for true loue consists not in word and tongue, but in deede, and in truth: and God must be loued, not onely as he is a bountifull father, but as he is a Lord and master, and doth command vs seruice. The written word shewes his will and pleasure, concerning vs, what hee requireth at our hands; and if we serue him in deede, we must loue him in his power of commanding, though he should bestow no reward vpon vs. This Dauid sheweth notably, Psal. 119.125. I am thy seruant, graunt mee therefore vnderstanding that I may know thy testimonies. Againe, if we serue God, we must cleaue vnto him, and thereby testifie our loue: now what is meant by cleauing vnto, is notably expressed in the parable of the prodigall sonne, Luk. 15.15. where it is said of him, that hauing spent his portion, hee claue to a citizen of that countrey: that is, he resigned and gaue himselfe to his seruice: So to cleaue vnto God, is to resigne a mans selfe vnto Gods seruice, in obedience to all his commandements, and embracing all his promises: not suffering himselfe to be drawn from any part of Gods word, by vnbeleefe or disobedience, though all the world should set against vs. This Dauid also professeth of himselfe, saying, [a] I haue cleaued to thy testimonies O Lord; and [b] I shall not be confounded when I haue respect vnto all thy commandements. On the contrarie, when a man withdrawes himselfe from God, by disobedience to his commandements, and by vnbeleefe, then hee doth hate and despise him. Indeede the vilest wretch that liues, is ashamed, with open mouth to professe hatred and despite of God, but yet the bad practise in life, bewraies the bad affection of the heart: Prou. 14.2. Hee that is lewd in his wayes, despiseth God; and [c] they that liue in the breach of his commandements hate him, let them professe in word what they will.

Vse. 1. The ignorant of the world.

Now the consideration hereof serueth, First, to discouer vnto vs the grosse blindnes and superstitious ignorance of the world, who thinke that if a man rehearse the Lords prayer, the Creed, and the ten Commandements, he serues God well, let his life be what it will: but here Christ teacheth vs a further thing; if we will be Gods seruants, we must cleaue vnto him, both in the affections of our heart, and in actions of obedience in our life. Thus did Abraham, when God said vnto him, Thou shalt not kill, he kept himselfe from murther; but when he said, [d] Abraham kill thy sonne, he addressed himselfe to doe it, though he were the sonne of the promise, and the onely sonne of his old age. Secondly, this sheweth how Atheisme aboundeth in all places at this day; for, to hate and despise God is flat Atheisme: now they that withdraw their hearts from God, and set themselues to seeke the things of this world, neglecting obedience to Gods holy commandements, are here accounted of Christ, despisers and haters of God; and the number of such is great in euerie place. I know such men do scorne to be called Atheists, but how they be esteemed in the world, it skilleth not; till they reforme this wicked practise, they are no better in the sight of Christ.

2 Atheisme abounds.

[a] Psal.119.31.

[b] Psal.119.6.

[c] Exod.20.5.

[d] Gen.22.2.

2 Mammon is a great Lord. Secondly, whereas God and Mammon are here opposed as two masters; hence we learne that Mammon, that is, riches, is a great lord and master in the world: this Christ here takes for granted, and therefore doth forewarne his Disciples of it. But how (will some say) can riches be a God? Ans. Not in themselues, for so they are the good creatures of God; but to the corrupt heart of man, which makes an idol of them to it selfe, by setting his loue and delight vpon them, as on true happinesse, and trusting in them more then in the true God: and for this cause is couetousnesse called idolatrie, Coloss. 3. 5. and the couetous person an Idolater, Ephes. 5. 5. for looke whereon man sets his heart, that is his Lord and his God; though it be the deuill himselfe. Now that men doe thus set vp riches in their hearts, as an idoll, and so become seruants and slaues to that which God ordained to serue them, I shew plainly thus: Proofs. 1 For first, they neglect the worship and seruice of God for lucre and gaine, and spend more time with greater delight for earthly riches, then they do for the true treasures of Gods heauenly graces. 2 Secondly, let a man haue worldly wealth at will, and he is full of ioy and delight, his riches giue him great contentment; but if he loose his goods, then vexation and sorrowe doth more oppresse him, then all the promises of God in the Bible can comfort him. 3 Thirdly, by transgressing Gods commandements a man looseth heauen; but who is so grieued for his transgressions, whereby hee incurres this losse, as he is for a small dammage in some part of his riches? 4 Fourthly, I appeale to mens consciences, whether they be not farre more sharpe and eager set vpon the meanes of gaine, then on prayer & other parts of Gods worshippe, which are the meanes of grace: all which doe argue plainly, that they serue Mammon, and honour riches for their God. So that howsoeuer by Gods blessing, outward idolatrie be banished out of our Church, yet we haue many Idolatours in our Land; for euerie couetous worldling sets vp the Idol of wealth and riches in his heart for his Lord. And that these Mammonists abound euerie where, appeares by the common practises of oppression, extortion, and crueltie, in hard dealing towards the poore, by greedie Land-lords and Vsurers; as also by the practises of the rich in the time of dearth, for by their hoarding vp store, ingrossing of commodities, and enhaunsing of their price, to the augmenting of their priuate wealth, they mightily increase Gods wrath vpon the poore. Indeede God hath his seruants which haue him onely for their God, but the number of them is small, in respect of those that set their hearts vpon the world, and make Mammon their God.

Vse. 1. Here then first behold, the slauish basenesse of a couetous heart; for man was made to bee the Lord of Mammon and wealth, and yet through couetousnesse he subiecteth himselfe to become a slaue and vassal thereunto. 2 Secondly, hereby let vs learne to become faithfull disposers of worldly riches, and (as Christ saith) to [d] make vs friends with this Mammon of iniquitie, by good disposing of it to Gods glory in works of mercie; and so shall we retaine our right of creation, whereby God made the creatures to serue vs.

3 They that set their heart on riches forsake God. Thirdly, Christ opposing God and Mammon, and saying, no man can serue them both, imports plainly, that hee that seekes to be rich, setting his heart thereon, forsakes God. I say not that euery rich man forsaketh God, for when God giueth aboundance to a mans moderate labour and industry in his lawfull calling, he may lawfully possesse it, vsing it to Gods glorie; but to seeke to be rich is a denying of God, because so the heart is a seruant vnto Mammon, and not to the Lord. This may appeare by their whole behauiour about wealth, whether we consider their getting, or their keeping, or imploying of it; in all which they sinne against God. Proofe. 1 First in getting, for God giueth riches to whom hee will, and hath not tied himselfe by promise to make any man rich; & therefore he that resolues with himselfe that he will be rich, cannot make conscience of lying, fraud, iniustice, sabbath-breaking and such like, when the committing of these things makes for his aduãtage. 2 Secondly, they sinne in keeping; for he that resolues to be rich, will rather forsake the truth, then his wealth, in time of triall: and for the sauing or recouerie of his wealth, he will not sticke to seeke to blessers, wizards, coniurers, &c. 3 Thirdly, for disposing or imploying; he that resolues to be rich sinnes therein: for he cannot be drawn to works of mercie, at least with any cheerfulnes; & hence it comes that sometimes the poore doe starue before the rich mans doore.

Vse. 1. The consideration hereof, serues first to correct our iudgement concerning couetous & worldly minded persons; our censure of them is too mild and gentle, we iudge them honest men, only somewhat hard & neere themselues: but marke Christs sentence vpon them; Worldly persons forsake God, and choose Mammon for their Lord and master: which is a practise of Atheisme, and therefore not to be so lightly passed ouer as men thinke. 2 Secondly, hereby wee see it is a dangerous and vnlawfull course, for men to make lawes with themselues, how rich they will be; as to haue so many hundred, or thousand pounds in stocke, or so much lands, and rents, &c. for what followes vpon this resolution? why surely they must needs giue themselues to the compassing of their purpose, and so they fall into manifold snares of Satan, by practises of iniustice, lying, fraud, &c. 3 Thirdly, hereby we must be admonished to content our selues with that portion of goods, more or lesse, which God sendeth, knowing that a little is sufficient with Gods blessing vpon it: Away with couetousnesse (as the Apostle [e] saith) and be content with that ye haue, for hee hath said, I will not faile thee nor forsake thee.

[d] Luk.16.9.

4 Mans heart must not be diuided frō God. Fourthly, whereas Christ saith; Ye cannot serue God and Mammon, we learne, that the heart of man must not be diuided betweene God, and the world, the one halfe to God, and the other to the world; no, God will haue all or none, herein he will not part stakes with the creature: Prou. 23. 26. My sonne giue me thy heart.

Vse. 1. The consideration whereof serueth, First, to discouer the hypocrisie and spirituall guile of many, who thinke they may liue in some one sinne or other, and yet be Gods seruants still: this is the conceit of drunkards, adulterers, couetous persons, and suchlike; for euen while they liue in these sinnes, they wil come to Gods worship, to the word, and praier often, and to the Sacraments, at least once a yeare: which they would not doe, but that they thinke God hath respect vnto them herein, like to the wicked Iewes, Ier. 7. 9. 10. But they deceiue themselues, for no man can serue two masters: while a man liues in any sinne the seruant of the deuill, he can neuer be accepted of God for his seruant. 2 No sin raigneth in Gods children. Secondly, this shewes, that the seruant of god is so farre forth deliuered from sinne by regeneration, that no sinne raignes in him; for so he should serue two masters, for euery raigning sinne is a Lord and Master: Rom. 6. 16. Knowe yee not, that to whomsoeuer you giue your selues as seruants to obey, his seruants yee are to whom yee obey, whether it be of sinne vnto death, &c. and he that committeth sinne, is the seruant of sinne. Iohn 8. 34. This therefore is a sure ground, that no regenerate person liues in any sinne. 3 Thirdly, hereby euery one is taught to consecrate both his soule and bodie to the Lord, indeauouring to serue him with all the powers & parts thereof; for God is our onely Lord and master, and therefore let all that is within vs bow the knee to him: Rom. 6. 22. The seruant of God is one freed from sinne, who hath his fruite in holinesse, and the ende euerlasting life. The f Queene of Sheba pronounced Salomons seruants happie, that stood before Salomon to heare his wisedome; how much more then are they happie, who in soule and bodie are Gods seruants, who for bountie and wisdome infinitely surpasseth Salomon? Here some will say, I would gladly serue God alone, and I desire I might do it with all my heart; but the corruption of my nature is such, that it makes me to rebel against the commandements of God, and I cannot do the good I would, but the euill I would not, that doe I; so as I feare I serue two masters. Ans. A comfort to them that are troubled with corruption. This is the state of Gods children in this life; but herewith they must stay themselues: when they faile in obedience, they must consider whether they doe so freely and willingly, or against their wills: If thy heart can truely say, thou doest vnwillingly commit sinne, thou wouldest not doe it, and art truely grieued and displeased with thy selfe for it; then be of good courage, thou doest not serue two masters, for this seruice is voluntarie. Now though there be in thee the flesh and the spirit, the one halting thee one way, & the other another; yet while thou striuest against the flesh, desiring and endeauouring to be wholly subiect to the spirit, though thou faile often in action, yet in Christ be thy sinnes pardoned, and God accepts in thee the will for the deed. Endeauour therefore to acquaint thy selfe more and more with the will of thy heauenly master, and seeke to please him in all things, and labour to mortifie the deedes of the flesh by the spirit, and so shalt thou know God to be thy onely master, and in due time perceiue thy freedome from the bondage of the flesh.

f 1 King. 10. 8.

V. 25. Therefore I say vnto you, be not carefull for your life, what yee shall eate, or what yee shall drinke: nor yet for your bodie, what yee shall put on. Is not the life more worth then meat, and the bodie then raiment?

Our Sauiour Christ hauing forbidden the practises of couetousnesse, and preuented such obiections as the corrupt heart of man might frame to excuse it selfe therein, doth here strike at the very root of couetousnes, and seekes to remooue the cause thereof; to wit, distrustfull and inordinate care for the things of this life, though they be things necessarie, as meate, drinke, and cloathing; and in this argument he proceeds to the end of this chapter. Now this verse depends vpon the former, as a conclusion inferred vpon all that he had said before concerning couetousnes from the 19. v. to this effect: Seeing they that seeke earthly treasures, neglecting the heauenly, doe want the single eie of spirituall wisdome, to discerne of the true treasure, and also are themselues seruants vnto Mammon; therefore I say vnto you my Disciples, be not carefull (no not for things needfull) immoderately, and in a distrustfull manner. And here againe hee meetes with another pretence of a couetous minde, wherewith it pleads for the seruice of Mammon; to wit, that the things they seeke for, are things necessarie, without which they cannot liue. Hereto Christ answers, Yea, but I say, you must not seeke no not for things needfull to your life, immoderately and distrustfully.

The Exposition. I say vnto you] that is, I, that am your master, vpon whom you depend for all heauenly instruction, & direction in all things needfull both for your soules and bodies, I say vnto you: by this hee would prepare them to attention and reuerent obseruation of his commandement following, as being a matter of great importance, whereon depends the life of all obedience, in relying on Gods prouidence; in regard whereof, we alſo muſt with all good conſcience marke the ſame. Bee not carefull for your life, &c. Leaſt wee ſhould miſtake Chriſts meaning, wee muſt know that there be two kindes of care; a godly moderate care; and a diſtruſtfull carking care. The moderate honeſt care is inioyned vs by Gods commandement, Prou. 6. 6. Wiſdome ſends the ſluggard to learne diligence and prouidence for things needfull, of the little Ant or piſmire: and Paul ſaith, fathers muſt lay vp for their children, 2. Cor. 12. 14. And hee that prouideth not for his owne, eſpecially for them of his family, is worſe then an infidell, 1. Tim. 5. 8. So that there is a lawfull care euen for the things of this life. Now the practiſe of it ſtands in two things. Firſt, in the diligent walking in a mans lawfull calling, dealing vprightly and iuſtly therein with euery one, minding onely to get things honeſt and neceſſarie in the ſight of all men. Secondly, in leauing the ſucceſſe and iſſue of all our labour and endeauour to God, for that belongs to him: we muſt vſe the means ſoberly and honeſtly, and leaue the bleſſing to God. This godly care Moſes ſhewed notably in leading the children of Iſrael out of Egypt: for what God commanded him to doe, that he did; he goes which way God leads him, although he met with many croſſes; and vſeth the meanes that God calls him vnto, leauing the iſſue to God: as appeares notably at the red ſea, when they were at a wonderfull ſtrait, hauing the ſea before them, the Egyptians behind them and woods and mountaines on each ſide; yet being commanded to ſtrike the waters with the rod of God, he ſhewes notable truſt in Gods prouidence: Feare not (ſaith g he) ſtand ſtill, and behold the ſaluation of our God. And when Abraham at Gods commandement went to ſacrifice his ſonne, Iſaac askes him, my father, where is the ſacrifice? h Abraham anſwers with words of faith, My ſonne, God will prouide. And thus i David went to fight againſt the Philiſtims to Keilah at Gods commandement, though his owne men diſcouraged him from it: whereby it is plaine, he relied on God for the iſſue of the battell. Now this godly moderate care is not here forbidden, which hath reſpect to obedience in the dutie, and for the ſucceſſe depends vpon Gods prouidence.

The diſtruſtfull care is that, whereby men trouble themſelues about the iſſue of their labours, and when they haue done the worke, doe not reſt therewith, but vexe themſelues about the ſucceſſe; not relying on Gods prouidence for the bleſſing, but onely on the means. This diſtruſtfull care (for our better diſcerning of it) hath theſe effects. First, it oppreſſeth the heart, making it exceeding heauie and penſiue for feare of want: where this feare is, there is this diſtruſtfull care, for this argues a man dares not truſt God, but would haue the ſucceſſe of his labour out of Gods hand in his owne. Secondly, it allureth and draweth men to vſe vnlawfull meanes to get worldly things, as lying, fraud, iniuſtice in falſe waights, meaſures, &c. Thirdly, it makes men wearie of Gods worſhip, it diſtracts their minds in praier, and hearing the word, and (as Chriſt b ſaith) it chookes the word that it brings forth no fruite: for whē the mind is wholy ſet vpon the world, there is no reſpect to the matters of God. And this is that care which is here forbidden, euen a diſtruſtfull carking care, which as the Greeke word ſignifies, diuides & diſtracts the mind, by troubling and perplexing it about the iſſue and ſucceſſe of our endeauours.

b Luk.8.14.

The Vſe. That which Chriſt here forbids his Diſciples, is the common ſinne of our age and time, not in a few perſons, but in many; for though this diſtruſtful care be the diſeaſe of the heart, yet it ſhews it ſelfe by actions in the life. For firſt, what is the cauſe of ſo little fruite of the word preached, as may euery where be diſcerned? is not (among many other) this worldly care one ſpeciall cauſe? This we may ſee in the parable, Luke 8. 14. for the ſeede that light among thornes, which chooked it, is the word preached to a heart poſſeſſed with worldly cares: let theſe men obſerue themſelues, and they ſhal finde, that they can neither pray, nor here the word, nor meditate therein without manifold diſtractions from theſe worldly thoughts. Secondly, there is no trade or calling without his conuaiance of craft and deceipt, though it doe not appeare ſo much in one calling as in others; & hard it is to find them that make conſcience hereof, when gaine and profit may come thereby; which comes from this diſtruſtfull care in mens hearts: whereby they doubt of Gods bleſſing anſwerable to their deſire, in the vſe of lawfull meanes onely. But ſith Chriſt forewarns vs of this ſinne, we muſt beware it take not place in our hearts; and for the auoyding of it, we muſt follow the counſell of the holy Ghoſt in Scripture, Pſal. 37. 5. Commit thy way vnto the Lord, and truſt in him, and he ſhall bring it to paſſe: which is oft commended vnto vs, Pſal. 55. 22. Caſt thy burthen vpon the Lord, and hee ſhall nouriſh thee: and Prou. 16. 3. Roule thy works vpon the Lord. 1. Pet. 5. 7. Caſt all your care on him, for he careth for you. In all which places we haue a moſt worthy inſtruction, to this effect; not exempting men from doing the duties of their calling, but teaching them, that when they haue done their endeauour, in the diligent, ſober, and vpright vſe of meanes, then they muſt leaue the euent and iſſue for good ſucceſſe to the bleſſing of God. Thus the trades-man, whoſe liuing ſtands by buying and ſelling, muſt be carefull and diligent about his buſines, without deceit or lying; and in ſo doing referre the ſucceſſe of his bargain to the bleſſing of God; and ſo muſt the huſbādmā plow & ſow, & leaue earing & harueſt to Gods good prouidēce. This is the Diſtruſtfull care the ſin of this age.

the Apoſtles counſell, Phil. 4. 6. Bee nothing carefull, that is, after a diſtruſtfull or diſtracting ſort, (as the word ſignifies) but in all things let your requeſts be made knowne to God, with giuing of thankes: where it is to be marked, that diſtruſtfull care is oppoſed to prayer & thankeſgiuing, as an hinderer thereof, and therefore our care muſt onely be to vſe the lawfull meanes moderately for any bleſſing, and then to pray to God for good ſucceſſe and bleſſing, relying wholly thereon, that when it comes wee may giue him thankes.

How to leaue the ſucceſſe to God.

But ſome will ſay, it is hard for fleſh and blood not to be carefull of ſucceſſe, how then ſhould we be able to leaue it wholly to God? Anſwer. We muſt lay to our hearts the bleſſed promiſes of God made to them that depend vpon his mercie and goodneſſe, and labour to liue by faith thereon: Pſal. 127. 2. It is in vaine for man to riſe early, and to lie downe late, and to eate the bread of ſorrowe (meaning, while he truſts to himſelfe, or in the meanes) but God will ſurely giue reſt to his beloved, which ſerue him, and truſt in him, in the vſe of meanes, Pſal. 34. 10. The lyons doe lacke and ſuffer hunger, though euery poore beaſt of the field be a prey to his teeth; but they that ſeeke the Lord ſhall lacke nothing that is good. If wee had no more promiſes in the Bible, yet theſe were ſufficient to cauſe vs to reſt vpon his prouidence in the ſober vſe of lawfull meanes. Againe, this muſt bee conſidered, how wee ſhall relie vpon his mercie for the ſauing of our ſoules in the time of temptation and houre of death, that dare not truſt in his prouidence for the things of this life. Queſt. But what if all things go croſſe with men (will ſome ſay) may I not then ſticke more to the means? Anſ. Nay rather cleaue the more to God, for if the bleſſing were in the meanes, men would not be ſo oftē croſſed: God knoweth what is good for thee, better then thou thy ſelfe, and therefore reſt contented with his prouidence, though he croſſe thine expectation for outward bleſſings: want is many times better for Gods children then plentie, and affliction then peace and proſperitie: as Dauid found, Pſal. 119. 67, 71. and therefore God laies it vpon them: Did not good Ioſias fall before Pharaoh Necho? which he ſhould not haue don, but that God would chaſten him; for [c] not regarding the words of Pharaoh Necho, which were of the mouth of God, perſwading him not to fight againſt him: and alſo [d] that he might be taken from ſeeing the euill to come: and was not Hezekias heart puffed vp in the time of peace, in ſo much that wrath [e] came vpon him, and vpon Iudah and Ieruſalem. Therefore learne to depend vpon Gods prouidence in the moderate vſe of lawful meanes, and whether he giue the bleſſings or take them away, bleſſe his name; for it is good for thee it ſhould be ſo. And thus much for the maine commandement.

[c] 2.Chr.35.22.

[e] 2.Chr.32.25.

Now further mark in the words, how Chriſt diſtinguiſheth betweene life and the bodie; and applieth meate and drinke to life, and raiment to the bodie: and yet we knowe that apparell ſerues to preſerue life alſo, eſpecially in cold countries. But Chriſt doth diſtinguiſh them for iuſt cauſe, for though in cold countries, apparell ſerues to preſerue life, as well as meat & drinke doe; yet the firſt and moſt generall vſe of apparell, is an other matter; to wit, to hide the ſhame of nakednes, which the ſinne of Adam brought vpon it: Gen. 3. 7. 21. for before their fall, the man and the woman were both naked, and were not aſhamed, Gen. 2. 21.

The proper ende of apparell.

Here then we are to learne, that the proper and maine ende of apparell, is for the bodie, to couer the ſhame of nakedneſſe that ſinne hath brought vpon vs; which is ſo great, that if neceſſitie would permit, both hands and face ſhould alſo be couered. The conſideration whereof, as it ſhewes their immodeſtie and want of ſhame that lay open the nakedneſſe of their breaſts, or other parts of their body, more then need requires; ſo it teacheth vs, neuer to bee proud of our apparell, but rather humbled and abaſhed when we put it on, or looke vpon it, for it is the couer of our ſhame, and ſo an enſigne of our ſinne: the theife hath as good cauſe to be proud of the bolts on his heeles; or of his brand in the hand, or hole in the eare, as we of our apparell; for as theſe are badges of miſdemeanour, ſo is apparell a badge of our ſinne. And on the other ſide, that wee may haue comfort in this ordinance of God for our bodies, we muſt labour therein to expreſſe the graces of God in our hearts; as modeſtie, ſobrietie, temperance, frugalitie, and ſuch like.

1. Reaſon againſt immoderate care.

Is not the life more worth then meate, and the bodie then raiment? Our Sauiour Chriſt hauing giuen commandement againſt the immoderate care for things needfull to naturall life, leaſt the ſame ſhould paſſe away without effect, doth here begin to enforce the ſame with diuerſe arguments: the firſt whereof is in theſe words, taken from the creation, wherein God giues life and the bodie, which are better then food and raiment; from whence Chriſt reaſons for his prouidence thus: The life is better then food, and the bodie then raiment; but God by creation giues life and body: and therefore will hee much more giue foode and raiment for their preſeruation. Seeing God giues the greater, we need not to doubt but he will affoard the leſſe.

Our creation muſt teach vs truſt in Gods prouidence.

In this reaſon Chriſt teacheth vs; to make right vſe of our creation; namely, by the conſideration of it, to learne confidence in Gods prouidence for all things needfull to our naturall life: Iob. 10. 8. Thine hands haue made me and faſhioned mee, and wilt thou deſtroy mee? where Iob perſwades himſelfe of preſeruation, becauſe God created him: and 1. Pet. 4. 19. Let them that ſuffer according to the will of God, commend their ſoules vnto him in well doing, as vnto a faithfull Creator: becauſe God is a faithfull creator, therefore in death we muſt rely vpon him. Experience teacheth vs, that euery workeman is carefull to preſerue the worke of his owne hands, if it lie in his power; why then ſhould we doubt of this in our Creator, who is almightie.

V.26. Behold the fowles of the heauen: for they ſowe not, neither reape, nor carry into the barnes: yet your heauenly father feedeth them. Are ye not much better then they?

2. Reaſon againſt diſtruſtfull care.

These words containe Chriſts ſecond reaſon to diſſwade his Diſciples from diſtruſtfull care for things needfull, drawne from the conſideration of his prouidence ouer baſer creatures then they were, for needefull prouiſion: the reaſon ſtandeth thus:

If God prouide for the fowles of heauen, then much more will he prouide for you:

But God prouideth for the fowles of heauen, and feedeth them: therefore much more will he prouide for you.

The firſt part of this reaſon is here confirmed two wayes: Firſt, becauſe the children of God haue means of prouiſion, which the foules of the heauen want; they ſowe not, neither reape, &c. Secondly, Gods children are better then fowles, and therefore he will not ſuffer them to lacke, ſith he prouideth for baſer things then they be: both which are ſo ſenſible and familiar, that they may induce any man to depend vpon Gods prouidence, without diſtruſtfull care.

Gods works muſt be conſidered.

Chriſt in propounding this reaſon, bids vs Behold the creatures, that is, take a ſerious viewe of them, looke vpon them wiſhly, and with conſideration, as the word ſignifieth: whereby we may learne, that euery child of God ought ſeriouſly to conſider the workes of God, (for that which wee muſt doe to the fowles of heauen, we muſt doe to all the works of his hands) and therein labour to behold the wiſdome, iuſtice, goodneſſe, loue, mercie, and prouidence, of God. This is Salomons leſſon, Eccleſ. 7.15. Behold the works of God: and Iob. 36.24. Remember thou magnifie the worke of God which men behold. Why did God make the creatures diſtinctly one after another in ſixe ſeuerall dayes, and take a particular viewe of them all after he had made them, with approbation of their goodneſſe, and alſo ſanctifie the ſeauenth day for an holy reſt, both by his own example, and expreſſe commandement? vndoubtedly, among other cauſes, this was one, to teach vs to conſider diſtinctly of all the workes of his hands: & among other holy duties, to meditate on the Sabbath day on the glorious workes of our Creator. This was Dauids practiſe; for, Pſal. 19.1. &c. he reſembles the heauens to a great booke, wherein a man may read the glorie of

A God: and in the contemplation hereof did he exerciſe himſelfe vpon the Sabbath daies, as we may ſee in the Pſalme which he penned for the Sabbath, Pſal. 92.4.5. —I wil reioyce in the works of thine hands: O Lord, how glorious are thy works! And they which are negligent in this dutie, are here called to attendance by our Sauiour Chriſt.

Vnreaſonable creatures depend vpon Gods prouidence.

But what muſt we behold in the foules of heauen? How they neither ſow, nor reape, nor carie into barnes, &c. that is, they vſe not the means of prouiſion that man doth, which ſhews they haue not that care which man hath. Man may lawfully be carefull to vſe theſe meanes, for God ordaineth them for mans prouiſion: but B the fowles of the heauen goe not ſo farre to haue care of any meanes. And this priuiledge of man to the meanes, doth ſtrongly enforce Chriſts diſſwaſion againſt diſtruſtfull care: for the fowles wanting ſuch meanes are free from that care. Queſt. How then are they prouided for? Anſw. They expect for foode at Gods hand: Iob 39.3. The birds crie vnto God, wandring for lacke of meate. Pſal. 104.21. The lyons rouring after their pray, ſeeke their meate at God. Pſal. 145.15. The eyes of all wait vpon God, and he giueth them meate in due ſeaſon. Pſal. 147.9. He giueth to beaſts their foode, and to the young rauens that crie. But how can vnreaſonable creatures crie to God? Anſw. They doe not vſe prayer, as men doe; but yet they are ſaid to cry C to God, and to wait on God, becauſe by a naturall inſtinct giuen them by creation, they ſeek for that foode which God ordaineth for them, and and are contented therewith; ſo that by theſe phraſes God would teach vs that they depend vpon his prouidence wholly for prouiſion, and reſt contented therewith.

Vnreaſonable creatures more obedient then man.

Here then wee are to obſerue, that the vnreaſonable creatures made ſubiect to vanitie by the ſinne of man, doe come nearer to their firſt eſtate, and better obſerue the order of nature in their creation then man doth: for they ſeek for that which God prouideth for them, & when they receiue it are content: but man is deepely fallen from the eſtate of his creation, in regard of his depending on Gods prouidence for temporall things: though he haue the vſe of means D which the fowles of heauen want, yet his heart is full fraught with diſtruſtfull care, whether we reſpect the getting, or imploying of earthly things. This ſheweth that man is more corrupt then other creatures, and more vile and baſe in this behalfe then bruit beaſts: which ſhould humble euerie one of vs deepely vnder the ſerious conſideration of our ſinnes, that haue ſo depraued our nature, that we are more rebellious to the lawe of our creator, and more diſtruſtfull in his prouidence, then the bruite and ſenſeleſſe creatures.

And yet your heauenly Father feedeth them.] In theſe words is couched a forcible reaſon, whereby Chriſt would perſwade his Diſciples, and in them all beleeuers, to depend vpon Gods prouidence without diſtruſtfull care. God (ſaith hee) is your father, yea your heauenly father, and you are his children, therefore depend vpon him: for if o earthly fathers will prouide and giue good things to their children, much more will your heauenly. In this reaſon alſo is touched a meanes and way whereby a man may come to reſt vpon Gods prouidence. In the word of God there be two kind of promiſes: ſome, of euerlaſting life and ſaluation by Chriſt: others, of inferiour gifts and bleſſings concerning this life. Now if we would relie on God for tẽporall bleſſings, we muſt firſt labour to lay hold by faith on his ſpiritual and eternall promiſes; get aſſurance of thine adoption in Chriſt, and labour to know and feele that he is thy heauenly father; and then thou wilt eaſily depend vpon his prouidence for temporal bleſſings: if thou be once perſwaded truely that he will ſaue thy ſoule, how canſt thou diſtruſt him for prouiſion for thy bodie? If a Kings ſonne know his father wil make him heire, he wil not doubt but he wil afford him foode and raiment in the meane time.

o Mat.7.11.

Howe to come to depend vpon Gods prouidence.

Feedeth them] That is, the foules that neither ſow, nor reape, nor carrie into barnes. Here we may obſerue Gods ſpeciall and particular prouidence: for in reaſon thoſe creatures that make no prouiſion in ſummer ſhould ſtarue in winter, wherein the earth affoardeth not ſuch meanes of nouriſhment as it doth in ſummer; and yet experience ſheweth, that they are for the moſt part fatter, and fitter for the vſe of man in winter then in ſummer: what argueth this but Gods ſpeciall prouidence, attending vpon the ſilly foules of heauen, & feeding them in the dead winter? oh then how ſhould any child of God diſtruſt his prouidence; will he feede birds, and neglect his owne children? it cannot be. And yet this muſt not nuzzle an idle perſon, or bolſter him vp in the neglect of lawfull ordinarie means for his prouiſion: for God would haue euery man to eate his owne bread, deſeruing his prouiſion by diligence in the duties of ſome lawfull calling: for he that will not labour ſhould not eate. Howbeit we may here learne, when all meanes faile (without our default) yet ſtil to rely vpon Gods prouidence; for he feedes the foules in the dead of winter, and we are better then they.

Particular prouidence prooued.

Laſtly, is God ſo mercifull to the poore fouls of heauen, to prouide for them? then muſt we that profeſſe our ſelues to be Gods children, ſhew our ſelues to be like to our heauenly father, in exerciſing mercie towards all Gods creatures: God is the Sauiour of all men, but eſpecially of them that beleeue. And wee muſt be followers of God as deere children, extending mercie to the poore of mankind, becauſe they be our owne fleſh: doe good vnto all, but ſpecially to them that be of the houſhold of faith. This is needfull to be vrged vpon our ſoules, for in times of dearth men grinde the faces of the poore, by hard bargaining; the rich take aduantage of poore mens want, and ſo make thẽſelues fat by ſucking the blood of the poore.

A motiue to mercifulnes.

1.Tim.4.10.

v. 27. Which of you by taking care, is able to adde one cubit to his ſtature?

Here Chriſt propounds his third reaſon, againſt diſtruſtfull and carking care for worldly things, from the vnprofitableneſſe and vanitie of it in man. The words of this reaſon are propounded by way of queſtion: which kinde of phraſe imports the affirming or denying of the thing ſpoken of with more vehemencie. And here it hath the force of a more vehement negation: as if Chriſt had ſaid, Vndoubtedly not any of you by taking care can adde one cubit to his ſtature. A cubit is a meaſure taken from a part of mans bodie, beeing the length of the arme from the elbow, to the ende of the longeſt finger. Now God in framing mans bodie, brings it from this length in the mothers wombe, by continuall increaſe adding cubit vnto cubit, till at laſt it containe many cubits in ſtature, according as he hath ordained and appointed. And looke how many cubits long God hath ordained euery man to come vnto, of that ſtature and taleneſſe he is; and no man by all his wit, skill, and carefull induſtrie can adde one cubit vnto his ſtature: for that is the proper work of the Creator, he that giues the bodie, appoints the ſtature, and by his prouidence brings it thereto, by daily increaſe. Now hence Chriſt reaſons thus, from the like: As no man by taking care in all the meanes hee can vſe, can augment his ſtature one cubit, hee cannot doe the leaſt thing this way, as p S. Luke noteth; ſo no more can any man by his diſtruſtfull care better his outward eſtate for things needefull to this life one whit at all: and therefore ſith it is vaine and fruitleſſe to vexe our hearts herewith, we muſt beware of this diſtruſtfull care.

3. Reaſon againſt diſtruſtfull care.

p Luk.12.26

From this reaſon we may obſerue and gather ſundry inſtructions. Firſt, that mans labour, care, and induſtrie, is altogether vaine and fruitleſſe, without the bleſſing of Gods prouidence. Pſal. 127. 1, 2. Except the Lord build the houſe, they labour in vaine that build it: except the Lord keepe the citie, the keeper watcheth in vaine. It is in vaine for you to riſe early, &c. 1. Cor. 3. 7. Neither is hee that planteth any thing, nor he that watereth (meaning, of themſelues) but God giueth the increaſe. This point the Lord doth notably expreſſe by Haggai, ſaying, q Ye haue ſowen much, and bring in little: — and he that earneth wages, putteth it in a bottomleſſe bagge. Ye looked for much, and loe, it came to little, and when ye brought it home, I did blowe vpon it. The conſideration whereof muſt teach vs to commend all the ſober care and labour of our lawfull callings to God by prayer for his bleſſing: for it is his bleſſing that maketh rich, Prou. 10. 22. If Paul and Mans labour vaine without Gods bleſſing.

q Hagg. 1. 6—9.

Apollos, two moſt worthie men, could doe nothing of themſelues, what ſhall we thinke to doe? and when we finde Gods bleſſing vpon our labour, then we muſt giue thankes.

Mans outward eſtate is appointed of God.

Secondly, hence we learne that no man can better his outward eſtate in the world, for wealth and dignitie by all his care & diligence, aboue that which God hath appointed him to come vnto: for as God hath determined of mans bodily ſtature, which no man by taking care can adde vnto or alter, ſo hath he appointed in his decree what ſhall be mans eſtate, for wealth or pouertie, dignitie or diſgrace, which it lies not in the power of man, or any creature to alter: indeede the diligent vſe of lawfull meanes is an argument of Gods bleſſing in outward things, and therefore muſt be followed and exerciſed in ſobrietie and godlineſſe of thoſe that waite for ſuch bleſſings, becauſe ordinarily God conuaies his bleſſings, by ſuch meanes; but yet the ſtate of man depends not on the meanes, but on Gods decree and pleaſure: Pſal. 75.6.7. To come to preferrement is neither from the Eaſt nor from the Weſt: but God is iudge: hee maketh high, and he maketh low: and, Prov. 22.2. The poore and rich meete together, and God is the maker of them both. In regard whereof we muſt learne, to depend vpon God in the ſober vſe of lawfull meanes, and to reſt contented, with his bleſſing thereupon be it more or leſſe: for whatſoeuer it is, it is that portion which God hath allotted vnto vs.

Temporall life cannot be prolonged beyond the period ſet in nature.

Thirdly, hereby are ſundrie erronious opinions confuted and ouerthrowne. As firſt, the opinion of them who thinke, that the temporall life of man may be prolonged by art, aboue the period ſet by God in nature: but then there may be addition made by art to the ſet period of mans ſtature; for the will and prouidence of God doth equally rule in them both: the prolonging of mans life is no leſſe an action of the Creator, then the augmenting of mans ſtature. Indeede art may helpe to preſerue life till it come to the period in nature, but further to prolong it, is beyond the art & power of man: for man is not Lord ouer the ſpirit to retaine the ſpirit, Eccleſ. 8.8. God hath herein appointed his bounds which he cannot paſſe. Iob. 14.5.

Enchantments cannot turne mans bodie into another creature.

Secondly, the opinion of ſome Magicians and Witches is hereby alſo confuted, who thinke and auouch, that by enchantments they can turne their bodies into the bodies of other creatures, as cats, hares, &c. and alſo make their bodies to paſſe through a key hole, or ſuch like narrow place. But this were to change nature, which is more then to adde to nature (which yet Chriſt here denies to be in the power of man,) and therefore it is impoſſible: theſe things are the illuſions of Satan, whereby he bleares the eyes of ſuch as regard his lying wonders. As for that which is ſaide of e Nebuchadnezzar, that he ſhould be turned into a beaſt, becauſe it is ſaid, he ate graſſe like an oxe: this we muſt know and hold, that the ſubſtance of his ſoule was not changed, neither the ſubſtance of his bodie, nor the ſhape thereof into the ſhape and ſubſtance of a beaſt, but onely the hand of God was heauie vpon his minde, ſtriking him with brutiſh frenſie and madneſſe, whereupon his behauiour became bruitiſh, and he liued among the beaſts of the field.

e Dan.4.30.

Alchemiſts confuted.

Thirdly, the opinion of the Alchemiſt is hereby alſo refuted, who pretend that they can turne baſer mettalls into better, as braſſe or lead into gold: but this is to change the nature of creatures, which is more then to adde thereto by augmenting their quantitie, which yet Chriſt denies and makes impoſſible to art in the ſtature of man.

Merits of glorie aboue the power of man. Concil.Trid. ſeſſ.6.can.32.

Fourthly, the opinion of the Papiſts for their merit of works is hereby alſo confuted: they teach that by good works a man may merit for himſelfe a greater degree of glorie in heauen: but conſider, if a man by all that he can doe, cannot augment his bodily ſtature, nor his outward eſtate in this world (as we haue ſhewed:) then much leſſe can he adde vnto his eſtate of glorie: if the increaſe of nature be the worke of God, then much more is the gift of grace, and the increaſe of glorie: as therefore he determines of the ſtature of the bodie, ſo much more may we reſolue, that the ſtate of the ſoule for glorie is decreed of God, and man cannot adde thereunto. Indeed the more we glorifie God by well doing on earth, the more is our aſſurance of greater glorie in heauen, but yet the merit thereof is the worke of Chriſt alone, and our fruition of it the gift of God according to the good pleaſure of his owne will.

V.28. And why care ye for raiment? learne how the lilies of the field doe grow: they labour not, neither ſpinne:

29. Yet I ſay vnto you, that euen Salomon in all his glorie was not arraied like one of theſe.

30. Wherefore if God ſo cloath the graſſe of the fielde, which is to day, and to morrow is caſt into the ouen, ſhall hee not doe much more vnto you, O ye of little faith?

Diſtruſtfull care forbidden.

In theſe three verſes Chriſt returneth to his former commandement againſt diſtruſtfull care contained in the 25. verſe and here vrgeth one part thereof concerning care for rayment, and the other for meate and drinke, in the 31. verſe. Now what meaneth Chriſt by this manner of handling this heauenly doctrine, not onely to propound it, and to vrge it by ſtrong and forcible reaſons, but againe to repeat it, and vrge it by peece-meale? Surely, hereby he declares himſelfe to bee the true Doctor of his Church: for hauing a weightie point of doctrine in hand, which the nature of man is vnwilling to receiue and practiſe, he doth beſide the propounding and confirming of it, thus vrge it by peece-meale, that hereby it may the better take place in our heart, and be the more effectuall to bring forth obedience in our liues. And this fidelitie muſt euery one ſhewe that is to teach the word of God to others: not onely miniſters, though it be their dutie ſpecially, but alſo maſters and parents, as Deut. 6. 7. Thou ſhalt whet them vpon thy children (as the word ſignifies) that ſo it may more deeply enter into the heart.

Thus much of the manner of proſecuting this argument, now we come to the words: And why care you for raiment? This interrogation hath the force of a prohibition; and ſo it is the ſame with this branch of the 25. verſe, care not for your bodie what you ſhall put on. Now all care for apparell is not here forbidden; for there is a lawfull godly care, whereby men ſeek and labour vprightly and in a ſober manner for ſuch apparell as is meete for their callings, and needefull to the health and comfort of their bodies. But the care here forbidden, is an inordinate care for apparell, ioyned either with diſtruſt and feare of want, or elſe with a diſcontentedneſſe with that apparell which is meete and neceſſarie. And this is the common ſinne of this age, as the ſundrie badde practiſes of men and women about apparell, proceeding from this inordinate care, doe euidently de-1 clare: as firſt, the affecting of ſuperfluitie and abundance in apparell, and the following of ſtrange and forraine faſhions ſo ſoone as 2 they are taken vp. Secondly, the wearing of too coſtly apparell, aboue their abilitie and degree:
as when ſeruants goe as fine as their maiſters, trades-men like gentlemen; and gentiles, like 3 nobles. Thirdly, the ſpending of much time in the curious trimming and attiring of the bodie, which might be ſpent in better duties. This proceeds frō ſome diſlike in Gods workmanſhip, as though he had not done his part thoroughly to their bodies, or they by their curioſitie could make themſelues better.

Now that Chriſt might remoue out of mens hearts this inordinate care, he doth here enforce his commandement by a fourth reaſon, taken from his prouidence ouer the lillies of the field, and the reaſon is weightie, though the ſubiect of it be meane and ſimple. It may bee framed thus:

If God clothe the lilies of the field, then doubtleſſe he will cloth you:

But God clotheth the lilies of the fields: Therefore much more will he cloath you.

This reaſon is fully ſet downe in theſe three verſes, though the parts be inuerted, by reaſon of their amplifications: for firſt, Chriſt propounds to our conſideration the ſubiect matter, whence his reaſon is drawne, learne how the lilies of the field doe grow. Where this muſt bee marked, that Chriſt ſpeakes of field-lilies, which haue not the helpe of man as garden flowers haue; Then he laies downe a proofe of his aſſumption, that God cloathes them, by remoouing from them the ordinarie meanes of clothing; They labour not, neither ſpinne, v. 28. amplifying this worke of God vpon them by a compariſon, wherein he preferres the glorie of them before the glorie of Salomon in his princely aray, v. 29. And then by way of inference propounds the reaſon, omitting the aſſumption, v. 30. where the firſt part, and concluſion are both propounded and amplifyed, as wee ſhall ſee when we come to the handling of them: for I will followe the order obſerued by Chriſt.

Vnſenſible creatures are our teachers.

Learne how the lillies of the field doe growe. Here Chriſt makes the lilies and hearbs of the field a ſchoolemaſter vnto man, yea to his own diſciples (for hee ſpake to them.) And this he doth for eſpeciall cauſes. Firſt, to teach them and vs, that the ſilly creatures in the field doe in their kind yeeld more obedience vnto God then man doth, and that man is more rebellious vnto God then they are: hence [a] Iſay calls heauen and earth to harken to his rebuke of the Iewes for their ingratitude: and the Prophet rebuking Ieroboam for his Idolatrie, cries, [b] O Altar, Altar, thus ſaith the Lord: Ieremie rebuking Iechoniah, calls to the earth to heare, Ier. 22. 29. and Ezekiel muſt propheſie to the mountaines, Ezec. 6. 3. By all which they would ſhew, that if theſe vnſenſible creatures had reaſon as man hath, they would be more obedient to the will of their Creator then man is. Secondly, hereby Chriſt would teach his diſciples and vs, that though we haue the creatures, and beholde and vſe them daiely, yet partly thorough blindneſſe and ignorance, and partly thorough negligence, wee doe not diſcerne in them, nor learne from them theſe good things which we ought to doe: for the inuiſible things of God, that is, his eternall power and godhead, being conſidered in his workes, are ſeene by the creation of the world, Rom. 1. 20. This then is a checke to our dulneſſe and negligence in the things of God: for what ſhall we doe in the matters of ſaluation, when in theſe inferiour matters we may learne of the vnſenſible creatures?

But what muſt we learne in the lillies? How they growe. And this is a thing to be marked, for in the winter ſeaſon they lie dead in the earth as though they were not; they are couered with froſt and ſnow: and yet in the ſpring time and ſummer, they ſpring vp with ſtalkes, leaues, and flowers of ſuch glorious colours, as paſſeth the glorie of Salomon in all his royaltie. Now whence

A whence comes this, is it of themſelues, or from man? ſurely neither: for they are field-lilies; this onely comes from the word of creation giuen out by God, when he made the creatures, ſaying, [c] let the earth bring forth the greene hearbs, &c. from this working and operatiue word of God, comes the earth to haue power and vertue to ſend out the glorious lilies and euery other hearb. Now then (to apply this to the purpoſe intended by Chriſt) the ſame God that by his operatiue word giues this glorious beeing euery yeare to the field-lilies, hath giuen out a word of prouidence touching his ſeruants, that if they truſt in him, vſing lawfull meanes moderately, they ſhall haue raiment ſufficient, B and all things els that be needfull to this life. Here then is nothing wanting but truſt in God in the ſober vſe of ordinarie meanes, for ſuch ſhall be as ſure of raiment by Gods prouidẽce, as lilies are to grow & bloſſome in the ſpring time and ſummer: and this were ſufficient to perſwade vs vnto moderate care though nothing more had beene ſaid.

[c] Gen.1.11.

From field lilies learne to truſt in God.

But he addeth, they labour not, neither ſpinne: This deniall of the vſe of meanes vnto them, whereby they ſhould be arayed, as it prooues directly that God alone araies them with glorious colours; ſo it ſtrongly enforceth the dutie of contentation vpon vs, relying on Gods prouidence, without diſtracting care: becauſe beſide our title to Gods prouidence not inferi-C our to the lilies of the field, we haue allowed vnto vs for our raiment the vſe of means which they want: and therefore howſoeuer no man, vnder pretence of depending on Gods prouidence, may hence take occaſion to liue idlelie, neglecting the ordinarie lawfull means to procure things honeſt and needfull; yet hereby Chriſt would giue aſſurance to all that truſt in him, and ſerue him, that though all meanes ſhould faile them, (ſo it be not through their default) yet will he prouide things needfull for them.

19. And yet I ſay vnto you, that euen Salomō in all his glorie, &c. Theſe words containe an amplication of the ſecond part of Chriſts reaſon, to wit, that God doth not onely cloath the D lilies; but cloath them in moſt glorious aray, euen aboue the glorie of Salomon in all his roialtie. And this amplificatiō is to be marked, becauſe Salomons glory was extraordinary, by ſpeciall gift from God, aboue his deſire or expectatiō, as we may ſee, 1.kin.3.13. And yet Chriſt ſaith, that each field-lilie is more glorioully arayed by Gods prouidẽce then Salomon was at any time.

A checke to pride in apparell.

This amplification ſerues; firſt, to check and controll the follie of them that are proud in apparell, and nice and curious in araying themſelues. This is the common ſinne of this age, wherein for attire euerie ſort almoſt exceede their abilitie and degree. But why ſhould wee be proud of any apparell, for when wee haue done all wee can to make our ſelues neuer ſo gay, yet we come ſhort of the flowers of the A field in glorious aray? for what cloath or ſilke is ſo white as the lilie? what purple is like the violet? what crimſin or skarlet comparable to diuers flowers of ſuch colours? Arte indeede may doe much, but herein it muſt ſtoop to nature. Now if we cannot come nere the hearbs and flowers which we tread vnder our feete, & caſt into the fornace, why ſhould we be puffed vp with any gayneſſe in our apparell?

Secondly, this teacheth vs that all worldly pompe is but vanitie, for in glory and beautie it comes ſhort of the flower of the field, & yet what is more fraile & tranſitory then the flower, that is to day in the field, and to morrowe is caſt into the ouē? This the holy Ghoſt would B teach vs, by comparing the glorie of man to the flower of graſſe, 1.Pet.1.24. and ſeeing that the faſhion of this world goeth away, 1.Cor.7.31. wherefore (as the Apoſtle there ſaith) wee muſt vſe this world as though wee vſed it not (for Salomons concluſion is true of all earthly things, Vanitie of vanities, all is vanitie, Eccleſ.1.2.) And yet we muſt not here imagine that Chriſt condemnes the glorie of Salomon, though he thus debaſe it below the flower of the field; for it was the gift of God in extraordinary fauour, 1.King.3.13. So that howſoeuer the word of God condemne pride and curioſitie in attire, and ſuperfluitie therein, yet it alloweth vnto Princes and perſonages of great ſtate, the vſe C of gorgious and coſtly raiment: and therefore Ioſeph beeing aduanced to dignitie, was araied in garments of fine linnen, had a ring on his finger, and a chaine of gold about his necke, Gen.41.42. And that which Luke ſaith of Agrippa & Bernice, that they came in with great pompe to heare Paul, Act.25.23. may as well be taken in good part, as in euill.

Worldly pompe is vanitie.

v. 30. Wherefore if God ſo cloath the graſſe of the field, which is to day, and to morrowe is caſt into the ouen: ſhall hee not doe much more vnto you, O ye of D little faith?

Here Chriſt propounds and applyes this reaſon to his diſciples and hearers; and in this application enforceth it, by putting a manifeſt difference betweene men and the hearbs of the field, preferring man farre before them. The preheminence of man aboue the flowers of the fielde ſtands in theſe things: firſt, the hearbs were made for mans vſe, and not man for them; for beſides other vſes, they ſerue for fewell to the ouen, as Chriſt here noteth. Secondly, the hearb of the field is to day and to morrow is not, for beeing burnt or conſumed, it ceaſeth to be at al: But it is not ſo with man, for though he be burnt or conſumed, yet is he not brought to nothing, but his beeing remaineth ſtill by reaſon of his immortall ſoule, which though it had beginning, yet neuer ſhall haue ende: And herein he ſure excelleth them: for though hearbs and trees liue for a time, yet their life ariſeth from the matter whereof they conſiſt, and ſo vaniſheth with it, but the ſoule of man is a different ſubſtance from the bodie, and vaniſheth not though the bodie periſh. This difference is plaine in the creation: for God commanded [d] the earth to bring forth hearbs and trees with their life and ſubſtance: but when he created man, though he made his bodie of the duſt of the earth, yet his ſoule came from God; for [e] hee breathed into his face the breath of life. And herein man excelleth not onely the beaſts of the field, but all beaſts and foules; for though they, beſides life, haue ſenſe and motion from their ſoules, yet their ſoules (whether they be qualities or ſubſtances it here ſkilleth not) ariſing from the matter whereof their bodies ſubſiſt, are mortall and vaniſh to nothing when the bodie periſheth; ſo as a beaſt burnt vp is no beaſt, but a dead man is a man though his bodie be burnt to nothing, becauſe his ſoule liues for euer; yea and his bodie, though eaten vp with beaſts, or conſumed with fire, by vertue of Gods ordinance ſhal one day riſe againe, & be reunited to the ſoule: yea the dead bodies of the elect, by vertue of the couenant of grace, haue not onely relation to their ſoules; but a ſpirituall vnion with Chriſt, for [f] they ſleepe in him, and by his power ſhall one day be raiſed vp to glorie. And this preheminence Chriſt would teach vs, when he calleth God, [g] the God of Abraham, who was dead in regard of his bodie long before, and yet ſaith he, God is the God, not of the dead, (that is, which haue no beeing at all) but of the liuing. Now this preferrement of man aboue the creature, doth greatly inforce the dutie vpon him to depend vpon Gods prouidence without diſtruſtfull care, for if God cloath baſer creatures with glorious array, doubtleſſe he will not ſuffer man his more noble creature to want, as the concluſion following doth declare.

Shall he not doe much more vnto you, O yee of little faith? That is, ſhall he not much more cloath you. Now he amplifieth this concluſion by a reproofe, whereby he would enforce his reaſon more ſtrongly vpon them, ſaying, O yee of little faith. In which reproofe two points are to be conſidered: the perſons reproued, and the cauſe thereof. The perſons are Chriſts choſen Diſciples, whom hee doth not here reproue for want of faith ſimply, but for the weakneſſe and ſmall meaſure of it, becauſe their doubting and diſtruſt in Gods prouidence, was greater then their faith.

Two degrees of faith.

Here then we may obſerue a diſtinction of faith in regard of degree and meaſure, to wit, that beſide that full aſſurance, whereby a man ſo reſteth on Gods promiſes, that hee nothing doubteth through vnbeleefe, as it is ſaid of Abraham, Rom. 4. 20. there is a weake faith mingled with much doubting, ſuch as was in Chriſts Diſciples at this time. And howſoeuer that doubting which is in weake faith be euill, and here reproued, yet the faith it ſelfe is true faith, and ſuch as brings a man to the ſtate of Adoption and of ſaluation: for Chriſt before this reproofe, acknowledged of his Diſciples that they were Gods children, calling God their heauenly Father. If any ſhall ſay or thinke that this weake faith cannot ſaue a man, becauſe his vnbeleefe beeing more then his faith, ſhall haue more force to condemne him then his faith to ſaue him: I anſwer, that no man is ſaued by his faith, becauſe it is perfect without doubting, but becauſe thereby he layeth hold on Gods mercie in Chriſt; now a weake faith may doe this truly, though not ſo perfectly and with ſuch comfort as a ſtrong faith doth: and this doubting and vnbeleefe that is in weake faith cannot condemne vs, if ſo we bewaile our vnbeleefe, and vſe meanes diligently to come by a full aſſurance, for by this weake faith wee are in Chriſt, and in him all our wants & ſinnes are pardoned. Which point muſt carefully be obſerued and remembred, for the ſtay and comfort of their ſoules, that haue in them but this weake faith, and are troubled much with diſtruſt and doubting. And this is many a true child of Gods eſtate, for euery one cannot attaine to Abrahams full aſſurance; but be not diſcouraged, O thou of little faith; thy doubting and diſtruſt may trouble and grieue thee, onely labour diligently in the meanes for the increaſe, and by thy weake faith deſire to lay hold on Chriſt, and ſo ſhall all thy wants be couered, and thy ſinnes pardoned; for endleſſe is Gods mercie in this behalfe, he will not breake the bruiſed reede, nor quench the ſmoking flaxe, Iſa. 42. 3.

A comfort to them that haue weake faith.

II. Point. The cauſe why Chriſt doth thus reproue them for their ſmall faith, is their diſtruſt in God for raiment; as if hee ſhould ſay, whereas you doubt whether your heauenly father will prouide ſufficient raiment for you, notwithſtanding you ſee hee araies his baſer creatures in glorious manner; euen for this cauſe are you to be blamed for ſmall faith.

A propertie of ſauing faith.

Here then we are to obſerue a ſpeciall point touching the propertie of true ſauing faith; namely, that it doth not onely laie hold on the mercie of God for the pardon of ſinne, and life euerlaſting in Chriſt: but on his promiſes alſo for temporall bleſſings that concerne this life. Neither muſt this ſeeme ſtrange to any: and to make it plaine, conſider that the promiſes of God in Scripture are of two ſorts; principall, & inferiour. The principall promiſe, is of Chriſt our redeemer, God and man, and of remiſſion of ſinne, and life euerlaſting by him. The inferiour promiſes, are of temporall bleſſings: as food, raiment, health, peace, libertie, &c. and theſe depend vpon the maine promiſe of Chriſt, ſo farforth as they are for our good: for [h] in Chriſt all the promiſes of God, whether they concerne life eternall, or this temporall life, are yea and a-

men, that is, ſure and certen to Gods children. And hence it is, that when by true faith a man laieth hold on the maine promiſe of God in Chriſt, he doth withall apprehend the promiſes of God for temporall bleſſings: the heart that ſaith by faith, God will pardon my ſinnes, and ſaue my ſoule, will ſay alſo by the ſame faith, God will giue mee foode and raiment, and all things ſufficient for this life. Thus Abraham[i] by the ſame faith whereby he was iuſtified, beleeued Gods promiſe, that he ſhould haue a ſonne in his old age: and Noah[k] beleeued Gods promiſes of his preſeruation in the Arke, by the ſame faith whereby he was made heire of righteouſneſſe. This point muſt be obſerued, and the order remembred, wherein faith laies hold vpon the promiſes: Firſt, it apprehends mercie in Chriſt, and then prouidence for this life. Now hence we learne, that as we looke to be ſaued by our faith after death, ſo we muſt liue by faith in this world; if we relie vpon his mercie for our ſoules, we muſt depend vpon his prouidence for our bodies: how this is done, we ſhal ſee afterward; for how ſhould we caſt our ſelues vpon Gods mercie for the kingdome of heauen, if wee cannot depend vpon his prouidence for food and raiment.

Liue by faith.

How to trie our faith.

Laſtly, hereby we may trie our faith what it is, true or fained, weake or ſtrong: for this Chriſt here tells vs, that the more we are diſtracted with worldly cares, the leſſe is our beleefe in God; for diſtruſtfull care comes from vnbeleefe in Gods prouidence: and the leſſe we truſt in God for temporall things, the leſſe doe we beleeue eternall mercies; for the ſame faith laies hold on both: but if we can truly depend vpon God for temporall bleſſings in the ſober vſe of lawfull meanes, then we ſhall relie vpon his mercie for the ſaluation of our ſoules. This triall is not made in proſperitie; for when God ſends abundance, euery one will truſt in him: but when want comes then is the triall of thy faith; if then thou relie on God, though meanes faile, thy faith is ſtrong: but if thy heart be oppreſſed with ſorrow and feare, and thou make no conſcience of vnlawfull meanes, ſo it may ſupplie thy want; then ſuſpect thy ſelfe, thy faith is weake, or none at all: for the iuſt ſhall liue by faith in all eſtates.

V. 31. Therefore take no thought, ſaying, What ſhall wee eate? or what ſhall we drinke? or wherewith ſhall wee be clothed.

Here Chriſt againe repeateth his commandement againſt diſtruſtfull care giuen in the 25. verſe. The reaſons of this repetition be theſe: 1 Firſt, to ſet an edge vpon the commandement, that ſo it may more ſharply and deepely enter into their hearts, as we ſaid before. 2 Secondly, to further his diſciples in the practiſe of faith, for by this often repetition he giues them occaſion to meditate and thinke vpon the dutie the oftener, whereby their faith muſt needes be much confirmed: for this we muſt know for our direction to get and ſtrengthen true faith in our hearts, that a man is not a meere patient in the conceiuing and ſtrengthening of this grace; it comes not from God to vs, as viſions did to the Prophets in a dreame in the night, or as the print of the ſeale is ſet into the waxe, but God workes it in the vſe of ordinarie meanes. And therefore if we would haue faith wrought or increaſed in vs, we muſt doe that which by nature we may doe; to wit, heare the word preached, and read; we muſt meditate therein, and labour for to vrge the promiſes of God vpon our owne hearts; yea, we muſt doe what we can, to ſtirre vp in our hearts a deſire to beleeue, and to ſtriue againſt doubting and diſtruſt, and therefore muſt giue our ſelues to praier with ſighs and grones to God, for the working of his ſpirit in our hearts.

Now touching this commandement againſt diſtruſtfulneſſe, we handled it in the 25. v. ſhewing how farre our care muſt go for things needfull, and where it muſt ſtay. It muſt extend it ſelfe to the diligent vſe of lawfull ordinarie meanes to procure things needfull, and there ſtay, giuing place to faith to wait vpon Gods prouidence for the bleſſing of our endeauours.

How diſtruſtfull care may be diſcerned.

The diſtruſtfull care which perplexeth the heart about the ſucceſſe of our lawfull labours, is that which Chriſt forbids, and it is that euill ſickeneſſe which infects moſt mens ſoules, as they may eaſily diſcerne by obſeruing theſe things; what it is, that oft breakes their ſleepe in the night; what comes firſt into their thoughts when they awake; and what their minds runne moſt vpon all the day long; and whereabout they can take greateſt paines, with moſt delight, and leaſt wearineſſe. If it be for the things of this world, then diſtruſtful care infects their ſoules, which we muſt ſtriue againſt, and learne to liue by faith.

Here only obſerue how Chriſt deſcribes this vnlawfull care by the effects of it in diſtruſtfull perſons, bringing them in, ſaying, What ſhall we eate? what ſhall we drinke? or wherewith ſhall wee be clothed? And thus indeede they vſe to complaine, eſpecially when they haue great charges and ſlender meanes, or els doe ſuſtaine any great loſſes, then, how ſhall we liue? what ſhal we doe? and ſuch like ſpeeches of diſtruſt: which Chriſt here iuſtly reproues, because they blame God for his dealing towards them, as though he had no care of them, or would not prouide things for them. 1 We therefore muſt learne to ſhut our mouthes againſt diſtruſtfull thoughts and beware we murmure not, nor complaine of his dealing towards vs. When[l] Aarons two ſonnes Nadab and Abihu were both ſlaine for offring ſtrange fire, Moſes tells him it was the 2 Lords doing, who would bee glorified in all that come neere him; then the text ſaith, Aaron held his peace. And Dauid notably teſtifieth his contentation in Gods prouidence, Pſal. 39. 2. I held my peace and ſaid nothing: yea, v. 9. I ſhould haue beene dumbe and not haue opened my mouth, becauſe thou Lord didſt it. Excellent is that ſaying of the Lord, Iſa. 30. 15. In reſt and quietneſſe ſhall yee be ſaued; in quietneſſe and confidence ſhall be your ſtrength: meaning, that by patience and contentation a man ſhewes ſtrong confidēce in God: ſo that though Gods dealing ſeeme neuer ſo hard, we muſt beware of impatient words and murmuring thoughts, endeauouring to ſay with [m] Eli, it is the Lord, let him doe what ſeemeth good in his eyes: and with [n] Iob, though he kil me, yet wil I truſt in him.

V. 32. For after all theſe things ſeeke the Gentiles: for your heauenly Father knoweth that yee haue neede of all theſe things.

5 Reaſon againſt diſtruſtfull care.

This verſe containes Chriſts fifth and ſixth reaſons, to diſſwade his hearers from diſtruſtful care. The fifth is drawne from the practiſe of the Gentiles, and it ſtandeth thus:

That which the Gentiles doe which know not God, you muſt not doe, (they doing amiſſe:)
But the Gentiles ſeeke thus diſtruſtfully for things needfull: Therefore you muſt not doe ſo.

The word in the originall whereby Chriſt declareth this behauiour of the Gentiles, be more emphaticall then our tranſlation doth expreſſe: for they import that the Gentiles ſet themſelues to ſeeke, or ſeeke with all their might. Which muſt be obſerued, becauſe it is not a ſinne ſimply to ſeeke things neceſſary, but wholly to giue our ſelues thereto, that is, the ſinne; becauſe it proceeds from diſtruſt in God. Queſt. Why did the Gentiles thus wholy giue themſelues to ſeeke things neceſſarie? Anſ. Becauſe they knew not the true God, nor his prouidence; they were not acquainted with his word, as Dauid ſaith. And this was the ſtate of all the world before Chriſts comming, the Iewes onely excepted, and their forefathers, with ſome few Proſelytes who by conuerſing with Gods people were conuerted to true religion.

Vſe 1. Vniuerſall grace confuted.

This point well obſerued; firſt, ouerthrows the opinion of vniuerſall grace, as a meere deuiſe of mans braine: for if the Gentiles knew not the true God, how ſhould they know the way to life? if God gaue them not ſo much grace, whereby they could depend vpon his prouidence for the things of this life, much leſſe did he giue them grace to beleeue and to be ſaued, if they would.

2 Worldlings like Pagans.

Secondly, this ſhewes that they who ſet their hearts vpon the world, and giue themſelues to ſeeke earthly things, are Gentiles and Pagans; they haue not yet attained to this A principle of Chriſtianity, to depend vpon Gods prouidence by faith: they ſee no prouidence, and ſo rely onely vpon the meanes, whereby they ſacrifice to their owne paynes & induſtry, and ſo make themſelues their owne God. This is the ſtate of many among vs, who beare the name of Chriſtians, but indeed and practiſe are as Turkes, and Pagans: and this reaſon alone well waighed, is ſufficient to moue any Chriſtian heart in a moderate care to ſeeke earthly things.

3 Chriſtians muſt in all things be vnlike the heathen.

Thirdly, marke the ground of this reaſon; Chriſts Diſciples had the true God for their God, which the Gentiles had not, and there- B fore they muſt differ from the Gentiles in their behauiour. This teacheth vs, that in all things Gods children muſt be vnlike the heathen, for in all things wee muſt forſake them, and in all things that be good wee muſt excell them. The ſonne of a Prince will not ſhew himſelfe like a beggar in any thing; no more ſhould the child of God, in any thing conforme himſelfe vnto the world. O then how worthie doe we walke of our vocation: for the very ſinnes of the heathen are rife among vs, as vncleanneſſe, drunkenneſſe, ſlandering, and oppreſſion; nay many among vs exceede the Pagans in mercileſſe dealing towards the poore, for they neuer knew that Chriſt came for releife in the perſon of his poore, and yet many among them were more mercifull, then many now a daies that beare the names of Chriſtians: for doe not the C poore ſometime die for want of releefe? and doe not many among vs make a gaine of Gods iudgement vpon the poore, ſelling their commodities deereſt when the poore haue greateſt want and neede? well, if we will approoue our ſelues to be Gods peculiar ones, let vs be aſhamed to bee like the heathen in any euill, or not to goe beyond them in that which is good.

For your heauenly Father knoweth that you haue need of all theſe things.

6. Reaſon againſt diſtruſtfull care.

D These words containe Chriſts ſixth reaſon to his Diſciples againſt diſtruſtful care drawne from Gods ſpeciall prouidence ouer them: and it alſo includes an anſwer to a ſecret obiection againſt Chriſts command: for ſome man might ſay; If we may not be carefull for things needfull, who ſhall prouide them? Chriſt here anſwers; you muſt not be diſtruſtfully carefull, for you haue a father in heauen, who knowes whereof you haue neede, and careth for you. Now looke whereof God takes care in your behalfe, you neede not trouble your ſelues further then the ſober vſe of lawfull meanes: But God your heauenly father takes notice of your eſtate, and will prouide that which is beſt for you: and therefore you neede not to vexe your minds there-about.

A moſt worthie reaſon, and alone ſufficient go driue vs from diſtruſtfull care: for this acquainteth vs with Gods particular and ſpeciall prouidence ouer vs, taking notice of our eſtate whatſoeuer it is, and diſpoſing it to the beſt. In regard whereof we muſt learne contentation in all eſtates of this life, in ſickeneſſe, as in health; in trouble, as in peace; and in want, as well as in aboundance; for whatſoeuer our eſtate be, it is according to the good pleaſure of our heauenly father, who is infinite in power and wiſedome, both knowing what is beſt, and able to turne all to our good, as we ſhall ſurely finde by comfortable experience, if by faith we depend vpon him. This Dauid knew well, and therefore ſaith, [a] hee will not feare though hee walke through the valley of the ſhadowe of death; why? for thou art with mee, thy rod and ſtaffe; that is, thy ſpirit, thy word, and prouidence comfort mee. If our hearts were ſetled in this point, we ſhould not be impatient in diſtreſſe, nor dead hearted in want; nay it would make vs cheerefull in the houre of death, for hereby we ſhould be aſſured that theſe eſtates were better for vs, then peace, wealth, or life it ſelfe, becauſe they come by the will of our heauenly father, who knoweth whereof we haue need: & therefore let vs labour by faith to be aſſured of our adoption, that we may know God to be our father, and then by the ſame faith wee ſhall be eaſily aſſured, that he will turne all things that befall vs to our good.

a Pſal.23.4.

V. 33. But firſt ſeeke the kingdome of God and his righteouſneſſe, and all theſe things ſhall be miniſtred vnto you.

The Chriſtiā mans care.

Our Sauiour Chriſt hauing by ſixe ſeuerall arguments diſſwaded his Diſciples from diſtruſtfull care, doth here ſhew vnto them, what care that is, which ought alwaies to poſſeſſe their hearts; to wit, Care after the kingdome of God and his righteouſneſſe. And this care hee impoſeth vpon them by expreſſe command, ſaying, Firſt ſeeke yee the kingdome of God and his righteouſneſſe; and then vrgeth the entertaining of it, by an effectuall reaſon, and all theſe things ſhall be miniſtred vnto you.

The Expoſition. There be two things here inioyned vs to ſeeke; Gods kingdome, and righteouſneſſe: and of both theſe Chriſt ſaith, Firſt ſeeke, that is, before all, and aboue all wordly things, let your principall care and indeauour be, to procure theſe vnto your ſelues. By kingdome of God is here meant, a ſtate and condition of man in this life, whereby in Chriſt hee enioyes the fauour of God, and hath right to euerlaſting life. This very eſtate of man is in Scripture called the kingdome of God, and the kingdome of heauen, becauſe whoſoeuer is in this eſtate, hath ſure right and intereſt to Gods glorie in heauen, and God here rules in him, as a King ruleth in his kingdome. The Kingdome

What Gods kingdome here is.

A of God, is onely one, and yet it hath two degrees; the firſt in grace, and the ſecond in glorie. The kingdome of grace, is that ſpirituall regiment which God exerciſeth in man, or in his Church, by his word and ſpirit in this life; and it is the firſt ſtep of entrance into Gods heauenly kingdome. The kingdome of glory, is the full fruition of immediate fellowſhip with the bleſſed Trinitie, by meanes of Ieſus Chriſt in the higheſt heauens, after this life. Now both theſe degrees are here vnderſtood by the kingdome of God. The ſecond thing to be thus ſought for, is his righteouſneſſe, that is, the righteouſneſſe of God, and not as ſome tranſlate it, the righteouſneſſe thereof, that is, of Gods kingdome; for the words wil not beare that tranſlation. B And the ſeeking of Gods righteouſneſſe, is here added for ſpeciall cauſe; to let vs ſee by way of explanation, when we haue obtained for our ſelues the Kingdome of God: for Gods kingdome ſtands in righteouſneſſe, and then doth God rule in man, when he makes him partaker of his righteouſneſſe. Now by righteouſneſſe of God, we muſt here vnderſtand, the obedience which Chriſt our mediatour performed for vs, in fulfilling the law, and in his ſufferings. This is the very ground-worke and foundation of Gods kingdome among men: hereof Paul ſpeaketh oft, Rom. 1. 17. For by it, that is the Goſpel, the righteouſnes of God is reuealed from faith to faith: and Rom. 3. 21. 22. Now is the righteouſneſſe of God made manifeſt, &c. and 2. Cor. 5. 21. God made him to be ſinne for vs, which C knew no ſinne, that we might be made the righteouſneſſe of God in him. And it is ſo called for diuers reſpects; Firſt, becauſe it is freely giuen vs of God to be our righteouſnes in his ſight; & man cannot attaine vnto it of himſelfe by any worke of nature or of grace, without the gift of God. Secondly, becauſe God will accept this obedience of Chriſt at the day of iudgement, for his elect, as ſatisfying his iuſtice, and the rigour of the law, which no righteouſneſſe of man can doe. Thirdly, becauſe it is the righteouſneſſe of that perſon who is God; for Chriſt is both God and man, and though he obeyed the law, and ſuffered death, as he was man, yet that obedience was performed by that perſon who was alſo God. Adams righteouſneſſe by D creation was in himſelfe, but he loſt it by his fall: but our righteouſneſſe is in Chriſt out of vs, and therefore he is ſaid, [b] to be made righteouſnes vnto vs of God. But how ſhould we get this righteouſneſſe, ſeeing it is Chriſt? Anſw. It is made ours by imputation, for when wee truly repent of our ſinnes, & beleeue in Chriſt, God accepts the obedience of Chriſt for vs, as if we had perfectly ſatisfied his iuſtice, and done his will in our owne perſons. Now with this imputed righteouſneſſe, we muſt vnderſtand and ioyne the fruit hereof in vs, which is ſanctification, or renued holineſſe, whereby we are enabled to walke before God in new obedience, bringing forth the fruits of Gods kingdome in two degrees.

Gods righteouſneſſe is Chriſts obedience.

Why it is ſo called.

A righteousnes: for these two are neuer seuered; whom God iustifies by the righteousnesse of Christ, them he sanctifies by his spirit. The full meaning then of Christs commandement here is this; First seeke, &c. that is, aboue all things in this world, let your principal care be to procure vnto your selues the kingdome of God; that is, that state of grace, whereby you may enioy Gods fauour in Christ, beeing iustified by his obedience, and sanctified by his spirit, whereby you walke in good workes.

he mea-ing.

The vse. First, by this commandement of Christ, to seeke Gods kingdome, we may gather, that by nature we are all out of Gods kingdome, destitute of the grace and fauour of B God, and indeede vnder the power of Satan, and in his kingdome of darkenesse. This the holy Ghost shewes in calling Satan, the god of this world, 2. Cor. 4. 4. and the prince of this world, Ioh.12.31. because all the world naturally are vassals vnto him; yeilding him homage in the workes of sinne: and therefore he is called the [c] prince that ruleth in the aire, that worketh in the children of disobedience. And this naturall miserie is iustly come vpon vs, for seeing we refuse to yeeld subiection vnto God in his kingdome, are we not worthily left to the power of Satan, to bee made his slaues and drudges? Now that men liue naturally out of Christs kingdome, may appeare by the course of their liues; for howsoeuer most men can bee C contented to beare the badge of Christ in outward profession, hearing the word, and receiuing the Sacraments; yet in heart and life they doe homage to the deuill, for they pull their neckes from the yoake of Christ, and runne with greedinesse to the workes of sinne; they account a strict endeauour after morall obedience to be curiositie and precisenesse, and whē they be dehorted from vnlawfull gaine and vaine pleasures, they will not heare, nor consent; whereby in effect they say to God with wicked men in Iob, [d] Depart from vs, we desire not the knowledge of thy wayes: and with the wicked citizens, [e] we will not haue this man to raigne ouer vs.

ll are naturally out of Gods kingdome.

e Luk.19.14

Secondly, here Christ would teach vs, that D our principall care aboue all other things must bee, to winne for our selues the kingdome of God. I shall not neede to prooue this to be our duty, seeing it is the onely thing which Christ here intends to commend vnto vs, and that by expresse cōmand. But some will aske, how we shall win and get for our selues the kingdome of God? Answ. We must doe three things for the obtaining of it: First, we must come to the place where this kingdome is to be found. Secondly, we must then enter into it. Thirdly, we must wait for the full possession of it.

To get Gods kingdome must be our chiefe care.

The meanes.

For the first: This kingdome is not to bee found in all places, but there onely where God doth manifest & reueale the same to the sonnes of men; and that is in the assemblies of the saints, wher the publike ministery of reconciliation is dispensed; for there God holds out his scepter, and offers himselfe to bee Lord and king vnto men: and therefore Dauid calls this ministerie of the word, the rodde or scepter of Gods power, Psal. 110. 2. and in the parable of the sower, Matth.13.19. the Gospel preached is called the word of the kingdome, because hereby God reueales the kingdome vnto men, and translates them into it, Coloss. 1. 13. And for the same cause, in the parable of the field, Matth. 13. 24. is the same ministerie of the Gospel called expressely the kingdome of God. And therfore when the Church demands of Christ, where shee shall finde him, he bids her followe the steps of the flocks to the tents of the Shepheards: Cant.1.7. that is, the assemblies of the Saints, to the preaching of Gods ministers: and therfore, if euer we looke to get this kingdome, we must diligently frequent the ministerie of the word, and labour to profit by it, because hereby God doth not onely reueale, but conuaie his kingdome vnto men.

1. Come where it is.

Secondly, when wee haue found this kingdome, we must seeke to enter into it; for it is not enough to bee where it is, or to haue it among vs, for so the Pharisies had in the time of Christ, Luk.11.20. Now we cannot enter in of our selues, without the speciall worke of Gods holy spirit; so saith our Sauiour Christ, Mat.18. 3. Except ye be conuerted & become as little children, yee cannot enter into the kingdome of God: where two things are required in him that would enter into this kingdome: To become as little children; and to be conuerted. We become as little children in humilitie, meekenesse, and freedom from pride and disdaine; for we know the child of a Prince wil without disdaine associate himselfe in play with a poore mans child: and so wee in conscience of our owne sinnes, must be humbled in our selues, and made base in our own eyes, laying aside our natural pride and selfe-loue, and disdaine of others: for a hart swelling with pride and selfe-loue, cannot enter into the strait gate of this kingdome. Againe, we must be conuerted and regenerate by the spirit of God: for [f] except a man be borne againe of water, and of the spirit, he cannot see the kingdome of God. This cōuersion is not a change of the substance of the soule, or of the body, or of the faculties or parts thereof, but onely of their euill qualities and actions; whereby the Image of Satan in sinne and corruption is abolished, & the image of God renued, for knowledge, righteousnesse, and true holinesse both in heart and life. When this work of regeneration is truly begun in vs, then doe we enter into Gods kingdome, euen in this life: for herein the ignorant deceiue themselues, that think we enter not before the time of death.

2. Enter in.

f Ioh.3.3.

What conuersion is.

ſcience, walking in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe, before God, and in the practiſe of loue, vprightneſſe, and mercie towards our brethren. When the queſtion is who ſhall dwell in Gods tabernacle, and reſt in his holy mountaine; that is, remain a true member of Gods Church for euer? Pſal.51.1. the anſwer is, verſe 2. He that walketh vprightly, and worketh righteouſnes. Hereby we teſtifie our ſelues to be alreadie entred, for Gods kingdome ſtands in righteouſneſſe, Rom.14.17. And thus haue Gods children done, that haue waited for this kingdom, Matth.25.4. The wiſe virgins tooke oyle in their veſſels to light their lamps when the bridegroome came. And Ioſeph of Arimathea, that noble counſeller, who waited for the kingdome of God, was a good man and a iuſt, Luk.23.50.51.

Thus we ſee the way to get this kingdome for our ſelues: now the neceſſitie of our endeauour in theſe duties with all care and diligence appeares by this, that out of this eſtate, for true intereſt to this kingdom, is nothing indeed but woefull miſerie, vnder the curſe of God, & the power of Satan in the kingdome of darkneſſe: but in the fruition of this kingdom is true happineſſe: here is [g] righteouſneſſe, peace, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt: yea, [h] ioy vnſpeakeable and glorious: for [i] the things that eie hath not ſeene, eare hath not heard, neither euer entred into the heart of man to thinke, hath God prepared for them that loue him: and they are all to be had in this his kingdome. Wherefore as wee deſire to eſcape the woe and miſerie of the deuills kingdome, and to be partakers of the ioyes of heauen, ſo let vs looke vnto the performance of the former duties, ſhewing herein the reſolution of the wiſe merchant that parted with all he had to get that pearle of price, Matth.13.46.

Gods kingdome like a citie with ſuburbs and two gates.

This kingdome of God, is here ſet out vnto vs, like a citie with ſuburbs, and two gates; the ſuburbs of this city, are thoſe aſſemblies wher the word of God is truely preached and diſpenſed: and hereinto come not onely the elect and godly, but hypocrites and reprobates. The firſt gate, is the true ſtate of grace, whereinto the elect of God alone do enter by regeneration; in which eſtate they continue in this life going on from one degree of grace vnto a greater, with endeuour in all things to keepe faith & a good conſcience both towards God and men, & ſo wait to enter the gate of glory, which is ſet open vnto thē, & they enter in at the houre of death. And therfore let vs not deceiue our own ſouls, as the fooliſh virgins did with their burning lamps, and content our ſelues, that we come to Church, and liue ciuilly; though theſe be good things, yet, an hypocrite may goe thus farre, all this while we are but in the ſuburbs of this kingdome: but if euer we looke for the glory of heauen, we muſt in this life enter the ſtate of grace by regeneration, and become new creatures.

1. Gate.

2. Gate.

Thus much of the commandement; The reaſon to enforce it, is a gracious and bountifull promiſe: And all theſe things ſhall be miniſtred vnto you. The words are very ſignificant in the originall, for the phraſe which Chriſt vſeth, is borrowed from bargainers, to this effect: as thoſe who ſell corne, or other things by meaſure, or waight, vſe to giue ſome ouerplus to better the bargaine on the buyers part; euen ſo the Lord promiſeth to thoſe that ſeeke his kingdome and righteouſneſſe, beſide the fruition thereof, to giue, or caſt vnto them, as the word imports, food, and raiment, and all things needfull to this life. Queſt. How is this true, ſeeing we read that Gods children haue beene many times deſtitute of things neceſſarie; as Paul was oft in hunger and thirſt, in faſtings, in colde and nakedneſſe, 2. Cor.11.27. and many whom the world was not worthy of, were deſtitute, afflicted, and tormented, wandring vp and downe in ſheepe skinnes, and goate skinnes, Heb.11.37. Anſw. Chriſts promiſe in this place, & all other made of temporall bleſſings, muſt bee vnderſtood with the exception of the croſſe; that is, they ſhall haue ſuch and ſuch bleſſings, vnleſſe it pleaſe God by the want thereof, to correct them for ſome ſinnes, or to exerciſe their faith in the triall of their patience.

How to ſe for tempo bleſſings.

The vſe. Firſt, by this promiſe of Chriſt we haue this moſt excellent directiō from him that is wiſedome it ſelfe, how to order our ſelues in ſeeking for all temporall bleſſings needefull to this life; namely, we muſt firſt ſeeke Gods kingdome and his righteouſneſſe, in the performance of thoſe duties that may bring vs thereunto; and then all theſe needefull things for this life, as food and raiment, ſhall be caſt vnto vs, in the ſober vſe of ordinarie meanes. The reaſon hereof is plaine, for Gods kingdome is mans chiefe good and happineſſe, & all temporall bleſſings depend thereupon as appurtenances to the principall, as it were intailed thereon; and therfore he that would haue theſe dependants, muſt get vnto himſelfe the kingdome of God, which is the principall. While the arke of the couenant was in Obed Edoms houſe, God bleſſed him, and all that he had, 2. Sam. 6. 11. How much more then ſhall God bleſſe them, that receiue his holy ſpirit to rule in their heart by grace? for as Dauid ſaith, the godly man ſhall be like a tree planted by the riuers of water: and whatſoeuer he doth ſhall proſper. By the bleſſing of God we haue had his kingdome among vs for many yeares in this nation, and God hath giuen vs with it peace and protection, with great abundāce of temporal bleſſings: Indeede God hath ſundrie waies corrected vs, and laid his heauie hand vpon vs in ſundrie iudgements, as plague, famine, &c. and often ſhaken his rodde at vs in the hands of our enemies, and all becauſe we haue not receiued the word of his kingdome, nor yeelded obediēce to it as wee ought; yea and we may feare the fulneſſe of his wrath, vnleſſe we repent & amēd of this ſinne eſpecially. But if we would ſet our ſelues to ſeek this kingdom, we needed not to feare the want of any needfull bleſsing: for ſo God promiſed to his people, to giue them aboundance of all things, if they would obey his commandements, which are the lawes and ſtatutes of his kingdome: Deut. 28.1,2. &c.

This point then is to be obſerued for our direction in particular. Art thou a poore man, and wouldeſt haue ſufficient food and raiment for thy temporall life? then firſt, ſet thy heart to ſeeke Gods kingdome, follow the word, & labour therein for regeneration, and new obedience; and doubt not, but if thou be vpright and diligent in thy lawfull calling, thou ſhalt finde ſufficient for this life. Queſt. If this bee the way to get ſufficient, how comes it that we haue ſo many beggars that wander vp and downe from doore to doore? Anſw. They are (for the moſt part) a curſed generation, which haue no regard to Gods ordinances, either for their ſoule or bodies; they ioyne not themſelues to any ſetled congregation for the obtaining of Gods kingdome, and ſo this promiſe belongs not to them: but God ſuffers them to wander in an idle courſe all their life long, deſtitute of this bleſsing, to eate their owne bread. Againe, art thou a rich man, and wouldeſt continue in that eſtate, to thine owne comfort, and for the good of thoſe that depend vpon thee? then, ſet thy heart to ſeeke Gods kingdome with a ſpeciall care, ſeeke to plant religion in thy family, and thou and thine houſe ſhall flouriſh. Art thou a ſtudent, and deſireſt the bleſsing of God vpon thy labours, with all things ſufficient to thy ſtate & calling? then firſt ſeeke Gods kingdome and righteouſneſſe, labour for righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe, and God will adde thee with his bleſsings. In a word, whatſoeuer thou art, Magiſtrate, Miniſter, Merchant, or trades-man, &c. man or woman, young or olde, and deſireſt Gods bleſsing for thy ſelfe, or any that belong vnto thee, remember the practiſe of this duetie, and vſe the lawfull meanes which God layes before thee in thy calling, and nothing doubt, but (though all meanes faile) yet God will ſend ſufficient.

Secondly, this promiſe of temporall bleſsings vpon the faithfull ſeeking of the kingdome of God, let vs ſee, that foode, raiment, and all things needfull for this life, are appurtenances and dependants on Gods kingdome: that is, ſuch things as God will adde beſides his kingdome; God will giue to them that principally ſeeke his loue and fauour by the righteouſneſſe of Christ, and labour for grace, and ſanctification by his ſpirit; for if hee haue giuen vs Chriſt, how ſhall hee not with him giue vs all things alſo? Rom. 8.32.

The conſideration hereof ſerues for ſpeciall vſe: I. To diſcouer vnto vs the prepoſterous courſe that men take in ſeeking for temporall bleſsings: for moſt men generally neglect the maine good, which is Gods kingdome, and wholly addict themſelues to ſeeke the things of this life; they take little or no thought for the eternall ſtate of their ſoules, but ſpend their wit and ſtrength in prouiding for their bodies; which is nothing elſe, but to gripe the ſhadow, and to let the ſubſtance goe. Wherein we ſhew our ſelues fooliſh and ſimple, like to little children, who are better pleaſed with the gift of a nut or an apple, then with the promiſe of rich reuenues, or great inheritance. II. This teacheth vs with what minde we muſt ſeeke the temporall bleſsings of this life; namely, with the ſame honeſt minde, wherewith we ſeeke the kingdome of God, for they are appurtenāces thervnto, & depend vpon it: and therefore with an vpright heart, we muſt onely vſe lawfull means moderately for the getting of them. And when we haue them, this may direct vs in the right ende whereto we muſt vſe our temporall bleſsings; namely, to the furtherance of our ſelues and others towards the kingdome of God; ſo wee honour God with our riches, as Salomon bidden vs, Prou. 3.9.

The wicked are vſurpers in Gods bleſsings.

III. This teacheth vs, that they which haue no right to Gods kingdome, nor part in Chriſts righteouſnes, haue no good intereſt into any temporall bleſsings; as food, raiment, and ſuch like, for they are dependants vpon Gods kingdome and righteouſneſſe. As for the heathen before Chriſts comming, and Turks, and Pagans, and all profane perſons that liue in the Church at this day, who both heretofore and now alſo, doe inioy temporall bleſsings in great aboundance; this we muſt know, that they haue thereto a ciuill right by Gods permiſsion, ſo as it is ſinne, without good cauſe to depriue them thereof; but yet of themſelues they are but vſurpers, in regard of true title & ſanctified vſe before God, for by Adams fall we loſt our right and ſoueraignetie in the creatures, and it is onely reſtored and renued in Chriſt, ſo as they which haue no part in Chriſt, cannot haue this true title.

A branch of mans naturall miſerie.

This we muſt obſerue, firſt, to inſtruct our ſelues the better in the knowledge of our owne miſerable eſtate by nature; for what wretched creatures are we, that cannot make good claime nor title before God, to the apparell vpon our backs, nor to the meate we put in our bellies; nay, of our ſelues we haue no right to the breath we draw in at our noſtrils. And out of queſtion this is the ſtate of euery naturall man, though he be neuer ſo great a monarke in the world, while he is out of Gods kingdom, wanting righteouſneſſe & regeneration by Ieſus Chriſt. Secondly, this alſo muſt perſwade euery one of vs, to put in practiſe the former inſtruction, endeuouring aboue all things to get Gods kingdom for our ſelues; for till we haue part herein, we can haue no ſound comfort in the vſe of Gods creatures, which neceſſarily ſerue to our temporall life. This reaſon alone, if there were no more, ſhould ſpurre vs on to all diligence in this dutie; what ſhame and griefe is it to eate our bread in the ſight of God, as theeues and vſurpers do in the ſight of men? and therefore let vs giue no reſt vnto our ſoules till wee attaine to ſome good aſſurance in this bleſſed eſtate. The way we muſt remember, is by true conuerſion and regeneration; & we ſhall diſcerne our ſelues to be regenerate by theſe fruits of the ſpirit in vs; to wit; I. A true touch of conſcience for our ſinnes, both originall and actuall. II. A godly ſorrowe and griefe of heart for offending and diſpleaſing God by our tranſgreſſions. III. An earneſt deſire, or true ſpirituall hunger and thirſt after Chriſt, and his righteouſneſſe, teſtified by our conſtant and diligent vſe of thoſe meanes the word, prayer, and Sacraments, wherein God giues grace and aſſurance of mercie. IV. An vnfained turning vnto God from all ſinne by new obedience, hauing a conſtant purpoſe of heart not to ſinne, and a godly endeauour in life to pleaſe God in all things. Theſe are the markes of the newe creature, who hath true title to Gods kingdome; which we muſt labour to find in our ſelues for our comfort in the vſe of Gods creatures: and if we finde them in vs, our title is good, not onely to his creatures, but to his kingdome, notwithſtanding our owne vnworthineſſe by our former iniquities.

4 A ground of contentation in loſſes.

IV. In this, that temporall bleſſings are dependants on Gods kingdome, we muſt learne contentation & patience in all temporall loſſes whatſoeuer; though we looſe freinds, goods, lands, libertie, reputation, or life it ſelfe, yet we muſt not be ouerwhelmed with ſorow or griefe: for if we be Gods children, and retaine his fauour, the kingdome of heauen remaines ſure vnto vs: while a mans ſtocke remaines, though ſome appurtenances be taken from him, he counts himſelfe well enough; and ſo muſt we in al worldly loſſes, while our title is good to gods kingdome. Herewith our Sauiour Chriſt comforts his diſciples, Luk. 12.32. Feare not little flocke, for it is your Fathers pleaſure to giue you that kingdome. Now if God giue vs that with his fauour in Chriſt, we may be ſure he would giue vs all temporall bleſſings, if he ſaw them to be good for vs; for if he haue giuen vs Chriſt, how ſhall he not with him giue vs all things alſo?

Gods bountie.

Thirdly, this promiſe of Chriſt, to giue his kingdome to them that ſeeke it, and beſide, to caſt all temporall bleſſings vnto them, if they ſeeke his kingdome principally, doth notably commend vnto vs the bountiful goodneſſe of God; for here we ſee he giues to his children more then they aske or ſeeke. And this bountie of God, Paul expreſſeth as a groūd of our praiſing God, Eph. 3.20. To him therefore that is able to doe exceeding abundantly aboue all that wee can aske or thinke, according to the power that worketh in vs, be praiſe in the Church, by Ieſus Chriſt: where we muſt obſerue, that he ſpeaks of Gods abilitie to be bountiful, as brought into action in his children, ſo as he is not onely able but willing hereunto: and hereof we haue daily experience in the bleſſings of God which we doe enioy, for when we pray for ſpirituall graces, God giues them vnto vs, and many temporall bleſſings alſo. This Dauid confeſſeth, Pſal. 21.3. Thou diddeſt preuent me with liberall bleſſings: and Salomon found it to be true, who asking onely a wiſe and vnderſtanding heart, receiued thereupon riches and honour beſides his wiſedome, 1. King. 3.13. And ſo did Iacob, a who asking only Gods protection with meate to eate, and clothes to put on; though b he went out but with a ſtaffe, yet returned with two bands.

b Gen.

Duties fro Gods bou tie.

Now the conſideration of this bountie of God muſt teach vs theſe duties: 1 Firſt, to beware of all ſinne, whereby we doe offend and diſpleaſe our God, who is ſo gratious and bountifull vnto vs: if our outward eſtate did depend vpon others, we would then be carefull ſo to carrie our ſelues towards them, as that we would not willingly giue them any offence, or cauſe of diſlike: how much more ought we then to ſeeke the continuance of Gods fauour towards vs by all good behauiour, ſeing on him dependeth our whole eſtate both temporall and eternall? 2 Secondly, to truſt God with our liues, health, bodies, and all we haue, for foode, raiment, and protection, in the ſober vſe of lawfull meanes, for he is a bountifull God. 3 Thirdly, to ſeeke for helpe & ſuccour from God in all diſtreſſe and want, for he is bountifull; hee giueth to all men liberally, and reproacheth no man, Iam. 1.5. and therefore wee muſt be readie and forward to call vpon him, and to make our mone vnto him. 4 Fourthly, to loue ſo bountifull a God, yea to enforce our hearts to all duties of loue towards him: Salomon ſaith, Euery man is a friend to him that giueth gifts, Prou. 19.6. but none is to be compared to God for the riches of bountie; and therefore our loue to him ſhould abound. 5 Fiftly, to be thankefull vnto God for all the good things we enioy, for whatſoeuer we haue, comes from his bountie: and therefore we muſt ſay with Dauid, What ſhall I giue vnto the Lord, for all his bleſſings are vpon me, Pſal. 116.12.13. 6 In a word, we muſt labour continually in heart and life, to walke worthy of the Lord, and to pleaſe him in all things, beeing fruitfull in all good workes (as the Apoſtle ſaith) Coloſſ. 1.10.

V. 34. Care not for the morrow: for the morrow ſhall care for it ſelfe: the day hath enough with his his owne griefe.

Here Chriſt the third time repeats his commandement againſt diſtruſtful care, propounded firſt in the 25. verſe; In which often repetition, hee intends to make vs more carefull and diligent, both to learne and practiſe the ſame. And hereto he alſo addeth a ſtrength reaſon to enforce and further our obedience, drawne from the daily griefe and trouble which accompanies euery day of our life.

The Expoſition. Care not for the morrow: that is, for the time to come. This may seeme a strange commandement tending to patronage sloth and negligence; but we must know, that there is a double care for the time to come. I. A godly lawfull care. II. A distrustfull & inordinate care. The godly care is that, whereby a man prouides for in the time present, such things as are needfull in the time to come, and cannot then be prouided: this lawfull care we may obserue in our Sauiour Christ, for he had a bagge to keepe prouision for himselfe and his disciples, which Iudas bare, Ioh. 13.29. & when Agabus foretold of a generall famine, the Disciples prouided aforehand, to send succour to the brethren which dwelt in Iudea, Act. 11.28,29. And thus may a trades-man prouide for maintenance while his strength and sight is good, against the time of his age, wherein he may bee vnable to follow his calling. And thus do men in fit season prouide for food and raiment. And we may prouide to day, that is, in the time present, for any needfull thing, when to morrow will not afford it.

A double prouidence in man. 1. Godly.

The inordinate and distrustfull care for the morrow, is that whereby men vexe their minds, and turmoile themselues, to prouide aforehand for such things as may well enough be had in the time to come: this parts and rents asunder the minde, as the word signifies, and this our Sauiour Christ forbids. It is indeed the common care of the world, and we may obserue the practise of it three wayes especially: I. When men prouide so much worldly goods for themselues as would serue for many families, or for many generations: there be many such gather-goods, which scrape together as though they should neuer die, and they scarce know any ende of their wealth. This practise our Sauiour Christ here forbids. If any in a land might seek for superfluitie, it is the King, whō bounty at all times well beseemeth; and yet God forbad the King ouer his owne people, to multiply ouer-much his horses and furniture, his siluer and his gold, Deut. 17.16,17. II. When men seeke to preuent all losses and casualties, and so plot for themselues, that howsoeuer it go with others, yet they shall feele no want; though others starue and goe naked, they shall be full, and well clothed. III. When men prouide for to day and to morrow together aforehand, when as the morrowes prouision may sufficiently, fitly, and soone enough be made on it owne day. This Christ doth chiefly aime at, as crossing the practise of faith whereby we should daily depend vpon his prouidence.

For the morrowe shall care for it selfe, the day hath enough with his owne griefe.

These words containe Christs seauenth reason against distrustfull care: the effect whereof is this, euery day of mans life hath care enough and griefe sufficient, through the busines that fals out thereon and belongs vnto it, and therefore wee are not to adde thereunto another daies care and griefe, for so we should bring vpon our selues more care and griefe then needes.

The morrow, that is, the time to come, shall care for it selfe. Here Christ answers a question which might be made from the former commandement; for hauing forbidden care for the morrow, some might say, How shall we doe on the morrow, and the time to come? Christ answers, This dayes care must be to day, and to morrowes care to morrow, each day must haue his owne care: such care as is fit and needefull for the time present, must now be taken, & such things as are now needful, must now be sought for: but such care as is fit to bee taken in the time to come, must bee put off to his proper time; and things then needefull, must then be sought for, when their fit time falleth out: euerie time and euery day must haue his proper care alone.

In this reason wee haue a most notable rule for the well ordering of our liues: to wit, this; euery man must knowe the duties of his lawfull calling, and how the discharge thereof will yeild him things necessarie and conuenient from time to time; and so accordingly must walke therein; that is, doing onely such duties diligently as the present time requireth at his hands, for the procuring of things then meete and needefull; and so proceeding by dependance on Gods prouidence, in such care and labour, as is fitting for the present occasion, time, and season: but for time to come leane on Gods prouidence, respiting the care thereof till God require it at thy hands: The practise hereof Samuel inioyneth Saul, 1. Sam. 10.7. When these signes (of establishing thee in the kingdome) shall come vnto thee, doe as occasion shall serue; that is, doe the present duties of a King that lie before thee, without troubling and vexing thy self through feare or care of things to com, till God offer thē to thy hand. And this should be euery mans practise in his calling; and so should their present diligence testifie their obedience, & cleare their freedome from presumption, and their respiting of future care till God require it, argue their faith in Gods prouidence: and thus they should neither foolishly feed vpon vncertaine hopes, nor needlesly vexe themselues with vntimely cares.

A rule for our life.

The day hath enough with his owne griefe: that is, euery day by reason of mans sinnes, hath trouble and griefe enough, through that care and labour for prouision which God thereon requireth at our hands, and therfore we should let euery day content it selfe with his owne care, and not adde thereto another daies griefe.

In this branch of the reason, Christ sets out the continuall miserie of mans naturall life; Iacob saide to Pharaoh, The dayes of my pilgrimage haue beene fewe and euill, Gen. 47.9.

The continued misery of mans life.

And Iob ſaith, Man that is borne of a woman is of ſhort continuance, and full of trouble, Iob. 14. 1. But our Sauiour Chriſt here goes beyond them both, ſaying, Euery day of a mans life hath griefe enough of his owne. This being well conſidered, may teach vs theſe things: I. To walke in our callings ſoberly, without intangling our ſelues in worldly cares; for the daily diſcharge of the duties of our callings, will bring ſorrow and griefe enough vpon vs; we neede not to adde thereto by our taking care; for the more we care, the more miſerable is our life. II. To labour to withdraw our hearts and to eſtrange our affectiōs from delight in the things of this naturall life, or in this life it ſelfe, for it is full of griefe; and therefore we muſt ſo walke in our callings, that we may wait for a better life in heauen, where we ſhall haue freedome from all ſorrowe and griefe. The good Prophet Eliiah was wearie of his life by reaſon of the miſeries of it, through the calamities of the time; and therefore entreateth the Lord to take away his ſoule, 1. King. 19. 4. And Paul cries out, one while vpon the miſeries that he felt through the bodie of death that was in him, Rom. 7. 24. and at an other time, deſires to be diſſolued & to be with Chriſt, Philip. 1. 23. not ſimply, but becauſe there was freedome from all ſinne, and the miſeries thereof. III. Euery day to commend our ſelues in ſoules and bodies, and all that wee haue, morning and euening, to the bleſſing and protection of God; for each day and night hath griefe enough, by reaſon of our ſinns, which of our ſelues we cannot vndergo without the helpe of God. When our Sauiour Chriſt was to die vpon the croſſe, he commended his ſoule into his fathers hands, Luk. 23. 46. And none of vs haue aſſurance of our continuance in life, but though we be well in the morning, we may be dead in the euening, or aliue at night, and dead in the morning; and therefore we muſt not forget the practiſe of this dutie. Dauid did it in the time of trouble, though he were in health, Pſal. 31. 5. and though we were free from peril of death, yet our daily vexations ſhould moue vs hereunto; for who can learne any good thing without labour and paine? who can doe a good worke without let or oppoſition? If we would repent, we are either clogged with corruptions, or ouerwhelmed with temptations; and if we ſeeke to walke in newe obedience, we haue the world, the fleſh and the deuil, all endeauouring to turne vs backe to our olde courſe in ſinne. So that if we would either auoide euill, or doe good, or ſupport with ſome comfort our daily vexations, we muſt commend our ſelues, and all ours, into the handes of God euery day. And thus much of this reaſon, and of Chriſts dehortation from diſtruſtfull care.

CHAP. 7.

V. 1. Iudge not, that you be not iudged.

2. For with what iudgement ye iudge, ye ſhall be iudged: and with what meaſure you mete, it ſhall be meaſured to you againe.

6. Part of Chriſts Sermon.

IN theſe words, and ſo forward to the ende of the fift verſe, is contained the ſixt part of this Sermon of our Sauiour Chriſt, concerning Iudgement; and it conſiſteth of three parts: firſt, a commandement, Iudge not: then certaine reaſons of the commandement, in the words following, to the 5. verſe: and thirdly, a remedie of euill and raſh iudgement, in the 5. verſe.

Touching the commandement, Iudge not. The meaning: This commandement forbids not all kind of iudgement, but muſt bee reſtrained to vnlawfull Iudgement; for there be foure kinds of lawfull Iudgement, two whereof bee publike, and two priuate. Of publike, the firſt is ciuill Iudgement, belonging to the Magiſtrate who is to enquire into the manners of men, and according to the poſitiue lawes of the countrie to giue iudgement, either in puniſhing offenders, or rewarding them that doe well. 2 The ſecond kind is Eccleſiaſticall, belonging principally to the miniſter, who in the publike diſpenſation of the word iudgeth mens manners, by reprooving and condemning their ſinnes, whether they be thoughts, words, or actions. In this ſenſe the vnbeleeuer is ſaide to be iudged, when his thoughts and actions are controlled by the word, 1. Cor. 14. 24. and thus Noah iudged and condemned the olde world, Heb. 11. 7. 3 Of priuate lawfull iudgement, the firſt is priuate admoniſhing, whereby one man doth in Chriſtian and louing manner reprehend another for his ſinnes, and thereby iudgeth him: this is alſo commanded in the word of God, and therefore it is not here forbidden. 4 The ſecond is iuſt diſpraiſe, when the groſſe faults of notorious perſons are reprooued and condemned for this ende alone, that others may take warning thereby: thus Chriſt iudged the Phariſies both for life and doctrine before his Diſciples, calling them Hypocrites: that ſaid, and did not: and their doctrine leauen: and that moſt iuſtly and wiſely, that his Diſciples and others might beware of them: and thus he called Herod a Foxe, ſo diſcouering his ſubtiltie, for the admonition of others.

4. kindes of lawfull iudgement. 1

Math.23.13. ibi. Math.16.6.

The thing here forbidden, is raſh iudgement, which one man doth vniuſtly giue of an other; and the reaſon why we ſo vnderſtand this place, may be drawne from the the 3. verſe, where inſtance is giuen of the iudgement here forbidden, in a quicke eſpiall and ſharpe cenſure of ſmall faults in others, not ſeeing farre groſſer and greater in our ſelues: alſo S. Luke ſetting downe this prohibition, Iudge not, expounds it in the next words, by condemne not: which muſt be vnderſtood of raſh cenſure, as is plaine by S. Paul Rom. 2. 1. In that thou iudgeſt another, thou condemneſt thy ſelfe, becauſe thou doſt raſhly condemne him of that whereof thou thy ſelfe art guiltie. Now that we may better know the thing forbidden, firſt I will ſhew what raſh iudgement is, and in the ſecond place make knowne the common practiſes thereof. For the firſt.

Luk.6.37.

Raſh iudgement deſcribed.

Raſh iudgement, is when of an euill minde we iudge amiſſe of others, for ſome euill ende. In this deſcription, firſt obſerue the roote and ground of raſh iudgement; to wit, an euill minde, whereby we loue our ſelues too well, and want the loue of our neighbour. This we teſtifie, by beeing ſharpeſighted, to prie into the liues and behauiours of others, & are as blind as beetles to ſee into our ſelues: as alſo by giuing our ſelues exactly to cenſure other mens ſayings and doings, and with delight to heare their faults ripped vp; but for our owne courſes, we would not haue them called into queſtion, nor controlled. Secondly, here note the manner of raſh iudgement, which is to iudge amiſſe of others: and this they doe which iudge of other mens perſons and doings without a calling, or vrgent neceſſitie: ſecondly, which giue our ſentence of mens doings, but not according to the law of charitie, which binds a man to iudge and ſay the beſt of others alwaies, ſo farre forth as may ſtand with good conſcience, and the word of God. Thirdly, here note the ende of raſh iudgement; for as it is ill grounded and guided, ſo it aimes not at the reformation of the partie, nor the deteſtation of ſinne in our ſelues and others, but it is directed to ſome wrong ende; as firſt, to teſtifie the hatred of the partie, and deſire of reuenge: ſecondly, to delight our ſelues with the faults of others; thirdly, to defame our neighbours, & to bring them to an ill name, that our names may beare away the praiſe without compariſon: and laſtly, that we may ſeeme more holy then others, by beeing much in cenſuring ſinne in others.

The practiſe of raſh iudgement.

A This practiſe of raſh iudgement conſiſts in two things: firſt, the euil mind of man prepares matter of wrong iudgement: & ſecondly, giues ſentence accordingly of the ſayings and doings of men, and likewiſe of their perſons. For the firſt, the euill minde prepares matter of raſh iudgement thus; it ſets it ſelfe to prie and inquire narrowly into the liues and behauiour of men, and to ſee if it can finde any matter in word or action worthie reproofe. Indeede there is a vertue whereby one man doth obſerue another in his waies, but that is directed to a good ende; namely, to rectifie and reforme him in his wants, and to further him when hee doth well; but for one man to obſerue an other for this ende, to find out matter of defamation B and reproach, is a fault directly forbidden by our Sauiour Chriſt in this place. Secondly, when matter is found, the euill mind accordingly giues cenſure: this cenſure is giuen, firſt, of the perſons of men; then of their ſpeeches and actions. Raſh cenſure of mens perſons, is when a man thinks otherwiſe of the perſon of another, then in conſcience, and by Gods word he ought to doe. Example of this we haue in Satan, for when the Lord commended Iob for his fidelitie; Satan tells the Lord, that Iob indeede ſerued the Lord, but it was onely for his owne profit, for (ſaith hee) withdrawe thou thy hand from him, and thou ſhall ſee, whether he will not curſe thee to thy face: This then we ſee is a C deuilliſh practiſe, and ought to be farre from euery one of vs. We muſt remember what an auncient Diuine hath taught heretofore, that there are three things exempted from the iudgment and cenſure of men; the Scriptures, the Counſell of God, and the condemnation of any mans perſon.

Raſh cẽſure of mens perſons.

Iob 1.8,9, 10,11.

Auguſt l.10. confeſſ.23.

Raſh cenſure of mens ſpeeches and actions is giuen many wayes: I. When things are well done, to carpe and cauill at them without any iuſt cauſe. Thus the profeſſion of Religion at this day, is accounted of many to be but counterfeit holines, and the due obedience to the morall Law, is nicknamed and tearmed preciſeneſſe, and the profeſſours thereof called Puritans and Preciſians, for this cauſe onely, that D they make conſcience of walking in obedience to Gods law. II. When actions or ſpeeches indifferent, are taken in the worſer part. Thus was Dauids kindneſſe ill accepted of Hanun king of Ammon, when Dauid ſent his ſeruants to comfort him after the death of his father: for his nobles told him and perſwaded him, that Dauid ſent not vnto him, becauſe he honoured his father (though Dauid vndoubtedly ſent with an honeſt and vpright heart) but as it were craftily to ſearch out the citie, and to ſpie it out, and to ouerthrow it. Now hereupon Dauids ſeruants were badly intreated, and ſhamefully ſent away; whence grew the warre that enſued betweene them. III. When vpon light occaſion and vncertain reports, we ſuſpect and ſurmiſe euill of our neighbour: ſuſpicious in-deede or ſometime good, beeing conceiued on a good ground, and retained for a good ende; as to beware of the partie and of his euill: but when they are conceiued vpon light cauſes, and for ſome ſiniſter reſpect (as the common practiſe is, vpon no good ground to conceiue moſt badly) this is raſh iudgement. IV. When we ſee any want in our neighbours ſpeech or behauiour, to make it worſe then it was meant, or then indeede it is. V. When we ſpread abroad and publiſh the wants of men, to defame them, which might better be concealed, and in conſcience and charity ought ſo to be. VI. When we ſpeake nothing but the truth of another, but yet withall doe inſinuate thereby ſome euill of the partie into the hearts of the hearers. This practiſe is as peſtilent and dangerous, as any of the former. Thus Doeg told Saul of the fact of Abimelec vnto Dauid, how he gaue him victuals, and the ſword of Goliah, which was true: but withall he did therein inſinuate, that Dauid and Abimelec intended conſpiracie againſt Saul. And this telling of the truth in that ſort, coſt the liues of foureſcore and fiue perſons, that weare the linen Ephod, as we may read, 1.Sam. 21. 7. compared with the 22. chap. v. 9. and 18. VII. When in hearing the word preached, and ſinnes reprooued in the congregation, ſome hearers miſapplie the ſame: as for example, the miniſter reprooues the ſinne of ſwearing, of drunkennes, or any ſuch ſinne: then ſome one guiltie hereof, doth not onely ſurmiſe, but alſo break forth into this ſpeach, Now the preacher meanes mee: hee ſpeakes this of mee: he cenſures my facts and ſpeaches; hereupon followes ſpite and malice againſt the perſon of the miniſter, and alſo raſh cenſuring and condemning of his miniſterie. They alſo ſinne in this kind, that applie the reproofes of ſinne to the pardon of oth[illegible]s when they ſay, now ſuch a one is touched: there is a good leſſon for ſuch a one if hee would learne it: yea others goe further and ſay, now the preacher meanes ſuch a man; now he ſpeakes againſt ſuch a man: but this alſo is raſh iudgement in hearing of the word: they miſconceiue of the purpoſe of the miniſter, for his manner is not when he ſtandeth in the roome of God, to rippe vp the ſecrets and liues of ſome particular hearers; but to deliuer the will of God concerning ſuch and ſuch ſinnes vnto all: it is the power of the word, not the mind of the preacher, that cauſeth it to touch thy conſcience: and therefore euery one ought to applie the word vnto his owne heart, and not to lay it vpon others, or elſe take it to be ſpoken of himſelfe for his diſgrace: for it is to miſapplie the word, and to iudge amiſſe of the preacher; and this is a common ſinne, which is the cauſe why many men reape ſo little profit by the word preached as they doe. The VIII. practiſe of raſh iudgement is, when in townes and cities ſome perſons are wrongfully reputed and taken for Witches: this is as common a ſinne

A throughout the world as any of the former: one man will ſay, ſuch a one is a Witch, becauſe he in conſcience is perſwaded, and yet the ground of this perſwaſion is nothing but his bare conceit. Another man ſaith, ſuch a one is a Witch, becauſe a wiſe man or a wiſe woman hath ſo reported of him or her: and yet this teſtimonie is but the teſtimonie of the deuill, who is a lyar, and the father thereof: if he tell truth, it is with purpoſe to deceiue. Againe, another is iudged to be a Witch, becauſe comming to a mans houſe to borrow ſomething, and beeing denied thereof, he tooke it vnkindly, and thereupon gaue theſe or ſuch like threatning words; it had beene as good you had lent it me, or, I will meete with you: and hereupon ſome one in the familie fell B ſicke, or ſome cattell died, and other things did miſcarie. It is no queſtion, but Witches be too rife among vs, and ought to be ſought out and ſeuerely puniſhed; and there be lawfull waies of conuincing a witch: but vpon theſe bare preſumptions to iudge any one to be a Witch, is an vnchriſtian practiſe of raſh iudgement: for why may not the hand of God befall thee in viſiting ſome one in thy family, or in the death of thy cattell, as well as the annoyance of the witch, after ſome hard ſpeeches of another. A witch therefore muſt firſt be lawfully conuinced, and then iudged to be a witch, and not before. This thing eſpecially Iurers ought to look C vnto; elſe if they haue but the ordinary diſcretion of common people, to iudge one for a witch vpon theſe preſumptions, they may eaſily defile their hands with innocent blood. Thus much for the ſinne of raſh iudgement, and the practiſes thereof, which are condemned and forbidden in this place.

Now becauſe it is ſo common a ſinne in all places, & with moſt men counted no ſinne: for the common talke in all meetings is of other men, and ſelfeloue makes the heart glad to heare other mẽs faults ripped vp, yea this ſinne will take hold when other ſinnes leaue a man, which cauſed Chriſt to forwarne his Diſciples hereof in this place: therefore it is our dutie to labour and ſtriue the more earneſtly to be purged from this euill minde, and preſerued from D theſe euill practiſes of raſh iudgement, for which ende let vs lay to our conſciences the reaſons following.

Reaſons againſt raſh iudgement.

1 I. The practiſe of raſh iudgement cannot ſtand with Chriſtian charitie: for charitie binds a man to walke in loue, and loue ſuſpecteth not euill, but thinkes the beſt alwaies, and if it be poſſible, thinks well of al.

2 II. When thou ſeeſt a man ſpeake or practiſe any euil, for which thou beginneſt to thinke hardly of him, then conſider well of thine owne ſelfe, how thou haſt both that and all other ſinnes in thee, if we regard the roote of ſinne, and therefore doe not raſhly condemne him for his fact, because thou thy ſelfe haſt done the like heretofore, or els in time to come maiſt doe the like or worſe then he hath done whom thou now condemneſt.

3 III. Conſider that God

the father hath committed all iudgement vnto his Sonne: who now executeth publike iudgement by the magiſtrate in the commō-wealth, and by the Miniſter in the Church; and priuate iudgement of admonition, and iuſt diſpraiſe, by them whom he calleth thereunto: if therefore thou iudgeſt another, not beeing called thereto, thou thruſteſt Chriſt out of his office, and robbeſt him of his honour, which is a grieuous ſinne, and cannot be vnpuniſhed. 4 IV. Conſider alſo that thou art vnable, whatſoeuer thou art, to iudge aright of other mens actions, being ignorant of many circumſtances thereof: for thou knoweſt not with what minde, or to what ende the action was done: thou knoweſt not the cauſe why he did it, nor the ſtate of his perſon, nor manner of his temptation thereto: and therefore why iudgeſt thou raſhly of him. 5 V. He that giues raſh iudgement of another, is worſe then a theefe that ſteales away a mans goods: for hee robbes him of his good name, which (as Salomon ſaith) is to be chooſen aboue great riches, Prov.22.1. Againe, riches may be reſtored, ſo can not a mans good name beeing once blemiſhed in the hearts of many. Againe, a man may defend himſelfe from a theife, but no man can ſhunne an other mans euill minde, or his bad tongue: nay the backbiter is worſe then a murtherer, for he killeth three at once; firſt, his owne ſoule in thus ſinning: ſecondly, his neighbour whoſe name he hurteth: and thirdly, the hearer who receiueth this raſh and vniuſt report: and for this cauſe the ſlanderer is numbered among thoſe that ſhall not inherit the kingdome of God, Pſal.15.3.1.Cor.6.10. and the Apoſtle chargeth Chriſtians to account of ſuch raylers as of perſons excommunicate, 1.Cor.5.11.

Here ſome will ſay; if we may not giue our opinion of others freely as we haue done; what muſt we doe when we haue occaſion to ſpeake of them? Anſw. Thy carriage towards others muſt be according to theſe rules: 1 I. If thou knowe any good thing by the partie of whom thou ſpeakeſt, when thou haſt occaſion think and ſpeake of that: if thou know euill by him alſo, conceale it from others; and if thou maiſt, admoniſh the partie thereof: or elſe tell it to thoſe who haue authoritie to correct his faults; and thus ſhalt thou win thy brother. Some will ſay, I doe indeede ſometime cenſure my brother for his faults, yet onely in deteſtation of his ſinne; I loue the partie neuer the worſe; and I onely doe it to ſome priuate friend that will not tell it againe. Anſ. But this excuſe, and all ſuch like are friuolous: no colour of good intent can excuſe raſh iudgement: if thou loueſt him, why doeſt thou make knowne his fault to another, for loue couereth a multitude of ſinnes? And if thy conſcience anſwer, it will tell thee, that either ill will to the partie cauſeth thee ſo to doe, or ſelfe-loue, whereby through his defamation thou thy ſelfe ſeekeſt to be aduanced aboue him in the thoughts of others. In thy cenſuring therefore looke to thine heart, whether malice mooue thee not thereto: and take heede to the ende alſo; for if it riſe from a bad ground, or tend to a wrong ende, the whole action is naught. 2 II. Dutie. Wee ought to thinke as wel of euery man, as poſſibly we can, yea of our enemie and of his actions: for loue thinketh not euill; and in the practiſe of loue towards our enemies wee become followers of God, Mat.5.44.45. 3 III. Dutie. If thou marke thy neighbours life and behauiour, doe it for this ende, to withdrawe him from ſinne, and to further him in wel-doing. 4 Laſtly, in all thy ſocieties and dealings with others, labour either to doe them good, or receiue good from them: and by this means thou ſhalt eſchew the ſinne of raſh iudgement.

Here two queſtions may bee mooued concerning raſh iudgement, and that neceſſarily, becauſe ſurmiſes will ariſe vpon very ſmall occaſions.

Of ſuſpecting euill of others.

I. Queſt. When may a man doubt or ſuſpect euill of another? Anſ. In all ſuſpition recourſe muſt be had to the ground thereof, whether it riſe of iuſt and ſufficient cauſe or not. A ſufficient cauſe of ſuſpition is that, which in the iudgement of wiſe men, beeing well conſidered with all the circumſtances thereof, is iudged ſufficient: and on the other ſide, that is inſufficient, which wiſe men well waying with the circumſtances thereof, doe iudge inſufficient: if then the cauſe of ſuſpition bee thought inſufficient in the iudgement of the wiſe and godly, we muſt ſuſpend our ſuſpition: as thus: ſuppoſe ſome euill is reported abroad of ſuch a man; as that he is a theefe, an adulterer, or ſuch like; yet this fame riſeth only of ſome one mans report, which becauſe it may proceed from an ill minde on a priuate grudge, we are not to yeild thereupon to ſuſpect ill of the partie: this report may well cauſe vs to ſearch further into the caſe, and mooue vs to look vnto our ſelues that we be not hurt by him. But if the cauſe be thought ſufficient in the iudgement of thoſe that are wiſe and diſcreete, then we may without offence or breach of conſcience, yeelde to ſuſpect or iudge euill of an other.

How to iudge of others rightly.

II. Queſtion. How may we giue vpright iudgement of all men with whome we liue and haue to deale? Anſw. This is as neceſſarie to be knowne as the former, for as we are prone to thinke ill, ſo wee are alſo forward in iudging raſhly: therfore there are three things required in the iudging of others. 1. Rule. Firſt, wee muſt haue recourſe to the cauſe of our iudgment: for if the cauſe be inſufficient, then our iudgement is raſh and vnlawfull. Before the Lord brought vpon the world the confuſion of languages, he is ſaid to goe downe among them, and to ſee their fact, Gen.11.6. and before he deſtroyed Sodom and Gomorra with fire & brimſtone, he is ſaid to come downe from heauen to ſee whether they had done according to the cry that was come vp to the Lord, Gen.18.21. whereby the Lord would

A would teach vs, that before he enter into iudgment with any man, or any people, he firſt taks good conſideration of the fact, which cauſeth his puniſhment.

2. Rule.

Secondly, we muſt haue authoritie and warrant by calling to giue iudgement, or els ſome thing which is anſwerable thereto, though the iudgement be priuate: as to giue admonition or iuſt diſpraiſe; yet without a calling we muſt not doe it: he that giueth iudgement muſt bee able truely to ſay, the Lord hath called mee thus to doe. The Magiſtrate, the Miniſter, the maſter, and euery ſuperiour hath authoritie to iudge, thoſe that are vnder him: and for priuate men in priuate iudgement, though they want this authoritie by calling, B yet if they haue that which is anſwerable hereto, that is, the affection of Chriſtian loue; ſo as they can ſay with Paul, the loue of God conſtraineth me, then they may iudge.

3. Rule.

Thirdly, we muſt alwaies haue a good ende of our iudgement, as well as a good beginning: that is, the reformation and amendement, not the defaming of our brother. And theſe three concurring in all hard ſpeeches, they ceaſe to be raſh and vniuſt cenſures. Iohn Baptiſt calls the Phariſies and Sadduces, a generation of vipers, Matth.3.7. our Sauiour Chriſt calls them [a] hypocrites, and painted tombes: and [b] Herod a foxe: the Prophet Iſai cals the Princes and people of Iuda and Iſrael, [c] Princes and people of Sodom: and the Apoſtle calls the Galatians fooles, Gal.3.1. & the Cretians, lyars, euill beaſts, ſlowe bellies, Tit. 1.12,13. C All which are hard ſpeeches, but yet no ſlanders; becauſe they had all of them a calling ſo to doe: and likewiſe did this on good ground, and for a good ende.

2. Reaſons againſt raſh iudgement.

Thus much for the commandement. Now follow two reaſons to induce vs to make conſcience of raſh iudgement. The former is laid downe in theſe words: That yee be not iudged. And it may be framed thus:

If ye iudge, ye ſhall be iudged of men againe with raſh iudgement:

But ye cannot abide to be iudged of raſhly: and therefore iudge not.

The ſecond part is vnderſtood, but yet neceſſarily collected. The concluſion is the commandement it ſelfe, Iudge not.

A taſt of mans naturall pride.

D This reaſon doth affoard vnto vs two inſtructions. I. It giueth vs a taſt and viewe of our owne naturall pride and ſelfe-loue: for when we heare God diſhonored by ſwearing, or our neighbours name defamed by ſlandering, we are not onely not grieued, but oftentimes are the cauſe thereof, and take great delight therin, eſpecially in hearing other mens faults ripped vp to their diſgrace: but yet we can in no ſort brooke or ſuffer our owne good name to be called in queſtion: if our ſelues be euill ſpoken of, we are preſently filled with malice and enuie, and cannot be at reſt till we be requited or reuenged: nay, though we be in a good maner admoniſhed of our faults, euen in loue, and A after a friendly ſort, yet wee can very hardly brook it; though the partie admoniſhing make knowne vnto vs, that he doth it onely for our good, without all purpoſe of diſgrace vnto our perſons.

How to know and iudge righ ly of our own ſinn

II. Inſtruct. Here alſo our Sauiour Chriſt affoardeth vnto vs a notable way whereby wee may come to the knowledge of our owne ſinnes, and of the hainouſnes thereof. When we behold ſinne in our ſelues, we hardly iudge it to be ſinne: we muſt therefore looke vpon our owne ſinnes in the perſon of others, and learne to iudge of it in our ſelues as we iudge of it in others. When we conſider of raſh iudgement in others againſt our ſelues, we count it a vile B & grieuous ſinne, yea odious and intolerable; and in like ſort ought we to think of raſh iudgement in our ſelues towards others: and ſo for euerie other ſinne in our ſelues, we ought to iudge of it, as we do when we ſee it in the perſons of others againſt vs: otherwiſe if we look only to our ſelues, we ſhall ſooth vp our ſelues in ſinne, making great ſinnes, little ſinnes; and ſmall ſinnes, none at all.

V. 2. For with what iudgement ye iudge, ye ſhall be iudged: and with what meaſure you mete, it ſhall be meaſured to you againe.

C This verſe containes a double confirmation of the former reaſon, drawne from the euent. The firſt, in theſe words, For with what iudgement ye iudge, ye ſhall be iudged: as if Chriſt had ſaid; If ye iudge men raſhly, then men againe, by the appointment of God in his wiſedome and prouidence, ſhall accordingly giue raſh iudgment vpon you: but if ye iudge men righteouſly, then men againe, by Gods appointment and prouidence, ſhall iudge well of you: for ſo I take the words to bee meant of mens iudgement by Gods appointment in his prouidence, and not of Gods iudgment immediatly.

A maine cauſe of p ſonall def mation.

Now in this proofe, firſt, we may obſerue one true and maine cauſe of that perſonall defamation which is common in the world, and it D is to be found in the perſon himſelfe that is defamed; he hath raſhly and vniuſtly cenſured others, for which God in his prouidence, doth moſt iuſtly cauſe others to defame him againe: ſo as men themſelues doe moſt of all wound their owne good names, and by their bad cariage toward others, iuſtly cauſe their owne diſgrace. In regard whereof we muſt learn, firſt, to ſet a carefull watch before our mouthes, to keepe the doore of our lippes, gouerning our tongues by the word of God: for when we cenſure others raſhly, we doe procure iudgement vnto our ſelues. Secondly to be patient vnder the raſh cenſures and ſlanders of others. For we muſt thinke, that we our ſelues haue heretofore tofore done the like to others: and therefore it is iuſtice with God to reward vs in the ſame kind, wherewith wee haue wronged others. This is Salomons counſell, Giue not thine heart to all the words that men ſpeake, leaſt thou doe heare thy ſeruant curſing thee: for oftentimes alſo thine heart knoweth that thou likewiſe haſt curſed others.

cclеſ.7.23.

Secondly, in this proofe wee may alſo obſerue the right way how to get and keepe a good name: to wit, by iudging others with Chriſtian iudgement, carying a charitable opinion of euery one, ſpeaking the beſt of them in all companies, ſo farforth as we can with good conſcience, & neuer iudging hardly of any, till we be indeede lawfully called thereunto, hauing a good ground for our action, and doing it for a good ende. If thou wouldſt liue long (ſaith the Prophet) and ſee good dayes, refraine thy tongue from euill, and thy lippes that they ſpeake no guile: that is, ſpeak not euill of any man, though thou know ill by him, till thou be lawfully called thereto.

Thirdly, from the conſideration of this prouidence of God, whereby he ordereth and diſpoſeth, that defamers of others ſhall be rewarded in their kind, and that by others; we may gather, that God knowes euery vnaduiſed thought of the heart, and euery raſh cenſure which we ſpeake or thinke of others; els how could this be true that raſh Iudgers ſhall be ſo rewarded in their kinde, ſeeing men may conceale their thoughts, & many times their words from the eyes of men. To this purpoſe Salomon admoniſheth, not to curſe the King, no not in thy thought, nor the rich man in thy bed chamber, for the fowle of heauen ſhall carrie the voice, and that which hath wings ſhal declare the matter. And this muſt teach vs to make conſcience of all our ſpeeches and thoughts that concerne others, yea then when we our ſelues are iudged. When Dauid was railed vpon by wicked Shemei, he ſtaied himſelfe with the conſideration of this, that God knew it, & had appointed Shemei to curſe Dauid, 2. Sam. 16.10.

cclеſ.10.20.

Laſtly, here it may be doubted how God can bee cleared from the guilt of raſh iugdement, ſeeing in his prouidence he cauſeth it by his decree. Anſw. Though he decree it, yet is he free from fault thereof: for firſt, he decrees it not to be the cauſe thereof himſelfe, but to permit it among men, leauing them to bee the authors thereof: ſecondly, hee decrees to diſpoſe of it well, and to order it at a iuſt puniſhment of the raſh iudgement of others, and ſo in no ſort is the cauſe of the euill in raſh iudgement; howſoeuer hee diſpoſe hereof for the iuſt puniſhment of offenders in this kind.

The ſecond confirmation of the firſt reaſon is contained in this parable, which tendeth to the ſame ende with the former ſentence: And with what meaſure you mete, it ſhall be meaſured to you againe: that is, the Lord hath ordained that men ſhall be rewarded in their kinde, like for A like. Hence we may obſerue this rule of Gods iuſtice in the puniſhment of ſinne; namely, to reward men in their kinde, puniſhing them in the ſame things wherein they offend. Dauid ſinned by committing adulterie with Bathſheba the wife of Vriah; and God by way of puniſhment raiſed vp euill againſt him out of his own houſe in the ſame kind: for his own ſonne Abſolon deflowred his fathers concubines in the ſight of all Iſrael, 2. Sam. 12.9.11. & 16.22. And experience ſhewes, that blood will haue blood; for though the murtherer eſcape the hands of the ciuill Iudge, yet the terror and vengeance of God doth ordinarily purſue him to deſtruction. A notable example hereof wee B haue in the holy league (as it is called,) but indeed the bloodie league; wherein the enemies of Gods grace & truth did confederate themſelues to roote out the true religion, and the profeſſors thereof from off the earth: but the Lord hath rewarded them in their kind, & turned their own ſwords againſt themſelues, cauſing them to ſpoile one an other; according to the propheſie of Iſai. Woe to thee that ſpoileſt, & was not ſpoiled: and doeſt wickedly, and they did not wickedly againſt thee: when thou ſhalt ceaſe to ſpoile, thou ſhalt be ſpoiled, Iſa. 33.1.

Gods iuſtice in puniſhing ſinners in their kind.

This rewarding iuſtice of God well obſerued, doth diſcouer vnto vs, yea and denounce a fearefull woe, not onely againſt all thoſe that giue out raſh iudgement of others; but againſt C all vſurers and oppreſſors, who mete out hard meaſure vnto others, euen crueltie without mercie: but ſo ſhall they be ſerued again. Gods heauie hand hath heretofore laine ſore vpon this land for many yeares in dearth and ſcarſitie, which alſo in ſome ſort hath beene made more grieuous vpon the poore by hard hearted rich men, who are like to great fiſhes that deuoure the leſſer: for they grinde the faces of the poore, and plucke off their ſkinnes from them, & their fleſh from the bones by their wicked couetouſneſſe, yea doubtles their crueltie coſts many a mans life. Some in higher place by incloſing, & racking of rents: others of meaner ſort, by ingroſſing & withholding the commodities of the land from the common good til a time of D dearth come, wherein (as the Prophet ſaith) they may make the Epha ſmall, and the Shekel great; that is, ſell little for much, leſſening the meaſure, & enhaunceing the price. And indeed ſuch a time of dearth is the worldlings day, wherein they doe inrich themſelues by the ſpoile of the poore: but they muſt know that a fearefull woe belongs vnto them: for the like mercileſſe meaſure ſhall bee meaſured to them againe; and when they ceaſe to ſpoile, then ſhall they bee ſpoiled: for whē the hand of God is heauy vpon the poore, then no doubt is vengeance preparing for hard hearted rich men, who increaſe the ſame. The Lord forbiddeth to trouble the widdow or fatherles child: Exod. 22.22, 23, &c. for if thou vexe and trouble ſuch, and ſo hee call and crie vnto me, I will ſurely heare but erre: then ſhall my wrath be kindled, and I will kill you with the ſword: and your wiues ſhall be widowes, and your children fatherles. This is Gods word, and it muſt ſtand. The Lord himſelfe foretold that towards the latter day, iniquitie ſhould abound, and charitie ſhould waxe cold: and are not theſe the times whereof Chriſt ſpake? for what power hath the Goſpel to withdrawe mens hearts from iniquity? and when was there euer leſſe charitie then is now? well, theſe are forerunners of greater iudgements; and therefore in the feare of God, let vs make conſcience of this and all other ſinnes, euen in conſideration of this, that the Lord will pay vs home in that kinde wherein we offend.

A terror to all oppreſſors.

Amos 8.5.

Math.24.12.

v. 3. And why ſeeſt thou the mote that is in thy brothers eye, and perceiueſt not the beame that is in thine owne eie?

4. Or how ſayeſt thou to thy brother, Suffer me to caſt out the mote out of thine eie, & behold a beam is in thine owne eie?

Theſe two verſes containe a ſecond reaſon to inforce the former commandement againſt raſh iudgement. The meaning of the words is this: Why ſeeſt thou] that is, vpon what ground, for what cauſe, with what conſciēce ſeeſt thou. And ſo in the 4. v. How ſaieſt thou] that is, with what face, with what honeſtie and conſcience ſaieſt thou. So much theſe interrogations how, & why, import. Seeſt] ſight, here is not a light or ſudden beholding of the mote, but a ſeeing with attention, a ſerious and conſiderate obſeruation thereof. A mote] the word vſed in the originall, may as well be tranſlated a ſtrawe, or a peece of a ſtrawe, as a mote, as it hath beene in former times; for it will beare either tranſlation: yet the word beame, ſeemes rather to haue reference to a ſtrawe, then to a mote: but which way ſoeuer it be taken, it ſignifies ſmall and little ſinnes, as ſinnes of ignorance and infirmitie, ſuch as the beſt Chriſtians doe commit, and cannot be free from in this life. Againe, it ſignifies ſuppoſed ſinnes; ſuch as are not indeede ſinnes before God, but only in his opinion that giues raſh iudgement. And perceiueſt not] this perceiuing is properly an action of the minde, ſtanding in conſideration and thinking, which followes after ſeeing. Thus the word is vſed, Luk.12.27. Conſider the lilies of the field; that is, looke vpon them, and then conſider well thereof in your mind. And, Iam.1.23. Hee that heares the word, & doth it not; is like vnto a man that BEHOLDS his naturall face in a glaſſe: that is, to one that ſees and conſiders of his ſhape. So that Chriſts meaning is, as if he had ſaid, It may be thou ſeeſt, but why doeſt thou not well waigh and conſider with thy ſelfe of the beam that is in thine owne eye? By beame is here meant great and notorious raigning ſinnes in mans heart; ſuch as wound the conſcience, which are like vnto a beame in the eye: which doth not onely blemiſh, but quite daſh out the ſight. Some may here aske, in what ſenſe this is ſpokē, ſeeing the eie is not capable of a beame? Anſ. It is ſpoken by way of ſuppoſition, as if it had beene ſaid; if it were poſſible that a beame could be in the eye, the raſh cenſurers fault is as a beame in the eye: this kinde of ſpeech is vſuall in Scripture; If I could ſpeake with tongues of Angels, ſaith S. Paul, 1.Cor.13.1. that is, ſuppoſe Angels had tongues, and that I could ſpeake as eloquently as they. The words of the 4. v. are for ſubſtance all one with the former in the 3. The difference betweene them is only this; in the 3. v. Chriſt ſpeakes onely of raſh iudgement conceiued in the minde; but in the 4. he ſpeakes of raſh iudgement vttered in ſpeech: How ſaieſt thou to thy brother, &c.] So that in both verſes the words are a parable bearing this ſenſe: with what face, honeſtie, or conſcience, canſt thou finde fault with thy brother either in thought or ſpeach, thou thy ſelfe being tainted with greater faults and offences? And hence the ſecond reaſon may be thus conceiued:

> He that hath greater faults, muſt not cenſure him that hath leſſer:
>
> But he that giues raſh iudgement, hath greater faults then he whom he cenſureth: And therefore no man ought to vſe raſh iudgmēt.

The propoſition or firſt part is omitted: the Aſſumption expreſſely ſet downe in the 3. and 4. v. whereupon the concluſion followes againſt raſh iudgement.

Vpon this forme of ſpeech, How ſeeſt thou? why ſaieſt thou? that is, with what face and honeſtie, and vpon what ground? we may learne this inſtruction; that our ſpeeches, yea our very thoughts muſt be conceiued and vttered vpon good ground, and in a good manner. Eſtabliſh thy thoughts by counſell, (ſaith Salomon) and by counſell make warre: teaching vs to haue direction from the word of God, for the ground and manner of our verie thoughts, and for all our affaires. Our Sauiour Chriſt biddes vs take heede how wee heare Gods word: and Salomon would drawe vs to this heede and attention in prayer alſo; Be not raſh with thy mouth, nor let thy heart be haſtie to vtter a thing before God: now that which they ſpeake of diuine exerciſes, is in this place by our Sauiour inlarged to euery thought of the heart, and word of the mouth that concernes our brother.

Our word thoughts muſt haue good grou

Eccleſ.5.1.

Further, in theſe words, Seeſt thou; that is, with attention and cōſideration beholdeſt] our Sauiour Chriſt acquaints vs with a common fault wherewith our nature is generally ſtained and corrupted: to wit, that we are ouerſharpe ſighted in other mens liues and offences: this appeares in that men can eaſily diſcerne ſmall faults fault in others, and cannot ſee great offences in themſelues, nay when they can finde no iuſt fault, yet they will make thoſe faults which indeed be none at all. Example hereof we haue in the Scribes and Phariſies, in their cenſures againſt our Sauiour and his diſciples: they themſelues were hypocrites tainted with grieuous ſinnes, and yet they pried to finde motes in Chriſts eyes: for when hee wrought miracles, cured the diſeaſed, and did good vnto all, they blamed him as a breaker of the Sabbath day; and as a companion of Publicans and ſinners, though hee conuerſed with them for their good: ſo they blamed his Diſciples for eating with vnwaſhen hands, and for plucking vp the eares of corne on the Sabbath day to ſatisfie their hunger; and for their ſeldome faſting. This fault was in the Corinthians, who cenſured Paul and his miniſterie, for want of eloquence and excellencie of words, which was in other Teachers among them, as may appeare by his rebuking of them, 1. Cor. 4. And the Chriſtian brethren among the Romanes condemned one an other in the obſeruation of dayes and times, and in the vſe of the creatures of God, Rom. 14. which was nothing elſe but raſh iudgement. And this no doubt is a fault which raignes in our congregations, euen among the better ſort at this day; for deepely is our nature ſtained with this corruption, and ſo prone it is to this ſinne, that euen they which haue receiued true grace, can hardly abſtaine from the practiſes of raſh iudgement.

The conſideration hereof muſt teach vs theſe duties. Firſt, to take knowledge of this corruption of our nature, and of the want of brotherly loue in vs; for why ſhould we ſo ſoone ſpie a fault in an other, but becauſe wee want loue and charitie to his perſon? Wee may conſider the vileneſſe of this practiſe by reſemblance in ſome bruit creaturs, for we account moſt baſely of thoſe rauening fowles which delight in nothing but in filthy carrions; and ſuch for all the world are thoſe raſh cenſurers, all their delight is in other mens faults, which makes them ſo ſharpe ſighted to ſpie them out.

Secondly, when we are about to cenſure any man, wee muſt in (regard of this corruption) ſuſpect our ſelues, and our ſpeeches, & call our ſelues backe to a viewe and conſideration of that which we are to ſpeake; for oft-times we ſee that which we ought not to ſee, and thereupon ſpeake that which wee ought in conſcience to conceale. Phyſitians giue this note of a phrenſie, to begin to take vp ſtrawes: now when the minde lookes not into it ſelfe, but pries into other mens actions, then no doubt it is not right, but is corrupted and infected with a ſpirituall phrenſie, and therefore the danger of this diſeaſe muſt cauſe vs to looke into our ſelues.

Thirdly, here wee may obſerue a reaſon of the ſtrange behauiour of men in regard of ſinne: for this we may eaſily perceiue, that men with open mouth will condemne thoſe things in others, which they like and approoue in themſelues: now the cauſe hereof is, for that the affections doe followe the minde; ſuch as the minde is, ſuch are the affections; and mans minde naturally looketh outward, not inward, it ſees very little faults in others, but will neither ſee, nor condemne the ſame faults, nor greater in it ſelfe: nay, rather it cauſeth man to loue thoſe ſinnes in himſelfe which hee deteſts in others. And therefore in the amendement of our liues, we muſt beginne in our owne hearts, and turne the eie of our minde inward, to ſee our owne ſinnes, and labour firſt to haue our hearts touched with ſorrow for them, and to hate them firſt in our ſelues, and then to proceede to hate them in others. It is a prepoſterous courſe, ariſing from the corruption of nature, to beginne with the hatred and diſlike of ſinne out of our ſelues.

Sinnes diffe-ring in de-gree.

II. Doctr. Further, here in this reaſon our Sauiour Chriſt makes a difference of ſinnes; ſome are as motes, ſome as beames: euery ſinne indeede is death and condemnation, and yet all are not equall, but farre different in degrees: as ſome men are drowned in the chanell and middle of the ſea, ſome by the ſhoare ſide, which places differ in depth and danger, though all is one in regard of death: ſome men indure damnation in deeper meaſure, ſome in leſſer, yet both are condemned. But the Papiſts abuſe theſe words, and would gather hereon a diſtinction of ſinnes which God doth not allow, to wit, that ſome ſins are veniall, which deſerue not death, and theſe are here called motes: ſome againe are mortall, deſeruing death, and thoſe are called beames. But the mote and beame are both mortall ſinnes. A mote or a ſtrawe may ſometime put out the eie, though indeede the beame bee more forcible to daſh it quite out: and ſo do ſmall ſinnes wound the conſcience, and damne the ſoule, though greater ſinnes do more deepely wound the conſcience & plunge the ſame into hell: ſmall and great ſinnes, both deſtroy the ſoule, though in a different degree: the very mote is deadly ſinne, though in nature the beam be more capitall. This diſtinction they borowed from former ages, but abuſing the Primitiue Church from whence they had it: for the auncient Fathers called ſome ſinnes veniall, not becauſe they deſerued not death, but becauſe they were pardonable in regard of the Church, and did not incurre the cenſure of excommunication: and thoſe they called mortall or criminall ſinnes, which had the cenſure of excommunication paſſed againſt them: ſo that the Papiſts abuſe both Fathers and Scripture in this diſtinction.

How the fathers called ſome ſinnes veniall.

Raſh iudgement peruerts a mans good meaning.

Thirdly, Chriſt naming the verie eye, and not the face, or other parts of the body, would thereby giue vs to vnderſtand what is the propertie and ſcope of raſh iudgement, namely, to deface the very intention of his heart of whom cenſure is giuen. When Dauid ſent his ſeruants to Hanun king of Ammonites to comfort him after his fathers death; the Princes of Ammon told their lord, that Dauids ſeruants were but ſpies that came to ſearch out his citie: thus they iudged raſhly of Dauids fact, and their intent was to corrupt the honeſt mind of Dauid: perſwading the King that Dauid and his ſeruants had another intent and end of their comming then they made knowne to the King. So that the raſh cenſurer ſeekes to blemiſh the good mind and conſcience of his brother. And hence wee may wel be warned to take notice of our naturall corruption, how that without Gods ſpeciall grace we doe plainly hate our brother; els we would neuer ſo ſuſpitiouſly prie into his wayes as to depraue his good meaning. Wee muſt therefore cõtent our ſelues with the ſpeeches and actions of our brother, and take heed how we deale about the eie; that is, with his intent & meaning; that we muſt leaue to God, who only knows the heart: & for his actions & ſpeeches (if it may be) we muſt alwaies expoũd thẽ in the better part: if we cannot defẽd a miſdoing, yet we muſt excuſe his meaning: if we cannot excuſe his intent, yet we muſt think the beſt of his conſcience: if we cannot excuſe his conſcience, yet we muſt iudge it to bee but a ſinne of ignorance: if we cannot doe ſo, yet we muſt thinke that it was done in ſome grieuous temptation, and that if we our ſelues had been in like caſe, we ſhould haue done farre worſe: we know not whẽ God may giue grace to mẽ, or when hee leaues them to themſelues; and therefore in regard of the minde and conſcience, we muſt comprimit our iudgement at all times.

2.Sam.10.3.

And perceiueſt not] that is, though it may be thou ſeeſt it, yet thou doſt not well conſider of it. Here our Sauiour noteth out a ſecõd main fault in mans nature to be thought vpon; namely, carnall ſecuritie, whereby though in ſome ſmall meaſure men ſee their offences, yet naturally they neuer thinke on them heartily & ſeriouſly as they ought to doe; S. Paul ſaith, Awake thou that ſleepeſt, ſignifying, that by nature we lie ſlumbring in ſinne: ſo as though wee may ſometime haue a little glimmering thereof, yet we neuer throughly behold and conſider thereof as we ſhould: the Lord himſelfe complains of this ſecuritie in ſinne in his owne people: No man ſaith, what haue I done? Ier. 8. 6. This was the ſinne of the old world; they knew nothing till the flood came, Matth. 24. 39. it may be they had now & then ſome conceit thereof, but they thought not ſeriouſly theron: now as the daies of Noe were, ſo ſhall be the dayes of the comming of the ſonne of man, in regard of ſecuritie, & theſe are thoſe dayes wherein we now liue: for howſoeuer we ſometime thinke on our ſinnes, yet we looke not at them with both eies, as we doe on our neighbours faults. Wee muſt here be warned to take heede of this ſinne: for it is a fearefull caſe either not to ſee our ſinnes, or ſeeing them to paſſe them ouer without ſerious conſideration. The Apoſtle ſaith, When men ſay peace, peace, then comes ſudden deſtruction. Now men do thẽ moſt fearefully crie, peace, peace, vnto themſelues, when they either will not ſee their ſinnes; or ſeeing them, doe not well conſider thereof in their hearts. We therefore muſt labour for this grace to haue a cleare ſight into our ſinnes, for without that wee can neuer ſorrow according vnto God, nor repent vnto life as we ought to doe.

Mans carnall ſecuritie.

Eph.5.14.

Why ſeeſt thou, &c. and how ſayeſt thou to thy brother,] In both theſe phraſes conſider how Chriſt would haue all thoſe which are to giue iudgement of the offences of others, to be thẽſelues without reproofe and blame: elſe they are no fit perſons to giue cenſure of thoſe that be vnder thẽ. And therefore the Magiſtrate in the towne and commonwealth, the Miniſter in the Church, the maſter in the familie, and euery ſuperiour in his place muſt labour to be vnblameable: for if they be tainted with groſſe ſinnes, they can neuer throughly purge them that be vnder them. A Miniſter (ſaith Paul) muſt be vnreproueable, 1. Tim. 3. 2. and ſo likewiſe the Magiſtrate, who is Gods vicegerent, and euery gouernour in his place.

Iudges of others ſhould be blameleſſe.

Laſtly, in both verſes obſerue the condition of thoſe that are giuen to raſh iudgement: namely, that of all men they are the worſt: Chriſt makes thẽ to carrie beames in their eies, when others haue but motes or ſtrawes. The man that is giuẽ to cenſure others would ſeem to be of all mẽ moſt holy: but the truth is, there is none ſo bad as he though he be a miniſter, yea be he what he will, nay the better is his place, the worſe is his fault: & the more he is giuen to this ſinne of cenſuring, the worſe he is, for the leſſe he ſees his owne ſinnes: nay, let him liue vnblameably before men, yet he hath a heart full of pride and ſelfe loue, & full of diſdain toward his brother. And therfore let vs take heed of this ſinne, euen when it beginnes to creepe vpon vs.

Raſh cenſurers, the w leſt perſon

V. 5. Hypocrite, firſt caſt out the beame out of thine owne eye: and then ſhalt thou ſee clearely to caſt out the mote out of thy brothers eye.

This verſe containes a remedie againſt raſh iudgement: it depends vpon the former verſes as an Anſwer to a ſecret obiection that might thence ariſe: for whereas Chriſt had ſaid, Iudge not; and why ſeeſt thou a mote in thy brothers eie, &c. ſome man might ſay, belike then it is not lawfull to correct my brother by ſpeech, and by reproofe to ſeeke amendement of his fault. To this Chriſt here anſwers; that he forbids not brotherly correction and admonition, but the euill, corrupt, & vnchriſtian manner of giuing admonition and correction, whẽ as we take a prepoſterous courſe in cenſuring; and doe not beginne with themſelues in the firſt place, but with their brethren: as if our Sauiour Chriſt had ſaid, Hypocrite, thou haſt greater faults then he whom thou iudgeſt: & therefore if thou wilt take a right courſe in thy correction, beginne with thy ſelfe, reforme the great ſinnes that be in thy ſelfe, and then ſhalt thou be fitter & better able, to correct and reforme thy brother. So that theſe words containe two parts: 1. the remedie of raſh iudgement, Hypocrite, firſt plucke out the beame out of thine owne eye: 2. the fruit hereof, which is true wiſdome to be able to diſcerne aright of our neighbours fault, and alſo how it is to bee cured, in theſe words, and then ſhalt thou ſee clearly to caſt out the mote out of thy brothers eye. Of theſe in order.

The remedie againſt raſh iudgement, is for a man firſt to beginne with himſelfe, reforming firſt his owne offences: which becauſe it is here propounded by our Sauiour Chriſt of ſet purpoſe, as a ſpeciall remedie againſt this ſinne, I will ſtand a little to ſhew how a man may caſt out the beame out of his owne eye. Hereunto foure things are required: I. A man muſt turne the eie of his mind inward, and caſt his cogitations towards his owne life and conſcience, that ſo he may ſee & know the principall ſinnes of his owne heart and life. To this purpoſe ſerueth the morall lawe, which is as a glaſſe to let vs ſee our main and principall ſinnes, which be the beames in our eyes here meant. And for direction herein I will note out ſome ſpeciall maine ſinnes, which be in all men naturally; and which euerie one muſt well conſider of, that will caſt this beame out of his owne eye.

1 Adams ſinnes imputed to all.

The firſt common ſinne of all men, is a guiltines in Adams firſt offence; that is, his ſin made ours by relation or imputation: for his eating the forbidden fruit was no particular or priuate ſinne, but the ſin of mans nature: and euery one ſinned in Adam that was to deſcēd of him by ordinarie generation: for though we were not borne when Adam ſinned, yet by his ſinne we ſtand guilty of eternall death before God.

The ſecond common ſinne, is a naturall diſpoſition and proneneſſe to euerie thing that is euill, and againſt Gods lawe when occaſion is offered, the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt not excepted: for the ſame corruption & pronenes to euill which was in them that haue committed this ſinne, is in all men naturally; the difference ſtands onely in this, that all doe not fall into it. And this pronenes to euill is the ſecond head of originall ſinne.

3 Idolatrie of the heart.

The third common ſinne, is inward Idolatrie, this is a moſt hainous ſinne, & may be thus perceiued: Euery man by nature takes his heart from the true God, and beſtowes it on ſome other thing: now look whereon a man beſtows his heart, that thing he makes his God: and by nature we loue our ſelues, our ſinnes, and the world more then God, and yeelde obedience to the deuill rather then to the true God. The like may be ſaid of our feare, ioy, and delight, and of our truſt and confidēce, all which affections wee ſet vpon the deuill, the world, and iniquitie; yea vpon the creature, forſaking the creator who is bleſſed for euer: and he that ſees not this in himſelfe, hath idolatrie as yet raigning in his heart.

4 Hypocriſie.

The fourth ſinne is Hypocriſie; which naturally raigneth in all men, til grace expel it: This hypocriſie ſtands in this; when men are about any good thing, they are more careful to pleaſe God in the outward action, then with the ſeruice of the heart: Againe, they ſeeke more to pleaſe men then God. And laſtly, they rather endeauour to performe the outward duties of the firſt table, then of the ſecond. This is a huge beam in euery mās eie naturally, which ech one ought to ſee in himſelfe, as well as the former.

5 Pride.

The fift ſinne is pride, not outward in appatell, but ſpirituall inward pride of the heart, which ſtands in this; that a man thinkes himſelfe out of Chriſt to haue in him ſome naturall goodnes, whereby he ſtands in Gods fauour, & hath in himſelfe perfect loue and perfect faith: this ſinne all men will condemne, and yet it cleaues faſt to euery man by nature. The church of Laodicea, Reuel.3.17. ſaid ſhe was rich, and lacked nothing; whereas indeede, ſhe was poore, & blind, and naked. This inward pride poiſons Gods grace in the heart, it is a maine ſinne, and the common cauſe of raſh iudgement.

The ſixt ſinne is that particular ſinne or ſinnes, wherewith euerie one is moſt aſſaulted; for howſoeuer the corruptiō of nature doth infect all men alike, yet euery one that is of yeares ſhall finde himſelfe more troubled with ſome ſins then with others, by reaſon that corruptiō is in part either remooued or reſtrained in him. Wherefore euery one muſt enter into his own heart, and there ſearch and ſee what bee thoſe particular ſinnes, which moſt of all preuaile againſt him, troubling his heart, and cauſing him to diſhonour God. Theſe be his beames which keepe Gods grace out of his heart, which wee muſt labour to finde out in our ſelues.

How to perceiue the grieuouſnes of our ſinnes

II. Dutie. After we haue ſome ſight of theſe our maine ſinnes, we muſt in the next place labour to ſee them in our ſelues as beames, and to feele the waight thereof: for commonly wee either ſee them not at all in our ſelues, or if we doe a little perceiue them, yet we ſee them not in their quantitie as beames, but rather like motes or ſtrawes. Now wee ſhall come to ſee theſe ſinnes in our ſelues as beames in their iuſt quantitie: firſt, if we compare them with other mens ſinnes; as with Adams firſt ſinne, for doubtleſſe we haue many particular ſinnes in our hearts that be as great or greater then Adams ſinne was, conſidered in the fact; and yet by that ſinne Adam brought not onely on himſelfe, but on all his poſteritie mortalitie and deſtruction, the firſt, and the ſecond death. Againe, we ſhall come to ſee the grieuouſneſſe of our ſinnes, if we conſider them in the puniſhment thereof; that is, ſubiection to all woe and miſerie, yea and to death it ſelfe in this life, and alſo to death eternall after this life, with the deuil and his angels: this is the reward of euery ſinne in it ſelfe. Thirdly, conſider theſe thy ſinnes, as they were laid vpon the holy perſon of our Sauiour Chriſt, for which he endured not onely outward bodily torments on the croſſe, but inwardly in ſoule apprehended the whole wrath of God due vnto vs for the ſame, which cauſed him to ſweate water and blood, and to crie, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me. This beeing well waighed, will let vs ſee that our ſinnes are no motes, but huge & great beames, ſuch as are able to cruſh vs in peices vnder the heauie wrath of God. Laſtly, haue recourſe to the laſt commandement, which forbids the very firſt thoughts and motions in the heart, that be againſt our neighbour, & againſt God, though we neuer giue conſent of will thereto; nay, though wee abhorre the fact it ſelfe: as when we ſee our neighbours oxe or his aſſe, to wiſh in our hearts, O that this were mine, though wee deteſt the ſtealing thereof: now if this firſt motion bee a ſinne deſeruing damnation, how hainous be the ſinnes of our nature, and the tranſgreſſions of our life, wherin we haue giuen full conſent to rebell againſt God?

3. Rule.

4. Rule.

How to iudge our ſelues.

III. Dutie. The third thing required to this caſting out the beame out of our own eie, is that which is here intended by our Sauiour Chriſt; namely, to surceaſe to iudge others, and to beginne to iudge our ſelues for our owne ſinnes: for if wee would iudge our ſelues, we ſhould not bee iudged, 1. Cor. 11. 31. Now we doe then iudge our ſelues, when in our owne hearts we giue ſentence againſt our ſelues, and condemne our ſelues in regard of our owne ſinnes. Thus Dauid iudged himſelfe, Pſal. 51. 1. Haue mercie vpon me, O Lord, according to the multitude of thy mercies: as if he ſhould ſay, Lord, one mercie will not ſerue the turne, ſo farre haue I plunged my ſelfe into hell by my grieuous ſinnes; but in the multitude of thy mercies doe them all away. And in the words following, verſ. 2. Waſh mee thoroughly from mine iniquitie: he confeſſeth himſelfe to be ſo deepely ſtained with the filth of ſinne, that a little waſhing will not ſerue. So when the Lord had ſpoken vnto Iob and made him ſee and know himſelfe, he cries out, Behold, I am vile, Iob 39. 37. and againe, Now I abhorre my ſelfe, and repent in duſt and aſhes, for thoſe things that I haue ſaid & done, Chap. 42. 6. In ſuch ſort alſo did the Prodigall ſonne iudge himſelfe, crying out, that he had ſinned againſt heauen, and againſt his father, and was not worthy to be called his ſonne, Luk. 15. 21. The Apoſtle Paul likewiſe confeſſeth againſt himſelfe, that he was the head of all ſinners, 1. Tim. 1. 15. And thus muſt we condemne our ſelues, and ſay with Daniel in his prayer for the people, chap. 9. 7. Open ſhame and confuſion of face belongs vnto us.

A IV. Dutie. After we haue thus iudged our ſelues, we muſt labour to breake off, and to amend our former euill wayes, endeauouring by all meanes that ſinne may be aboliſhed and weakened in vs more and more: and this is indeede the remoouing of the beame out of our own eyes, that ſo we may be fitter to cenſure and reforme others. Of this laſt dutie the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Rom. 14. 13. Let vs not iudge one another any more; but vſe you iudgement rather in this, that no man put a ſtumbling blocke before his brother: that is, that he liue without offence. Theſe fowre duties ought euerie one to practiſe: and to mooue vs hereunto, firſt, let vs conſider, that it is Gods commandment in this place, that we ſhould firſt reforme our owne B ſelues. Secondly, that our ſtate and caſe is fearfull and miſerable, without this reformation; if a man haue but a thorne in his finger, he cannot be well till it be plucked out; what caſe then is he in, that hath a huge beame in his eye, the moſt tender part of the whole bodie; that is, hath his heart and conſcience pricked with the ſting of ſinne? and therefore it neerly concernes euery one to remooue it. Thirdly, we ſhal neuer be able to iudge aright of our ſelues, of others, or of the life to come, till we practiſe this dutie: and therefore in the feare of God let vs ſeriouſly ſet our ſelues vnto it.

Thus much of the remedie it ſelfe; now fol- C low two circumſtances therein further to bee conſidered: I. The partie to whom the remedie is giuen; that is, an Hypocrite. II. When this remedie is to be practiſed; Firſt, plucke out, &c. For the party: by Hypocrite we muſt vnderſtand him that in heart and ſpeech is prone to conceiue, and giue raſh iudgement of other mens ſayings & actions: and good cauſe there is why he is ſo called, for this mã hath the ſinne of hypocriſie raigning in him, he deſires to ſeeme more holy then others, & therefore giues himſelfe to cenſure others, that by debaſing of others he may aduance himſelfe: ſee this in the hypocriticall Phariſie, I thanke God that I am not as other men, extortioners, vniuſt, adulterers, or euen as this Publican, I faſt twice in the weeke, &c. Luk. 18. 10, 11. But they muſt know, that this D cenſuring of others, is a fruit of hypocriſie, ariſing out of an hollow heart.

An hypocrite.

The ſecond circumſtance, is the time when this dutie is to be practiſed; namely, in the firſt place, Firſt caſt out, &c. Here then we haue a notable direction for the manner and order of giuing brotherly correction; It muſt beginne with a mans owne ſelfe, and end in a mans neighbour: and by proportion, looke by how much euery one is neerer vnto us, ſo much the ſooner muſt he be corrected and iudged. If thou bee a priuate man that art to giue cenſure, firſt beginne with thy ſelfe; then iudge thy kinred; thirdly, thine acquaintance, and laſt of all ſtrangers. So a maſter of a familie muſt firſt iudge himſelfe, then his owne familie, & after he may iudge his friends and neighbours, and laſt of all ſtran-ſtrangers: and the like muſt euery ſuperiour practiſe in his place. Now by this order to be obſerued in brotherly cenſure, we may eaſily ſee that the world is farre wide in the practiſe of this dutie, for euery one thinkes wel of himſelfe, and alſo of his freinds and acquaintance, and therefore ſpares them and will not cenſure them; but for ſtrangers, them will he not ſticke to reproach and to condemne; but this is a prepoſterous courſe, ſwaruing farre from this direction of our Sauiour Chriſt.

Reforming our ſelues brings ſpirituall wiſdom.

And then ſhalt thou ſee clearely to caſt out the mote out of thy brothers eie. This is the fruit of the former remedie; by curing himſelfe firſt, a man comes to ſee cleerely what his neighbours fault is, and how it is to be cured and amended. Where we may note, that out of the amēdment of our ſelues, followes a ſpirituall gift of iudgement and wiſdome, whereby wee ſee aright how to reforme our brothers fault. Hence I gather this generall doctrine, that Right wiſdome and vnderſtanding followes the reformation of our owne hearts and liues. The beginning of wiſdome is the feare of the Lord, Pſal. 111. 10. that is, true wiſdome and good vnderſtanding comes from a reuerent awe of God, in regard of his word and commandement: ſo Pſal. 119. 100. I was made wiſer then the auncient, by keeping thy commandement: firſt Dauid reformed himſelfe, and then hee became exceeding wiſe. As it is ſaid of a Manaſſes, that when he repented and humbled himſelfe, hee knew that the Lord was God: and after Nabuchadnezzar was humbled, his vnderſtanding was reſtored to him, Daniel 4. 31. for, God teacheth the humble his waies, Pſalm. 25. 9. The proud man is he that builds vp his ſinnes with poſts and beams, and ſuch a one the Lord will not teach; but him that plucks downe theſe poſts by amendment of his life, will the Lord inſtruct in the way that he ſhould walke. Chriſt ſaith to his Diſciples, Ye are my freinds if yee keepe my commandements: and to his freinds will hee make knowne all things needfull that hee hath heard of his Father, Ioh. 15. 14, 15. by all which it is plaine, that right iudgement followes true reformation of life.

a 2 Chr. 33. 13.

How to vnderſtand Gods word.

Vſe I. Hereby we ſee how to come to vnderſtand the holy Scriptures read or heard, namely, by the amendement of our owne liues: firſt, reforme thine owne heart and life, and then ſhalt thou haue true iudgement giuen vnto thee, to be able in reading or hearing, to vnderſtand Gods word, at leaſt ſo much thereof, as ſhall be needfull for thee: and doubtleſſe the cauſe why moſt men profit ſo little in the Scriptures, though they heare and reade them much, is for that they look not to the reformation of their owne liues and conſciences, according to the word. Prov. 1. 23. Turne you at my correction (ſaith Wiſdome) and I will powre out my minde vnto you, and make you vnderſtand my words. The ſtudent therefore that muſt fit himſelfe to get true vnderſtanding in Gods word, for the edification of Gods Church, muſt remember this direction, and labour firſt to plucke out the beame out of his owne eie; and then ſhall he ſee clearely to reade with iudgement the word of God, and to diſcerne the true way of euerlaſting life, for the good of Gods people: but if thou come in thy ſinnes, thou readeſt without profit.

How to know our adoption.

II. Vſe. Againe, wouldeſt thou know thy ſelfe to be the childe of God? remember then to purge thy heart and life from all ſinne, for thence floweth true vnderſtanding, and thereupon God will certifie thy conſcience of thine election and reconciliation; but if thou ſuffer thy ſelfe to liue in ſinne, thou maiſt long waite for this certificate, and neuer haue it.

How to know true religion.

III. Vſe. Many men there be that will bee of no religion, becauſe there are ſo many and diuers opinions about matters of religion in the world; and therefore till ſome generall Councell haue determined of the truth of religion, they will liue as they doe: but theſe men muſt know, that they take a wrong courſe: If they would com to know the truth of religion, they muſt firſt reforme their liues; but while they liue in ſinne, they can neuer ſee what is good, what is badde, what is truth, what is falſhood in religion. Ioh. 7. 17. If any man will doe my fathers will (ſaith Chriſt) hee ſhall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I ſpeake of my ſelfe; where he plainely giues vs to vnderſtand, that true iudgement of religiō comes from obedience vnto God. This is the right way to reforme an Atheiſt: firſt, to bring him to obedience. And in a word, whoſoeuer thou art, that wouldeſt in thy calling, whatſoeuer it be, pleaſe God, and doe good to others; firſt purge thine owne heart and life from ſinne, and then ſhalt thou ſee clearely wherein thou faileſt, and how thou art to amend thy fault, and afterward to doe good to others.

Brotherly correction commāded.

A II. generall Point. Further, in this remedie our Sauiour Chriſt oppoſeth Brotherly correction, vnto raſh iudgement; and withall, preſcribes brotherly correction as a dutie to be practiſed among Gods people. Touching this point, foure things are to be conſidered: I. Who is to correct. II. Who is to be corrected. III. What is to be corrected: and IV. In what manner. For the firſt, the partie that muſt correct is a brother, that is, any member of Gods Church: ſo it is ſaid, Then ſhalt thou ſee clearely to put out the mote out of thy brothers eie: and Leuit. 19. 17. Thou ſhalt not hate thy brother in thine heart, but ſhalt plainely rebuke thy neighbour, and not ſuffer him to ſinne: and Matth. 18. 15. If thy brother ſinne againſt thee, that is, do thee any wrong, or elſe ſinne againſt God, and thou be priuie to it: (for that ſinne may be ſaid to be againſt a man, whereto hee is priuie, though the wrong bee not againſt him, becauſe there is an offence giuen vnto him) Then tell him his fault betweene him and thee alone: that is, correct and admoniſh him

1. Who muſt correct.

Exceptions in the caſe of correction.

priuately. Againe, euery man is bound in conſcience to ſaue his brothers ſoule, which oftimes may be done by brotherly correction; and for want thereof, many times the ſoule may periſh: and therefore it is euery mans dutie to correct his brother; yet with this clauſe and caution, that iuſt occaſion be offered, and time and place obſerued; for there be certaine particular exceptions, in which a man is freed from this dutie, and all becauſe there is no iuſt occaſion of correction offered: 1 as firſt, if he be not certaine of the fault committed, for all lawfull correction, is of faults certainely and truely knowne. 2 Secondly, if the partie offending doe repent, for the ende of correction is to bring the offender to amendment. 3 Thirdly, if there be no hope of his amendment, Prov. 9. 8. Reproue not a ſkorner; that is, ſuch a one as mocks thee for thy labour. 4 Fourthly, if it may in better manner, and to better purpoſe be performed by others, which for place and abilitie may and will more fitly performe it. But yet out of theſe caſes, if iuſt occaſion be offered, euery one is to performe brotherly correction vnto his brother.

How euery Chriſtian is a Paſtor. Heb. 10. 24.

Here I note one particular inſtruction; that not onely the Miniſter of Gods word is our Paſtor, but euen euery brother after a ſort is a Paſtor, in regard that he muſt watch ouer the liues of his brethren for their good and amendment. It is the ſinne of our time, that euery one thinks he hath no charge laid on him in regard of his brothers life and eſtate. This was Cains ſinne towards his brother Abel, he denied himſelfe to be his brothers keeper: if any man ſinne, the common ſpeach is, what is it to mee? let them looke to it whom it concernes. But this ought not to be, one man ought to obſerue an other, and vſe alſo brotherly correction for the reformation of faults certainly knowne. This is a dutie of loue and mercie, tending to the good of our brother, and to the ſaluatiō of his ſoule: in conſcience we are bound to releeue the bodies of our poore brethren that be in perill and want, much more then are we bound to looke vnto their ſoules, that they periſh not for want of admonition. We muſt turne backe our enemies oxe or aſſe that wandreth, much more our brother from going to perdition.

Who muſt be corrected.

II. Point. Who is to be corrected? out of whoſe eye is the more to be taken? to wit, a Brother; out of thy brothers eye. By a Brother here Chriſt meaneth not euery neighbour, for that is euery man; but euery one that is a member of that Church, whereof wee are members, and profeſſeth the ſame religion which wee doe, beeing admitted into the Church by the ſame Sacrament of Baptiſme, whereby we are admitted. This is plaine in the exhortation of Chriſt, Math. 18. 17. If thy brother ſinne againſt thee, tell him his fault betweene him and thee: and ſo proceede (if he heare thee not) till he come to the cenſure of the Church: which were in vaine, if the partie were no member of A the Church. If any one that is called a brother (ſaith Saint Paul) be a fornicatour, couetous, &c. with ſuch a one eate not, 1. Cor. 5. 11. and hee addeth; what haue I to doe to iudge them that are without? doe yee not iudge them that are within? Now here the former order muſt be obſerued; that firſt a man muſt correct himſelfe, ſecondly his family and kinred, next a brother of the ſame congregation with him. And if good order be obſerued, he may admoniſh a brother that is a member of an other particular Church; but beyond this we may not goe, though we muſt carrie our ſelues ſo to them that are without, that by our good conuerſation we may winne them to God. B And further this is to be knowne, that in the Church of God, authoritie and dignitie frees no perſon from brotherly correction; whereupon Paul biddes the people of Coloſſa, to ſay vnto Archippus their Paſtor, Take heede to thy miniſterie, which thou haſt receiued of the Lord, that thou fulfill it, Coloſſ. 4. 17. And hence we may learne this dutie; when we offend in word or deede, we muſt ſubmit our ſelues willingly to brotherly correction; we muſt not ſay, as ſometime one of the Iſraelites that ſtroue with his brother, ſaide vnto Moſes for reproouing him, who made thee a iudge and a ruler ouer vs? but beeing faultie, we muſt ſubmit our ſelues to the correction of our brother, though we be aboue them in place. C It is better to heare the reprehenſe of a wiſe man (ſaith Salomon) then the ſong of a foole, Eccleſ. 7. 7. It may be the ſong of a foole will more delight vs, but ſure it is, the wiſe mans reproofe is farre more profitable. This David teſtified, by deſiring that [a] the righteous might ſmite him; accounting it as a precious balme vpon his head, which hee would neuer want: yea, nature it ſelf doth teach vs this, that it is better to be reprooued euen of an enemie, then to be praiſed of a freind: according to that of Salomon, Prov. 27. 6. Open rebuke is better then ſecret loue.

Outward dignity frees none from correction.

Exod. 2. 14.

[a] Pſal. 141. 5.

The matter of reproofe.

III. Point. For what is a brother to be admoniſhed or corrected? not onely for great offences, but for leſſer ſinnes: we muſt pull out D not onely beames, but ſtraws and motes out of his eie; for here leſſer ſinnes are as ſtrawes and motes to greater ſinnes, which be as beams and poſts. The reaſon why we muſt correct our brother for ſmall offences, is becauſe euery great ſinne hath his beginning of ſome little & ſmall ſinne; and therefore it is a dutie of brotherly correction, to cut off ſinne in the head, before it grow out to the full. Thus the Lord dealt with [b] Cain, he reprooued him for his wrath & malice againſt his brother, teſtified by his ſad countenance, before he ſlew his brother; but Cain not yeelding to the Lords reproofe, came at the laſt to the grieuous ſinne of murther.

[b] Gen. 4. 6.

In this third point we may take a view of that heauenly order which Chriſt hath left in his Church, for the reformation, not onely of greater crimes, but of lesser ſinnes; for there be many ſinnes committed which cannot be corrected by the ſword of the Magiſtrate, neither yet by the publike cenſure of the Church: as lying, fooliſh ieſting, and other offences in behauiour and attire; yet theſe wil not Chriſt permit to be in his Church, & therefore hath prouided brotherly correction to cut them off.

The manner how to reproue.

IV. Point. How is brotherly correction to be performed? Although the manner of brotherly correction be not here expreſſely ſet downe, yet it is implied, where it is ſaid, Then ſhalt thou ſee clearely, &c. I will ſtand a little to ſhew how this dutie is to be performed. In brotherly correction theſe things are required; 1. Chriſtian wiſedome to ſee clearely into the fault, and alſo how it is to be amended. The author to the Hebrewes makes it the dutie of euery Chriſtian to obſerue his brother: not for this ende, to vpbraid him with his faults; but that he may rightly diſcerne thereof, and alſo know how to correct him. And here comes a common fault to be reprooued: many are forward and haſtie to correct their brethren, but yet it ſhall be vpon bare rumours and vncertaine grounds, they will not ſtay till they know the fault thoroughly and certainly; whereupon it comes to paſſe many times, that the reprouer beares the blame; for the partie reprooued ſaith, there is no ſuch matter, the thing is otherwiſe, and ſo the other becomes a raſh cenſurer. 2. In Chriſtian correction, there muſt be obſeruation of fit circumſtances; as time and place; elſe the good admonition may be leſſe effectuall. We ſhall ſee the practiſe of this in the word of God: Abigail obſerued a fit time to reprooue her husband for his churliſh anſwer to Dauids ſeruants, and therefore told him not of it till his feaſt of ſheepe-ſhearing was ended, and the wine gone out of his head.

3. The manner of our brothers offence muſt be conſidered, whether it proceede of humane frailtie, or otherwiſe; if his fault proceed from humane frailtie, then Pauls leſſon may be practiſed, Gal. 6. 1. Yee that are ſpirituall reſtore ſuch a one with the ſpirit of meekeneſſe. The phraſe there is borrowed from Surgeons, who being to deale with a broken ioynt, will handle the ſame very tenderly: and ſo muſt they be dealt withall in reproofe, that ſinne of humane frailtie. Example of this mildenes in reproofe we haue in Nathan, who reprooued Dauid in a parable, and ſo brought him to condemne himſelfe: and the Apoſtle Paul reprouing the Corinthians in the beginning of the firſt Epiſtle, doth include himſelfe and Apollos in the ſame reproofe, as though they had bin guiltie of the ſame crime, 1. Cor. 4. 6. And giuing direction to Timothie how to carrie himſelfe in the Church of God, though he allowe him to vſe rebuke and reproofe, 2. Tim. 4. 2. yet he bids him not rebuke an Elder, therein giuing good direction for admonition if the partie be an elder, though reproofe be not vnlawfull, yet it is not ſo fit as exhortation: and the like mildeneſſe muſt be vſed toward all thoſe that ſinne of humane frailtie. But if the offence proceede from wilfulnes and obſtinacie, then the iudgements of God muſt be denounced againſt them to driue them to repentance.

4. Euery one that is to correct another, muſt conſider himſelfe, & his own eſtate, knowing that of himſelfe he may fall into the like offence. So Paul bids them that are to ſeeke the reſtoring of ſuch as are fallen, to conſider themſelues, Gal. 6. 1.

5. Brotherly correction muſt be deliuered with Doctrine and inſtruction: 2. Tim. 4. 1, 2. I charge thee before God, to reprooue, exhort, and rebuke, with all long ſuffering and doctrine. Hee that will admoniſh, muſt firſt himſelfe be reſolued, that the thing done is a ſinne; then he muſt propound it to the partie, as a ſinne out of Gods word, and deliuer the reproofe, not in his owne name, but in the name of God; ſo as hereby the partie may know himſelfe to haue offended, and alſo ſay, that he is reprooued of God himſelfe rather then of man. This ought all ſuperiours to practiſe, in correcting and admoniſhing their inferiours; they muſt not go thereto in rage, but in long ſuffering; nor rudely, but with doctrine, that the partie offending may ſee his fault. And thus much for this dutie of brotherly correction.

v. 6. Giue not that which is holy vnto doggs: neither caſt ye your pearles before ſwine: leaſt they tread them vnder their feete, and turning againe all to rent you.

7. Part of Chriſts Sermon.

Hitherto the Euangeliſt hath ſet downe the ſeuerall heads of Chriſts Sermon more at large: but from this verſe to the ende of the Chapter, hee handleth briefly the points which follow. This verſe dependeth not vpon the former, but herein our Sauiour Chriſt laies downe a new point of inſtruction, directing his Diſciples, & in them all miniſters, vnto that chriſtian diſcretion which ought to be obſerued in the diſpenſation of the word of God. And his direction is here propounded in a prohibition of giuing holy things to doggs, or caſting pearles before ſwine: which is inforced by a double reaſon, leaſt they tread them, &c.

Now for the better vnderſtanding hereof, firſt I wil ſpeake of the words, becauſe they are hard and difficult; and then come to the doctrines.

In the words foure things are to be ſought out. 1. What is meant by holy things. 2. What is meant by pearles. 3. What is meant by dogs: and 4. what is meant by ſwine. For the firſt, by that which is holy, we muſt vnderſtand firſt and properly, the word of God, written in the books of the old and new teſtament, in his right and holy vſe; that is, read, diſpenſed, and preached: and conſequently, by holy things, are meant the Sacraments, and Chriſtian admonition. Gods word is called an holy thing for ſundry cauſes, but principally for theſe two; firſt, becauſe it is holy in it ſelfe: and ſecondly, in effect and operation. It is holy in it ſelfe, becauſe it is ſet apart by God, to be in the Church in ſtead of his own liuely voice vnto his people for the reuealing and determining of all things to be beleeued and done in his Church. In the old teſtament, God himſelfe ſpake by a liuely voice vnto the Patriarkes, and after the giuing of the Law, hee gaue anſwer to the high Prieſt at the Mercie-ſeat: and yet we are not inferiour to them, though we want that liuely voice; for we haue the written word in ſtead thereof, which is anſwerable euery way thereunto: for looke what the written word ſaith, is as much as if the Lord from heauen ſhould ſpeake by a liuely voice: and ſo conſequently, it is to vs in ſtead of the Arke of God, a pledge of his preſence. And thus it is holy in it ſelfe. Secondly, Gods word is holy, in regard of operation; for it is the inſtrument of the ſpirit ſet apart by God himſelfe, to be the meanes whereby hee ſanctifies and reformes the hearts and liues of his children. And conſequently, the Sacraments are holy things, for they are the word made viſible; ſo likewiſe is Chriſtian admonition grounded vpon Gods word.

Gods word is an holy thing.

From this doctrine ſundrie duties are to be learned: Firſt, we are oft commanded in Gods word, to drawe neere vnto God, to ſeeke him, to feare him, and to walke before him in his preſence: how ſhall we doe theſe things, ſeeing God is inuiſible, and in glorie and maieſtie is in heauen? Surely, we muſt conſider the word of God, which is that holy thing ſet apart by God, to be in ſtead of his owne liuely voice; and therefore we need not ſeeke for him that is inuiſible, but we muſt haue recourſe vnto the word, and labour to haue it preſent with vs in our hearts, in our liues, and conſciences. Enoch walked before God, not onely in regard of his infinite maieſtie, which though it bee inuiſible, is euery where preſent; but principally in reſpect of his word, ſetting that before him whereſoeuer he was. When we are command to feare God, we muſt know that that is done, not onely when we ſtand in awe of his glorious maieſtie, but principally when we feare to offend God, commanding vs in his word. The Apoſtle ſaith, that the holy Ghoſt dwells in our hearts: which muſt not be thought to be meant of that infinite ſubſtance of the holy ſpirit; but of the dwelling of the word, which is made effectuall by the holy ſpirit: for faith euer hath relation to the word, and being beleeued, it dwels in the heart, and makes the ſpirit, which workes by the ſame word preſent alſo. In which regard Paul ſaith, Now I liue not, but Chriſt liues in mee: which he expoundeth after, ſaying, I liue now by faith in the ſonne of God: becauſe the word of Chriſt was preſent with him, and the grace of faith that liues by that word.

Rom.8.11.

Gal.2.20.

Secondly, ſeeing the word of God is of that holineſſe, we muſt learne to vſe the ſame publikely or priuately with all reuerence, carefully ſanctifying our ſelues thereunto. When the people came to receiue the law in Mount Sina, they were ſanctified three daies before: and the ſame preparation for ſubſtance, ought we to make before we heare the word of God: Firſt, wee muſt waſh our hands in innocencie, and then compaſſe the Altar of the Lord: the word and ſacraments are holy in themſelues, but not ſo to vs, out of their holy vſe; and therefore if we would reape profit to our ſelues by them, wee muſt prepare our hearts thereunto.

Vſe the word holily.

Pſal.26.6.

Thirdly, whereas the word is vnto vs the voice of God, and the meanes of ſanctification; we may learne that in the cōgregation of Gods people ordinarily, the pure word of God alone ought to be heard, without the mixture of the words of men, be they neuer ſo holy; for it is not ſaid of the words of any man, that they are that holy thing. The Lord himſelfe alone had the appointment of the making of the holy oyle, which was to annoint the Kings & Prieſts vnder the law: neither might any man adde any thing thereto, though it were neuer ſo pure & good, nor make any oyle like vnto it: ſo likewiſe the trumpets that ſerued for the Tabernacle to aſſemble the people, the Lord himſelfe alone had the appointment of them; and none might vſe any other, though it were made of moſt pure gold. Had the Lord this care ouer his Sanctuarie vnder the law, to take the appointment of theſe things to himſelfe alone? & ſhall we thinke that the trumpet of his holy word, which now by his appointment ſoundeth in the congregation of the Saints, may admit a mixture with the words of men, humane, or diuine, be they neuer ſo holy? The ancient Church was farre from this mixture; and therefore a forbad the publicke reading of the Apocrypha, which yet are more excellent books then the writings of men publiſhed ſince the Apoſtles. But it is ſaid, that they onely finde fault with this kind of preaching, which cannot attain vnto it. I anſwer, it is no point of the greateſt learning to vſe the ſayings of Fathers and Poets in preaching: and they which vſe it not, refraine therefrom, not becauſe they cannot doe it, but becauſe they dare not mingle the ſayings of men with the word of God, which is that holy thing, ſeruing in ſtead of Gods owne glorious voice in all matters that concerne our faith and obedience; and beeing the only ſufficient inſtrument of our ſanctification; and therefore it were to be wiſhed, that in the congregations of the Saints, the pure word of God might ſound alone vnto Gods people; that as they are begotten alone of this immortall ſeede, ſo they might be fedde alone with this ſincere milke.

The pure word alone ought to be taught.

II. Point. What is meant by pearles? Anſw. The wholſome doctrines & instructions of Gods word, contained partly in commandements, and partly in ſweete and heauenly promiſes: ſo Matth.13.46. the Goſpel preached is compared to a pretious pearle. And further we are to note, that theſe wholeſome instructions are called your pearles, (Chriſt ſpeaking to his Diſciples and other hearers:) now they are ſo called in two reſpects. Firſt, in regard of the Apoſtles & other Miniſters their ſucceſſours; becauſe they are the Lords ſtewards, to diſpenſe the word and the doctrine thereof, to Gods people. Secondly, in regard of all true beleeuers and ſeruants of God, that haue care to know and to obey the word of God: for euery beleeuer hath a ſpecial right vnto gods word aboue other mē: to which purpoſe the Lord ſaith, Binde vp the teſtimonie: ſeale vp the law among my Diſciples, Iſa.8.16. that is, commend and commit my word vnto my diſciples; there giuing a ſpeciall right and intereſt vnto them in the word of ſaluation: for they haue the true iudgement and meaning thereof: they keepe it in their hearts, and expreſſe the power of it in their liues, they haue the vſe and benefit thereof in euery eſtate in this world, and vnto their eternall ſaluation in heauen.

From this, that the doctrines of Gods word are our pearles, firſt, we are taught to place all our riches in the word of God, for that is our Iewel, and our principall treaſure: of this Salomon ſaith, Her merchandiſe are better then merchandiſe of ſiluer, and the gaine thereof better then gold. In the valuing of this pearle, Dauids practiſe is notable, who made the teſtimonies of God his heritage, and the very ioy of his heart, Pſalm.119.111. and eſteemed them aboue gold, yea aboue moſt fine gold, verſ.127.

Secondly, we muſt hereby learne to content our ſelues in caſualties and calamities of this life, with this pearle of the word of God: for though we looſe freinds, health, goods, or good name, yet this pearle of good doctrines and ſweete promiſes is not loſt; if that were taken away with the loſſe of outward commodities, then there were ſome cauſe of diſcomfort: but ſeeing this iewell remaines with vs in all eſtates, therefore herewith we muſt ſtay and comfort our ſelues, as Dauid did, counting Gods promiſes his comfort in trouble, Pſal.119.50. and his ſongs in his pilgrimage, v.54.

Thirdly, this muſt teach vs to vſe the doctrines and promiſes of Gods word as pearles; we muſt lock them vp in our hearts, and haue them in faithfull keeping in our memories. A man that hath an earthly iewel that is of any worth, will be very carefull to lock it vp in the ſureſt cheſt he hath; how much more care ought we to haue of theſe true pearles of heauenly inſtructions? As the holy Ghoſt ſpeakes of Deacons, they muſt be ſuch as keepe the myſterie of faith in good conſcience; ſo muſt euery one of vs bee carefull keepers of this heauenly pearle. This was Maries practiſe, Luk.2.51. Shee pondered the ſayings of Chriſt in her heart: and Dauid hidde the word of God in his heart, that hee might not ſinne againſt the Lord, Pſal.119.11.

Tim.3.9.

IV. Instruct. The doctrines and promiſes in Gods word, are the pearles of the Apoſtles and Miniſters; therefore, they aboue others in all ages and times, ought to haue ſpeciall care, by all good meanes to preſerue the puritie of doctrine in the Church of God. This is Pauls charge to Timothie, keepe that which is committed vnto thee: that is, that wholeſome doctrine which thou haſt learned of mee: and this neerely concerneth miniſters at this day, that as by the good means of others, they haue receiued true doctrine purified from the dregges of Poperie, ſo they ſhould preſerue and keepe the ſame from all taint of corruption to their poſteritie.

Miniſters muſt preſerue puritie of doctrine.

1.Tim.6.20.

The third and fourth things to be conſidered, are touching dogs and ſwine; where theſe three points are to be handled. I. What are here properly meant by dogs and ſwine: II. Who muſt giue iudgement of men to be dogges and ſwine: and III. Where they are to be found. For the firſt: By dogs and ſwine, wee muſt vnderſtand the enemies of Gods word; yet not all enemies, for ſo euery ſinner ſhould be a dogge and a ſwine; but onely ſuch are malitious obſtinate enemies, manifeſtly conuicted of their enmitie to Gods word and doctrine, of whoſe amendment there is no hope. And that theſe are here to be vnderſtood, appeares by theſe reaſons: I. From the text it ſelfe, which deſcribeth them by this, that treading the words of inſtruction vnder foote, they doe turne againe and all-to-rend the Teachers thereof: that is, they doe perſecute them both by word and deede, in all reproachfull ſpeeches, and cruell actions. II. Reaſon. In the word of God wee ſhall find that Chriſt and his Apoſtles preached to dogs (for ſuch are all men by nature:) The Scribes and Phariſies, a generation of Vypers came to Iohns baptiſme vnrepelled, though not vnreproued; Matth.3.6,7. and Chriſt himſelfe telleth the woman of Canaan, that it was not lawfull to giue the childrens bread to dogges: that is, to the Gentiles; and yet he ſent his diſciples to preach to all nations: and the woman her ſelfe, by reaſon of her faith, was receiued to mercie, and made partaker of the crums that fel from the childrens table. Againe, our Sauiour Chriſt preached to the Scribes and Phariſies, euen then when hee wept ouer Ieruſalem for their impenitencie: yea, this is a truth, that becauſe men are naturally dogs and ſwine, therefore they muſt haue the word of God preached vnto them, to purifie and ſanctifie them, vnleſſe they be obſtinate and irrepentant enemies to the word; of whome is no hope of recouerie. III. Reaſon. Theſe obſtinate enemies here are called dogs and ſwine, by alluſion to vncleane beaſts vnder the law; of which ſort were dogs and ſwine, which were prohibited the Iewes to be eaten, or offered in ſacrifice to God: Chriſt therefore here by alluſion to that ceremonie, meanes ſuch perſons as are excluded from the holy things of the Lord, and haue no right or intereſt into the Lords word or ſacraments; ſuch as both in heart and life be vncleane as hogs, and dogges, and will not bee purified. IV. Reaſon. Paul chargeth Titus that after once or twice admonition, hee ſhould reiect an heretike, knowing that ſuch a one is peruerted and ſinneth, beeing damned of his owne ſelfe: that is, ſinneth wilfully and obſtinately, and in ſo ſinning condemneth himſelfe in his owne heart and conſcience: and ſuch are meant by dogs and ſwine in this place.

Dogs and ſwine are obſtinate enemies.

Matth.15.26.

Tit.3.10,11.

Difference betweene dogs and ſwine.

Now the difference of theſe two may bee this; By dogs are meant obſtinate enemies that maliciouſly reuile the miniſterie of the word, the doctrine of God, and the meſſengerſt thereof: ſuch a dog was Alexander the Copper-ſmith, 2. Tim. 4.14. and ſuch were many of the Iewes become ſoone after Chriſts aſcenſion, who reuiled the Apoſtle Paul, and Barnabas, and blaſphemed the doctrine which they taught, Act. 13. 45. and of this ſort are all conuicted obſtinate heretiks. By ſwine, are meant obſtinate enemies that do contemne the word of God; either becauſe they will not admit reformation of life by it, ſuch as Ahab and Herod were; or becauſe they ſcorne and mock at the word of God, as they doe, of whom Peter ſpeaks, that mocke at the promiſes of Chriſts ſecond comming.

2.Pet.3.3,4.

Who muſt iudge men to be dogs and ſwine.

The ſecond point touching theſe perſons, is who muſt giue iudgement of any man or any people to be dogs and ſwine: we muſt know that it is not in the power and liberty of any priuate man to giue iudgement of another that he is a dogge or a ſwine; but it is a publike dutie belonging to the miniſters and gouernours of the Church to giue iudgement in this caſe. Matth. 18.17. Before a man muſt be reputed as a Publicane, and as an Heathen, the cenſure of the Church muſt paſſe vpon his behauiour; and from the iudgement of the Church muſt priuate men hold others as Publicanes and heathen. Indeede our Sauiour Chriſt and his Apoſtles gaue this iudgment of men particularly and peremptorily; as Paul of Alexander the Copper-ſmith: but we muſt vnderſtand, what authoritie, and what ſpirit Chriſt and his Apoſtles had; which becauſe we haue not, wee cannot giue ſuch iudgement vpon men. Further here we are to know, that iudgement vpon others is two-fold; Iudgement of certaintie, or Iudgement of humane wiſedome: The iudgement of certaintie, touching any mans ſtate, belongs onely to God, and to them to whom God reuealeth the ſame. The iudgement of humane wiſdome, is when the Church of God, in the feare of God, giue iudgement as truely and as neerely as they can, who is a dogge and who is a ſwine: and this onely is the iudgement of the Church, which alſo is conditionall; as namely, till they repent: becauſe they know A not the times that God hath appointed for the conuerſion of ſinners. And by this wee are taught, to comprimit our iudgement of any man, in regard of his finall eſtate, though he be an vnrepentant ſinner, refuſing inſtruction; for moſt hainous ſinners haue bin conuerted.

Where dogs and ſwine are to be found.

The third point, where theſe dogs and ſwine are to be found: It is not in the power of any ordinarie miniſter, or other man, to determine of any one, that he is a dogge or a ſwine; for in ſuch doe finall impenitencie, and wilfull obſtinacie concurre; which wee are not able to ſay certainely, are come vpon any man or woman while they liue among vs: and yet this may be ſaid with good conſcience, that ther is in many a fearefull declination to the properties of dogs B and ſwine, euen in this age of ours; for many will heare the word, receiue the Sacraments, & profeſſe that they hope to be ſaued by Chriſt; and yet they will raile on his Miniſters, and ſpeake againſt their miniſterie: yea, the times are now, wherein many in open ſpeech wil not ſticke to reuile and condemne thoſe that haue beene the moſt excellent inſtruments of Gods mercie in his Church: among many I will name one, M. Iohn Calvin, that worthie inſtrument of the Goſpel, is in the mouthes of many ſtudents condemned as an erroneous perſon, teaching falſe and dangerous doctrine. Yea, many there be that come to the Lords Table, and yet will not brooke reformation of life: they will not be drawne from their drunkenneſſe, igno- C rance, adulterie, and couetouſneſſe. A third ſort there are, that take occaſion from Gods word, to liue in their ſinnes, and to maintaine their wicked liues; as from the doctrine of Gods eternall predeſtination, becauſe the Scripture teacheth, that Gods decree therein is vnchangeable; therefore ſome ſay, they will liue as they liſt: others, becauſe the word ſaith, we are to be ſaued by faith alone, therefore they refuſe to walke in good workes: and others looke to be ſaued by Gods mercy alone, and therefore they will not labour either for knowledge, or faith, as they ought to doe: and ſome, hearing the doctrine of the deniall of our ſelues, doe ſay, the word of God is too ſtrait a D doctrine, barring men from laughter, & mirth, and other recreations; and therefore they will none of Gods word: now though we cannot call theſe men dogs, becauſe we know not what they may be hereafter; yet we may truely ſay, theſe be practiſes of dogs and ſwine.

And thus we ſee what is meant by holy things, by pearles, by dogs, and ſwine; from whence the meaning of Chriſt may be plainely thus ſet downe: Giue not that which is holy, &c. that is, Haue regard how, and to whom you diſpenſe the word and ſacraments; and if any perſon be openly conuicted of obſtinate enmitie to your doctrine, to ſuch publiſh not my word, be they dogs in railing, or ſwine in ſenſeleſſe contemning and ſcorning of the ſame.

The Vſe. 1. Hence we may ſee what courſe is to be vſed of Gods miniſters in the preaching and diſpenſing of his holy word; they muſt firſt preach and publiſh the word of God to all men without exception; grace muſt be offred to all; good and bad; then they muſt obſerue what fruit and effect the word hath with them, whether it worke reformation of life in them, or not: and though as yet they ſee not that fruite thereof in them, yet muſt they not condemne them as dogges; but rather wait and pray for their conuerſion, to ſee if at any time God will giue them repentance, according as S. Paul chargeth Timothie, 2. Tim. 2. 25. Thirdly, hauing waited for their conuerſion, he muſt labour to conuince their very conſcience of the truth which they in heart and life denie: ſo as he may ſay with Paul, If our Goſpel be hid, it is hid to them that periſh, 2. Cor. 4. 3. but if after all this, they giue euident ſignes of malicious and obſtinate enmitie againſt the word, ſcorning and rayling on this doctrine of God, and on the miniſters thereof, then are they to bee caſt out by the Church, and to be accounted as dogs, and to be barred from the word of life till they repent. This was Chriſts owne practiſe towards the Iewes: at the firſt he preached vnto them the Goſpel of the kingdome by Iohn Baptiſt, in his owne perſon, and by his Diſciples, but when as he ſawe ſome of them malitiouſly obſtinate, then he propounded his doctrine vnto them in parables, that they might be hardned in ſin: & after expounded the ſame priuately to his Diſciples. The Diſciples likewiſe after the aſcenſion of Chriſt, preached ſtill vnto the Iewes, euen when they were perſecuted by them: but at length when as they ſawe that of obſtinate malice they oppugned the truth, putting it from them, and iudging themſelues vnworthy eternall life, then they turned to the Gentiles, Act. 13. 46.

Now in this that hath beene ſaid, wee may note two things: firſt, the long ſuffering and great patience of God, that will not haue a ſinner liuing in the Church cõdemned, till he haue brought him through all the meanes of his conuerſion, and till hee be paſt hope. Thus he dealt with the olde world, expecting their repentance an hundred and twentie yeares, whereunto he then called them by the preaching of Noah, Gen. 6. Secondly, hereby we muſt learne to moderate our iudgements concerning wicked men: a man muſt not be condemned for a dogge, or for a ſwine, til he giue euident ſignes of obſtinate malice, and wilfull contempt of the word, & vntill he do euen conuict himſelfe to be ſuch a one, by a wilfull contempt of the meanes of his ſaluation. This ſerues to ſhewe their raſhneſſe and indiſcretion, that condemne our Church for no Church, and our people for no people of God; iudging them for dogges and ſwine, when as they haue not yet conuicted them of obſtinate malice in ſinne or error. It will be ſaid, they haue admoniſhed them by writing. I anſwer, that their owne bookes A haue more errors in them, then they doe hold whome they admoniſh, and ſo their writings can be no ſufficient conuiction.

Secondly, here obſerue that men become dogges and ſwine, by their wilfull repelling that holy doctrine of God, which ſhould purge them and make them cleane. It is the naturall propertie of a dogge to returne to his vomit, and of a ſwine, to his wallowing in the mire, as the Prouerbe is; and hereof they can by no meanes be bereaued. And all men by nature returne to the vomit and filth of their ſinnes like dogges and ſwine: and they which will by no meanes ſuffer themſelues to be drawne from their old ſinnes, they haue theſe properties of B dogges and ſwine: and looke as thoſe beaſts were excluded the Lords tabernacle and congregation vnder the Law; ſo are theſe men debarred from the word and Sacraments, and all holy things vnder the Goſpel; they are abomination vnto the Lord; ſee Pſal. 50. 6. and Pſal. 50. 16. In this regard we are to be admoniſhed, to ſuffer our ſelues to be cleanſed and reformed by the word of God. Yee are cleane (ſaith Chriſt) by the word which I haue ſpoken vnto you, Ioh. 15. 3. where he maketh the word of God the inſtrument of our purification: to which effect hee ſaith in his prayer to his Father, Sanctifie them with thy truth, thy word is truth, Ioh. 17. 17. And S. Peter ſaith, our C ſoules are purified in obeying the truth by the ſpirit, 1. Pet. 1. 22. Now wee are by nature dogges and ſwine, inclined to the filth of our owne ſinnes returning thereto with greedines, neither can we of our ſelues bee broken of this propertie, but when occaſion is offered we do naturally runne to our old ſinnes, as the ſwine and dogges doe to their filth and vomit. In conſideration whereof wee ought to ſubiect our ſelues to the word of God, labouring to ſee and feele our owne vncleanenesse, and to crie with Dauid, Waſh me throughly from my ſinnes, and with Peter, Not my feete onely, but my whole bodie: that ſo it may be ſaid of vs, We are cleane throughout by Chriſts word. If we ſee any vncleanes in our hearts or liues, we muſt purge it out by this word, and returne no more to the filth D of our former ſinnes. It is the propertie of Chriſts ſheepe to heare his voice, and to obey the ſame: let vs hereby teſtifie our ſelues to be his ſheepe, that ſo we may be diſtinguiſhed from dogges and ſwine.

Here it may be demanded, whether wee ſhould make confeſſiõ of our faith before dogs and ſwine. Anſ. Yes, if we be called thereunto we are bound to doe it: Be alwaies readie (ſaith the Apoſtle) to giue an anſwer to euery man that asketh you a reaſon of the hope that is in you, 1. Pet. 3. 15. And in this place our Sauiour Chriſt ſpeaketh of the preaching and diſpenſing of the word, not of confeſſion. Now in preaching men acknowledge the word to belong vnto their hearers, but in confeſſion they declare the word to belong vnto themſelues alone.

b Excommunication is Gods ordinance.

Further, here we are to conſider diuers points concerning Excommunication. Firſt, the foundation thereof. It is an ordinance of God: for all dogges and ſwine by Chriſts commandement, muſt be kept from holy things; many that liue in the Church are open blaſphemers of the name of Chriſt, ſome others are heretikes, and theſe likewiſe are to be barred from the word and Sacraments; yea, a man liuing in the church may be worſe in practiſe then an open enemie; of ſuch like the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Tit. 1. 16. They profeſſe that they know God, but by their workes they denie him. And ſuch a one was Iſmael, who for mocking Iſaac the ſonne of the promiſe, was caſt out of Abrahams family, that is, out of the Church of God, Gen. 21. 10. 9. for Abrahams family at that time was Gods viſible Church.

The ende of excommunication.

Secondly, here alſo obſerue the ende of Excommunication, namely, to preſerue the holy things of God from pollution, contempt, and prophanation; euen the word, prayer, and Sacraments, which wilfull enemies would trample vpon, as ſwine will vpon pearles. And herein we may ſee the abuſe of this ordinance, when it is vſed for politicke and ciuill reſpects, eſpecially in the Church of Rome, whereof it is made an inſtrument of the vniuſt depoſing of Chriſtian Princes, and of exempting their ſubiects from due obedience and allegiance.

Pius 5. Pont. in Bulla cōtra Elizab.

Who muſt execute this cenſure.

Thirdly, here our Sauiour Chriſt noteth out the principall perſons that are to execute this cenſure of the Church vpon wilfull and obſtinate enemies, that be as dogs and ſwine; namely they to whom the diſpoſing and keeping of the holy things of God is cōmitted, that is, the lawfull Miniſters of the word and Sacraments: for they muſt keepe thoſe holy things pure which God hath committed vnto them; but that they cannot doe without the exerciſe of this cenſure which God hath giuen vnto his Church.

How farre excommunication reacheth.

Fourthly, here alſo we may ſee, how farre this cenſure of the Church extendeth againſt obſtinate and wilfull enemies; namely, to the debarring of them from the vſe of the Churches miniſterie in the word, prayer, and Sacraments. Indeede if the partie be excommunicate for ſome particular crime, and there be hope of his repentance, becauſe hee doth not ſhew himſelfe a dogge or a ſwine, by wilfull obſtinacie in his ſinne and contempt of the Church; then, although he be excluded from communion with them in the ſacraments and praier, yet he may be admitted to the hearing of the word, becauſe that is a meanes to humble him for his ſinne, and to bring him to repentance, which is the ende of all Eccleſiaſticall cenſures. And thus much of the prohibition. Now follow the reaſons to inforce the ſame.

Leaſt they tread them vnder their feete, and turning againe all to rent you. Here Chriſt renders a double reaſon to inforce his prohibition, A both drawne from the dangerous euents which would enſue by communicating holy things vnto dogges and ſwine: for firſt, they would tread them vnder their feete: ſecondly, turning againe all to rent you.

1. Reaſon.

For the firſt: by treading vnder feete, hee meanes prophaning and abuſing. Now becauſe the holy things of God muſt not be prophaned and abuſed, therefore they muſt not be communicated vnto wilfull enemies of the grace of God.

The holy things of God mu kept fro contemp

In this reaſon ſee the ſingular care of our Sauiour Chriſt, to keepe the Scriptures and other holy things of God from prophanation. This care he likewiſe ſhewed with great zeale when he whipt the buyers and ſellers out of the B Temple, becauſe they made his Fathers houſe, that holy place, a houſe of marchandiſe and a denne of theeues, Matth. 21. 12, 13. And herein he muſt be a patterne and example vnto vs all, to teach vs care and zeale in keeping the holy things of God from prophanation: farre muſt it be from vs to doe or ſpeake any thing which may cauſe the world to ſpeake euill of our holy profeſſion. This is Pauls charge to ſeruants, that they ſo carrie themſelues towards their maſters, that the name of God, and his doctrine be not euill ſpoken of, 1. Tim. 6. 1. for want of care herein was Gods hand heauie vpon Dauid, for becauſe by his foule facts of adulterie and murther, hee had cauſed the enemies of the Lord to blaſpheme, therefore the child borne vnto him muſt ſurely die, 2. Sam. 12. 14. C We muſt therefore pray, (as the a Apoſtle bids vs) that the word of God may be glorified. This is Chriſts direction in his prayer, before al things to deſire and ſeeke that b Gods name may be halowed and glorified: Now Gods word is his name, for thereby is he knowne vnto vs; yea, his name is magnified aboue all things by his word, Pſal. 138. 2. Excellent was Dauids praier to this effect, Pſal. 119. 39. Take away my rebuke which I feare, for thy iudgements are good; that is, keepe mee from doing that which may bring rebuke or reproach vpon thy word, or vpon thy works, for they are good. Good king Hezekias is alſo commended for his care of Gods glorie, in that he forbad his ſeruants to anſwer to the rayling blaſphemies of Rabſhakeh, D leaſt thereby he ſhould be prouoked to blaſpheme the more: as alſo in that hee greatly humbled himſelfe before the Lord vpon the hearing of it: for he rent his clothes, and put on ſackcloath, and ſpread the rayling letter before the Lord, thereby referring the reuenge to God himſelfe, chap. 19. 1. 14.

2. Reaſon.

And turning againe all to rent you. Theſe words containe Chriſts ſecond reaſon againſt communicating holy things to malicious and obſtinate enemies, drawne from the perill that may enſue thereupon to his diſciples and miniſters: for theſe dogs and ſwine are not onely prone to abuſe the holy things themſelues, but alſo to annoy and hurt by reuiling and perſecution thoſe that bee the meſſengers of the word vnto them.

In this reaſon Chriſt ſheweth, that it is not onely lawfull, but neceſſarie, that Gods miniſters ſhould ſeeke to avoid and ſhunne the malice and rage of obſtinate enimies, by all lawfull meanes which may ſtand with Gods glorie & the keeping of a good conſcience. Hence hee bad his diſciples, with the innocencie of doues, ioyn the wiſedome of ſerpents; now the ſerpent is moſt wily and warie to ſaue her ſelfe from harme.

Obiect. But it is the propertie of an hireling to flie from his flocke when hee ſeeth the wolfe comming: therefore it ſeemes Gods miniſters may not flie in time of perſecution. Anſw. To flie in perſecution is not alwaies a forſaking of the flocke, but ſometimes tends to their greater good: as when perſecution is intended directly againſt the miniſter, then he may with good conſcience flie for his ſafetie, in hope of returne for their future good, els Chriſt would not haue ſaid to his Diſciples, If they perſecute you in one citie flie into another, Matth. 10.23. Yea, not onely the miniſter muſt thus looke to his owne ſafetie, but his people alſo muſt doe what lies in them for his preſeruation. So did the beleeuers in the Primitiue Church for S. Paul, when his life was ſought in Damaſcus, the diſciples let him downe at a windowe in a basket through the wall, and he eſcaped, Act. 9.25. And at Epheſus when the great tumult was about Diana, Paul would haue thruſt himſelfe in among the people, but the Diſciples ſeeing it would be dangerous vnto him, kept him backe, and would not ſuffer him. Act. 19.30.

V. 7. Aske, and it ſhall bee giuen you: ſeeke, and yee ſhall finde: knocke, and it ſhall be opened vnto you.

In this verſe and thoſe which followe vnto the twelft, is laid downe the third part of this chapter, concerning prayer: and it conſiſteth of two branches: a commandement to pray, and ſeuerall reaſons to perſwade vs thereto. The commandement is propounded in three ſeuerall tearmes, Aske, ſeeke, and knocke: each whereof hath his promiſe annexed thereto, Yee ſhall haue, ye ſhall finde, and it ſhall be opened vnto you. Now for our better vnderſtanding of Chriſts meaning herein, two rules muſt be obſerued. I. That Chriſt here ſpeakes not of euerie kinde of asking in prayer, but of that onely which himſelfe commandeth & alloweth: for we may aske and not receiue, becauſe we aske amiſſe, as S. Iames ſaith, but hee that asketh according to Chriſts direction in this place, ſhall receiue.

Now in all acceptable prayer to God, foure conditions muſt be obſerued. I. We muſt aske while the time of grace and mercie remaineth: for if the day of grace be once paſt, we may aske, ſeeke, and knocke, but all in vaine: this A is plaine by the fiue fooliſh virgins who asked and ſought for oyle, but found none, yea they called and knocked, but it was not opened vnto them, Matth. 25.8.9.12. Now the time of this life, while God offers mercie vnto vs in his word, is the acceptable time and the day of grace, 2. Cor.
6.2. and therefore herein muſt we aske, ſeeke, and knocke. II. We muſt not aske as ſeemeth 2 good vnto our ſelues, but according to Gods will, and as his word alloweth. The ſonnes of Zebedie were denied their requeſt, becauſe they asked they knewe not what, Matth. 20.22. But this is our aſſurance that we haue in him, that if wee aske any thing according to his will he heareth vs, 1.
Ioh. 5.14. III. We muſt aske in faith, that is, 3
B beleeue that God will graunt vs thoſe things which we aske according to his will: Iam. 1.5, 6. If any man lacke wiſedome let him aske of God——*but let him aske in faith, and wauer not:
for the wauering minded man ſhall receiue nothing of God*: therefore ſaith Chriſt, Whatſoeuer ye de-ſire in praier beleeue that ye ſhall haue it, and it ſhall be done vnto you, Mark. 11.24. IV. Wee muſt 4 referre the time and mannner of Gods accompliſhing our requeſts to his good pleaſure. It was the ſinne of the Iſraelites that they limited the holy one of Iſrael, by preſcribing what they would haue for their prouiſion, and when they would haue it; Pſal. 78.41. we therefore muſt wait on God, as Dauid did, Pſal. 40.1. I waited patiently for the Lord, and he inclined his eare vn-C to me, and heard me. God deferres the graunting of our requeſts, becauſe he would trie the affections of his children. Cant. 3.1. The Church ſeeketh Chriſt, but cannot finde him, that is, where and when ſhe will. And indeed herein doe we ſhewe forth faith when wee re-ferre the time and manner of receiuing our re-queſts, to the good pleaſure of God: for he that beleeueth will not make haſt, Iſa. 28.16.

2. Rule. Gods promiſe to hear and reſpect the perſon of Chriſt.

The ſecond rule to be here remembred concerning praier, is: That theſe promiſes are not made directly to the worke of prayer, but to the perſon that prayeth; and yet not to him ſimply, as he doth this good action of prayer, but as he is in Chriſt, for whoſe merit ſake the promiſe is accompliſhed: and therefore Chriſt
D here ſpeaks to them, whom he takes for graun-ted to be the true members of his myſticall body which is his Church. This rule muſt be re-membred for the right vnderſtanding of the promiſes of God concerning prayer; for hereby it is plaine, that our praier is not the cauſe of the bleſſings we receiue from God, but onely a way and inſtrument in & by which God conuayeth his bleſſings vnto his children; for a true prayer is a fruit of our faith in Chriſt, in whom alone all the promiſes of God are yea, and amen,
that is, ſure and certen vnto vs.

Now hauing found Chriſts meaning, let vs come to ſuch inſtructions as are to be gathered hence. First, obſerue that Chriſt doth not barely propound this commaundement to pray, but repeates the ſame by a kind of gradation in three diſtinct words, Aske, ſeeke, and knocke; whereof the latter imports more vehemence then the former. And this hee doth to check the ſlackenes and coldnes of our praiers, and to ſtirre vs vp to feruent zeale & diligence in this dutie both in publike and priuate. And to mooue vs to godly zeale and diligence in this dutie, conſider the reaſons following. I. Chriſts owne example, which in morall duties is a perfect rule: Now though he had little need to pray in reſpect of himſelfe, for hee did neuer ſinne, yet how often, and how long, and with what feruencie did he giue himſelfe to this dutie? he ſpent whole nights in prayer, Luk. 6. 12. and in prayer in the garden hee ſwet water and blood. We haue alſo Moſes example, who ſpent fortie dayes and fortie nights in prayer and faſting for the people, when they had ſinned, Deut. 9. 18, 19. If he were thus feruent in prayer for their ſinnes, how earneſt would he be for his owne? And Daniel humbled himſelfe many daies, and prayed feruently for his people, Dan. 9. 3, 4. &c. Dauid prayed ſeauen times a day, and roſe vp at midnight to giue thanks to God, Pſ. 119. 164, 62. And Paul willeth the Romanes that they would ſtriue or wreſtle with him by praier to God, Rom. 15. 30. All theſe are worthy examples vnto vs; and if we compare our ſelues with them we ſhall ſee we haue much more cauſe ſo to doe: for our ſinnes abound aboue theirs, and therefore had neede to pray for the preuenting of Gods iudgements which our ſinnes call for againſt vs. Alſo we come farre ſhort of them in grace, and therefore had neede to pray for ſupply thereof againſt the time of need: for our dayes of peace will not alwaies laſt, wee haue enioyed it long, and therefore muſt looke for dayes of triall, for the ſtate of Gods Church is interchangeable. II. Reaſon. All of vs muſt come to deale with God, both in the day of death, and at the day of iudgement; at both which times all worldly helpes and comforts will forſake vs, and by no meanes can we ſhunne that account; therefore it will be good for vs while we liue often to ſet our ſelues before the Lord, that ſo we may make our ſelues familiar and acquainted with him, againſt that day: But if now we eſtrange our ſelues from God in regard of this exerciſe of prayer, then at our end we ſhall find the Lord to be ſtrange vnto vs, and to profeſſe that he knowes vs not, which will be woe vnto vs. III. Reaſon. Euery good thing wee haue, or ſtand in neede of, comes from the mercie and bountie of God in Chriſt; and prayer is an ordinarie meanes for the procuring of Gods bleſſings; we therefore muſt giue our ſelues to the faithfull practiſe of this dutie. Indeed if grace and other bleſſings were our owne, or from our ſelues, we might well ſpare this labour, But what haſt thou (ſaith Paul to euerie Chriſtian) that thou haſt not receiued? be not therefore ſecure and idle, for Gods bleſſings come not when we ſnort vpon our elboes, but in the vſe of meanes: & happie are we that may vſe thoſe meanes: for in asking we receiue, in ſeeking we finde, and in knocking it is opened vnto vs.

Zeale & feruencie in praier.

1.Cor.4.7.

Secondly, our Sauiour Chriſt by trebling this commandement to pray, would giue vs to conſider that there is ſome waightie cauſe we ſhould be inſtant in this dutie; and that is, in regard of the great miſeries and manifold dangers whereunto we are ſubiect in this life: for Peter ſaith, the righteous ſhall hardly be ſaued: and no maruell, for we haue without vs, the deuil and all his Angels plotting our deſtruction, and the world a dangerous enemie, whereby the deuill workes; within vs we haue our own corrupt hearts, daily drawing vs to the practiſe of ſinne, the bane and poiſon of our ſoules. Now what is to be done in this caſe? ſurely our onely refuge, is conſtant and feruent prayer to God, as Chriſt here implyes by this threefold command: for in all things let your requeſts bee made knowne to God, Philip. 4. 6. This hath alwaies beene the practiſe of all the faithfull, as we may ſee in Gods booke. But if we had no example, this commandement were ſufficient to perſwade vs vnto this dutie. Alſo doeſt thou want any grace of God, as faith, repentance, knowledge, zeale, patience, ſtrength againſt temptation, or aſſurance of Gods fauour? why aske and thou ſhalt haue, ſeeke and thou ſhalt finde. And this muſt be our courſe in outward wants, and for temporall bleſſings, as health, peace, libertie, plentie, &c. Indeed the wicked worldlings ſeek to wiſe men & wiſe women in their miſeries, but this is to forſake God, and to goe to the deuill: Gods people muſt goe to their God, Iſa. 8. 19.

Cauſe why we ſhould be feruent in praier.

1.Pet.4.18.

Thirdly, the trebling of this commandement in diuerſe tearmes, muſt teach vs to bee inſtant and vrgent with God in prayer: this is an holy and acceptable importunitie, when the Chriſtian heart giues God no reſt: Ierem. 29. 12, 13. the Lord promiſeth to his people, that they ſhall crie vnto him, and goe and pray vnto him, and he will heare them: they ſhall ſeeke him, and finde him, becauſe they ſhall ſeeke him with their whole heart. Iſa. 62. 6. The Lords remembrancers are commanded not to keepe ſilence, nor to giue the Lord any reſt. Matth. 15. 22. The woman of Canaan is commended, becauſe ſhee will take no anſwer nor repulſe from our Sauiour Chriſt, till her daughter was cured: and Luke 18. 6. The poore widow by her importunitie preuailed with the vnrighteous Iudge; which parable Chriſt propounds to teach vs to be conſtant and earneſt in prayer. We therefore muſt ſhake off our naturall coldneſſe and negligence in prayer which is the cōmon ſin of the world in regard of this dutie. And we muſt labour for knowledge both of our owne ſinnes & miſeries, and of Gods mercies, that ſo we may pray with vnderſtanding, & in zeale & feruencie as Chriſt here requireth. Alas many pray not at all, & others know not what they aske, though they ſay the L. praier or ſome other ſet forme of praier.

We muſt be vrgent in prayer.

And moſt men that haue knowledge, ſuffer their minds to wander from God by vaine imaginations: now all comes for lacke of that feeling in prayer, which Chriſt here requireth.

This much of the commandement in generall. Now out of the words more particularly we may obſerue two points. Firſt, where Chriſt bids vs aske, ſeeke, knocke, he ſpeakes not particularly to ſome, but generally to all his ſeruants, ſo that all muſt pray, which plainely implyes that his beſt and deereſt ſeruants are during this life in want of ſome grace or bleſſing. And indeede when God giues moſt excellent gifts and bleſſings to his children, yet then hee leaues them in ſome notable want or triall for their humiliation and prouocation to prayer. Paul was taken vp into paradiſe, and there heard words that cannot poſſibly be vttered by man in this life: this was a great grace and prerogatiue: but yet to humble him, leaſt hee ſhould be exalted out of meaſure, there was giuen him a pricke in the fleſh, the meſſenger of Satan to buffet him: hereby he was brought to pray moſt earneſtly for deliuerance, but yet he muſt reſt contented with Gods grace; for God will make perfect his power through the weakeneſſe of his ſeruants, v. 8, 9. This point muſt be obſerued, to diſcouer to many ſecure perſons their miſerable ſtate, who feele no want of grace in themſelues, and therefore thinke all is well. But what meaneſt thou to profeſſe Chriſt, if thou haue no need of him nor of his graces? oh know it, when thou ſaieſt in thine owne heart, thou art rich and lackeſt nothing, then thou art poore, and blind, and miſerable, and wretched. And indeede if thou kneweſt the corruption of thine own heart, thou wouldeſt crie out with the Apoſtle, in reſpect of thy wants, O miſerable man that I am, who ſhall deliuer me from this bodie of death!

Secondly, Chriſt ſaying not onely Aske, but ſeeke, and knocke; doth hereby imply what is Gods dealing many times with his owne ſeruants: namely, that he forſakes them for a time, and in part, and in ſome ſort hides himſelfe, and as it were locks himſelfe from them. Now thus he dealeth for two cauſes: Firſt, hereby to chaſtiſe and correct them for their ſinnes: for iniquitie ſeparates betweene God and his people; and their ſinnes hide his face from them, Iſa. 59. 2. Secondly, to make triall of his graces in his children, to ſee whether they delight in his loue, to ſhew them their owne weaknes, and to mooue them to cleaue vnto him more inſeparably. By all which we ſee it ſtands vs in hand to pray earneſtly and continually, for God may forſake vs for our ſinnes: and he may iuſtly take occaſion to trie what we haue profited by his Goſpel, which we haue long enioyed with aboundance of peace.

This much of the commandment to earneſt praier: Now Chriſt enforceth it by two reaſons. Firſt, by a promiſe, infolded in this verſe with the commandment, and confirmed in the next. Secondly, by a compariſon, verſe 9. For the firſt; The reaſon from the promiſe in this verſe may thus be framed:

If they which aske, ſhall receiue; if they that ſeeke, ſhall finde; and they that knocke ſhall be let in: then doe you aske, ſeeke and knocke.

But they that aske, ſhall receiue, they that ſeeke, ſhall finde, &c. Therefore doe you aske, ſeeke, and knocke.

In this reaſon our Sauiour Chriſt teacheth vs, that when we pray to God, we muſt bring a ſpeciall faith whereby we are aſſured that the particular things we aske according to Gods will ſhall be giuen vs. So ſaith Chriſt, Mark. 11. 24. Whatſoeuer yee aske in prayer, beleeue that yee ſhall haue it, and it ſhall be done vnto you: and Iam. 1. 6. Let him aske in faith: for hee that doubteth of Gods promiſe defraudeth himſelfe of the thing he asketh. Now if we muſt bring this ſpeciall faith, then of neceſſitie muſt we haue a ſpeciall knowledge of the will and promiſe of God for the things we aske: for as without faith we cannot pray aright, ſo without knowledge, no faith: And therefore wee muſt be carefull to acquaint our ſelues with the will and promiſe of God, that by Gods commaundement we may know what to aske, and by faith may alſo aske in aſſurance; for if wee pray without this knowledge and faith, our praiers are but lip-labour and vnprofitable.

A ſpeciall faith required in praier.

Secondly, hence we learne that the Papiſts erre groſſely, which teach that this ſpecial faith is not neceſſarie in prayer; this is a doctrine of Deuills: for we ought to bring in prayer a particular faith to apply to our ſelues the promiſe of God concerning that thing which wee aske in prayer. But this we can neuer bring, vnleſſe we firſt haue a ſpeciall ſauing faith, whereby we beleeue our reconciliation with God in Chriſt: for therefore doe we beleeue that God will graunt our particular requeſts, becauſe by faith wee knowe our ſelues to be in Chriſt, in whom he loues vs, & therefore will make good his promiſe vnto vs, as the Apoſtle ſaith, This is the aſſurance that we haue in HIM, that if we aske any thing according to his will, he heareth vs.

Rhem. on Iam. 1. ſect. 6. Bellarm. de iuſtif. l. 3. c. 11.

1. Ioh. 5. 14.

Thirdly, hence we learne how to carrie our ſelues in all dangers, troubles, and afflictions; namely, we muſt ſettle our hearts by faith vpon the promiſe of God, who hath ſaide he will not forſake vs, but be with vs in trouble and deliuer vs, Pſal. 92. 15. This is neceſſarie, for without faith in great afflictions our owne naturall paſſions will confound vs: Hence Habakuc ſpeaking of grieuous times of affliction ſaith, The iuſt ſhall liue by faith. And this Dauid teſtifieth, Pſal. 62. 1. Yet my ſoule keepeth ſilence vnto God, of him commeth my ſaluation. Pſal. 23. 3. Though I ſhould walke thorough the valley of the ſhadow of death, I will feare none euill: for thou (Lord) art with me; thy rodde and thy ſtaffe they comfort me.

Hab. 2. 4.

Fourthly, this muſt ſtirre vs vp to great diligence in prayer. We vſeing Gods creatures, & our God requiring this ſeruice at our hands, ought to pray vpon his commandemẽt, though he had made no promiſe vnto vs. But now ſith he hath made a gratious promiſe to heare and graunt our requeſts, this muſt ſtirre vs vp to all diligence and alacrity in prayer: ſee the practiſe hereof in Dauid, vpon Gods promiſe hee incourageth himſelfe to pray, 2.Sam.7.27,28,29. Thou, O Lord of hoſts, haſt reuealed vnto thy ſeruant that thou wilt build him an houſe: Therefore now O Lord God (for thou art God, and thy words are true, and thou haſt told this goodneſſe vnto thy ſeruant:) Therefore now let it pleaſe thee to bleſſe the houſe of thy ſeruant, that it may continue for euer: for thou O Lord God haſt ſpoken it. So Daniel perceiuing by the propheſie of Ieremy, the promiſe of God for the returne of the people from the captiuity, doth ſet himſelfe to moſt earneſt prayer to God, for the accompliſhment of that promiſe, Dan.9.2,3. And ſo muſt we doe in all our wants, firſt ſearch out Gods promiſe for the ſupply thereof, and then goe boldly and diligently to God by prayer in the name of Chriſt.

A motiue to diligence in prayer.

v. 8. For whoſoeuer asketh, receiueth; and hee that ſeeketh, findeth: and to him that knocketh, it ſhall be opened.

Here Chriſt confirmeth the former reaſon that was included in the former verſe with the commandment to pray. In effect and ſubſtance they are all one; onely here the reaſon is propounded more generally, without limitation, to Chriſts hearers, thus; Whoſoeuer asketh receiueth; whoſoeuer ſeeketh, findeth, &c. that is, obſeruing the due conditions of prayer, which Gods word requireth.

How God heareth the wicked.

I.Ob. Here ſome may ſee, that God oft heares thoſe that pray without faith; as the crie of the poore, when they curſe their oppreſſors, Exod. 22. 23. And ſo the Lord heard the Iſraelites when they asked Quailes in their luſt, Pſal. 78. 18. 27. Anſw. True it is, God ſometimes graunts the requeſts of thoſe that pray without faith, but his hearing is not in mercie, but in anger and wrath, and is a meanes to execute his iudgement vpon them. Thus he gaue the Iſraelites a King in his wrath, Hoſ. 13. 11. and ſo hee gaue them Quailes, for while the meate was in their mouthes, the wrath of God came vpon them, Pſal. 78. 30, 31. Thus the deuills had their requeſt granted, to enter into the heard of ſwine, Matth. 8. 31, 32. and ſo God permitted him to afflict Iob, Iob. 1. 12. but all was to his own ſhame, to manifeſt his abſolute ſubiection vnto God, that beyond his will he cannot goe, no not to hurt the baſeſt of Gods creatures.

II. Obiect. Ahab prayed and humbled himſelfe and was heard, though he did it onely hypocritically, for feare of puniſhment, 1. Kings 21.29. Anſ. That was a graunt of a temporall benefit onely, which God oft giues to hypocrites; but for ſpirituall bleſſings, which pertaine to ſaluation in Chriſt, whereof this text is principally to be vnderſtood, they are not grãted to the wicked.

Gen.18.

III. Obiect. Abraham prayed directly againſt the will of God, for the ſauing of Sodom, which God was purpoſed to deſtroy. Anſw. Abraham no doubt had in him a ſpeciall motion to make that praier, and withall he asked leaue of God to pray for them; neither did he pray abſolutely, but with ſubmiſſion to Gods will, and ſo he ſinned not, though he obtained not his deſire: otherwiſe, without theſe cautions he had done amiſſe: and we muſt not make the extraordinarie practiſes of the faithfull, ordinarie rules for our imitation. So that Gods promiſe here is firme, whoſoeuer asketh thoſe bleſſings of God which hee hath promiſed to giue, in that manner which God approoueth, ſhall be ſure to receiue.

Gods readineſſe to heare.

The vſe. In this reaſon we learne, that God is moſt readie and willing to heare his children when they pray; Iſa. 65. 1. I was found of them that ſought me not, I ſaid behold me, behold me, to a nation that called not vpon my name; and, v. 24. Before they call I will anſwer, and while they ſpeake I will heare.

Vſe: Our God the onely true God.

This then is firſt a plaine proofe that the Lord whom wee worſhip is the true God; becauſe he is ſo able to helpe, and ſo readie and willing to heare, beeing neere to all that call vpon him in truth. Thus Moſes reaſoneth with his people to prooue that they onely had the true God for their God: Deut. 4. 7. What nation is ſo great vnto whom the gods come ſo neere vnto them, as the Lord our God is neare vnto vs in all that we call vnto him for.

A motiue to loue God.

Secondly, this muſt perſwade vs to loue God vnfainedly and heartily, who is ſo readie and willing to graunt our requeſts in praier, ſpecially conſidering we are by nature his enemies. A rare thing it is to ſee any reſemblance of it in the world; and indeede among men this dealing is able to drawe loue from an enemie when we ſhewe our ſelues willing to doe him any good we can: this heapes coales of fire vpon his head, to conſume his malice, and kindle in him loue to vs: oh then how ſhould Gods gracious bountie and readineſſe to heare vs, draw our hearts to God in all loue and thankefulneſſe!

Comfort to the afflict

Thirdly, this ſerues to be a notable ſtay and comfort to all thoſe that are caſt down in ſoule with the ſight and burthen of their ſinnes: for behold if they aske mercie at Gods hands, they ſhall haue it; if they can call, he will heare; and if they will but knocke at the doore of his mercie, he is readie to open vnto them. Here they vſe to plead, that they haue long called, and cried, and knocked, but they find no comfort. Anſwer. O conſider the vſuall dealing of God with his owne children, for a time he will hide his face, and ſeeme to locke vp his mercie and compaſſion from them, as we may ſee by Dauids complaint, Pſal. 77. 7. Will the Lord abſent himſelfe for euer, and will hee ſhewe no more fauour? v. 8. Is his mercie cleane gone for euer? doth his promiſe faile for euermore? verſe 9. Hath God forgotten to bee mercifull? &c. But his intent herein is to humble them deeper, to make them knocke more earneſtly, that they may be more thankfull for Gods mercie when they finde it; and more carefull to keepe themſelues from ſinne, whereby they may looſe againe that aſſurance. Indeede it is a moſt heauie croſſe, and the deepeſt griefe that can befall a man, to haue the conſcience apprehend the wrath of God without any feeling of his fauour: yet in this caſe here is comfort, let this poore ſoule out of the depth of his horror crie vnto God with Dauid, and out of the bellie of the Whale of deſperation with Ionas, endeauouring againſt all feeling to lay hold vpon the promiſe of mercie in Chriſt, and he ſhall finde the Lord in due time readie to heare and to ſend comfort, yea the ſweetneſſe of his loue ſhall diſtill moſt ioyfully into his poore ſoule.

v. 9. For what man is there among you, which if his ſonne aske him bread, would giue him a ſtone?

10. Or if he aske him a fiſh, will he giue him a ſerpent?

11. If yee then, which are euill, can giue to your children good gifts, how much more ſhall your Father which is in heauen, giue good things to them that aske him?

Theſe words containe a ſecond reaſon of the former commandement to pray, as alſo a confirmation of the promiſe annexed thereunto for aſſurance to be heard; and it may be framed thus:

If earthly parents, though they bee euill, can giue good gifts to their children, when they want them, and aske them at their hands; then much more will your heauenly Father giue good gifts to thoſe that aske him:

But earthly parents though they be euill, will giue good gifts to their children:

Therefore much more will your heauenly Father giue good things to them that aske him.

This reaſon ſtandeth in a compariſon of vnequalls, drawne from the leſſe to the greater; from the care which is ordinarily ſeene in naturall parents ouer their children, to proue vndoubtedly the moſt tender care of our heauenly father ouer vs. And this kind of reaſoning is vſuall with God in Scripture: Iſa. 49. 15. Can a woman forget her child, and not haue compaſſion on the ſonne of her wombe? Though they ſhould forget, yet will not I forget thee. Pſal. 103. 13. As a father hath compaſſion on his children, ſo hath the Lord compaſſion on them that feare him. Mal. 3. 17. and I will ſpeare them as a man ſpareth his owne ſonne that ſerueth him.

A prerogatiue of parents.

In the framing of this reaſon behold a ſpeciall fauour of God vouchſafed to godly parents: They may take a taſt of Gods loue & care ouer themſelues by the conſideration of that naturall care and tender affection they beare towards their owne children. And indeede they may more eaſily then other, apprehend and applie to themſelues, the louing fauour and tender care of God ouer them, by the like affections in themſelues towards their owne children. Now this fauour and priuiledge God vouchſafeth for ſpeciall cauſes: firſt, to incite and ſtirre vp thoſe parents, which yet haue not taſted of Gods loue, to embrace his word and promiſes whereby God reueales his loue to men, that ſo they may taſt of Gods loue towards them, whereof they haue ſo notable a patterne in their affection towards their owne children. Secondly, to prouoke them to labour to haue their hearts rooted and grounded in the loue of God. And thirdly, that they hauing experience of Gods loue in themſelues, may bring their children and poſteritie to the fruition of the ſame loue and mercie.

Now to come to the compariſon: The firſt whereof is this, that it is a naturall propertie in all parents to giue good things vnto their children. This is a principle binding conſcience, that parents ſhould be carefull of their children: He that prouideth not for his owne (ſaith a the Apoſtle) eſpecially for them of his family, is worſe then an infidel: for infidels do not put out this light of nature, but prouide for their children.

a 1. Tim. 5. 8.

Riotous parents reprooued.

Here then thoſe parents are to be blamed, who ſpend their ſubſtance in gaming & ryote, and ſo leaue their children and family deſtitute and in want. Theſe ſpende vpon their owne luſts thoſe good things which they ſhould beſtow vpon their children, and ſo ſhew themſelues vnnaturall; but the Magiſtrate, who is the publike father, ought to look vnto them, and to reſtraine them from ſuch diſorder.

Alſo ſuch as neglect religious education.

Secondly, here thoſe likewiſe are to be blamed, which for food and raiment will prouide and giue ſufficient to their children: but in the meane while they giue them not godly education, in the inſtruction and information of the Lord, which is a good thing indeede vnto the ſoule, for which the godly in Scripture are commended; as Abraham towards his familiy, Gen. 18. 19. and Lois and Eunice towards Timothy, 2. Tim. 1. 5. who brought him vp in faith vnfaigned.

Moſt vnnaturall parents.

Thirdly, by this we may ſee, the ſtate of thoſe that kill their owne children, (for ſo we may read, that ſome parents haue eaten their owne children) namely, they are ſuch as becom vnnaturall, beeing in Gods iuſt iudgement left vnto themſelues to be ruled by the Deuill, who filleth their hearts with this vnnaturall and ſauage crueltie. Now Chriſt ſpeakes here of the light of nature not extinguiſhed, and ſo it is true euen among the heathen.

v. 11. If yee then which are euill, &c. Here is the application of the compariſon, the ground whereof was laid downe in the two former verſes. And by euill, he meanes not euery ſinner, but ſuch as are ſtained with malice, enuie, and ſelfe-loue, beeing bent to ſeeke their own good onely: for ſo ſaith the Maſter to the enuious labourer, Matth. 20. 15. Is thine eye euill, becauſe I am good? that is, art thou enuious becauſe I am bountifull?

A note of an euill man to ſeeke himſelfe.

In theſe words Chriſt giues vs to vnderſtād, that it is the note of an euill man to be giuen wholly to ſeeke his owne good, though otherwiſe he liue ciuilly; for this is a fruit of euill couetouſnes and ſelfe-loue. Experience ſheweth the grieuouſnes of this ſinne: for thence come the manifold practiſes of iniuſtice, crueltie, and oppreſſion that be in the world; hence it is that times of dearth are made more heauie vpon the poore then otherwaies Gods hand hath ſent them, becauſe the rich ſeeke their owne good and commoditie onely at ſuch times; hence come ingroſſing, deceiuing, and incloſing to the ſpoile of the poore. We muſt therefore beware of this ſinnefull practiſe; and on the otherſide giue our ſelues to practiſe goodneſſe towards others, ſetting our ſelues to the practiſe of loue, which ſeeketh not her owne things, but is bountifull, that ſo wee may ſhewe forth our loue to God by wel-doing to our brethren; as the Apoſtle bids vs, Gal. 5. 23. Doe ſeruice one to another by loue; and Philip. 2. 4. Looke not euery man on his owne things, but euery man alſo on the things of other men. This was good King Ioſias his practiſe, for which cauſe among many particular vertues, all his goodneſſes are ſaid to be recorded. 2. Chron. 35. 26. And S. Paul likewiſe became all things to all men, that he might winne ſome; and though hee were free from all men, yet he made himſelfe ſeruant vnto all men, that he might win the moe, 1. Cor. 9. 19.--22.

Euill men may doe good things.

You that are euill can giue good gifts: that is, bread, fiſh, and ſuch like, as Luk. 11. 11, 12. Here it is plaine, that an euill man may haue ſome kinde of vertues in him, whereby he may doe ſome good workes. Queſt. How can this be, for an euill man wants faith, and whatſoeuer he doth is ſinne? Anſ. Wee muſt know, that the gifts of the ſpirit are of two ſorts: ſome are common, whereby the corruption of mans nature is onely reſtrained and limited, for the maintaining of ciuill ſocieties, that man with man may liue in ſome order and quietneſſe.

Gifts of the ſpirit twofold.

And hence it was that among the Heathen, ſome were iuſt, ſome milde, ſome liberall, &c. And theſe came from the ſpirit, yet not renuing the parties, but onely reſtraining their naturall wickedneſſe: And of this ſort of gifts is the loue and care of parents towards their children, and the loue of children towards their parents. And theſe and ſuch like euill men may haue, for they are not ſanctifying vertues, but rather ſhadowes thereof. The ſecond kind of the gifts of the ſpirit are more ſpeciall gifts and graces, whereby the corruption of mans nature is mortified and in ſome part aboliſhed, and the graces of Gods image are renued in man, whereby they become louing, meeke, iuſt, temperate, &c. which in the regenerate are true Chriſtian vertues, and the exerciſe hereof is the doing of good workes indeede.

How much more ſhall your heauenly father giue good things to them that aske him? Theſe words containe the ſecond part of the compariſon, wherein Chriſt doth amplifie and ſet out the bountifulnes of God in his gifts to his children: and Saint Luke ſpecifieth theſe good things to be the gift of the holy Ghoſt, in regard of grace and operation.

Luk. 11. 13.

Here then three points are to be handled: I. Who giues theſe good things. II. What is giuen. III. To whom. For the firſt: the author of theſe good things is the Father: for of him, and from him, commeth euery good gift, and euery perfect giuing. Queſt. But this gift is the holy Ghoſt, now the holy Ghoſt is God, how then can he be giuen, this ſeemes to imply inequalitie in the Trinitie, for the perſon giuing, muſt haue power and authoritie ouer the perſon giuen? Anſ. We muſt know, firſt, that this action of the father in giuing the holy Ghoſt, is not by vertue of ſuperiour power and authoritie, but by conſent; the holy Ghoſt is freely willing to be giuē of the father: for al three perſōs being one & the ſame God, muſt needs haue one & the ſame wil, as in al things, ſo in this gift. Secondly, this giuing is not in eſſence or perſō, but in regard of operation and grace; as loue, ioy, peace, &c. in the hearts of Gods children.

How the father giues the holy Ghoſt.

II. Point. What are theſe good things giuen? Anſ. The holy Ghoſt. Queſt. Why ſhould the Father giue the holy Ghoſt, and not the holy Ghoſt as well giue the Father, ſeeing they are equall? Anſw. The reaſon is, becauſe of that order which the diuine wiſdom manifeſteth in the Trinitie; for though all three perſons be equall in all properties of the godhead, which is one and the ſame in them all; yet they are diſtinct in order, the father being the firſt perſon, the ſonne not the firſt, but the ſecond; and the holy Ghoſt not the firſt perſon, nor the ſecond, but the third: and hence it is, that the Father giues the ſonne, both the father and the ſonne giue the holy Ghoſt; yet not in perſon, but in regard of gifts and operation, and that by free and equall conſent, not from ſuperioritie, or by conſtraint.

III. Point. To whom doth the Father giue this gift of the holy Ghoſt? Anſw. To them that aske him. Hence ſome would gather that man hath free will by nature in his conuerſion, becauſe he muſt firſt aske, and then comes the gift of the holy Ghoſt. Anſw. We muſt know, that by the holy Ghoſt here is meant, not the beginning of grace, but the increaſe thereof, and a greater meaſure of gifts, with a more ſenſible feeling of them: for this promiſe is made to Gods children that aske, which none can be but by the holy Ghoſt. See this in the diſciples, Ioh. 20.22. Chriſt ſaid to his Diſciples, who had true grace before, Receiue the holy Ghoſt: and yet alſo after that, the holy Ghoſt came downe vpon them in the forme of clouen tongues of fire, Act. 2.3. Now theſe latter giuings were in regard of greater meaſure, as it is ſaid, they were filled with the holy Ghoſt, v. 4. Againe, by them that aske, is not meant onely one that vttereth words of requeſt to God; but thoſe that aske in faith, and pray aright by grace; as Rom. 10. 14. How can they call on him, in whome they haue not beleeued? and Rom. 8.26. We know not what to pray as we ought, but the ſpirit helpeth our infirmities, and maketh requeſt for the Saints, according to the will of God, v. 27.

Vſe. 1. Hence we learne, that grace is giuen not to the idle, but to them that vſe the good meanes ordained of God, for the obtaining of grace; as the holy exerciſes of the word, in hearing, reading, meditation, and humble & earneſt praier: and therefore, if we would haue grace, we muſt diligently exerciſe our ſelues in theſe meanes: for faith commeth by hearing, Rom. 10.17. And Gods children in all ages haue vſed the meanes to get grace: Lament. 5.21. Turne thou vs, O Lord, vnto thee, and we ſhall be turned: and David is plentifull in the meanes, whereby he abounded in grace: Pſal. 119.33. Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy ſtatutes: and v. 99. I haue had more vnderſtanding then all my Teachers; for thy teſtimonies are my meditation. So Chriſts Diſciples did not onely heare him preach, but deſired to be inſtructed in thoſe things which they knew not, Math. 13.36. Declare to vs the meaning of the parable: alſo they prayed him to increaſe their faith, Luk. 17.5. Here then we may ſee the cauſe of that ignorance and want of grace which abounds in the world; namely, contempt or negligence in the meanes which God hath ordained for the obtaining of grace: for the heart of the negligent is like the field of the ſluggard, that hath no tillage in it, but is ouer-growne with briars and thornes, Prou. 24.30.

Secondly, this ſerues for the comfort of thoſe that haue as yet but the beginning of grace, in ſmall and weake meaſure; they muſt not bee diſcouraged, for God hath plentie of grace in ſtore: if they can but find and feele their want of grace, and lament it vnto God, vſing the meanes of the word and praier to get ſupplie, here is a promiſe of the holy Ghoſt, who is the ſtorehouſe and fountaine of all grace.

Thirdly, this ſerues for a good ground to confute ſundry errours; as firſt, the opinion of vniuerſal grace, whereby ſome hold, that euery man may be ſaued if he will: for the promiſe of the holy Ghoſt (without which none can be ſaued) is not vniuerſall, but here made with reſtraint to thoſe that aske according to Gods will, which none can doe without the ſpirit, which muſt teach vs to pray in faith, without which we receiue nothing from God, Iam. 1.6, 7. Secondly, this ouerthroweth the fond conceit of Anabaptiſts and Familiſts, which looke for the ſpirit by reuelation, and not in the exerciſe of the word and praier. But we muſt looke to the meanes, in which God giues the ſpirit; and out of that meanes, we are more ſubiect to the deluſions of Satan, then to the operation of the holy Ghoſt. Thirdly, this alſo confuteth the errour of the Church of Rome, who teach, that a man by the good vſe of the gifts of nature may come to obtaine the gifts of the holy Ghoſt. But there is no larger promiſe then this in all the Scripture, where the gifts of the holy Ghoſt are promiſed to the exerciſe of the gift of praier in faith, which we cannot doe by nature, but by grace. And beſides, when we aske in faith by grace, this is no cauſe of the gifts of the ſpirit which we receiue, but onely a diſcharge of our dutie in the exerciſe of the meanes which God hath appointed; wherupon followeth the increaſe of grace, yet no way of our merit, but from Gods free mercie and his bountie.

Vni erſall grace confuted.

comfort to the weak in grace.

Verſe 12. Therefore whatſoeuer ye would that men ſhould doe to you, euen ſo doe ye to them: for this is the Law & the Prophets.

This verſe containes the fourth part of this Chapter, concerning equitie and iuſtice. And it conſiſts of two branches; a commandement, whatſoeuer ye would, &c. and a reaſon, ſhewing it [illegible] in the Law and the Prophets [illegible] dealing. The commandement is propounded in a forme of ſpeach that ſheweth it dependeth on ſomething going before; Therefore whatſoeuer, &c. and yet it ſeemeth very hard to ſhew on what it doth depend: either vpon the doctrine of praier, or of diſpenſing the word, or of raſh iudgement. Why then is it ſaid therefore? Some thinke it is to be referred to all the doctrine of iuſtice which was deliuered in the fift chapter, but this is ſcarce probable, becauſe ſo many different points of doctrine are handled betweene. Others thinke that it doth not depend on any thing that went before, but that the word (therefore) doth abound; and this is more probable; for ſuch particles alſo ſometimes abound, Ioh. 1.20. he denied and ſaid, becauſe a I am not the Chriſt: where the word (becauſe) doth abound. Now though

though the word therefore doe abound, yet it is not without his vſe; for it imports that the doctrine here deliuered is a ſpeciall doctrine, and a maine concluſion inferred vpon diuers particular duties of Iuſtice before deliuered in the whole Sermon.

Whatſoeuer] It may ſeeme that this ought not to be ſo, for many deſire and wiſh euill vnto themſelues; as children, that they may haue their wills to take their pleaſure, and not be held in ſubiection vnto their parents; or held to good education: and ſo idle perſons wiſh euill vnto themſelues, for they would not be ſet a worke. We are therefore to know, that this muſt not be vnderſtood of euill wiſhes, but of a will and deſire well ordered, either by grace, and according to the written word; or at leaſt, by the light of naturall knowledge, and conſcience: ſo that Chriſts meaning is this; as if he had ſaid, Whatſoeuer thing, either by the light of nature, and conſcience, or by direction from Gods word, you would wiſh that men ſhould doe to you, that doe ye vnto them.

The commandement thus explaned, containeth two things; I. the thing to be ruled & ordered; namely, our actions to other men: II. the rule it ſelfe that muſt order all our ſayings and doings towards others; to wit, that deſire of iuſtice and equitie, which euery man by nature would haue others ſhewe to him in all things.

A propertie of our corrupt nature.

In this commandement our Sauiour Chriſt would let vs ſee a notable propertie of our corrupt nature; namely, that we are forward and diligent to exact iuſtice and equitie at other mens hands towards vs, but ſlacke and backeward to yeeld the ſame to others againe. In other mens doings towards our ſelues, we are maſters able to teach them what they ought to doe; but in our owne dealings towards others, we are ſcarce ſchollers that wil learne their dutie: we our ſelues would be reuerenced and commended, but we hardly doe the like to others.

We ſhould doe no hurt to our neighbour.

Secondly, here we are taught, to auoid all practiſes, whereby we might hurt our neighbour, either in bodie, goods, or good name; as lying, ſlandering, vſurie, oppreſſion, and ſuch like: this naturall reaſon might teach vs, for wouldeſt not thou haue others to defame, hurt, or oppreſſe thee? then doe not this to them: for the rule is not, doe as men doe to thee, but doe to others, as thou wouldeſt haue them doe to thee: and it is the corruption of nature, that mooues men to ſeeke their owne aduantage and preferment, by the loſſe and debaſing of others.

Thirdly, here we learne, that in common iniuries wherein we are wronged by others, we muſt not requite like for like; but doe good for euill: we muſt not looke at that which they do to vs, but at that which we would they ſhould doe.

How to d in bargai ning.

Fourthly, hence we learne, that in matters of commoditie whereabout wee deale in the world, wee muſt not onely looke vnto our ſelues, but alſo ſeeke the good of our neighbours: it is the manner of men to ſeeke themſelues onely in their affaires, and each man wil ſell as deere as he can, according to the prouerbe, Euery man for himſelfe, and God for vs all: but neither the ſaying, nor the practiſe is from God; he would haue vs according to the law of nature, to ſeeke the common good, and to doe as we would be done vnto.

Pretences for bad dealing cut off.

Fiftly, this rule of equitie cuts the throat of all thoſe pretences, whereby bad dealing is ſmoothed ouer in the world; for ill minded perſons vſe to colour their doings with theſe and ſuch like ſayings: the gripple ſeller ſaith, The thing is mine, may I not make of mine owne what I can: the deceiuer ſaith, he thruſts his ware on no man: the vſurer ſaith, hee bids no man hire his money, but others intreat it of him, and giue him thanks: but theſe pretences are naught, theſe men follow a crooked line, they ought to ſee in their owne hearts, whether they would haue other men deale ſo with them: the vſurer may pretend he pleaſures the poore, but his helpe is no better then his is, that giues a draught of colde water to him that is in a burning feauer, which ſeems pleaſant at the firſt, but after turns to his great annoyance.

How to get loue.

Sixly, we would haue all men to ſhew forth their loue vnto vs, we then muſt be as carefull to ſhew forth our loue to others, by the practiſe of al good duties. This is againſt our nature, but yet beeing the commandement of Chriſt, wee muſt endeauour our ſelues to obey the ſame.

How to keep a good conſcience.

Laſtly, here we haue direction how to keepe a good conſcience, in all our dealings with men in the world; for ſuch ſuch things as are expreſſed in the word, wee muſt follow the direction thereof: but where we want a particular commandement, there we muſt order our actions by this generall rule: enter into thy conſcience, and there ſearch how thou wouldeſt haue other men deale with thee, and follow that in thy dealings with them: and ſo ſhalt thou keepe a good conſcience. For want of this, come ſo many diſorders as are in the world; and therefore happie were our times, if men would doe as they would be done to. This much for the commandement, now followes the reaſon.

The reaſon.

For this is the Law and the Prophets.] The meaning: By the Law we muſt vnderſtand the fiue bookes of Moſes, which were the firſt Scripture that euer was written: ſo Luke the 16.31. They haue Moſes and the Prophets. By the Prophets, we muſt vnderſtand, all the reſt of the bookes of the olde Teſtament, beſides the fiue bookes of Moſes, the Prophets beeing put for the bookes of the Prophets: as Matth. 2.23. It is written in the Prophets that hee ſhould be called a Nazarite: which teſtimonie is taken out of the booke of Iudges, and it ſheweth that the booke of Iudges is to be numbred among the bookes of the Prophets: and they are called the Prophets, becauſe they were written by ſome prophets. And here this commandement touching iuſtice is called the Law and the Prophets, becauſe it is the ſumme of the Law & Prophets: yet ſome may aske how this can be true, ſeeing this commandement onely concernes things to be practiſed, and the Law and Prophets beſides morall duties, containe matters of faith to be beleeued? I anſwer, this commandement muſt be vnderſtood to be the ſumme of the Law and the Prophets: not for all things, but for that which they preſcribe touching this point of iuſtice and equitie, and the practiſe hereof, To doe as they would be done to, is the fulfilling of that which is ſet downe in the Law and in the Prophets, touching equitie in all humane actions. Now the meaning beeing thus opened, the reaſon ſtandeth thus, being drawn from diuine teſtimonie.

> That which is the ſumme of the Law and of the Prophets touching equitie muſt be done.
> But to doe as wee would be done vnto, is the ſumme of the Law and the Prophets: therefore we muſt ſo doe.

From this reaſon, we may gather a rule whereby to iudge concerning the olde Teſtament, what is Scripture, and what is not: all Scripture of the olde Teſtament, is either the Law, or the Prophets; that is, was either penned by Moſes or by ſome of the Prophets, who were extraordinarily mooued and enabled therevnto. And therefore all the bookes from Geneſis to Malachie are Canonicall Scripture, becauſe they are written by ſome of the Prophets. To this purpoſe S. Peter ſaith, 2. Pet. 1. 19. Wee haue a moſt ſure word of the Prophets, &c. But for the bookes of Apocrypha, they are not Canonicall Scripture, becauſe they were not penned by Moſes or any of the Prophets: which is plaine by this, that al of them were firſt written either in Latine, or in Greeke, and none in Hebrew originally; whereas all the olde Prophets ſent fro God, writ their books in the Hebrew, in the language of that people to whom they were ſent; ſaue onely that ſome part of Daniel, Ezra, and Nehemiah, were in Chaldie, which language the people learned in the captiuitie. Secondly, the Prophets could not erre, either in iudgement, memorie, or vnderſtanding, by reaſon of the immediate aſſiſtance of the holy Ghoſt: as Act. 15. 28. It ſeemeth good to the holy Ghoſt, and to vs: and Peter calls their word moſt ſure. But the Authors of the bookes of Apocrypha erred, as may be ſhewed in them all. Tobit 6. Raphaels councell for driuing away the deuill by the ſmell of the liuer of a fiſh, is a meere fabulous deuice; for the deuill is by nature a ſpirit, and cannot be affected with ſuch things. The ſtorie of Iudith is fabulous, which ſaith, Nebuchadnezzar was King of Aſſyria when the people returned from the the captiuitie, and Ioakim was high Prieſt. In the addition to Heſter, Chap. 16. 11. Hamman is ſaide to be a man of Macedonia; but the true Scripture ſaith, hee was an Agagite, comming of Agag. The Author Eccleſiaſticus confeſſeth his [a] inabilitie in writing thoſe things; but the true Prophets were all ſufficient to this worke, and free from errour by the immediate aſſiſtance of the holy Ghoſt. And Chap. 46. 13. that author writeth, that Samuel propheſied after his death, and ſhewed vnto Saul his death: but the true ſtorie Canonicall ſaith, God had forſaken Saul, and would anſwer him, neither by dreame, nor Vrim, nor by Prophets. 1. Sam. 28. 6. The booke of Maccabees commendeth one for killing himſelfe, which is the moſt cruell and dangerous murther that can be; and the author alſo excuſeth his inſufficiencie in penning of it, which beſeemeth not him that is guided by Gods ſpirit. In the ſong of the 3. children it is ſaid, the flame aſcended 49. cubits aboue the furnace, which ſeemes incredible, eſpecially that ſtill they ſhould then caſt in fuell, or approach ſo nere, as to put any man into it. Likewiſe in the ſtorie of Suſanna, it is ſaid, verſ. 45. that Daniel was a young childe when hee executed iudgement vpon the two falſe witneſſes, which was in the end of Aſtiages raigne, immediately before the raigne of Cyrus: and verſe 64. Daniel by this meanes is ſaide to growe famous: which cannot poſſibly accord with the true ſtory of Daniel, neither for his age, nor for his fame and reputation. And the like may be ſaid of the reſt, whereby it is plaine, theſe books cannot be canonicall Scripture. And yet they are not to be reiected, but reuerently eſteemed of, as the books of worthy men.

[a] Eccl. 2. 6.

Here ſome may ſay, If Moſes and the Prophets comprehend all Scripture that hath diuine teſtimonie, then the bookes of the new Teſtament ſhall not be Scripture, becauſe they were not written by the Prophets? Anſw. They were either penned by the Apoſtles, or by other Apoſtolike men, and allowed by the Apoſtles: as Saint Lukes Goſpel, and the Acts, were written by Luke a Phyſition; and Saint Marke that writ that Goſpel, was not an Apoſtle, yet thoſe bookes were approoued by Apoſtolike authoritie, which is all one as if they had beene written by the Apoſtles; and the Apoſtles in ſpeaking and writing were of equall authoritie with the Prophets, hauing the infallible aſſiſtance of the holy Ghoſt, as well as the Prophets: for Act. 15. 28 they ſaid, It ſeemeth good to the holy Ghoſt, and to vs: and Epheſ. 2. 20. the Church is ſaid to be built on the foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles: where the Apoſtles are made equall with the Prophets.

New Teſtament diuine Scripture.

II. Point. This reaſon alſo doth giue vs to vnderſtand, what was the firſt Scripture that euer was penned, namely, the bookes of Moſes, before which, there was no word of God written, which was for the ſpace of 2400. yeares. It may be asked, what was then the booke of the Warres of the Lord, mentioned Numb. 21.

The bookes of Moſes the firſt Scripture.

14. and the booke of the Righteous, ſpoken of by Ioſuah, Chap. 10.13. Anſwer. Theſe were the writings of men, humane ſtories, like to our bookes of Chronicles. Yet it is ſaid, Iude 14. Enoch the ſeauenth from Adam propheſied. Anſwer. That propheſie was not penned, but went from hand to hand by word of mouth: and if it were penned, yet it was not done by Enoch himſelfe, but by ſome Iewe in his name long after Moſes: for it cannot be proued that Enoch euer penned any part of Scripture. Some will aske mee, how the people of God did for that ſpace of two thouſand and fowre hundred yeares, before the Lawe was written, what guide had they for to knowe the will of God? Anſw. They had the word of God immediatly taught them by word of mouth, from God himſelfe; as wee may ſee in the Patriarkes, Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob: and they to whome it was deliuered, did alſo conuay the ſame from man to man by tradition. And becauſe it may ſeeme ſtraunge, how religion could for ſo long time be preſerued pure without writing, wee are to knowe, that before the lawe was written, the Church of God from the beginning, was the moſt part in one familie onely, as in Adams, Enochs, Noes, Abrahams, &c. whereby it was a more eaſie thing to preſerue Gods word among them. Againe, thoſe then that firſt receiued the word of God without writing, were of long continuance, liuing neere to a thouſand yeares ſpace, whereby they might better ſee the word preſerued and continued, without writing, by tradition. Beſids, when religion was corrupted, God himſelfe reſtored the puritie thereof, reuealing his will againe, and renewing his couenant vnto his ſeruants, as he did to Abraham and the reſt of the Patriarkes.

Here then behold, how the head of families preſerued Gods word, and true religion, in the beginning of the world; namely, by teaching it to their poſteritie: and from them we may learne, what is the dutie, and ought to bee the practiſe of euery gouernour of a familie at this day: they muſt not thinke themſelues diſcharged, for that the word is written in the Church, and euery man may read and heare the ſame: but they muſt ſee the ſame bee taught vnto their children, and to the reſt of their familie, that ſo it may be preſerued among them. So God commandeth his people, to teach their children the ſeruice of the Paſſeouer, Exod. 12.26,27. and to whet the words of the lawe vpon their children, Deut. 6.7.

Certaintie of Scripture.

III. Point. In this reaſon our Sauiour takes for graunted, that the writings of Moſes and of the Prophets are of infallible certaintie: for it is all one as if hee had ſaide, this muſt needes bee euerie mans dutie, to doe as hee would bee done to, for this is the Lawe and the Prophets: and ſo anſwerable to them, all other bookes of Scripture containe doctrine of infallible truth and certaintie. Here ſome may aske, how wee ſhould bee perſwaded hereof in our conſciences? Anſw. By theſe Arguments, which are all drawne from Scripture it ſelfe, (for as euerie Science and Arte hath his grounds and principles, ſo hath the holy Scripture, which is not the Church, but Scripture it ſelfe) 1. from the cauſes: 2. from the effects: 3. from the properties: 4. from ſignes: 5. from the contraries: 6. from the teſtimonie that is giuen hereof.

How it m be know

The 1. Argument. Among the cauſes, the firſt and principall is the Author thereof, which is God himſelfe; to him doe Scriptures referre themſelues, and alſo ſhewe how God is their Author. In Scripture we read, that God ſpake to Adam, to Enoch, Noe, Abraham, and the reſt; and of Chriſt the new Teſtament giues moſt liuely teſtimonie, making him the Author and ſubiect thereof. Now nothing is falſly aſcribed to God, but God in time will bring the ſame to nought; and therefore if Scripture had not beene Gods word, it would long agone haue vaniſhed. Againe, the cauſe conſeruant muſt bee conſidered; the deuill by wicked men and heretikes hath laboured to take away Gods word from mens hearts and hands; but yet it is ſtill preſerued in the Church, which argues that it is kept by a greater power then is in all men and angels: that is, by the power of God. Thirdly, the penmen, the inſtrumentall cauſes, they were holy men of God, Prophets, and Apoſtles, who for vertue and pietie farre exceeded other writers: and if they had beene meere politicians, their writings would haue ſhewed it; for the penmen of holy Scripture haue therein faithfully regiſtred their owne faults, which no politike perſon would haue done. Againe, conſider the matter of holy Scripture, which ſtands in doctrine and ſtyle: the doctrine of Scripture is the Lawe and the Goſpel: now the Law is ſet forth in moſt excellent puritie, nothing therein is againſt right reaſon, or common equitie. In the lawes of men are many things found againſt reaſon and equitie; they command ſuch things as common reaſon would condemne, and omit many things which reaſon and equitie would command. And for the Goſpel, in it is ſet downe doctrine altogether aboue mans reaſon; touching Chriſts incarnation, and mans redemption by his death: and although theſe things bee aboue nature, yet wee finde them true, wholeſome, and good, in experience of conſcience, which alſo prooues that they are the word of God. Men may deuiſe things aboue nature, but they can neuer bee wholeſome to the conſcience. Further, for the ſtyle of Scripture, the phraſe is plaine and familiar, and yet in any one ſpeech there is more maieſtie, then in all the writings of men. Laſtly, the ende of Scripture prooues the ſame to bee Gods word; for the Scripture ſets vp Gods worſhippe and mans ſaluation, and yet giues nothing to man or Angels, but all to the glorie of God: but for the writings of men, they doe either directly, or by inſinuation, aſcribe ſome thing to the writers thereof.

1. From the cauſes.

II. Argum. From the effects; one worke of Scripture is this; it is againſt our corrupt nature, croſſing and condemning the ſame; and yet it winneth men to the loue thereof, and to obedience thereto: which could not bee, vnleſſe it were the truth of God; for we abhorre and deteſt the words of men, that bee againſt our nature. A ſecond effect is this; Gods word ſerues notably to comfort a man in all diſtreſſes whatſoeuer, euen in the pangs of death, when no word of any man can doe him the leaſt good, but onely his word, that is the Lord of our ſoule, and the God of our life.

III. Argum. From the properties of Scripture; the firſt whereof is Antiquitie. The Scriptures of all writings are moſt auncient; and euermore truth is moſt ancient: among humane writings, wee haue none of certaintie in the things they record, before the times of Nehemias and Ezra; but Scripture ſets down things done from the beginning. A ſecond propertie is mutuall conſent; for though the books of Scripture were written by diuerſe men in ſundrie ages and times, yet all agree within themſelues; no contradiction is in Scripture: but the writings of men haue not this conſent, no not in the ſame Author.

IV. Argum. From the ſignes and miracles thereof. The doctrine of Scripture teacheth and recordeth true miracles; as the parting of the Sea, the ſtaying of the ſunne and moone, the taking away of barrenneſſe, and the incarnation of the ſonne of God, a miracle of all miracles; all which beeing wrought by the power of God, ſhew that the Scripture which recordeth them, is the infallible truth of God.

V. Argum. From the contraries. Contrarie to the word of God, is the will of the deuil, and mans corrupt nature; the deuil hates Scripture, and mans ſinnefull nature repines thereat, when it is checked and controlled thereby: now that which is contrarie to theſe two, muſt needes bee holy and true; and that is the word of God.

VI. Argum. From teſtimonie. There bee two kinds of teſtimonies touching Scripture; one of holy Martyrs, who in all ages haue ſealed the truth thereof with their blood, preferring the word of God before their owne liues. It will be ſaid, that Heretikes haue died for falſhood. Anſw. There is great difference in their ends; the Martyrs haue vnſpeakable ioy in the ſpirit in their torments: but Heretikes haue no ſuch ioy, but a naturall ſenſleſſe blockiſhneſſe, whereby they vndergoe theſe tortures. A ſecond teſtimonie is moſt principall, and that is the teſtimonie of Gods ſpirit; for when men beA ginne to learne and obey the word of God, then the ſpirit of God ſetles their conſciences in the perſwaſion of the truth of Scripture: whereupon it is called the ſealing of the ſpirit of truth, becauſe it aſſures a man in conſcience of his reconciliation with God; which aſſurance none can haue, till he be firſt reſolued of the certentie of Scripture, which is the ground thereof.

Queſtion. How may a man finde this ſeale in himſelfe? Anſw. When he findes the Scripture imprinted in his heart, as the ſigne of the ſeale is in the waxe; and his heart is transformed into Scripture, as the waxe is into the ſimilitude of the ſeale; then doth the ſpirit out B of the holy Scripture, ſeale vp aſſurance of the truth thereof vnto his ſoule. None other writing of any man hath the like worke in the heart of man; and from theſe grounds, eſpecially from this laſt, may wee reſolue our ſelues that the Bible is of infallible certaintie.

Obiections againſt Scripture anſwered.

And yet for further reſolution, let vs ſee what obiections are made againſt it. I. Obiect. It is ſaid, that Scripture is againſt all reaſon. Anſwer. That is not true, for the Lawe is perfect reaſon, and the Goſpel is aboue reaſon, not contrarie to reaſon: nay, holding this principle of nature, that God is almightie, euen the Goſpel it ſelfe may ſtand C with reaſon; as that the Sonne of God ſhould bee incarnate, and that by his death wee ſhould receiue life; which is the ſumme of the Goſpel.

II. Obiect. There bee falſhoods in Scripture; for the paſſage thorough the redde Sea was no miracle, but might bee done in the ebbing of the Sea, as in other countries there is oft times paſſage thorough the Waſhes. Anſwer. The Scripture ſaith, the water ſtood as walls on each ſide the paſſage, which could not bee by an ebbe: againe, reaſon ſhewes that it could not be by naturall courſe, for their paſſage ouer was at the full of the Moone, when all Seas are moſt full, and do not ebbe and flowe as they vſe to doe at other times.

D III. Obiection. The greateſt part of the world reiect the Bible, as Turks and Pagans: and the Iewes care not for the newe Teſtament. Anſw. We muſt reuerence Gods worke in this withholding his mercie in Chriſt from ſome, to whome he denies the meanes, which is his holy word; for hence it comes that ſome reiect the Bible, becauſe God in his ſecret, yet moſt iuſt iudgement, withholds this bleſſing from them. And therefore though Atheiſts barke, yet the truth is, Scripture is the word of God.

Popiſh twofold Scripture.

Vſe. 1. Seeing the word written is the certen truth of God, we muſt take heede of being ſeduced by Popiſh teachers: who ſay there be two kinds of Scripture; Inward, and Outward. Inward Scripture, is a conſent of do-

Andrad. ortho. explic. lib. 2.

A ctrine written by the holy Ghoſt in the hearts of all Catholikes, and this (ſay they) is the right Scripture. The outward Scripture, is written in paper and parchment, which hath no certaine ſenſe, but as the preſent Church determines thereof. But this is a deuilliſh doctrine aboliſhing writtē Scripture, the true word of God, and ſetting vp the opinions of their owne hearts, making Scripture what themſelues will: we muſt therefore hold the written word to be right Scripture, and the ground of that which is in the heart: for the word written caries a moſt certaine ſenſe beeing both text and gloſſe; whereas their inward Scripture varieth as men doe, vnleſſe it be grounded on the written word.

B II. Vſe. The certaintie of Scripture muſt teach vs to beleeue Gods word, and not to feare to reſt our ſelues vpon it. The Author of Scripture by his prouidence preſerues his own word, ſo as all the men in earth, for ſubſtance cannot corrupt the ſame; and therefore whatſoeuer it ſaith we neede not doubt but it is the will of God.

Authoritie of Scripture.

III. Point. From this reaſon we may alſo gather the Authoritie of Canonicall Scripture: for wee muſt doe, as we would be done to, becauſe the Lawe and the Prophets ſay ſo: and hence it followes that the law and Prophets haue an high, ſoueraigne, and abſolute authoritie. This authoritie of Scripture ſtands in two things: I. in C power to giue iudgement: II. in the all-ſufficiencie thereof in and of it ſelfe; and both theſe are noted here by our Sauiour Chriſt in this reaſon.

The power of Scripture in giuing iudgement.

For the firſt, the power of giuing iudgement, is that whereby Scripture doth fully and abſolutely determine of all things needefull to ſaluation concerning faith and manners: and for this cauſe the lawes of God are oft in Scripture called iudgements. There be diuers iudgements aſcribed to ſundry ſorts of perſons in Scripture. Firſt, it giues a iudgment to euery priuate man, [a] The ſpirituall man diſcerneth or iudgeth all things: and Saint [b] Iohn biddes the beleeuers in the Church proue the ſpirits: that is, trie by iudgement the doctrines deliuered. Secondly, D the Scripture giues iudgement to publike perſons, as to Paſtors, Miniſters, and to the gouernours of the Church: Let two or three propheſie & the reſt iudge: 1. Cor. 14. 29. and the ſpirit of the Prophets is ſubiect to the Prophets, v. 32. Thirdly, Iudgement is aſcribed to the Prophets and Apoſtles in Scripture, Act. 15. 28. It ſeemed good to the holy Ghoſt and to vs: and this is an high Iudgement which befalls not any priuate man, or any ordinarie Miniſter, or generall Councell ordinarily, but is peculiar to extraordinarie Prophets, that were the penmen of holy Scripture. And theſe three kinds of iudgements muſt bee diſtinguiſhed; the two firſt kinds, are inferiour and miniſteriall kinds of Iudgement, depending on an higher and more ſoueraigne Iudgement: for priuate men and ordinarie miniſters and Councels giue Iudgement, yet not of themſelues, but by their rule, which is the word of God; and this Iudgment is nothing els but a miniſterie, pronouncing and declaring the meaning of the will of God reuealed in his word. But beſides this, there is a ſoueraigne kind of Iudgement vouchſafed to the Prophets and Apoſtles, determining abſolutely in matters of faith and conſcience, what is to be done, and what is not; and this is the Iudgement of God himſelfe, whereupon the Apoſtles might ſay, It ſeemeth good to the holy Ghoſt and to vs, Act. 15. 28. And that this their Iudgment is abſolute, appeares by Scripture, He that heareth you, heareth me, (ſaith Chriſt to his Apoſtles) and he that refuſeth you, refuſeth mee, Luk. 10. 16. and Paul deliuering the Goſpel of Chriſt to the Galatians, bids them hold him accurſed that teacheth them otherwiſe, Gal. 1. 7. & the promiſe of ſending the ſpirit of trueth, Ioh. 16. 13. was directly intended to the Apoſtles, and onely in them fully accompliſhed. For our better conceiuing hereof, we haue a reſemblance of this ſoueraigne iudgement in the common wealth: the high Court of Parliament giues iudgement of matters in law, and ſo doe Lawyers and Iudges in common Courts; but yet there is great differēce between theſe two: the court of Parliament makes the lawe, and determines abſolutely in ciuil matters, without controlement, what muſt be done, and what not: but the Lawyers make not the lawe, but pronounce the meaning of the lawe vnto men. Now the Scriptures, the Prophets, and Apoſtles, they are like to the Court of Parliament in giuing iudgement; priuate men and ordinarie miniſters giue iudgement like vnto the lawyers, which is not abſolute, but miniſteriall, depending on an higher iudgement.

What iudg we muſt chooſe.

Vſe. I. If the Prophets & Apoſtles, haue ſoueraigne power to giue abſolute iudgement in matters of faith and manners: then wee muſt here learne to make choice of a right Iudge: for vnto one muſt we appeale in matters of faith & conſciēce: and this right Iudge is Gods word, which we muſt ſticke vnto, and to none other. The commandement is plaine for matters of difficultie that concerne the conſcience: Iſay 8. 20. To the Lawe, and to the teſtimonie: and our Sauiour Chriſt referres vs to Scripture for all matters that concerne ſaluation; Ioh. 5. 39. Search the Scripture. If we would know what is true religion and what is erroneous; what is equitie in any matter of conſcience, wee muſt haue recourſe to Scripture. It wil be ſaid Scripture is an vnfit Iudge, it cannot ſpeak? I anſwer, It ſpeakes ſufficiently to determine of all matters of faith and conſcience: we ſee in common experiēce, a man may reſolue his friend in matters of doubt, as well by letter, as by word of mouth; why then may not the word of God ſent from heauen vnto his church, reſolue mens conſciences in all matters of doubt for faith and manners. And indeede, let any man come in humilitie, and ſeriouſly ſearch the Scripture, and hee ſhall finde reſolution therein, for any matter of conſcience whatſoeuer.

e Church incompe- t iudge.

Vſe. 2. By this authoritie of Scripture in giuing ſoueraigne iudgement, we are taught to take heede of an incompetent Iudge, which men for many hundred yeares haue ſet vp in their hearts, to relie vnto in matters of faith and conſcience: and that is to put the Church in roome of the word, for ſoueraigne iudgement. The Church of Rome teacheth, that the [c] Church muſt iudge of the Scripture; yea, without Scripture [d] giue ſoueraigne determination in matters of conſcience, as hauing more authoritie then Scripture, because it giues authoritie thereunto: but this is the ground of Atheiſme, and hereſie, and the path way to Poperie; the true Church of God muſt haue the honour of Chriſts ſpouſe; but yet the authoritie of ſoueraigne iudgement muſt not be giuen to her, but onely to the word of God himſelfe.

The ſecond part of the authoritie of Scripture, is that euery part of Canonicall Scripture is Authenticall; that is, of ſufficient authoritie of it ſelfe, though it be not confirmed by any other teſtimonie; for Scripture is the word of God, and the teſtimonie of Scripture is the teſtimonie of God himſelfe, then which none can be greater: as Saint Iohn ſaith, If we receiue the teſtimonie of men, the teſtimonie of God is greater, 1. Ioh. 5. 9. For the better conceiuing of this point, conferre all the bookes that are or euer were, together, and thereby it will appeare, that the Scripture is of it ſelfe Authenticall. There be three ſorts of bookes; Diuine, Eccleſiaſticall, and Humane: Diuine bookes are the bookes of God, penned by the Prophets and Apoſtles; and they are all the word of God: for whether we regard the matter of them, or the manner of reuealing them, they are all from God, the Prophets and Apoſtles were onely Gods hands and inſtruments in penning them, the holy Ghoſt gaue the matter, the order, and the very words; from whence it muſt needes follow, that they are of all-ſufficient authority of themſelues. Eccleſiaſticall bookes, are books of diuine matters, penned by learned men in the Church; and they are either generall bookes, or particular: Generall bookes Eccleſiaſticall, I call thoſe, which were either made or confirmed by the whole Church; as the Creedes of the Apoſtles, the Nicene, and of Athanaſius: and the foure firſt generall Councels, and theſe haue Catholike allowance, yet not abſolute authoritie, but depending on Scripture. Particular bookes Eccleſiaſticall, I call the Catechiſmes and Confeſſions of particular Churches made by them, or by particular members thereof; which haue not authoritie of themſelues, but from the Scripture, or from generall conſent. Now both theſe kinds of bookes may be called Gods word, ſo farre forth as they agree with Scripture: and yet A they are alſo the word of men, becauſe they were penned by men, and haue both order and ſtyle from men: and in this regard, that they were partly mens workes, they are not authenticall of themſelues, but depend vpon the authoritie of Scripture. Humane bookes, are bookes penned by men, either of the Church, or out of the Church, concerning humane things; as bookes of naturall Philoſophie, of Policie, and other Artes: and theſe are not the bookes of God, but of men alone, hauing both matter and ſtyle from men: many of them containe excellent truths in their kind, yet gathered onely from experience and common reaB ſon; but they haue not in them that truth, which is truth according to godlineſſe, ſeruing to build vp, and to bind the conſcience; vnleſſe it be in one caſe, to ſtoppe the mouthes of Atheiſts, and Epicures, and to conuince their conſciēces. And thus by cōference of all books, wee ſee that Scripture alone is authenticall in it ſelfe, and no bookes beſide.

Vſe Gods teſtimony alone in preaching.

Vſes. 1. This teacheth vs, that miniſters in the diſpenſing of Gods word ſhould content themſelues with the teſtimonie of Scripture alone; for the end of the miniſterie is to worke and confirme faith, and to ſettle and build vp the conſcience in the truth of religion, and matters concerning ſaluatiō; which no other word can doe, ſaue onely the word of God in Scripture, that hath ſufficient authoritie in it ſelfe, from which conſcience cannot appeale: and for C which cauſe our Sauiour Chriſt the true Prophet of the Church, contents himſelfe with the teſtimony of the law and Prophets alone; and after him his Apoſtles did the like. See this notably confirmed by Paul, who in his preaching to the Iewes, profeſſed himſelfe to haue ſaide none other thing then that which the Prophets and Moſes ſaid ſhould come. Other writings haue their good vſe in their time and place, but not in the publike miniſterie; for authority and teſtimonie from Scripture is authenticall: This the Scripture ſaith, therefore it is ſo; but authoritie from Councels and Fathers, is ſophiſtrie: as, Auſtin ſaith ſo, therefore it is ſo; this is no good reaſon, for it implies that D all that Auſtin ſaide is true, which indeede is falſe, he beeing as all men are, ſubiect to errour.

Act. 20.22.

Vnwritten traditions, not authenticall. Andrad.orthod.explic. l.2.pag.63.

2. Vſe. This alſo ſheweth, that we cannot beleeue vnwritten traditions, though they be called Apoſtolical. The church of Rome intend to deceiue vs, whē they would beare vs in hand that halfe of thoſe things which are to be beleeued, are not written in Scripture, but receiued by tradition: but theſe traditions we cannot beleeue by a diuine faith, howſoeuer by a common humane faith we may; for they are contained in the bookes of Councels, and Fathers, which were worthy men, yet ſubiect to errour.

3. Vſe. This alſo ſheweth, that we muſt ſubmit our ſelues with feare and trembling to the word of God; for it hath abſolute authoritie to iudge vs, and to conuince our conſcience in all matters of faith and manners that pertaine to ſaluation.

Whether the authoritie of Chriſt & the Prophets be equall.

IV. Point. Whereas Chriſt alleadgeth Moſes and the Prophets to confirme his miniſterie, it may be demanded, whether there be any difference for authoritie, betweene Chriſt and the Prophets; for he that alleadgeth another mans authority ſeemes to be inferiour thereto? I anſwer, if we compare Chriſt and the Prophets, we muſt diſtinguiſh betweene their doctrine, and their perſons. The doctrine of Moſes and of the Prophets is equal to the doctrine of Chriſt two waies; Firſt, in certentie of truth, for it is as vndoubtedly true, as if Chriſt himſelfe had taught the ſame. Secondly, in efficacie and authoritie for the power of binding conſcience; for the doctrine of the Prophets binds conſcience as fully and truely as if Chriſt himſelfe had ſpokē it. And yet the perſon of Chriſt is aboue the perſon of Moſes, and of all the Prophets; for hee is the ſonne of God, both God and man; they were men, he is the author of truth: they onely the inſtruments and penmen thereof: and from hence it comes that Chriſts doctrine doth more binde vs to obedience then the doctrine of the Prophets, becauſe the perſon deliuering it is of more authoritie and excellencie: and for this cauſe Chriſt alleadges Moſes and the Prophets, not for that his word is inferiour to theirs, but that in regard of our obedience hee might increaſe the authoritie of Moſes and the Prophets, becauſe a greater meaſure of obedience is required to Chriſts word in regard of the dignitie of his perſon. And this ſhewes that we now are more bound to obedience vnder the Goſpel then the people were vnder the Law: for we haue Chriſts doctrine which in regard of his perſon is of more authoritie then Moſes and the Prophets: ſee this point plainely laid downe by the Author to the Hebrewes: in the firſt Chapter he ſaith, God in times paſt ſpake to his Church by the Prophets, but in theſe laſt dayes he hath ſpoken to vs by his Sonne: and in the ſecond chap. v. 1. he laies downe the vſe of this that now we haue Chriſt for our teacher; namely, that therefore wee ought more abundantly to giue heede to the things that we haue heard, leaſt at any time we let them ſlip, &c. ſhewing that our diſobedience now ſhall be more ſeuerely puniſhed.

The ignorāt abuſe this rule.

V. Point. Ignorant people abuſe this text, to perſwad themſelues that preaching is needleſſe, becauſe no man can ſay more then this; doe as yee would be done to, for this is the ſumme of the Law and the Prophets. But wee muſt know, that this is not the ſumme of all that the Prophets ſay, but onely touching the matter of iuſtice and equitie: and indeede that we may attaine to ſaluation more is needfull; for we muſt not onely know Gods word in generall, but in particular, ſeeing that we may faile in the particulars of that which we know in generall. Againe, preaching ſerues not onely for the remoouing of ignorance, and the increaſe of knowledge, but to erect and build vp good conſcience and honeſt liues, by the increaſe of faith, repentance, loue of God and man, and of obedience: and this vſe the moſt learned and godly man that euer was may make of the publike miniſterie, though diſpenſed by one that is farre inferiour to him in knowledge and pietie.

Laſtly, it may be demanded how this can be the ſumme of the Law and the Prophets, to doe as we would be done to, with men; ſeeing we are further bound by the law to performe duties of loue and obedience to God? Anſ. This rule is the ſumme of all: for our loue to God muſt be ſhewed in the practiſe of the duties of loue, iuſtice, and mercie towards men: for God is inuiſible and it pleaſeth him to make himſelfe ſeene in our viſible neighbour, requiring that our loue to himſelfe ſhould be ſhewed in the works of mercie, iuſtice, and goodnes towards men. Men may flatter themſelues and ſay they loue God, but if it be not ſhewed in the loue of their neighbours, they deceiue themſelues, there is no loue of God in them. And therefore they are deceiued that thinke all is well with them, when they come to Church, and receiue the Sacraments; for religion ſtands not in the outward ſeruice of God, vnleſſe it be ſhewed forth in the duties of iuſtice, loue, and mercie commanded in the ſecond Table: ſee Iam. 1. 27. pure religion and vndefiled before God, is to viſit the fatherleſſe and widdowes in their aduerſitie: and to keepe himſelfe vnſpotted of the world.

V. 13. Enter in at the ſtraite gate: for it is the wide gate, and broad way that leadeth to deſtruction; and many there be which goe in thereat.

14. Becauſe the gate is ſtrait, and the way narrow that leadeth vnto life, and few there be that finde it.

10. Part of Chriſts Sermon.

Theſe two verſes being the fifth part of this chapter, containe the tenth point of Doctrine in this ſermon of our Sauiour Chriſt: wherein he exhorteth his hearers and vs all effectually, to an earneſt care in ſeeking euerlaſting life: and withall admoniſheth vs in the matter of Saluation not to follow the multitude, becauſe moſt men goe the broad way to deſtruction.

The words containe two parts. A commandement, Enter in at the ſtrait gate: and a reaſon in the words following, for it is the wide gate. Yet for our further edificatiō & inſtruction, I will conſider and handle fiue points, which are here ſet downe by our Sauiour Chriſt: I. that there be two contrarie cities or kingdomes, in one of which euerie man & woman muſt abide for euer after this life: and further, that theſe affoard vnto men a contrary eſtate, the one life, the other death and deſtruction. II. That there are two diſtinct waies to theſe two cities or kingdomes; one leading to deſtruction; the other leading vnto life. III. The condition and propertie of theſe two waies: The way of life is ſtraite and narrowe: The way of deſtruction is broad and wide, and that from the beginning to the end. IV. What men doe in theſe wayes; namely, that many walke in the broad way, and fewe can finde the ſtraite and narrow way. V. What men ought to doe touching theſe waies, namely, paſſe by the broad way and enter into and walke in the ſtraite way: which is the ſcope of Chriſts exhortation and inſtruction in this place. Of theſe in order.

For the firſt: Theſe two cities are two diſtinct places ordained of God for the finall and eternall aboad of all mankind after this life, according to that which euery man hath done in his bodie. Theſe are tearmed diuerſly in Scripture: one, the kingdome of heauen: the other, vtter darkeneſſe in the chapter following, ver. 11, 12. The one Abrahams boſome: the other, hell fire, Luk. 16.23. and in the 21. and 22. Chapters of the Reuelation they are notably deſcribed, the one is called the citie of God: the other the burning lake: and vſually the one is called heauen, the other hell. And as theſe are diſtinct places, ſo they affoard vnto men two diſtinct eſtates: The one life, the other deſtruction; as it is ſaid, the narrowe way leads to life: the broad way to deſtruction. By life here is meāt, a bleſſed ſtate of man in which hee liues in fellowſhip with God, & hath his heart filled with the vnſpeakeable loue and goodnes of God, and with endles ioy from Gods immediate preſence. And this indeed is the onely true life; our naturall life is but a ſhadow thereof. By perdition or deſtruction, we are to vnderſtand a curſed ſtate of man, in which hee is without all fellowſhip with God in reſpect of his fauour, mercie, and loue; and yet in bodie, ſoule, and conſcience doth apprehend the bitterneſſe of Gods wrath & furie for euermore; hauing no fellowſhip ſaue onely with the deuill and his angels, and damned ſoules. This is no life, but eternall death, though ſoule and bodie liue together eternally.

Vſe, I. In that Chriſt doth here mention but two cities or places, to the one whereof euery man muſt reſort after death; we may gather that there is no middle place or condition betweene life and deſtruction. A third place or ſtate the Scripture knoweth not, and therefore there is no place of purging the ſoules of men after this life, which the Papiſts call Purgatorie: if there had, the word of God would haue

A reuealed it. But the [a] Papiſts ſay, it is the vpper part of hell neere to the hel of the damned; I anſwer, If that were ſo, then their is no ſaluation for them that are in purgatorie; for there is no returning out of hel to heauen by reaſon of the great gulfe betweene them, Luk. 16. 26. and they that are in any part of hel are but damned perſons.

II. Vſe. If there be but two places, and in the two eſtates onely according to that which men haue done here on earth either good or euill; then we muſt be admoniſhed with all care and conſcience to vſe all good meanes, whereby we may eſcape the one, and attaine to the other; to be freed from deſtruction, & to gaine

B ſaluation. In the maſſacre and ſacking of a city; in which ſome are ſlain and ſome eſcape aliue, euery one hath care to ſhift for himſelf, to ſaue his temporall life: much more then ought wee to prouide for eternall life, ſeeing at the laſt day wherein the whole world ſhall be ranſacked, euery one muſt vndergoe either ſaluation or deſtruction: if we had our deſeruing we ſhould be confoūded euery moment; but God in mercie graunts vnto vs length of dayes for this very end that we ſhould ſeeke Gods kingdome and life euerlaſting: and therefore this muſt be our principall care and ſtudie, that we may be alwaies readie, whenſoeuer we ſhall be called hence; and the rather, because we know not when Chriſt will call vs hence; Luke, 12.

C 40. Be yee alſo prepared therefore, for the ſonne of man will come at an houre when yee thinke not.

II. Point. As there be two diuerſe eſtates in two diſtinct places; ſo there be two generall waies that lead thereunto: the one, the way of life, v. 14. the other, the way to deſtruction, v. 13. Firſt, I will ſpeake of the way of life, and thereby ſhal we ſee what the way of deſtruction is; in which regard it ſtands vs all in hand to knowe what is the way of life. Now none hath better noted it out vnto vs, then the Prophet Habacuk, chap. 2. v. 4. in theſe words, But the iuſt ſhall liue by faith: in which place he foretels the afflictions of the Iewes by the Chaldeans: whereupon the Iewes might ſay, whereby then ſhall

D we ſtay our ſelues? he anſwers by faith: The iuſt man liues, that is, leadeth his life by faith. Some giue this meaning to the Prophet, The iuſt by faith ſhall haue life euerlaſting: but the Apoſtle expoundeth it otherwiſe, Gal. 3. 11. So then to walke in the way of life, is to lead our liues by faith in Chriſt: as Heb. 10. 39.

Here two points muſt be conſidered: I. what faith that is by which men muſt liue in this world: namely, true iuſtifying faith, the verie ſame by which they are to be ſaued in the day of the Lord. I liue by faith (ſaith Paul) in the ſonne of God, who hath loued me, and giuen himſelfe for me, Gal. 2. 20. where he doth notably expound this text, ſhewing, that faith in Chriſt our redeemer, is that faith whereby wee muſt lead our liues in this world: for they which [a] Bellarm. de purgat. l. 2. c. 6.

Striue to eſcape hell & get to heauen.

Two waies.

1. The way of life.

A Chriſtians life is twofold.

1. Spirituall.

will be ſaued by their faith, muſt firſt liue by their faith: he that beleeues well, liues well: and that faith will neuer ſaue the ſoule, that cannot guide and order the life: many men thinke it is ſufficient to ſaluation to beleeue the promiſe of life: but faith hath a further worke in them that it ſaueth; for it alſo cauſeth them to liue thereby. Now a man liues by faith, when he reſts himſelfe on God, and ſuffers himſelfe wholly to be lead and guided by Gods written word. Example hereof we haue in Abraham, Heb. 11.8. who by faith forſooke his owne countrey, and at Gods commandement went hee knewe not whether. More particularly; a Chriſtian mans life is twofold: ſpirituall, and temporall: both which he muſt liue in this world, for heauenly life beginnes before we die: and both theſe kinds of life muſt be preſerued by faith. The ſpirituall life of a Chriſtian, is that whereby he hath true fellowſhip with God: this begins in this life; and it ſtands in reconciliation with God, wherein a man is accepted to the right of eternall life. This reconciliation is life, and it is held by faith: and faith onely in Gods word and promiſe in Chriſt alone is it that makes vs lay hold of, receiue, and keepe this our reconciliation. We muſt giue God this honour to beleeue his promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting in Chriſt; and vpon our faith God vouchſafeth vnto vs remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting. Here ſome may aske whether euery thing that we beleeue be made ours; as riches, honour, and ſuch like? Anſw. No: but onely that which God promiſeth in the Euangelicall couenant of life euerlaſting, vpon our faith. Here alſo ſome will ſay, If this be all, I am well, for I beleeue Gods promiſe. But herin many deceiue themſelues, beleeuing the promiſe falſly. True faith is this: men muſt ſeeke the pardon of their ſinnes, and in ſeeking beleeue it: but they that beleeue without vſing the meanes deceiue theſelues, ſeeing God hath ioyned his promiſe to the meanes. Wee offend God daily, and therefore muſt daily renue our repentance, and by faith beleeue the pardon of our daily ſinnes.

Fruits of ſpirituall life.

Further, this ſpirituall life hath his fruits. It is no dead life: for he that hath remiſſion of ſinnes liues in Chriſt, and this life ſhewes it ſelfe in the fruits of good workes: as mercie, loue, goodnes: and in euery good worke we muſt liue by faith, for to the doing of any good worke there is a double faith required: firſt, a generall faith, whereby we are perſwaded that the worke is allowed and required of God: ſecondly, a ſpeciall faith, whereby we are perſwaded that the particular work done is accepted of God. In the acceptation of the work, God firſt accepteth the perſon in Chriſt, and then the worke in and for the perſon. Yea, we are mooued to euery good worke by faith, for it brings to minde Gods loue, mercie, and goodnes to vs: and ſo mooueth vs to performe the like duties of loue and mercie towards our brethren.

Spirituall li is ſeene in temptation.

Thirdly, ſpirituall life ſhewes it ſelfe in reſiſting and enduring temptation: for euery child of God hath many and grieuous aſſaults, ſo as the righteous ſhall ſcarce be ſaued: and in all and euery one of theſe, we muſt liue by faith, and thereby relie on Chriſt, not on our ſelues. Example hereof we haue in Chriſt vpon the croſſe, who euen then when hee felt the wrath of God vpon him, and his indignation againſt him, did yet cry vnto him as to his God, My God, my God: and Iob in grieuous temptation and affliction, ſaid vnto the Lord, Loe, though he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him, Iob 13.15. and ſo muſt we euen then lay hold on Gods mercy when we feele no comfort in our ſelues: ſo did Dauid, when he felt no comfort, yet hee did cleaue to God in his meditation, Pſal. 77.7, 8.10, 11. In diſputations in ſchooles it is a fault to ſticke alwaies to the concluſion: yet in this combate with Satan it is no fault, but a good practiſe of true faith.

How tem porall li lead by fa

Temporall life ſtands in the practiſe of ſome particular calling, and ſome men be of one calling, ſome of another: and euery one hath or ought to haue ſome one lawful calling or other wherein to leade his temporall life. Now the workes of a mans particular calling they muſt be practiſed by faith, euen the duties of the baſeſt calling that is, as of the ſheepheard. And that a man may doe the duties of his calling in faith, he muſt firſt haue a grounded conſcience that his worke is allowed of God, and accordingly hee muſt doe his worke. Againe, euery man in his calling muſt haue a care of his owne life and of thoſe that belong vnto him, to prouide for them things neceſſarie, as meate, drinke, and cloathing, and this care muſt be ruled by faith, that is, a man muſt vſe the lawfull meanes to get theſe things, and yet ſo as he leaue the iſſue and euent vnto Gods bleſſing: we may prouide for neceſſaries, but wee muſt goe no further, but vſe the lawfull ordinarie meanes, and ſanctifie them by prayer, leauing the bleſſing vnto God. Caſt thy workes on God, ſaith Salomon. Prou. 16.3. and S. Peter bids vs caſt all our care on God, 1. Pet. 5.7. Laſtly, euery calling hath his croſſes: no life is ſo quiet that it wanteth all vexations. Now when croſſes come vpon any man in his calling, then muſt he beare the ſame by faith: hee muſt reſt on Gods word, and quiet his mind with the good wil and pleaſure of God. He that beleeueth (ſaith the Prophet) ſhall not make haſt, Iſa. 28.16 that is, he ſhall not be caried headlong with a deſire to ſatiſfie his owne pleaſure and appetite either in ſeeking to be freed from euill, or to enioy ſome bleſſing, but ſhall content himſelfe with the good pleaſure of God. And thus wee ſee what it is to liue by faith, which is the right way to life eternall.

A ciuill ho neſt life n ſufficient t ſaluation.

Vſes. 1. This ſheweth, that a great number are farre wide, which thinke that if they liue vprightly among men, then all is well: this honeſt life is euer commendable among men; but it is not ſufficient to ſaluation. It is but a worke of nature, for a man by naturall reaſon made leade a ciuill vpright life, as many haue done among the heathen: but the life that muſt bring a man to heauen muſt be lead by faith: and therefore they that would walke the way to life, muſt walk by faith, not by reaſon onely.

II. This alſo ſheweth that they are deceiued which liue by ſenſe, meaſuring Gods loue and hatred by outward bleſſings and croſſes; and therfore when God takes away the means they will no longer truſt on him: but we count it a point of diſhoneſtie, not to truſt our honeſt freind without a pawne: much more then is it a diſhonour to God, when we will not relie vpon him, without outward pledges of his fauour: and therfore we muſt relie on God when all meanes faile: for no man knoweth loue or hatred by all that is before him, Eccles. 9. 1.

eaſure not race by eeling.

III. Many that profeſſe religion are deceiued, that meaſure their grace and goodneſſe in religion by feeling in their owne hearts: but we muſt not relie thereon, for true faith may be in the heart without inward ſenſe: againe, the deuill may put falſe comforts many times into a mans heart: the bad man receiues the word with ioy, Luk. 8. 13. looke to thy faith by Chriſts word, and thereby iudge thy ſelfe: and reſt not in thine inward feeling.

Learne to know Gods will.

IIII. This teacheth vs to acquaint our ſelues with all the commandements of God that be in the Bible; and with all the promiſes that concerne the pardon of ſinnes and life euerlaſting: for without this knowledge there can be no faith: and therfore we muſt abandon all ignorance of theſe things, and inſtruct our ſelues and thoſe that belong vnto vs in the word of God, that they and we may liue by faith.

How to liue in afflictions.

V. Theſe are happie daies of peace and of many temporal bleſſings wherein we now liue: but we muſt not liue alwaies in this peace, God hath begun to ſet his iudgements among vs, and if we doe not repent we muſt looke for further and more grieuous iudgements, as the loſſe of his word, and a ſword vpon our ſelues, our freinds and children: what if theſe dayes come, how muſt we then liue? namely, by faith in the word and promiſe of God, lay hold on this, and though thou looſe freinds, goods, and thine owne temporall life, yet hold faſt thy ſpirituall life, by faith cleaue vnto Chriſt, and then in the middeſt of ſwords and weapons of death thou ſhalt walke the way to eternall life. And thus much of the way of life.

The ſecond way is the way to deſtruction: which is called the way of ſinners and of the vngodly, Pſal. 1. 1. 6. This way hath many pathes, which tend all to one ende, and meete in the ſame period; and they may all be reduced to theſe three heads: I. the way of nature: II. the way of falſe faith: III. the way of faith and nature, ioyned both together.

1. The way of nature.

The way of nature, is when men liue onely by the light of nature: of this S. Paul ſpeaketh, Act. 14. 16. God ſuffered all the Gentiles to walke in their owne wayes, wherein they were voide of God in Chriſt, and ſo not vnder mercie.

2. The way of falſe faith.

The way of falſe faith, is ſomething more then the way of nature; but yet it leadeth to deſtruction, becauſe their faith is falſe and profeſſion vaine: and this is the way of falſe religion, whereof there be theſe three maine & principall at this day, to which all other may be referred. The religion of the Turkes; of the Iewes; and of the Papiſts.

Turciſme.

The Turkes in their religion acknowledge Chriſt for a great Prophet, but not to be God, neither doe they looke for any ſaluation by him.

Iudaiſme.

The Iewes in their religion acknowledge but one God, yet out of Chriſt: they acknowledge not his incarnation paſt, but expect it yet to come: they waite for an earthly kingdome: They hold the olde Teſtament onely, & denie the new. Now both theſe refuſing Chriſt, haue not the father, & ſo can haue no ſaluatiō in their religion.

Poperie.

The Papiſts acknowledge much truth formally, but then againe they ouerturne it: for they hold that generall faith, which the Deuils may haue: but for that ſpeciall iuſtifying [a] faith, whereby a man is to beleeue his owne ſaluation; the remiſſion of his ſinnes, and his owne reconciliation with God in Chriſt, that they renounce. Againe, the Chriſt of the Papiſts is no true Chriſt; for they make him but halfe a Sauiour, or not ſo much; euen onely an inſtrument to make men ſauiours of themſelues; for [b] by his grace they doe workes properly meritorious, and fully worthy of eternall life. They robbe him alſo of his manhood, ſaying, it is euery where in his quantitie, where maſſe is ſaid: [c] for they haue the ſelfe ſame bodie that was crucified. Alſo they denie his offices: I. his Kingly office: for they part ſtakes with him, and giue it to the Pope, in ſaying [d] hee hath power to make lawes which binde the conſcience, as Gods lawes doe. II. his prieſthood, becauſe [e] euery maſſe Prieſt offers Chriſt anew: and they make Saints [f] interceſſours, eſpecially the Virgin Marie. III. his propheticall office, ſaying the [g] Scriptures are imperfect without traditiō; [h] vncertaine without the ſenſe and meaning of the Church; the [i] originall copies are corrupted and the [k] Church is aboue them in authoritie.

3. The way of nature & grace.

The third way, is the way of faith and nature together; this is the common way wherin moſt Proteſtants walke: for we hold the right faith in word; our profeſſion and iudgement is right: but yet our liues are lead according to nature. And theſe three pathes are all in the broad way to deſtruction. And therefore as we hold true doctrine, and right faith in word: ſo let vs lead our liues accordingly, and teſtifie the ſame by our workes, eſpecially in the times of dearth when God laies his hand on the poore, and thereby tries the hearts of the rich.

III. Point. The propertie of theſe waies. The way to life is narrow and ſtrait: the way to de-ſtruction is broad and wide. For the firſt: The way of life is narrow and ſtraite, from the firſt entrance to the laſt paſſage: why ſo? Firſt, becauſe the way of life is onely one ſingle path: but the way of death is manifold, containing ſundry paths. Secondly, they that walke in the way of life, containe themſelues within the bonds and liſts of Gods word: for the words of the wiſe are as naylès and pales to keepe vs in, Eccles. 12. 11. Thirdly, in the way to life there are many afflictions and offences, as Act. 14. 22. Through manifold afflictions wee muſt enter into the kingdome of heauen: and, Hoſ. 2. 6. I will ſtoppe thy way with thornes: meaning, that by ſharpe afflictions he would hedge them in the way of obedience. But ſome may ſay, why then doth Chriſt ſay, his yoke is light, Matth. 11. 30. and S. Iohn, his commandements are not grieuous, 1. Ioh. 5. 3. and David, I will walke at large or libertie, Pſal. 119. 45. I anſwer, the way is ſtraite and narrow in reſpect of our nature: but yet broad and eaſie by his aſſiſting grace and helpe. Here then we ſee what courſe we muſt take if we meane to come vnto Chriſt; namely, we muſt tread in this narrow way, and become like vnto him in ſuffering afflictions: for this way he went here on earth, and ſo entred into his glorie.

Way of death broad.

The propertie of the way of death is breadth. Now the way of death is broad: firſt, becauſe the way of ſinning is manifold; euen as truth is onely one, and error manifold. Secondly, they that walke in this way break out of the bounds of Gods word, and doe not containe themſelues therein. Thirdly, herein they meete with few croſſes and impediments: as David ſaith, They are not in trouble as other men: they proſper alway and increaſe in riches, Pſal. 73. 5. &c. 12. And the reaſon is, becauſe they ſeeke by all meanes to ſatisfie their hearts deſire whether by right or wrong; ſaying with the foole in the Goſpel, Soule, ſoule, take thy reſt, liue at eaſe, Luk. 12. 19.

IV. Point. What men doe in theſe wayes; namely, the greateſt part of men walke in the broad way; but few in the narrow way.

Hence we learne ſundrie inſtructions. I. We muſt not be offended or diſcouraged when we ſee moſt men liue either in a falſe religion, or in groſſe impietie: for the greateſt part walk in the broad way. II. We muſt not follow the multitude in matters of religion, but thoſe that follow Chriſt, the Patriarks, Prophets, and Apoſtles: for the moſt goe wide, and the feweſt hold the right way of life. III. That vniuerſalitie is no marke of a true Church: for the true Church is in the ſtraite way, but therein the ſmalleſt number walke. IV. Vniuerſall grace, is a deuiſe of man; for few finde the way of life, and therefore it is hid and vnknowne. If it be ſaid, that all might finde it if they would: I anſwer, they can not: for the word finding, doth preſuppoſe a ſeeking; as if Chriſt had ſaid, though many giue themſelues to ſeeke the way A of life, yet fewe they be that finde it. The like phraſe we haue, Matth. 24. 38. In the daies of Noah they ate and dranke; that is, they gaue themſelues to eating and drinking. Againe, S. Luke hath it thus, and ſhall not be able to finde it: why then doe not the moſt finde the way to life? Is it becauſe they ſeeke it not? no verely: S. Luke denies that: Why then is the way hid to the moſt, and reuealed to fewer? this Chriſt teacheth vs; becauſe it ſo pleaſeth God, Matth. 11. 25. 26.

Vniuerſall grace confuted.

Our duties in regard of theſe two waies. Luk. 13. 24.

V. Point. What muſt wee doe in regard of theſe two wayes? we muſt enter, yea (as S. Luke hath it) ſtriue to enter in at the ſtraite way: and to paſſe by the broad way. This is the commandement B of our Sauiour Chriſt: wherein three things are inioyned vs: firſt, that we muſt come into this ſtrait way, and eſchew the broad way, ſecondly, we muſt not be diſcouraged for the ſtraitnes of the way: and thirdly, we muſt ſtriue to enter in.

I. Charge.

The firſt is a neceſſarie dutie in theſe times: for we are like vnto mariners which paſſe by many pleaſant countries, and ſtately buildings, and doe onely behold them a farre off, but not enter into them, nor land vpon them. We muſt therfore ceaſe onely to talke of the way of life, and beginne to walke in it. If any ſhall aske, how we may come to walke in this way: I anſwer, read Ier. 6. 16. ſee there a notable leſſon:

How to walk in the way of life.

1 Firſt, we muſt inquire which is the olde way, for the old way is the right way. But where ſhall we learne out the olde way? Anſw. In the holy C Bible: there ſhall we ſee the way that the Patriarks, Prophets, and Apoſtles went.

2 Secondly, hauing found the right way, we muſt labour to know all the turnings of it. We muſt ſee what things we are to beleeue and doe, hauing the myſterie of faith in a good conſcience, 1. Tim. 3. 9.

3 Thirdly, we muſt walke in this way, Ier. 6. 16. for it is not ſufficient to know the will of God, and to make profeſſion of religion, but we muſt put in practiſe the things which we know. And laſtly, we muſt be circumſpect to keepe our ſelues in the right way. Hag. 1. 5. Set your hearts on your waies: Pſal. 119. 59. I conſidered my waies, and turned my feete vnto thy teſtimonies.

II. Charge.

How to get courage againſt the ſtraitnes of the way.

D The ſecond charge in this commandement is, that when we walke in the way to life, the ſtraitnes of the way muſt not diſcourage vs from going forward therein. This is the principall point intended by our Sauiour Chriſt in this commandement, euen to arme vs with courage and perſeuerance againſt afflictions, croſſes, and temptations, which might diſmay and daunt vs in this way. And in this charge we are taught ſundrie weightie duties to be practiſed in the profeſſion of Chriſts true religion.

1. Dutie.

I. Dutie. That we are not to giue to our ſelues the libertie of heart which nature deſireth in all of vs; but we muſt reſtraine our ſelues thereof, and bring our minds, our thoughts, affections, our wills, ſpeeches, and actions into the ſtraits of the word of God. This reſtraint of our naturall deſire is two-fold: by the Lawe, and by the Goſpel. In the Lawe euery commandement miniſtreth his particular reſtraint, as wee ſhall ſee in their order.

ow the w reſtrains ur naturall eſires.
. Commandement.

The firſt Commandement concernes the hauing of the true God for our God. By nature we take liberty to our ſelues to conceiue of God at our owne pleaſure: for commonly men conceiue of God out of the Trinitie, and worſhip the perſons one without an other: the Iewe, the Turke, and all the heathen will not be reſtrained of this libertie: but the people of God who ſubmit themſelues to his word, they by this lawe are reſtrained of this naturall deſire, and are taught to chooſe and haue to themſelues the true God for their God; and to conceiue aright of this God; namely, that he is one in eſſence and three in perſon, and that the perſons muſt bee worſhipped in the vnitie of the godhead: for as they are one in nature, ſo we muſt vnite them in one and the ſame worſhip. Againe, by nature we take libertie to our ſelues to forget the true God, and in our own hearts do ſet vp a falſ god vnto our ſelues: ſome make riches their God, ſome honours, ſome pleaſures: for look wheron a man beſtows his heart & his affections, as his loue, his feare, and confidence, that he makes his god: & hence it comes that ſome in iudgement hold the true God, and yet haue a falſe god vnto themſelues in their hearts: but the firſt commandement reſtraines vs of this libertie alſo: and it inioynes vs to beſtow our whole heart, and all our affections on the true God; louing, fearing, and truſting in him aboue all. Thirdly, our nature is to exalt our ſelues, & to aſcribe ſomething vnto our ſelues, eſteeming the good things that be in vs, as of our ſelues; and as though they were our own: whereby we take to our ſelues ſomething that is proper to God, becomming like to the prodigall child which would haue his portion to himſelfe ſeuered from his father. With this naturall pride was Dauid puffed vp, when hee numbred the people. But the firſt commandement reſtraines vs of this alſo, preſcribing vnto vs the dutie of inward adoration; which we performe, firſt, when we giue vnto him all the honour that wee can, eſteeming our ſelues but duſt & aſhes, and aſcribing vnto him all the good that is in vs, as from him: ſecondly, when we ſubiect our ſelues vnto him wholy as to our creatour, and doe ſubmit our hearts, wills, and conſcience to his holy word: and theſe be the ſtraite waies, which this commandement preſcribes vs.

The ſecond Commandement concernes Gods outward worſhippe: and it puts vnto vs many reſtraints. Our nature deſires to conceiue of God in ſome forme, and to repreſent him in ſome image; but the Lord is a ſpirit, and this commandement inioynes vs to worſhip him in ſpirit and truth, & to conceiue of him in his works and properties reſtraining our naturall deſires of conceiuing and repreſenting God. Secondly, it is our nature to perform outward worſhip vnto God onely; but for any further thing we would take libertie to our ſelues; we would giue him onely the outward bodily worſhip, as come to church, heare the word, pray outwardly, and receiue the Sacraments; but the Lord in this commandement giues vs charge, that with as great care and conſcience, we would giue vnto him the inward worſhip of the heart; for God muſt be ſerued with the whole man, but loue, and feare, and truſt in God, muſt be conformable to our outward worſhip. Further, euery man almoſt can be content to profeſſe religion, and to performe ſo much as the laws of his countrie require for the ſeruice of God; but yet they would take liberty in their callings, to liue as they liſt: but Gods commandement reſtraines this deſire alſo. We muſt hold religion not onely in the Church, but alſo ſhewe the ſame in our liues and conuerſations; and therefore is the ſecond table ioyned with the firſt, to teach vs that we muſt performe duty to God in the ſeruice of man.

The third commandement concerns the holy vſe of the holy things of God, eſpecially of his word and Sacraments. Now for the outward worke of hearing the word, and receiuing the Sacraments, we are content to performe them; but we would haue God thinke himſelfe ſatisfied by the worke done. But this commandement reſtrains vs of this deſire, inioyning vs not onely to vſe his holy things, but alſo in an holy manner, that is, with repenting and beleeuing hearts: for they are not holy to vs vnleſſe wee vſe them in and by faith and repentance. Againe, wee take libertie to vſe Gods name in oathes, and ſpecially in vowes, as in baptiſme, which we renue when we come to the Lords table: but herin we ordinarily abuſe this his holy name, not hauing like care to make good our vowes vnto God, as we haue to make them.

the 4.Com.

The fourth Commandement concernes the time of Gods worſhippe: wee our ſelues would haue all times in our owne diſpoſing, and wee thinke it hard to be reſtrained of any time; but this commandement reſtraines vs of this deſire, binding vs in conſcience to giue one day in ſeauen to the honour of God in his publike and ſolemne worſhip.

the 5.Com.

The fifth Commandement concernes the giuing of honour and reuerence to Superiours: and it reſtraines vs of our natural deſire, which is to ſeeke for, & to take honour vnto our ſelues alone: for this inioyneth vs to giue honour one to an other, eſpecially to them to whom it belongs, as to all ſuperiours in authoritie, in gifts, or age: let this be your honour ſaith Paul, to giue honour to whom it belongs, Rom.13.7.

the 6.

The ſixt Commandement concerneth murther; & it reſtraineth our naturall deſire, which is vpon ſmall occaſion to conceiue malice and to beare grudging againſt our brother, forbidding all thoughts, words, deeds, and geſtures, which tend to the impairing or deſtroying of our neighbours life and perſon.

Reſtraints in the 7.Com.

The 7. Commandement concerneth chaſtitie: and it reſtraines mans nature, which deſires to take libertie in vncleannes and fornication both of heart and life: and it bindes vs to abſtaine from all ſpeech, action, or geſture, which tends to the hinderance of our owne, or of our neighbours chaſtity: for God is holy and pure, & ſo ought our bodies and minds to be, which are temples of his bleſſed ſpirit.

Reſtraints in the 8.Com.

The eight commandement concernes our neighbours goods: and it reſtraines our corrupt nature, which deſires to haue libertie by all meanes good and bad to inrich our ſelues. And it inioyneth vs both in will and word, and in trafficke alſo, to ſeeke the common good, and the good of thoſe with whom we liue. Againe, this alſo reſtraines our naturall deſire of abundance, inioyning vs to ſeeke onely for neceſſaries, as food, and raiment: for we may not ſeek to be rich, yet if God giue vs more then things neceſſarie in the labours of our calling, thẽ we are to bleſſe God for them, and to vſe them to his glorie: this is a ſtraite way to the worldly man, but it muſt ſtand, and we muſt walke in it, if we would enter into life.

Reſtraints in the 9.Com.

The ninth Commandement concernes our neighbours good name: and it reſtraines vs of our naturall deſire, which is to conceiue and ſpeake vnto others, as alſo to receiue from others, euill report of our neighbour: and on the contrarie it inioynes vs, by all good meanes to ſeeke to preſerue our neighbours good name and credit.

Reſtraints in the 10.Com.

The tenth Commandement is touching luſt. When as we hurt no man in word or deed, thẽ we take it for graunted, that wee may thinke what we will, no lawes reſtraine thought; that we hold to be free. But this Commandement reſtraines the very firſt motions of our hearts, which tend to hurt our brothers life, chaſtitie, goods, or good name, though they neuer come into practiſe, yea though we neuer giue conſẽt of will thereto. And theſe are the reſtraints of the Law, whereto we muſt conform our ſelues, if we would enter into life.

Reſtraints of mans deſires by the Goſpel.

Now followe the reſtraints of the Goſpel, which is a part of Gods word touching remiſſion of ſinnes & ſaluation. By nature we deſire to ſtand vpright and righteous before God by ſome good thing in our ſelues: as the rich man in the Goſpel, he demaunds of Chriſt, What good thing ſhall I doe to be ſaued? Againe, it is our nature not to looke to be ſaued by any thing out of our ſelues; if we haue nothing elſe, our good meaning & good hope muſt ſaue vs: but the Goſpel reſtraines vs of theſe deſires, and inioyneth vs to renounce our ſelues in the matter of ſaluation, and all that is in vs: and to depend on a righteouſnes out of our ſelues in the perſon of Chriſt, which is his obedience and ſuffering. Againe, wee naturally deſire to enioy Gods mercie by ſenſe and feeling; but the Goſpel reſtraines vs of this kind of aſſurance, which comes by ſenſe and feeling, and inioyns vs to hold and keepe Gods mercy by beleeuing onely, both in life and death, though we haue no ſenſe thereof at all.

Matth.19.16.

Further, the Goſpel renues the lawe for the manner of louing: for the morall lawe required that wee ſhould loue another as wee doe our ſelues, but the Goſpel requires vs to loue one an other, as Chriſt loued vs; which is a greater meaſure of loue then the lawe required. For Chriſt loued vs more then himſelfe: for he gaue himſelfe for vs: and ſo ought we to loue euen our enemies. And thus we ſee how the Goſpel alſo reſtraines vs from following our owne naturall deſires, and enioyneth vs to walke in the narrowe way to life: whereto, as alſo to the reſtraints of the lawe, we muſt apply our ſelues, our thoughts, words, and deedes: ſo doing we walke in the ſtraite way that leadeth vnto life: but if we any way exempt our ſelues according to our naturall deſire frõ any of theſe reſtraints we then walke in the broad way that leadeth to deſtruction.

Suffer affli ction pa ently.

II. Dutie. Seeing we muſt be content with the ſtraitnes of the way, we learne, that when God layes any croſſes or afflictions vpon vs, we muſt not repine or grudge, but beare the ſame with patience, and ſuffer God to breake vs of our owne wills, reſting contented in our ſelues with the wil of God alone: for this is grace and a ſure teſtimonie that wee walke in the ſtraite way to life.

Our dutie in profeſſi of the tru

III. Dutie. In the caſe of confeſſion and profeſſion of true religion, when we be called thereto, we muſt be content to forſake goods, friends, yea and life it ſelfe, rather then by inioying them ſuffer our ſelues to be driuen out of this ſtraite way to life: my life (ſaith Paul) is not deare vnto me, ſo that I may fulfill my courſe with ioy, Act.20.24.

Laſtly, whoſoeuer is puffed vp with the pride of his own heart, is too ſtately to ſtoope vnder the ſtrait doore that leadeth to the way of life: he therefore that would walke in this ſtraite way, muſt caſt away all pride of heart, and humble himſelfe for his owne ſinnes, making himſelfe nothing in himſelfe: Matth.18.3,4. Except you be conuerted and become as little children (who are not proud and hawtie) yee cannot enter into the kingdom of heauen: But he that humbleth himſelfe as this little child, the ſame is the greateſt in the kingdome of heauen.

III. Charg Striue to en ter.

The third charge giuen vs by our Sauiour Chriſt concerning the ſtraite way of life is noted by Saint Luke; that wee muſt ſtriue to enter into it. From whence wee are taught, that our principall care muſt be aboue all things to come into the way of life euerlaſting, ſo much the word ſtriuing imports. It is ſaide, that when Iohn firſt preached, the kingdome of heauen ſuffered violence, and the violent tooke it by force: that is, there was ſuch forwardnes and zeale in them that heard Iohn preach, to procure to themſelues the kingdome of heauen, that they ſtroue moſt earneſtly to get in. Dauid ſware vnto the Lord, and vowed a vow vnto the mightie God of Iacob, that hee would not enter into the tabernacle of his houſe, nor come vpon his bedde, nor ſuffer his eyes to ſleepe, till he had found a place for Gods Arke: where hee with the reſt of his people might come and pray vnto the Lord, and receiue anſwer from him againe. Now looke what zeale was in them that heard Iohn, and what care was in Dauid for the outward place of Gods worſhip, the like muſt be in euery one of vs for the obtaining of reconciliation and life euerlaſting.

ecuritie con- demned.

Vſes. I. Hereby many that liue in the Church of God may iuſtly be reproued: for a number there be that though they may partake of the word and Sacraments, yet are moſt negligent of their ſaluation, vſing no meanes to obtaine reconciliation with God, and to come by life euerlaſting: and this they doe profeſſe, that they will leaue all to God, relying wholly on his mercy without vſing any meanes on their parts to attaine thereto. But theſe men ſinne moſt grieuouſly, and are their owne deadly enemies; for they ought to conſider this commandemẽt, which condemneth their ſecuritie, and ſtraitly inioynes euery one, to ſtriue to come into the ſtrait way, and to walke therein.

easons to ine. . The dan- er of ſecu- ie. Iudg.16.29, .

And becauſe this dutie is ſo neceſſarie, I will vſe ſome reaſons to perſwade them hereto. I. Conſider this, when the Philiſtims were aſſembled, and had Samſon in the middeſt among them to make them ſport, if they had knowne what hee was about to doe, when he leaned to the pillers of the houſe where they ſate, they would haue preaſed to the doores and windowes, and there haue ſtriuen to haue got out, becauſe of the imminent daunger that was vnto their bodily liues: well, all thoſe perſons that are cold in their profeſſion, and careles of religion, they haue the wrath of God hanging ouer their heads: and while they walke thus diſſolutely in the broad way, their condemnation ſleepeth not, but maks poſt haſt vpon thẽ: and if they continue and goe forward in this careleſſe courſe, they ſhall as certenly periſh in Gods wrath as the Philiſtims did by the hand of Samſon: and therefore as they deſire to ſcape damnation, ſo let them be carefull to caſt off this damnable ſecuritie.

e aſſurance f the peni- ce.

II. Reaſon. If an Angel from heauen ſhould come and aſſure vs from God that life euerlaſting did belong vnto vs; oh we would count it a bleſſed meſſage: well, looke when we turne from the broad way, and walke in the ſtraite way of life, we haue as good ſecurity for our ſaluation, as if an angel from heauen ſhould certifie vs thereof: for true repentance is an infallible note of a childe of God, to whome belongs the kingdome of heauen. The conſideration whereof ought to ſtirre vp all careles perſons to returne from their euill waies, and to ſtriue to come into this ſtrait way, and to walke therein vnto the ende.

Excuſes of ſecure perſons remoued.

And yet to enduce them further to this dutie, I will ſeek to take from them thoſe excuſes which they make to themſelues. Firſt, they ſay, God is mercifull, and therefore they will relie theron, & take no further care for their ſoules. Anſ. God indeed is mercifull: but his mercie is onely found of them that ſtriue to enter in at the ſtrait gate; as for thoſe that walke in the broad way it belongs not to them: Deut.29.19, 20. And if the righteous ſcarſely be ſaued, where ſhall the vngodly appeare, 1. Pet. 4.18.

2. Excuſe.

Secondly, they ſay, at leaſt in heart, that it is the eaſieſt matter in the world to come by life euerlaſting: if they can call on God when they are dying, al is well; and therefore they will not lend their outward eares to heare, nor applie their minds to conceiue and learne that which they may do by nature: and if they doe come to the congregation, yet it is for cuſtome, or for feare of puniſhment, not for conſcience. But theſe men deceiue themſelues, they conſider not what Peter ſaith, that the righteous ſhall hardly be ſaued; and what S. Luke addeth to this exhortation of Chriſt, that many ſhall ſeeke to enter into the doore of life, and ſhall not bee able; becauſe they neglected the time of grace, and vſed not good meanes in due ſeaſon.

3. Excuſe, from Gods predeſtination.

Thirdly, they make this common obiection, that either they are elect or reprobate: if they be elect, then let them liue as they liſt, they ſhall be ſaued: but if God haue eternally reiected them, though they liue neuer ſo religiouſly, yet they ſhall be condemned; and many deceiue themſelues with this reaſon. But they muſt know, that they iudge amiſſe of Gods decree; and the wickedneſſe of this reaſon may appeare by the like: God hath decreed the certaine tearme of euery mans life in this world, as well as his future eſtate after this life. Now if any man hereupon ſhould reaſon thus; If God haue decreed that I ſhall liue longer, then I ſhall ſurely liue: if he haue decreed that I ſhall liue no longer, then ſhall I ſurely die; for Gods decree muſt ſtand; and therefore I will neither eate, nor drinke, nor ſleepe, nor vſe meanes to preſerue my life: if any ſhould thus doe vpon this ground, would not al men iudge him to be a murtherer of himſelfe? And ſurely, he is no leſſe a murtherer of his ſoule, that vpon gods predeſtination, will take occaſion of libertie, to liue as he liſt; for Gods decree of the end includes the ordinarie meanes that bring thereto. Againe, they are to know, that there is a double will of God; his reuealed will made knowne in the word; and his ſecret or vnreuealed will, whereby he hath determined with himſelfe what ſhall be the eternal eſtate of euery perſon, which is not known vnto vs ordinarily, but by the euent. The reuealed will of God muſt be the rule of our obedience, and according to it muſt we frame and ſquare our liues; but his ſecret will we muſt honour, and reuerence, not making any rules from it, whereby to frame our liues. Now theſe perſons they leaue the written word, and betake themſelues to this vnreuealed will, and out of it will make rules how they will liue; but herein they ſinne greatly, in framing to themſelues new rules, leauing his word, whereby they ſhould order and guide their liues. Thirdly, I anſwer, that this reaſon hath in it a plaine falſhood; for they that are predeſtinate to life, are choſen to liue a godly life, in faith, repentance, and obedience, that they might be like to the image of his Sonne, Rom. 8. 29. And indeede, it is impoſſible that he which liues in wickedneſſe all his life long, and ſo dies, ſhould be ſaued; as alſo that hee which liues a godly life vnto the end, ſhould be condemned: for God hath decreed the meanes, as well as the ende.

The better ſort are ſlack in ſtriuing.

II. Vſe. This charge of Chriſt, for ſtriuing to enter in at the ſtraite doore, correcteth alſo a ſecond ſort of men, which are of the better ſort; for commonly the beſt men are too careleſſe in regard of this dutie of ſtriuing: & it may be ſaid of vs, as Chriſt ſaid of the Church of Laodicea, Reuel. 3. 15. Wee are neither hot nor cold: we ſtriue not to goe one before another in holy duties, worldly cares and pleaſures doe dull vs and make vs faint in this dutie of ſtriuing. But we muſt take heed of ſecuritie, and renue our obedience to this commandement, making this our principall care, to come to life eternall: and all worldly care muſt come vnder this; for conſider the fearefull iudgment that hangs ouer ſuch as are ſlacke in this dutie; it is deſtruction, as well as to thoſe that are prophane; becauſe thou art neither hot nor cold I will ſpue thee out of my mouth; for ſeeing that God continues his Goſpel vnto vs, we ought anſwerably to increaſe in knowledge, in faith, and in all obedience. Dauid profeſſeth that his heart brake in ſunder for the deſire that hee had to Gods iudgements alway, Pſal. 119. 20. We commonly ſpend our wit and ſtrength about worldly affaires, in matter of commoditie and delight: but Dauids practiſe ought to be a patterne vnto vs; for our chiefeſt ſtriſe muſt be to attaine eternall life.

V. 15. Beware of falſe Prophets, which come to you in ſheepes cloathing, but inwardly they are rauening wolues.

11. Part of Chriſts Sermon.

From this verſe to the twentieth is contained the ſixth part of this Chapter, and the eleuenth part of Chriſts ſermon, concerning the diſcerning and auoyding of falſe Prophets. And it hath an excellent dependance on the former point of exhortation; for hauing giuen commandement to walke in the ſtraite way, now like a carefull guide hee forwarneth of the principall impediments in this way, which bee falſe prophets & ſeducers, who are like theeues and Pyrats to hinder vs in this way. Touching them three things are here ſet down by Chriſt; Firſt a commandement, to beware of them: Secondly, the danger that comes by them, they come in ſheepes cloathing, but inwardly they are rauening wolues: and thirdly, the meanes whereby to iudge and diſcerne of them; from the 16. verſe to the 20.

What ma a falſe Pro phet.

For the commandement: Beware of falſe Prophets; that is, of falſe Teachers. In a falſe Teacher two things are required; Firſt, hee muſt maintaine ſome errour that ouerturnes true faith and religion: for euery erroneous opinion which a man holds will not make him a falſe Prophet, but onely a fundamentall errour. Secondly, beſides the holding of ſome damnable errour in his owne heart, a falſe Prophet muſt alſo be a ſeducer, ſuch a one as labours to make a faction, withdrawing men from true religion, and from true faith, and perſwading them both in priuate and publikely, to receiue his errour. And that both theſe are required to make a falſe Prophet, the Scripture is plaine; There ſhall be falſe Teachers among you (ſaith S. Peter) which priuily ſhall bring in damnable hereſies, 2. Pet. 2. 1. There is the firſt propertie: and for the ſecond, that they muſt be ſeducers, Chriſt himſelfe teacheth vs Matth. 24. 24. There ſhall come falſe Chriſts, and falſe Prophets, and ſhall ſhew great ſignes and wonders, ſo as if it were poſſible, they ſhould deceiue the very elect. And of both theſe properties ioyntly S. Paul ſpeaketh, Rom. 16. 17. I beſeech you brethren, marke them diligently which cauſe diuiſion and offences, contrary to the doctrine which yee haue receiued, and auoyde them; for they that are ſuch, ſerue not the Lord, but their owne bellies, and with faire ſpeech and flattering deceiue the hearts of the ſimple.

The meaning.

So then Chriſts meaning in this commandement is this, You ſhall be troubled with many falſe Prophets, which ſhall bring in damnable doctrines amongſt you, and withall labour to ſeduce you from the truth, and therefore take heed of them.

Falſe Prophets diffe from ſchiſmatikes.

And theſe two notes we muſt marke in a falſe Teacher, to diſtinguiſh him from a ſchiſmatike, and from an hypocrite; for euery falſe Teacher is a ſchiſmatike, but euery ſchiſmatike is not a falſe Teacher. If we would haue examples of falſe Teachers, behold the Ieſuites and Romiſh Prieſts; for they come among vs and bring falſe doctrine with intent to deceiue and ſeduce our people. Such likewiſe are the Family of loue, and ſuch were the Arrians in times paſt, that denied the godhead of Chriſt; as for others that hold priuate errours, not raſing the foundation, nor ſeeking to ſeduce others, they may be hypocrites, ſchiſmatikes, and bad Chriſtians; but they are not falſe Prophets. Thus much for the meaning of the commandement.

Ieſuits and Prieſts are falſe Teachers.

Familiſts and Arrians.

Satans ma lice againſt the Church.

The Vſes. 1. By this caueat Chriſt would teach vs, that the deuill ſhewes his exceeding great malice againſt Gods Church & people in in theſe laſt times of the world; he ſubornes falſe Teachers to bring in damnable doctrine, and mooues them to ſeduce men from true religion; This thing Chriſt did plainely foretel, Mat. 24. 24. and Saint Paul chargeth the Elders of Epheſus, to take heede vnto themſelues and to their flockes: for I know (ſaith he) that after my departing ſhall grieuous wolues enter in among you, not ſparing the flocke. Moreouer, of your owne ſelues ſhall men ariſe, ſpeaking peruerſe things to drawe Diſciples after them. And Saint Peter foretells of the like, as we heard before, 2. Pet. 2. 1. The truth hereof is verefied by experience; for in the firſt foure hundered yeares, after Chriſt, which were the prime and chiefeſt times of the Church, there aroſe fourescore and eight ſeueral kinds of falſe prophets, which ſeduced men from the faith and true religiō, & preuailed greatly. And no doubt in the end of the world Satan wil now ſhew his malice as great againſt the Church, as hee did then: and therefore Chriſt bids take heed of them And for this cauſe, when we ſee men that profeſſe religion, fall away to hereſie, and be corrupted, ſeeking alſo to ſeduce others, we muſt not much maruell at it, or be thereby diſcouraged; but rather watch more carefully, for the deuill will ſtirre vp falſe Prophets daily to deceiue the Church of God.

II. Inſtruction. From this commandement we may alſo ſee, that we are feeble, full of weakeneſſe in the faith, ſo as a little thing will eaſily make vs forſake our faith and true religion; if this were not ſo, what ſhould we neede this exhortation? who was more couragious & forward in profeſſion then Peter? and yet the voice of a ſilly damſell made him denie his maſter, and ſo forſweare his faith and religion. The Galatians receiued the Goſpel ſo gladly from Paul at the firſt, that hee profeſſeth, they would haue pluckt out their owne eyes to haue done him good; and yet when hee writ vnto them, hee wonders they were ſo ſoone fallen to another Goſpel, receiuing the doctrine of iuſtification by workes. Yea, this ſheweth, that we haue itching eares, whereby we will readily and willingly receiue wholeſome doctrine for a time, but ſoone after, deſire new doctrine againe; like vnto the Iewes, who for a while delighted in the light of Iohns Miniſterie, Ioh. 5. 35. and to the old Iſraelites, who liked Manna at the firſt, but after a while weare wearie of it, and complained that their ſoules dried away, wherevpon they luſted after the fleſh-pots of Egypt againe. So we at the firſt did willingly receiue the Goſpel of Chriſt, but now many waxe wearie with it, and beginne to like of Popiſh doctrine, preferring their corrupt writers, before thoſe that haue beene the reſtorers of true religion vnto vs.

III. Inſtruct. We muſt labour to maine-taine faith, and good conſcience, and not ſuffer our ſelues to be drawne there-from: by Gods mercie we haue had the Goſpel of truth among vs a long time, and doe ſtill enioy it; for which we haue great cauſe to praiſe the name of God, & in this regard we muſt labour to be conſtant in holding it, yea to liue and die with it. This is the principal point which Chriſt here aimes at, and therefore we muſt carefully learne it: and for this purpoſe let vs remember theſe particular directions which follow. First, that God hauing reſtored vnto vs true religiō, doth require we ſhould loue it as the chiefeſt treaſure that euer this kingdome inioyed. Wicked Ahab could not abide Elias [a] and [b] Michaiah Gods true Prophets, but hated them; for which cauſe God left him to himſelfe, & ſuffered him to be ſeduced by foure hundred falſe Prophets of Baal, and therby brought him to deſtruction. And the Apoſtle ſpeaking of the kingdome of Antichriſt, ſaith, that God therein giues men vp to ſtrong illuſions that they ſhould beleeue lies, becauſe they haue not loued the truth, 2. Theſſ. 2. 10. 11. Now this loue we muſt ſhewe by our obedience in duties of pietie to God, and in the exerciſe of iuſtice and mercie toward our brethren, elſe God will tranſlate his Goſpel from vs, and giue it to a nation that will bring forth the fruits thereof.

Directions to maintaine the truth.

[b] chap.22.8.

A ſecond rule to be obſerued for the maintaining of true religion is this: that miniſters eſpecially, and thoſe that intend that calling, ſhould highly eſteeme and reuerently account of thoſe men and their writings, which by Gods mercy haue beene the meanes to reſtore vnto vs, pure religion: for though they were men ſubiect to error, and in ſome things might ſlippe, yet they were the worthy inſtruments of Gods mercie, for the planting of his Goſpel among vs, which ſince their time hath beene ſealed with the blood of many Martyrs, in England Germanie, and elſe-where: in which regard, though we muſt onely depend on the pure word of God for certentie of truth, yet we are to giue much vnto them, and be followers of them, for the ſubſtance of religion, wherein they doe moſt ſoundly conſent in one truth. This I note, becauſe they begin to be in diſgrace with many, and corrupt Popiſh writers are farre better accounted of.

2. Rule. Reſtorers of religion ought to be had in account.

Thirdly, if any among vs doubt of any point in religion, let him doe theſe two things for his reſolution, which are the ordinarie meanes to knowe the truth; firſt, let him ſearch the holy Scriptures diligently, not by priuate ſtudie onely, but by conference with the godly. Secondly, let him in true humilitie of heart pray vnto God for the illumination of his ſpirit, whereby hee may in minde rightly conceiue of the truth, embrace it by faith in his heart, and honour it by obedience in his life; thus doing conſtantly, and in ſinceritie, he ſhall be ſure to be preſerued from error, both ſmall and fundamentall, and in due time ſhall know the truth; for the promiſe is, Aske and ye ſhall haue, ſeeke and ye ſhall finde, verſ. 12. and Saint Iames ſaith, If any man lacke wiſedome neceſſarie for his ſaluation, let him aske of God, vſing withall other

3. Rule. How to know the truth in religion.

Iam. 1. 5.

lawfull meanes to come thereby, and it ſhall be giuen vnto him. Hereto may be added this good helpe for ſatisfactiō in this caſe of doubting, namely, to haue recourſe to the generall confeſſion of reformed Churches; which may be had in that notable booke, The harmonie of Confeſſions: for although priuate men may erre, as alſo particular Churches, not onely ſeuerally, but ioyntly in ſome things in this world; yet the generall conſent of reformed Churches may be a good direction to the knowledge of the truth; and a good perſwaſion to conſtancie therein.

4. Rule.

Fourthly, we muſt keepe a good conſcience, if we would preſerue the truth and puritie of religion; for faith and a good conſcience go alwaies together, whereupon Saint Paul perſwading Timothie to this dutie, biddes him haue faith and a good conſcience, which ſome haue put away, and as concerning faith haue made ſhipwracke, 1. Tim. 1. 19. where a good conſcience is reſembled to a ſhippe which ſaileth ouer the ſea of this world, beeing laden with faith, that is, with true religion, and other ſpirituall graces needfull to ſaluation. Now if the ſhippe of our conſcience be crazie and vnſound, then is our faith and ſaluation in great danger: and therefore we muſt endeauour in all things to haue a cleare conſcience both towards God & towards men.

Society with falſe Prophets is vnlawfull.

IV. Inſtruct. This commandement of our Sauiour Chriſt, to beware of falſe Prophets, doth barre the church of God, and euery member thereof, from conuerſing with falſe Prophets, after they be conuicted to be ſuch. It was Eues fault to admit conference with the Deuill in the ſerpent, and all of vs feele the ſmart thereof at this day. It was Pauls counſell to the Romans, to marke them diligently which cauſed diuiſion and offences among them, contrarie to the doctrine which they had learned, and to auoid them; and Saint Iohn plainely forbids this ſocietie with them, 2. Epiſt. ver. 10. Receiue not him to thine houſe, neither bid him God ſpeede, that comes to teach you, and brings not this doctrine: yea, though wee (ſaith Paul) or an Angell from heauen, teach you otherwiſe then that which we haue preached vnto you, hold him accurſed, Galat. 1. 8. In the hiſtories of the Church, it is recorded, that S. Iohn would not waſh himſelfe in the ſame bath wherein Cerinthus an heretike was waſhing himſelfe, nor bide vnder the ſame roofe, but leaped out and perſwaded others ſo to doe. And indeede by Eues example we may ſee the danger of conference with falſe Prophets; for the ſame euill ſpirit ſpeakes in them.

Delight in Popiſh writers vnlawfull.

Now this ſhewes, firſt, that the practiſe of many ſtudents is dangerous, and againſt this commandement, who take delight in Popiſh Commentaries and poſtils, aſcribing to them more learning and Iudgement, then can be found in thoſe writers that were the reſtorers of true religion vnto vs: and hence it is, that

A they labour more in them, then in the ſcripture it ſelfe, or in other ſound writers thereupon. But if there be any falſe Prophet at this day, it is the Papiſt, and their writings are dangerous to be read of thoſe that are not well grounded in the truth; for by reading we haue a kind of familiaritie with them, and indeed many ſucke out of them at vnawares, much venim in waightie points of doctrine and religion. We ought rather to doe with them, as the beleeuers of Epheſus did with their bookes of curious Arts; namely, bring them out and burne them, then take ſuch delight in them: albeit this muſt be granted, it is both lawfull and neceſſarie, for the defence of the truth, that men of ſound

B iudgement and pietie doe labour in them.

Act. 19. 1

Free ſale of hereticall books i dangerou

Secondly, hence it may alſo appeare, that it cannot but be a great hinderance to true religion, that hereticall books may be publikely ſold to any one that will buie them, without due conſideration whether the partie haue gifts to diſcerne of truth from falſhood: in the Popiſh Church they are more carefull, they permit not a man to read an heretikes booke (as they call vs Proteſtants) without leaue, and that vnder a great penaltie, which is ſeuerely inflicted vpon offenders that way.

Tolera of falſe gion v full.

V. Inſtruct. This commandement alſo ſhewes that it is not lawfull to graunt to any man, or to any people, the libertie of their own

C conſcience in the matters of religion, permitting them to profeſſe what religion they will; for how ſhould falſe Prophets be auoided, when euery man may freely profeſſe what he will in religion? All gouernours therefore muſt followe the practiſe of good King Ioſias, who aſſembled all Iuda, and cauſed all his people to heare the word of the Lord, and to ſtand to that religion which the booke of God made knowne vnto them. 2. Chro. 34. 32.

To ſepa from Ro no ſchiſ

V. Doctr. We haue from this commandement, an anſwer to the falſe charge of the Church of Rome, who accuſe vs of ſchiſme & apoſtacie, because we ſeparate frō their church. But we muſt knowe, that the ſchiſme and apoſtacie is there where the cauſe of departing is, which indeede is not in vs, who doe no more

D herin but obey this commandement of Chriſt: the cauſe is in them, who are become falſe Prophets, whom we muſt auoid.

Whether falſe Pro phet ſhou be put to death.

Here yet two queſtions may be demanded: I. Whether a falſe Prophet may be put to death ſeeing Chriſt bids onely to beware of them? Anſwer, Chriſt here ſpeakes to his Apoſtles, and to other of his auditors, that were priuate men, whoſe duty raught no further, but yet the truth is, that a falſe Prophet beeing iudicially conuicted, is to be put to death: the word of God elſewhere is plaine, Leuit. 24. 14. there is both a commandement and a practiſe, Euery blaſphemer muſt die. This wicked Ieſabel knew well, who vnder pretence of blaſphemie cauſed Naboth to be put to death: and hereupon the Iewes ſought to put Chriſt to death.

1. King. 2 10. 13.

an.3.29.

Yea, Nebuchadnezzar an heathen king, hauing but a taste of this, that the God of Iſrael was the true God, made this lawe, that whoſoeuer blaſphemed the God of Iſrael ſhould die. And it ſtands with equitie, for he that reuiles his lawfull Prince muſt die, and that iuſtly; how much more then ought hee to die, that blaſphemes the liuing God, who is king of kings? Now euery falſe Prophet is a blaſphemer; for his opinions are blaſphemies againſt the truth of God: and therefore he ought to die. The expreſſe will of God herein is manifeſt, Deut. 13. begin. A Prophet comes and workes miracles, and ſhewes ſignes that come to paſſe, yet if he thereupon entice the people to idolatrie; hee muſt be ſlaine: and this is one way whereby the ciuill Magiſtrate muſt helpe the people to auoide a falſe prophet.

II. Queſt. Why doth God then ſuffer ſuch to liue in his Church, as doe ſeduce men? Anſ. For two cauſes; Firſt, that ſuch as hold the truth in ſinceritie, may be knowne, 1. Cor. 11. 19. Secondly, for the puniſhment of the wicked and vngodly, who receiue not the loue of the truth; to ſeduce them by ſtrong illuſions, and to cauſe them to beleeue lyes.

Theſſ.2. .12.

...nger of ...ſe pro... ...ts.

The ſecond point. The danger of falſe Prophets: They come in ſheepes cloathing, but inwardly are rauening wolues. In theſe words Chriſt alludeth to the practiſe of falſe Prophets in former times, who counterfeited the true Prophets in their attire; for the auncient Prophets were vſually cloathed in rough & courſe attire: Elias in regard of his garments, is called an hairie man, 2. King. 1. 8. and Iohn Baptiſt had his garment of Camels haire, Matth. 3. 4. And the falſe prophets did counterfeit the true Prophets in their attire, for this ende; that they might the more eaſily deceiue the people; as is moſt plaine, Zach. 13. 4. where the Lord ſaith of falſe prophets, that they ſhould weare a rough garment to deceiue: for when they woare ſuch courſe attire, made either of ſheepe ſkinnes, or ſheepes wooll, wherewith the true Prophets were vſually cloathed, they ſought hereby to perſwade the people, that they had the hearts of the true Prophets; when as indeede they were full fraught with damnable errours. Now Chriſts meaning in this alluſion, is to ſhew that falſe prophets haue plauſible pretẽces for their damnable doctrine, and therefore are the more dangerous. Yet that wee may the better perceiue the danger of falſe prophets, I will a little ſtand to deſcribe their cloathing; that is, their pretences of deceit. They may be reduced to ſeauen heads: the firſt is allegation of Scripture, which they will as often vſe as the true Prophet; and hereby they blind the eyes of many. But the truth is, that in alleadging Scripture, they depraue and change the ſenſe, and either adde to, or detract from the words, following rightly their maſter Satan, Matth. 4. 6. who alleadged Scripture to Chriſt, but left out the principall point whereto the promiſe was made; namely, walking in thy wayes. And thus deale the Papiſts at this day, ſometimes they mangle the text, and alter the ſenſe; ſometimes they leaue the Scripture and goe to traditions, to Councels, and Fathers. This alſo is the practiſe of the familie of loue, and of the Anabaptiſts, who turne the naturall ſenſe of Scripture into myſticall allegories.

.Pretences ...falſe pro... ...hets. .Allegation ...f Scripture.

2. Deepe learning.

The ſecond cloake of pretence, is the depth of their learning. Reu. 2. 24. the hereſie of the Nicolaitans was by themſelues called profound learning, but by the holy Ghoſt, the deepeneſſe of Satan. So play the Papiſts at this day, for ſundrie points of their religion; for they hold, that becauſe the Church in the Apoſtles time was weake in knowledge, and feeble in faith, therefore the Apoſtles omitted ſundrie deepe points, eſpecially concerning the maſſe, which yet the Church receiuing by tradition, doth now teach plainely and fully. But though they match theſe doctrines of the Church with the holy Scripture, yet we need not to trouble our ſelues therewith; for in the writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles, all things neceſſarie to ſaluation are made knowne, and we muſt not receiue any doctrine that cannot be confirmed thence; and therefore in the parable, Luk. 16. 3. Abraham preferres Moſes and the Prophets before viſions and reuelations from the dead.

Rhem. on Heb 5. ſect. 8.

Concil. Trid. ſeſſ.4. decr. 1.

3. Goodly titles.

The third cloake and pretence. To aſſume to themſelues the perſons and titles of moſt worthie men: 2. Cor. 11. 13. Paul ſpeakes of ſuch deceiuers that tooke to them the name of the Apoſtles of Chriſt, therein following their maſter Satan, who can transforme himſelfe into an angel of light. See this in the Papiſts, eſpecially in the Pope, who will be Chriſts vicar, Peters ſucceſſour, and the ſeruant of ſeruants. The doctors call themſelues Ceraphicall and Angelicall doctors, and the Church of Rome muſt be the true Church: but all this is but counterfeit deceipt, for ſucceſſion in place onely, from Peter, and from Chriſt himſelfe, is no certen note of truth. The Scribes and Phariſies had their ſucceſſion from Aaron appointed by God, and yet Chriſt bids his diſciples take heed of the leauen of their doctrine, Matth. 16. 12. and calls them the blinde leaders of the blind. Succeſſion then in true doctrine, is the only & ſure note of true religion.

4. Fained humilitie. Coloſſ. 2. 18. and 23.

The 4. cloake or pretence, is forged & counterfeit humilitie: this Paul notes in falſe Apoſtles among the Coloſſians; Firſt, they would not worſhip God directly, but in and by the Angels: Secondly, they vſed much bodily exerciſe, afflicting their own bodies: and thirdly, their worſhip was wil-worſhippe, deuiſed by themſelues. If we would haue a liuely example hereof, behold the Romiſh prieſts; they com to God in the mediation of Saints; their whole religion ſtands in bodily exerciſes, ſo as many of their orders are famous for their whippings & ſuch like trumperie, and their worſhip of God is wil-worſhip, deuiſed by men.

5. Working miracles.

The 5. pretence is, working miracles: hereby they labour to confirme their doctrin, 2. Theſſ. 2. 9. The comming of Antichriſt that man of ſinne is with ſignes & lying wonders, through Satans working, and of ſuch God forewarnet his people, Deut. 13. that they ſhould not bee drawne to Idolatrie for a miracle; for either they be falſe miracles, and lying wonders, or if they be true miracles (as God may ſuffer ſuch to be wrought by falſe Prophets, for the plague and puniſhment of the vnthankefull world) yet their ende is to deceiue, and to drawe men into errour from the truth. We haue ordinarie experience of this pretence amoug the Romiſh Prieſts, who by ſorcerie caſt out deuils, and cure ſtrange diſeaſes, and ſo delude the ſimple: but this muſt not drawe vs from the truth. A miraculous worke truely done, is not a ſufficient warrant of a doctrine in religion; for true and ſound doctrine may want this confirmation, Ioh. 10. 41. and falſe doctrine may haue it, as Deut. 13. 1, 2. &c.

6. Faire ſpeeches.

The 6. pretence, is faire ſpeeches and bleſſings, pretending the good and ſaluation of thoſe to whome they come: ſee this Rom. 16. 18. With faire ſpeech and flattering (ſaith Paul of falſe Apoſtles) they deceiue the hearts of the ſimple: So dealt Satan with Eue, he made ſhewe that hee had ſome good thing to tell her, whereby their ſtate might be bettered, but it turned to theirs and our deſtruction. So did the fowre hundred falſe Prophets of Baal, contrarie to the true Prophet Michaiah, propheſie good ſucceſſe to Ahab in his warre againſt the Aramites; but his harkning to them coſt him his life. And ſo dealt Hanany with the Iewes, when they were beſieged by the King of Babels armie, contrarie to Ieremies counſel, he propheſied peace and ſafetie: but it turned both to his owne and to their deſtruction, Ier. 28. 1, 2. &c.

1. King. 22. 6.

7. Boldneſſe in ſuffering.

The 7. pretence, is boldneſſe and conſtancie in ſuffering for their opinions: for a man in obſtinacie may liue and die for errour, as well as the child of God may doe for the truth. Conſtancie in opinion is no ſure note wherby to iudge a true Prophet; for many heretikes haue ſuffered death confidently for the maintenance of their damnable hereſies.

Thus we ſee the pretences of falſe Prophets: now hereto we muſt adde this ſecond point, to wit, that for all this they be but wolues, becauſe by their damnable doctrine, they ſeek to poiſon and corrupt the ſoules of ſimple men. If it be ſaid, they haue no ſuch intent, they thẽſelues thinke it to bee the truth: I anſwer, that may be true in ſome, but this cleareth them not from beeing wolues: for the deuill that hath deluded them, who is their Lord and maſter, doth by them dangerouſly delude and deceiue the ſimple.

Be wiſe as ſerpents.

The Vſe. 1. Conſidering this danger of falſe Prophets, we muſt practiſe Chriſts leſſon, Mat. 10. 16. Be ſimple as doues, that is, bee innocent and harmeleſſe, thinking euill of none, neither intending euill or offence to any, in thought, word, or deede: and yet we muſt be wiſe as ſerpents, who haue great ſubtiltie in ſauing and defending their head from harme: ſo muſt euery one that lookes to be ſaued, labour for ſo much wiſedome, whereby he may preſerue himſelfe from the hurt of falſe prophets. Now the beginning of this wiſdome, is to feare God in his word, beleeuing his promiſes, and obeying his commandements. The true feare of God is not without knowledge; and therefore euery one muſt labour to be inſtructed in the principles of religion: for without knowledge we cannot feare God, and ſo ſhall want true wiſdome to eſchew falſe Prophets.

We muſt preſerue the puritie of the truth.

II. In that the falſe teacher by ſo many faire ſhewes ſeeke to bring in falſe doctrine, it is euery mans dutie in his place to labour to preſerue wholeſome doctrine, and the puritie of true religion. This dutie is neceſſarie: for wee muſt be as forward for the truth, as the enemie is for falſhoode, and doe as much for God, as they doe for the deuill. Againe, no poyſon is more deadly to the bodie, then falſe doctrine is to the ſoule; therefore ſeeing God hath long bleſſed vs with his truth, let vs eſteeme it aboue all outward bleſſings, and by ſeeking to preſerue the puritie thereof, ſhew our ſelues thankfull to God for the ſame.

v. 16. Ye ſhall knowe them by their fruits; doe men gather grapes of thornes, or figges of thiſtles?

This verſe, and thoſe which follow to the 21. containe the third point which Chriſt laieth downe concerning falſe prophets; namely, the meanes whereby we may diſcerne and iudge of them. And herein he obſerueth this order; Firſt, he giues vs a notable rule to direct vs in iudgeging of falſe Prophets, Ye ſhal know them by their fruits. Secondly, he explanes the ſame rule by a ſimilitude drawne from trees; Doe men gather grapes of thornes, &c.

For the rule, that we may vnderſtand it the better, we are to ſearch what is meant by the fruits of falſe Prophets. A falſe Prophet muſt be conſidered two waies; Firſt, as he is a man taking vpon him the name and profeſſion of Chriſt, for ſo falſe Prophets vſe to doe: and ſecondly, as he is a falſe prophet: In both theſe reſpects he hath his fruits. As he is a man taking vpon him the profeſſion of Chriſts religion, hee may bring forth many outward duties of externall obedience vnto the morall law; but theſe fruits are not here meant: for a falſe Prophet may diſſemble much, and goe farre in the outward duties of religion, ſo as he cannot be diſcerned by his generall profeſſion, or by the workes of his ciuill conuerſation. There be other fruits which come from him as he is a falſe prophet; and by them muſt he be diſcerned: theſe therefore are to be conſidered. Now we ſhall know them the better by ſearching out the fruits of a true Prophet, as he is a man of God appointed to teach Gods people.

uits of a ue Pro- het.

The fruits of a true Prophet be principally three: I. He teacheth and preacheth in the name of God by vertue of calling from God, and otherwiſe dares not preſume to teach: Rom. 10. 14. How ſhall he teach vnleſſe he be ſent: and the author to the Hebrewes ſaith, Chriſt tooke not the honour of beeing the high Prieſt and Prophet of the Church to himſelfe: but was called thereto by his Father, Heb.5.5. And this ſtands with reaſon, for euery true Prophet and teacher ſtands in Gods roome, and is Gods embaſſadour to deliuer his wil to his people; which thing none can do but he whom God calleth and ſendeth for that purpoſe. Yet the calling of Prophets and teachers by God is diuers. Some are called by voice from God immediately, as were Abraham, Moſes, and Samuel: and all the Apoſtles in the newe Teſtament by the immediate voice of Chriſt: for Paul was called by the voice of Chriſt from heauen, Act. 9.4, 5,6. Againe others haue their calling from God, by the ſpeciall meſſage of ſome Angel, or ſome men. Thus was Aaron called by Moſes; Eliſha by Elias; and Philip by an Angel to preach to the Eunuch, Act.8. 26. Thirdly, others be called by the inſtinct and motion of Gods ſpirit: ſo, Act.8. Philip was by ordinary calling a Deacon, but by extraordinarie inſtinct he became an Euangeliſt, and a preacher of the Goſpel for the building of Gods Church. Theſe three kindes of calling mē into the miniſterie ware extraordinarie, and are now ceaſed, and not to be looked for: neither are they to be regarded which ſay they are thus called at this day. A fourth way whereby God now calleth Prophets and teachers into his Church, is by his Church: for God hath giuen to particular Churches, a particular miniſteriall power and ſeruice whereby they may deſigne a place vnto the teacher, and alſo make manifeſt, that God hath called him. Now this authoritie is but miniſteriall, to deſigne and manifeſt whom God hath called, for the principall calling is from God: for Act.20. 18. the Elders of the Church of Epheſus, are ſaid to be made overſeers by the holy Ghoſt: when as they were deſigned thereto by men. And by one of theſe foure waies are all true Prophets and Teachers called.

d calleth ophets di- ly,

w the re- rers of ligion firſt ere called.

Here ſome may demaund, what kind of calling had they, who were the firſt reſtorers of true religion vnto vs in this our age, for they were by profeſſion either Popiſh Prieſts, or Schoole doctors. I anſwer: their calling was partly ordinarie, and partly extraordinarie: for in the miniſterie of a Prophet there bee two things; his office, and the vſing or exerciſe of his office. Our firſt miniſters that reſtored the truth vnto vs, had but an ordinarie office, being either Readers in Schools, or publike preachers: alſo they had their outward calling thereto, from the church of Rome, ſo as if there A be any part of good calling in that Church, the was their caling good; which may ſerue to ſtop the mouthes of all Papiſts, that carpe at our church, as though our miniſters had no calling. But for the vſing of their office, they were extraordinarily raiſed and ſtirred vp to doe that which they did, in regard of the manifold abuſes wherewith the miniſterie of the Church was generally corrupted in their time: for God gaue vnto them grace and knowledge to diſcerne to teach, and to maintaine the right and true vſe of the miniſterie. And that they were thus extraordinarily ſtirred vp by God, may appeare by the extraordinarie gifts and graces wherewith they were endued: for God that hath alwaies a care ouer his Church, when hee B saw the ſame ſo fearefully corrupted by Antichriſt did ſtirre vp theſe men to reforme the ſame: and beſides their ſingular gifts of knowledge and wiſdom, he gaue them extraordinarie graces of true pietie, whereby they were inabled to ſeale and confirme with their owne blood, the truth of that doctrine which they did profeſſe and teach, which was an euident argument they were called of God.

1. Note of a falſe Prophet.

Now oppoſite to this, we muſt make the firſt note of a falſe Prophet: namely, to come on his owne head, and to preach not beeing ſent. And by this marke are falſe Prophets noted, Ier.14. 14. I haue not ſent them, neither did I C command them — yet they propheцie in my name. And no leſſe doe theſe wordes of Chriſt import, when he ſaith here, they come vnto you, that is, of themſelues, without a calling from God, though they pretend a calling, which is one of their cloakes: and therefore by S. Iude, verſ.4. they are ſaid to creepe into the Church: as alſo Act. 20.29. grieuous wolues ſhall enter in among you, without calling from God, or from the Church.

2. Note of a true Prophet.

Here ſome may aske, how ſhall we iudge of ſuch, and know that they haue no calling? Anſ. For this purpoſe, I adde a ſecond note of a true Prophet, which is the moſt principall, and it ſtandeth in the right and wholeſome handling of the Scriptures of God. This is the proper fruit of a true Prophet, 1.Cor.14. 3. He that D prophecies ſpeakes vnto men edification, exhortation, and comfort: and 2. Tim. 2.15. Shewe thy ſelfe a good workeman, by diuiding the word of God aright: and 2. Tim.3.16, 17. the Scripture vſed in teaching, conuincing, correcting, and inſtructing vnto righteouſneſſe, ſerues to make a man fit to euerie good worke of a Prophet. Now this wholeſome handling of the word, ſtands in two things; in a right interpretation and opening of the true ſenſe of Scripture: and in a due and ſound collection of wholeſome doctrine from the ſame, for the edifying of the Church both in ſound iudgement, and Chriſtian life.

2. Note of a falſe prophet.

On the contrarie, the ſecond fruit of a falſe Prophet is, to deliuer and maintaine corrupt doctrine, contrarie to the wholeſome doctrine of holy Scripture: & by this principally he is to be knowne for a falſe Prophet, that intrudeth himſelfe. For the better conceiuing of this note, we muſt know, that in the doctrine of the Prophets & Apoſtles, there are two things principally to bee conſidered; the ſcope, and the parts thereof: the ſcope of all their doctrine tends to maintaine Chriſt Ieſus God and man, the alone perfect Sauiour of the Church. And indeede, hee which teacheth any doctrine tending to ouerthrowe Chriſt, either in regard of his natures, or of his offices, the ſame is a falſe Prophet: 1. Ioh 4.3. Euery Spirit that confeſſeth not that Ieſus is come in the fleſh, is not of God. The parts of Propheticall and Apoſtolike doctrine, are the commandements of the Law, and the promiſes of the Goſpel, and hee which ouerturnes, either directly, or by iuſt cōſequent, any commandement of the law, or article of faith, muſt needes be a falſe Prophet: ſo that a falſ Prophet muſt be tried by the analogie of faith, compriſed in the Articles of the Apoſtles creed, and in the Decalogue which containes the ſumme of all the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles; and he which goeth againſt them, is a falſe Prophet.

3. Note of a true prophet & of a falſe.

The third fruit of a true Prophet, is noted by our Sauiour Chriſt, namely, in his miniſterie to ſeeke Gods glory, Ioh.7.18. Where alſo he noteth out a falſe Prophet, who in teaching and preaching ſeeketh not Gods glorie, but his owne. The ſame note doth Paul giue, Phil. 3. 19. calling them earthly minded, ſeeking their owne honour, wealth, and glorie, and not the things of God: and, they ſerue not the Lord, but their owne bellies.

Rom.16.18.

Thus we ſee the notes of a falſe Prophet, among which the ſecond is the principal wherby he is to be tried, as we may ſee plainly, Deu. 13.4. If a falſe Prophet come, and worke a true ſigne, yet he muſt die; If by his falſe doctrine hee ſeeke to withdrawe Gods people from the true God. So when the Iewes asked Chriſt, by what authoritie he did thoſe things? that is, what warrant and calling he had to doe as he did; he anſwers them by an other queſtion, touching Iohns miniſterie; thereby ſhewing, that that which he did was warranted by the teſtimonie of Iohn, and Iohns teſtimonie was true, becauſe his calling was from God: and his calling hee iuſtifies, becauſe his doctrine (ſignified by his baptiſme) was from God. So Gal.1.8. He which teacheth otherwiſe then they had learned out of the Prophets from the Apoſtles, let him be accurſed, though hee were an angel from heauen. And thus much for the meaning of this rule.

Luk.20.2,3.

Durai Confut.reſp. Whitak.ad 10.rat.Cāp. p.70.

Vſe. 1. From this rule we haue to anſwer the Papiſts, and all popiſh perſons, who vſe to plead in defence of their religion, after this ſort; If our religion be falſe, ſhew vs the time when it was corrupted, the man that corrupted it, and the manner how it was corrupted; for once wee had the pure religion. Wee might anſwer them by the like, that a man might ſay as well of a ſhippe that is ſunke on the ſea, that it is not ſunke, becauſe no man can tell where, and when, and by what meanes it tooke water. But yet further we haue here to anſwer; that though wee knewe not when their religion was corrupted, and by whome, yet ſeeing their teachers and people haue in them and among them the neceſſarie fruites of Antichriſtian Prophets and people, wee can thereby aſſure our ſelues they are corrupt: and though wee cannot ſee the ſhadowe of the ſunne mooue, yet we may perceiue that it doth mooue. Now by their fruits it is cleare they bee corrupt; for they reuerſe the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles, both in the commandements of the Lawe, and in the Articles of faith; Firſt, they diſanull the firſt commandement, by making to themſelues other gods beſide the true God; for they [a] pray vnto Saints, and therein acknowledge a diuine proprietie in them, and alſo giue vnto them the honour due to God alone, and ſo ſet vp vnto themſelues the creatures in the roome of the Creator. The ſecond they reuerſe by worſhipping [b] God himſelfe, & dead men, in images, and Chriſt himſelfe in the crucifixe; yea, in a peice of [c] bread, wherein they match the groſſeſt idolatrie among the heathen: and the beſt learned among them teach, that the Rhoode, the [d] Croſſe, and Crucifixe, are to be worſhipped with the ſame worſhippe wherewith Chriſt himſelfe is worſhipped. In the ſixt Commandement touching murther, they condemne the killing one of an other, but yet if a Prieſt come from the Pope, and kill a Proteſtant Prince, the Lords annointed King or Queene, that is not onely no ſinne, but a [e] moſt notable, rare, and memorable worke. Againſt the ſeauenth Commandement they maintaine [f] the vowe of ſingle life neceſſarie in their religious orders; whereby, as alſo by their ſtues, they cauſe all filthineſſe and abhomination to abound among them. And for the tenth Commandement, they ſay [g] that concupiſcence after baptiſme is no ſinne properly. In the Articles of faith they ouerturne thoſe that concerne Chriſt, making him no Sauiour but a diuine inſtrument whereby wee ſaue our ſelues; for they [h] make mens good workes done by Gods grace, after the firſt iuſtification, truely and properly meritorious, add fully worthy of euerlaſting life. And his offices they haue parted from him; his kingly and propheticall offices, betweene him, and the Pope: and his Prieſthood betweene him and euery Popiſh Prieſt, as we haue ſhewed before: ſo that by theſe fruites we plainely ſee their apoſtacie, which is enough, though we knowe not when, and by whom it came.

Our church defended againſt the Browniſts.

2. Vſe. Here alſo wee haue to anſwer ſuch among our ſelues, as renounce our Church, as beeing no true Church of Chriſt; becauſe ſay they, wee want true Miniſters, and ſo haue not a right miniſterie among vs. But hence we anſwer, that wee haue the true Church of God, and our miniſters bee the true miniſters of God: for proofe hereof, our miniſters haue the outward calling of the Church of England: they ſay indeede, our calling is nought, becauſe they haue no power frō God to call, in whoſe hands it is. But to omit that queſtion for this time, ſufficient approbation of our miniſtery maybe had from the fruits of our miniſters, as they are miniſters; for to leaue the fruits of their liues, as inſufficient meanes to iudge them by, our miniſters teach through Gods bleſſing, the true and wholeſome doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles, and are allotted and called hereto by the gouernours of the Church, and accepted of their people, whoſe obedience to the faith is the ſeal of their miniſterie: and this is ſufficient to confirme the calling of our miniſters; if it had not, Chriſt would not haue ſaid, Yee ſhall know them by their fruits.

The people ought to be able to iudge of teachers.

3. Vſe. Whereas Chriſt ſaith, Yee ſhall know them, ſpeaking to all his hearers, he takes it for graunted, that euery beleeuer may be able to iudge of falſe Prophets; and therefore euery one in the Church of God ought to labour for ſo much knowledge, whereby hee may be able to know a Teacher by his fruits and doctrine. This then ſheweth, that euery one ought to know the ſumme of true religion, compriſed in the Articles of faith, and in the commandements of the law, both for the true meaning, and right and profitable vſe vnto themſelues: which thing I note, becauſe I know many deceiue themſelues herein, thinking that God will excuſe them for their want of knowledge, becauſe they are not booke-learned. But let vs conſider, we haue euery one this care, to be able to iudge of meates which concerne our bodies, which be wholeſome, and which not; ſhould we not then haue much more care of our ſoules, to be able to diſcerne of doctrins in religion, which be either the poiſon, or ſaluation of our ſoules?

We may vſe the miniſtery of wicked liuers.

4. Vſe. Whereas wholeſome doctrine out of Scripture is a note of a true Prophet, it teacheth vs that we may lawfully vſe the miniſterie of thoſe men, whoſe liues and conuerſations be euill and offenſiue, if ſo be their doctrine be ſound and good. The Diſciples of our Sauiour Chriſt muſt not doe according to the waies of the Scribes and Phariſies, but yet they muſt heare them when they ſit in Moſes chaire: that is, when they teach Moſes doctrine. And Paul is glad when Chriſt is truely preached, though it bee not in ſinceritie of affection, but of enuie. When the Diſciples ſawe a man that was not called by any ſpeciall calling to followe Chriſt as themſelues were, and caſt out deuils in the name of Chriſt, they thought it intolerable; and therefore forbad him; but Chriſt ſaid, Forbid him not, for hee that is not againſt vs, is with vs: And the like may be ſaid of them, that preach wholſome doctrine, though their liues be ſtill offenſiue: for in doctrine they be with Chriſt, and ſo farre-forth muſt be approoued.

Luk.9.50.

Againe, conſider that the vertue and efficacy of the word and Sacraments adminiſtred by men, is not from the Miniſter, but from God: a letter is not the worſe becauſe it is brought by an vnhoneſt or vnfaithfull carier. Neither doth the euill conſcience of the miniſter, defile the good conſcience of the honeſt hearer, and worthy receiuer. This muſt be remembred, becauſe many take offence at the life of the miniſter, ſo as they will not heare his doctrine, if his conuerſation be ſcandalous.

The maine dutie of ſtudents in Diuinitie.

V. In that a Prophet is to be knowne by his fruits, and the maine fruite of a true Prophet ſtands in the good handling of Gods word for the edification and ſaluation of his hearers; hence the children of the Prophets, and thoſe that are ſet apart for the miniſtery of the word, are taught, that they muſt make this the maine and principal ende of all their ſtuddies, to be able to bring forth the fruits of a true Prophet: that is, to interpret aright the word of God, and thence to gather out wholeſome doctrines and vſes for edification of Gods people. And for the enforcing of this dutie let vs conſider, firſt, that it is Gods commandement ſo to doe: 1. Cor. 14. 1. Seeke for ſpirituall gifts, but ſpecially to propheſie. Againe, the greateſt skill of a Prophet ſtands in the true expounding and right diuiding of Scripture, ſo as it may become food for mens ſoules. 2. Tim. 2. 15. Shewe thy ſelfe a workeman that needeth not to bee aſhamed, in diuiding the word of truth aright. And laſtly, this true fruite of a Miniſter ſerues to build vp Chriſts kingdome, to beate downe the kingdome of ſinne, and to feed the ſoules of men with the foode of euerlaſting life. It will be ſaid this courſe is good among the common people; but this is not the learning which is required in the handling of the word in the ſchooles of the Prophets. I anſwer, It is the greateſt learning that can be in a miniſter to be able thus to deuide the word of God aright: it goes beyond the gift of tongues and miracles, 1. Cor. 14. 1. 2. I denie not but that it is a part of learning vſed of the learned, to take a text of Scripture, and to make a ſcholaſticall diſcourſe vpon the ſame. But yet the worke of a Prophet ſtands rather in expounding Scripture by Scripture: & in diuiding the ſame aright, giuing thereout wholſome doctrine for the edifying of the people of God that heare. In former times when the ſtudie of Scripture was neglected, men betook thēſelues to expound the writings of men and ſo propheſie was baniſhed, and all ſound knowledge in the truth of God: and hence aroſe diuerſitie of opinions, and multitudes of fooliſh queſtions. And ſo will it be with vs if propheſie faile: for to leaue the right handling of Scripture is the way to bring in all errour & barbariſme in religion.

What commends a miniſter.

VI. Euery miniſter of the Goſpel is hereby taught that he ought to be anſwerable to his calling, walking worthy of the ſame: for a good miniſter is knowne by his good fruits, and therefore he muſt be faithfull in performing all thoſe duties which his calling doth binde him vnto. The titles and calling of a miniſter be high an excellent, but yet they will not commend any man for good vnleſſe he bring forth the fruits of a miniſter in the faithfull diſcharge of his miniſteriall duties.

Laſtly, here we muſt learne, not to take offence though the miniſter failes in his life and conuerſation, yea though there be contentions in the miniſterie about matters of Doctrine: for theſe are not the fruits of the miniſterie which is gods ordinance, but of ſinful men who bewray their imperfections in this holy calling.

Thus much of the Rule. Now followes the proofe and explication thereof, by a compariſon drawne from nature, in theſe words, verſ. 16. Doe men gather grapes of thornes, or figges of thiſtles: verſ. 17. So euery good tree bringeth forth good fruit, & a corrupt tree bringeth forth euill fruit, verſ. 18. A good tree cannot, &c. The compariſon ſtandeth thus; As a tree is knowne of euery one by his fruits, ſo is a Prophet by his teaching. More particularly, As a good tree brings forth good fruit, and cannot bring forth euill fruite: and as an euill tree brings forth euill fruit, and cannot bring forth good fruite: euen ſo a true Prophet teacheth wholeſome doctrine, and cannot teach falſe doctrine, and a falſe prophet teacheth falſe doctrine, and cannot teach true doctrine.

Touching this ſimilitude: firſt, obſerue in generall from the ground of this compariſon, that our Sauiour Chriſt here makes two kinde of trees: a good tree, and an euill tree: by an euill tree meaning that which in regard of any fruit is as a rotten tree, as is the briar, the thorne, and thiſtle: for though they liue and grow, yet they are voide of good fruit, and ſo are called euill. Now here it may well be demanded, whence this difference of trees doth come, for all were good by creation, Gen. 1. 31. God ſaw all that he had made, and loe it was very good. Anſw. Whether thornes or thiſtles were created of God I will not now diſpute: it is not certen that they were: but now it is plaine their remaines this difference among plants; ſome are good, ſome are bad: the goodneſſe that is in ſome comes from Gods bleſſing: but the badneſſe and barrenneſſe of others comes from the curſe of God vpon the earth, and vpon all creatures for the ſinne of our firſt parents, as we may ſee, Gen. 3. 17. 18. The earth is curſed for thy ſake: thornes alſo and thiſtles ſhall it bring forth vnto thee. And by this we may ſee the grieuouſnes of our mother ſinne, it hath made the earth barren and curſed, and many a goodly plant to become fruitleſſe, and vnprofitable: and therefore when we behold theſe things in the world, we muſt take occaſion hereof to conſider our owne ſinne, and blame our ſelues and not the creatures, for they were curſed for our ſakes.

How ſome trees becom euill.

Now more particularly: This compariſon is here ſpecially applied vnto Prophets: but if we compare this place with S. Luke, chap. 6. 44. and 45. we ſhall ſee the holy Ghoſt there reſtraineth not this ſaying to the prophets alone, but inlargeth the ſame vnto other men, ſaying, A good man out of the good treaſure of his heart bringeth forth good things, and an euill man out of the euill treaſure of his heart bringeth forth euill. Now by comparing theſe together, we may ſee that this compariſon reacheth both vnto Prophets and to all other men; from whence we may gather theſe inſtructions.

I. What we are to conceiue and thinke of a man that is not regenerate: we are all by nature branches of the wild oliue, and therefore as a thorne cannot bring forth a grape, nor a thiſtle figges; no more can a man vnregenerate bring forth a good worke. And this we may more plainely conceiue, if we conſider a little the workes of man: they may all be reduced to three heads: ſome are euill; as works forbidden of God; ſome are things indifferent, beeing neither forbidden nor commanded; and ſome are good workes, as outward duties of the morall law. Now for euill workes, they cannot poſſible be good in any man. For workes indifferent, as eating, drinking, buying, ſelling, &c. they are ſinnes, not in themſelues but in him that vſeth them beeing out of Chriſt: and for the outward duties of the morall law, as ciuill iuſtice, liberalitie, and ſuch like they are good workes in themſelues, becauſe God requireth them, but yet in the vnregenerate they are ſinnes: To the pure all things are pure: but to them that are defiled and vnbeleeuing is nothing pure, Tit. 1. 15. and, Without faith it is vnpoſſible to pleaſe God, Hebr. 11. 6. It will be ſaid, that liberalitie, chaſtitie, &c. be the good gifts of God: Anſw. That is true, and they be good workes as they are giuen and commanded of God: but as they are receiued and vſed of the naturall man, they are ſinnes: for he failes from the right vſe of thoſe actions; both for the beginning of them, (for they proceed not in him from a pure heart, a good conſcience, and faith vnfaigned) and ſo in the ende; he doth them not for the glorie of God ſimply, but withall he aimes at his owne praiſe and reputation, or ſome ſuch ſiniſter reſpect.

The ſtate of the vnregenerate.

The vſe of this doctrine is this: I. it teacheth vs to conſider and acknowledge the greatneſſe of our originall ſinne. Our naturall corruption is moſt grieuous and fearefull; it makes vs to ſinne in whatſoeuer things we doe, though in themſelues they be things indifferent or elſe good works.

The greatnes of originall ſinne.

II. This ouerthrowes the conceit of popiſh writers, which teach that God giues to all men an vniuerſall common grace or helpe ſufficient by which they may bee ſaued if they will: And for them which want the meanes of the word of God, they ſay, that if they vſe that common grace of nature well, God will giue them further grace whereby they may come to ſaluation. But here we ſee, a naturall man hauing a good gift of God cannot of himſelfe vſe it wel; the beſt things he doth, though they be good in themſelues, yet they be ſinnes in him.

Sauing grace is not vniuerſall. Bellarm. de grat. & lib. arb. l. 2. c. 5. Gab. Biel l. 2. diſt. 27. dub. 4.

he miſerie f the vnre- enerate.

III. Here alſo we may ſee what a miſerable caſe we are in while we remaine vnregenerate: for we can doe nothing but ſinne: we be like to thornes and thiſtles which either bring forth no fruit, or els bad fruit: and therefore we muſt labour to become new plants in Chriſts orchard, being ingraffed into him by faith, and made new creatures by regeneration, hauing beleeuing hearts and good conſciences, that ſo we may bring forth good fruits vnto the praiſe and glorie of God.

Good works llow iuſti- cation.

IV. We may hence learne a generall rule touching a righteous man; namely, that a man muſt firſt be truly iuſtified and ſanctified before he can doe a good worke: firſt, a tree muſt haue the ſappe and nature of a good tree, and then it brings forth good fruits, and not before. And this ouerturnes a point of naturall and Popiſh religion, that a man may be iuſtified and ſaued by his good workes: but that which followes cannot be a cauſe of that which went before: the fruit cannot make the tree to be good, but onely declare and manifeſt that it is good, from whence it comes that the fruit is good, and ſo good workes they proceede from iuſtification. They ſay iuſtification is twofold: one, whereby a man of an euill man is made a good man; the ſecond wherby of a good man one is made better; the firſt they ſay is of works, but the ſecond iuſtification is of grace. Anſ. But this is falſe: for the fruit makes not the tree a better tree, but if the tree increaſe in goodnes, it proceedes from ſome other cauſe, not from the fruit thereof.

V. 19. Euery tree that bringeth not forth good fruite, is hewen downe and caſt into the fire.

he puniſh- ent of falſe prophets.

These words containe a concluſion gathered from the former ſimilitude, which is here alſo continued; wherein is ſet downe a grieuous threatning of eternall damnation, the deſerued puniſhment of all falſe Prophets. As if Chriſt had ſaid; look as in an orchyard euery tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewen downe, and caſt into the fire to be burnt: ſo in the Church of God the falſe Prophet ſhall not alwaies be reputed for a true Prophet, but at the length ſhall be diſcouered, cut off from the Church, and condemned. Anſwerable to this is that ſaying of our Sauiour Chriſt, Euery branch which beareth not fruit in me, is taken away, caſt forth, and withereth, and men gather them, and caſt them into the fire and they burne. And Saint Peter ſaith, Their damnation ſleepeth not, 2. Pet. 2.3.

ohn 15.6.

Comfort againſt falſe prophets;

The vſe. I. This ſerues to comfort Gods children in regard of falſe Prophets, for though Gods Church be troubled with them for a time, yet it ſhall not alwaies be ſo: the time wil come wherein they muſt be caſt out, and receiue their due and deſerued deſtruction. And this eſpecially muſt be remembred, to ſtay and comfort our hearts in regard of the Popiſh religion which doth moſt of all moleſt and trouble vs: firſt, becauſe it is naturall, and ſo readily embraced: ſecondly, many among vs do much affect it; and thirdly, it is maintained by mighty Monarchs. But yet for all that it muſt downe, for it is a plant which God neuer ſet nor planted, Matth. 15. 13. and the cheife vpholders of it ſhall be deſtroied.

II. Vſe. This teacheth vs to eſchew and ſhun falſe teachers: and therefore doth Chriſt adde this exhortation, Matth. 15. 14. Let them alone, they are the blind leaders of the blinde: and Reu. 18. 4. Come out of her, (that is, ſpirituall Babylon which is Rome) my people, for if you partake with her in her ſinnes, ye ſhall ſuffer of her puniſhments.

III. Vſe. The words of this threatening being further applied vnto all men (as they are in S. Luke) doe teach vs, that it is not ſufficient for vs to abſtaine from cōmitting groſſe ſinnes, and to doe no man harme, but beſide eſchewing euill we muſt doe good. In the laſt iudgement, the ſentence of condemnation ſhall be pronounced againſt the wicked, not for robbing the poore, but for not releeuing of them, and for not viſiting and cloathing them. Which doth notably confute that vaine opinion of many ignorant people, who thinke, that if they liue an innocent and harmeleſſe life, God will hold them excuſed, and ſaue them; but the tree that brings not forth good fruit muſt be burnt.

Matth.25. 42-43.

verſ. 20. Therefore by their fruits yee ſhall know them. Here Chriſt repeats againe the Rule he deliuered in the 16. verſe, which ſhews, that it is a ſpeciall rule to be obſerued of vs all: for there is no idle word in Scripture, neither any thing repeated in vaine. The meaning thereof we haue heard: and the meanes whereby a falſe prophet may be diſcouered, with the vſes thereof: among which wee ſhewed that euery true beleeuer in Gods Church may be able to diſcouer a falſe prophet, whereto theſe three caueats muſt be added; I. The partie that would diſcouer a falſe prophet, muſt humble himſelfe before God, and haue an heart in ſome ſort emptied of all pride and ſelfe-loue; for the Lord will teach the humble his wayes, Pſal. 25. 9. yea, he doth exalt the humble and meeke, Luk. 1. 52. and in all things the humbled heart is preſerued with the Lord. II. The partie humbled muſt yeeld himſelfe to obey the will of God. If any man doe my fathers will, he ſhall know of my doctrine whether it be of God, Ioh. 7. 17. and Dauid profeſſeth of himſelfe, that hee was wiſer then his teachers, and vnderſtood more then the auncient, becauſe hee kept Gods commandements: Pſal. 110. 99. 100. III. He muſt pray vnto the Lord and aske wiſdome in faith, and in humilitie, and the Lord will giue it vnto him. Iam. 1. 5. If any man lacke wiſedome, let him aske of God who giueth liberally. Yet ſome will ſay, it is an hard matter to diſcerne a falſe prophet: I anſwer we haue ordinarily this capacitie, when we reade or heare read the laſt will and teſtament of our Anceſtors, we are able to conceiue and iudge of the meaning thereof: well, our Lord Ieſus hath left with vs his will and teſtament in the holy Scriptures; which concerning morall duties, and matters of faith neceſſarie to ſaluation is ſo plaine that it may be vnderſtood of the ſimpleſt, els Chriſt would neuer haue ſent the Iewes to the Scriptures for the certen knowledge of the Meſſias. Which notably diſcouers the fraudulent dealing of the Romiſh teachers, who in matters of controuerſie in religion, ſend vs for reſolution to the Church, calling it the ſtay and pillar whereto we muſt leane in all doubts of doctrines. The church I grant is to be reuerenced, but yet we muſt not build our faith vpon the doctrine of men. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſent the Iewes vnto the Scriptures: and hereby the Bereans tried Pauls doctrine, and are commended. And indeede though men be neuer ſo vnlearned, yet if they come in humilitie to ſearch the Scripture, and in obedience vnto God, praiing for knowledge, they may be able by Gods word to diſcerne of falſe teachers.

v. 21. Not euery one that ſaith vnto mee, Lord, Lord, ſhall enter into the kingdome of heauen, but he that doth my fathers will which is in heauen.

12. Part of Chriſts Sermon.

From this verſe to the 24. is conteined another portion of Chriſts ſermon beeing the ſeauenth part of this Chapter; wherein he intreateth of the ſtate of thoſe that profeſſe his holy name in his Church here on earth. And his maine ſcope & driſt herein, is to ſhew that men muſt not content themſelues to profeſſe religion outwardly, but there-with they muſt ioyne true godlines and ſincere obedience. This point is as wayghtie and of as great importance as any of the former, reſpecting the maine point of mans ſaluation; and it containeth two parts. A maine concluſion, in this verſe: And a proofe and explanation of one part thereof, ver. 22. 23. The concluſion it ſelfe hath two parts: 1. that ſome men profeſſing the name of Chriſt ſhall not bee ſaued, which part is afterward explaned and confirmed: the 2. part is this, that ſome profeſſours of religion ſhall be ſaued: which is A not onely propounded, but the parties alſo are plainely deſcribed.

The firſt part is a moſt fearefull ſentence againſt many that liue in the Church, that notwithſtanding their profeſſion of the name of Chriſt, yet they ſhall neuer be ſaued: And this is moſt true, beeing ſpoken by him that hath the power of life and of death, who is alſo the God of truth that cannot lie, ſaying Not euery one that ſaith, Lord Lord, that is, that profeſſeth God to be his God, ſhall enter into the kingdome of heauen. There be two kind of profeſſors in the Church of God that ſhall neuer be ſaued: the firſt are groſſe hypocrites, which profeſſe Chriſt with their mouth, and yet in heart and life they renounce him: of this ſort B is, firſt the common Atheiſt, who onely for feare of the Magiſtrates lawes profeſſeth religion: 1 ſecondly, the Epicure, that is, ſuch a one, who beares Chriſts name for faſhions ſake, and yet his bellie and pleaſure is his God: 2 thirdly, the worldling who ſpends the ſtrength of bodie & minde, and all he hath one the world for earthly things. 3 Now none of all theſe, if they thus liue and die, can be ſaued. The ſecond ſort are more cloſe hypocrytes, which profeſſe the name of Chriſt in ſome truth, and haue in them ſome good gifts of God, by reaſon whereof both before men and in their owne conceite; they are reputed members of the Church; and yet for al this they are indeed but hypocrites which ſhall neuer be ſaued.

What pro- feſſors ſh not be ſ ued. Three ſ hypocrit Cloſe hyp crites.

And that we may ſomewhat diſcerne of C them, I wil note the gifts which they may haue, wherby they may come to profeſſe Chriſt truly: they may be reduced to fiue heads. The firſt, is 1 the ſpirit of bondage to feare, Rom. 8. 15. This is a certaine gift of God whereby a man doth diſcerne the right meaning, and iudiciall vſe of the law in himſelfe concerning ſinne and the puniſhment thereof; (for though a man by nature know ſomething of the law, yet he knows not all, nor the right vſe thereof;) now by reaſon of this knowledge, he ſets himſelfe in bondage, and in regard thereof doth feare; from whence may proceede many good things, as griefe for ſinne, confeſſion and humiliation for the ſame, and praier for pardon. Thus wicked Pharaoh confeſſed the righteouſneſſe of God, and D that hee and his people had ſinned, Exod. 9. 27. And ſo did Ahab at the heauie meſſage of God by Eliah, 1. King. 21. 27. hee rent his clothes, and put ſackecloath vpon him, and faſted, and lay in ſackecloath. So Iudas when he ſaw that Chriſt was condemned, hee repented of his fact, beeing grieued for it, and aſhamed to looke any man in the face; and alſo confeſſed the ſame before God and men, Matth. 27. 3. 4. A ſecond gift 2 which a cloſe hypocrite may haue, is faith; as had Simon Magus: for he beleeued and was baptized, Act. 8. 13. neither was it a falſe and diſſembling faith altogether, but in ſome ſort a true, though not a ſauing faith: for he beleeued, and yet was in the gall of bitterneſſe. So Ioh.

What gif cloſe hyp crites ma haue.

2.23. it is ſaide, certaine beleeued in Chriſt; but hee durſt not commit himſelfe vnto them. And that we be not deceiued herein, we muſt know that this faith of an hypocrite hath in it three things; knowledge of the truth, approbation thereof, that is aſſent vnto it, and a kinde of perſwaſion that Chriſt is his redeemer. Of the ſecond degree of this faith we haue example, 2. Pet. 2. 18. where ſome are ſaide to be beguiled with wantonneſſe through fleſhly luſtes, who had cleane eſcaped from them that be wrapt in errors that is in idolatrie. And of the third degree we haue example in the ſame chap. verſ. 1. where ſome falſe prophets are ſaide to denie Chriſt that bought them: becauſe for a time they profeſſed themſelues to be redeemed, and were alſo perſwaded in a generall ſort that he had bought them: yet herein they failed, that they did not truly apprehend the merit of Chriſt, and applie it effectually vnto themſelues. 3 The third gift of a cloſe hypocrite, is a taſt of Gods fauour: Hebr. 6.5. it is ſaide of ſome that fall quite away, That they were enlightened by Gods ſpirit, and had a taſt of the good word of God, and of the powers of the world to come, though they were neuer fedde nor filled therewith. 4 The fourth gift, is good affections; good (I ſay) not in them, but in their kinde, and ſo farre forth as we can judge: they haue ioy in the good things of God: Luk. 8. 13. They that are on the ſtones, are they which when they haue heard receiue the word with ioy. They haue zeale for Gods glorie, as had Iehu, 2. King. 10. 16. and yet he departed not from the ſinnes of his forefathers, v. 31. Thirdly, they haue reuerence to Gods Miniſters, as Herod to John Baptiſt, Mark. 6. 20. Herod knowing Iohn to be a iuſt and holy man, feared and reuerenced him. 5 The fifth gift, is an outward reformation of life: the ſtonie ground receiues the ſeede with ioy, and brings forth ſome fruit; but it laſteth not: of ſuch it is ſaid, Hebr. 10. 29. They tread vnder foote the ſonne of God, and count the blood of the Teſtament an vnholy thing, wherewith they were ſanctified: that is, according to their profeſſion and perſwaſion. And thus we ſee what kind of gifts an hypocrite may haue, and yet neuer be ſaued.

Vſe. 1. The conſideration whereof muſt mooue vs to look vnto our ſelues, that we haue better things in vs then theſe are: for here wee ſee wee may goe on to perdition carying the profeſſion of Chriſt in our mouthes. And the rather muſt this be conſidered of vs, becauſe many looke to be ſaued who come ſhort of Simon Magus in knowledge, and of Saul, Ahab, and Iudas in humilitie; yea and for faith, farre ſhort of the deuill himſelfe, who is ſaid, to beleeue and tremble: but how canſt thou looke to be ſaued, that in regard of grace commeſt ſhort of thoſe which are now condemned?

Secondly, hence we muſt learne to ſuſpect our ſelues, and call our ſelues to a reckoning about our faith and obedience, and we muſt not flatter our ſelues herein: for theſe things before A named will not ſaue vs: many haue had faith in ſome truth for ſome degrees thereof, and alſo good affections & other gifts, as we haue ſeen, who are yet for all this condemned.

Thirdly, ſeeing there be two ſorts of men in the Church that ſhall be condemned, the one whereof haue many worthy gifts, this muſt mooue vs not to reſt in theſe things, but to labour and ſtriue to haue our hearts rooted and grounded in the loue of God in Chriſt, and to become newe creatures in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe; and then ſhall we be as the wiſe virgins hauing the oyle of grace in the veſſels of our hearts, which will neuer be quenched til we come into the mariage chamber with our Bridegroome Chriſt Ieſus.

What profeſſors ſhall be ſaued.

B The ſecond part of the concluſion laid down by our Sauiour Chriſt is this, That ſome men profeſſing the name of Chriſt in the Church of God ſhall bee ſaued. And theſe perſons are here deſcribed vnto vs by their effect or actiō, to wit, The doing of the wil of the Father. And becauſe this is an infallible note of them that ſhal be ſaued, I will briefly ſhew what it is to do the Fathers wil. The Scriptures beſt expound themſelues, Ioh. 6. 40. This is the will of him that ſent mee, that euery one that hath ſeene the Sonne, and beleeueth in him, ſhould haue euerlaſting life, 1. Theſſ. 4. 3, 4. &c. This is the will of God, euen your ſanctification: and that you ſhould abſtaine C from fornication, and that euery one ſhould know how to poſſeſſe his veſſell in holineſſe and honour, that no man oppreſſe or defraud his brother, &c. Theſe two places of Scripture laid together, ſhewe that the doing of the Fathers will ſtands in three things, in faith, in repentance, and newe obedience, faith is directly expreſſed in the place of Iohn: and repētance which is a fruit of faith, as alſo newe obedience the fruit of them both, in the words of the Apoſtle Paul: for by Sanctification is meant repentance, and newe obedience by the duties following.

Wherin the doing of Gods will ſtandeth.

For the firſt; in true ſauing faith there are three things required. Knowledge, aſſent, and application. By knowledge, I meane the right conceiuing of the neceſſarie Doctrines of true religion, eſpecially of thoſe which concerne D Chriſt our Redeemer. Aſſent, is when a man knowing this doctrine, doth further approoue of the ſame as wholſome doctrin, and the truth of God, directing vs aright vnto ſaluation. Application, is when we conceiue in our hearts a true perſwaſion of Gods mercy towardes vs particularly in the free pardon of al our ſinnes, and for the ſaluation of our ſoules: example of this particular applying we haue in the Apoſtle Paul, Gal. 2. 20. who profeſſeth thus; Now liue not I, but Chriſt liueth in me, and the life that I now liue is by faith in the ſonne of God: which what that is, he ſheweth after, ſaying, who hath loued me, and giuen himſelfe for me: and without this particular application, neither knowledge nor aſſent can ſaue vs: In the 6. of Iohn Chriſt propounds himſelfe vnto vs as the bread

Sauing faith comprehēds 3. things.

A of life and water of life: now wee knowe that food vnles it be receiued, will not nouriſh the bodie: euen ſo vnleſſe wee doe by the hand of faith particularly receiue and apply Chriſt vnto our ſelues, all our knowledge and aſſent wil be as foode vneaten and vndigeſted. It may bee ſaid that hypocrits haue knowledge and aſſent, and a perſwaſion of Gods fauour; and therfore this is not a ſure note of doing the Fathers wil. I anſwer, an hypocrite (as Simon Magus) may haue true knowledge of Gods word, and giue aſſent thereunto, and in regard of both theſe haue true faith in ſome degree; yea he may cõceiue a perſwaſion of Gods mercie in the pardon of his ſinnes, though falſly in preſumption vpon falſe grounds and inſufficient.

How to knowe our faith to be true.

Now that B a man may diſcerne the truth of his faith & perſwaſion of Gods mercie from that which is in hypocriſie, hee is to obſerue therein three things: the beginning of his faith, the fruits, and the conſtancie thereof. The beginning of true faith, is hearing the word of God preached, eſpecially the Goſpel: the lawe going before as an occaſion or preparing means wherby a man comes to ſee his ſinnes and his miſery thereby, and thereupon to deſire reconciliation with God in the pardon of them; and hearing the promiſes of mercie, to deſire faith whereby he may embrace the ſame, labouring againſt vnbeleefe. This, though it be not a liuely faith, yet it is the beginning of true faith, & no hypocrit hath the ſame ſoundly wrought in him. The C fruit of true faith, is a chaunge of the whole man both in heart and life; making the heart contrarie to it ſelfe in moderating the naturall affections and paſſions thereof, and keeping them in compaſſe of true obedience, and cauſing a man in euery ſtate to reſt contented with the will of God, as Iſay ſaith, he that beleeueth ſhall not make haſt. Thirdly, conſtancie in true faith is knowne by this, when a man relyes wholly on God euen then when hee feeles no taſt of his mercie, but hath all tokens of his diſpleaſure. Euery man will beleeue when he hath preſent ſignes and pledges of Gods louing fauour, but true faith being the euidence of things hoped for, will make a man beleeue aboue hope, as Abraham did: and beeing the D ſubſiſting of things not ſeene, will cauſe a man to beleeue when he ſees no tokens of Gods mercy: and indeed he that lets goe the hold of Gods mercie when he is in diſtreſſe, may aſſure himſelfe hee neuer had true faith: for the iuſt ſhall liue by faith in all eſtates, and will with Iob, truſt in God though he kill them.

Iſa.28.16.

The ground of repentance.

The ſecond worke wherein conſiſteth the doing of the Fathers will, is to repent of our ſinnes: and this is a fruit of faith. In true repentance there be two things; the beginning, and the nature of it: The beginning of it is a godly ſorrowe, when a man is grieued properly and directly becauſe by his ſinne he hath offended God, who hath bin vnto him ſo louing a father in Chriſt. This cauſeth repentance vnto A ſaluation not to be repented of, 2. Cor. 7. 10. & it ariſeth not ſo much from the feare of puniſhment, as from the conſideration of Gods mercy, making a man diſpleaſed with himſelfe for offending ſo louing a God, who hath beene ſo gracious and bountiful vnto him in Chriſt.

The natu of repentance.

The nature of repentãce ſtands in the change of the mind; when any perſon laies aſide the purpoſe of ſinning, and by Gods bleſſing and grace taketh to himſelfe a newe purpoſe neuer to ſinne more. This is properly to repent, and if this be in truth, hence will followe the change of the will, of the affections, and of all the actions of the life.

It may be ſaid, that an hypocrite may repent as Iudas did, Matth. 27. 3. and therefore this B is not a good note of doing Gods will. Anſw. Iudas did repent, he was indeede grieued for his fact, wiſhing with all his heart that it had neuer beene done: but this was nothing, his ſorrowe was onely worldly, cauſing death, as the Apoſtle calleth it, 2. Cor. 7. 10. ariſing from the horror and feare of puniſhment, not from conſideration of Gods mercie: it was without true hatred of ſinne committed, without hope of mercie, or purpoſe to glorifie God by new obedience, and ſo was no true repentance.

New obedience.

The third worke wherein conſiſteth the doing of Gods will, is newe obedience: and it is the fruit of both the former, whereby a man being indued with faith and repentance, doth C according to the meaſure of grace receiued, indeauour himſelfe to yeelde obedience to all Gods commandements, from all the powers & parts both of his ſoule and his bodie: and this I call new, becauſe it is a renuing of that in man whereto he was perfectly enabled by creation. But here it will be ſaid, that many who ſhal neuer be ſaued, haue attained to reformation of life; and therefore this is not a true and ſufficient note of him that ſhall be ſaued. Anſw. True it is, many hypocrites haue reformation of life; but yet they faile two wayes; Firſt, their reformation is onely outward, not inward, their thoughts, wills, and affections ſtill remaine wicked and corrupt. Secondly, their obedience is partiall, onely to ſome of Gods D commandements, not to all: ſo Herod, hee would heare Iohn gladly, and doe many things; but yet hee would not leaue his brothers wife. But true obedience which proceedeth from true faith, hath theſe heads and branches; Firſt, the partie muſt prooue what is the good will of God, Rom. 12. 2. Secondly, hee muſt reſtraine his life from outward offences, which tend to the diſhonour of God, and ſcandall of the Church, 1. Theſſal. 5. 22. 1. Pet. 2. 11, 12. Thirdly, hee muſt mortifie the inward corruptions of his owne heart. Fourthly, hee muſt labour to conceiue newe motions agreeable to the will of God, & thẽce bring forth and practiſe good duties; ſo performing both outward and inward obedience vnto God, and by theſe may a man diſcerne the truth of his obedience: and thus we ſee what profeſſors they bee which ſhall be ſaued.

Vſe. 1. Now conſidering that ſaluation is promiſed to them that be doers of Gods will, we muſt hereby be exhorted to become more cheerefull in doing Gods will by faith, repentance, and newe obedience: and to further vs in this dutie we muſt vſe theſe helpes. I. We muſt labour for a true perſwaſiō of Gods mercie in the pardon of our ſinnes, and for the ſaluation of our ſoules: this beeing truly conceiued will vrge a man to true obedience, whereby he may ſhew himſelfe thankefull to God for ſo great a mercie. II. We muſt conſider that we are the temples of the holy Ghoſt, which is a wonderfull dignitie to a ſinnefull man, and in regard hereof, wee muſt ſtirre vp our ſelues ſo to liue, that we make not ſad the ſpirit of God which dwelleth in vs. III. We muſt conſider the bleſſings of God beſtowed vpon vs both in ſoule and bodie one by one: and this will mooue vs to loue God, which loue wee ſhall ſhew in keeping his commandements: for this is the loue of God, that we keepe his commandements, 1. Ioh. 5. 3. IV. Let vs conſider the threatnings of God againſt ſinne, and his iudgements vpon them that liue in ſinne, for euerie place is full of Gods iudgements; and theſe will helpe to reſtrain our corruptions that they breake not forth into action. V. We muſt meditate on the word of God, & vſe feruent prayer vnto God for his grace: for by this meanes Dauid did notably ſtirre vp himſelfe to faith, repentance, and new obedience, as we may ſee at large in the 119. Pſalme.

to be cheer doers of will, of d.

II. Vſe. In that many hauing faith, and repentance, and outward reformation of life in ſome degrees, ſhall neuer be ſaued, we muſt labour to goe beyond all hypocrits in theſe graces: in faith wee muſt not content our ſelues with a generall perſwaſion of Gods mercy, but we muſt labour to conceiue the ſame to be true and ſound touching the remiſſion of our ſinnes, and the ſaluation of our ſoules: we muſt looke that it haue a ſound beginning, good fruits, & ſteadfaſt continuance. And for repentance we muſt labour to ſee that our ſorrowe ariſe from the conſideration of the goodneſſe of God whome we haue offended; and that it breede in vs a change of our mindes in the purpoſe of not ſinning: whereto muſt be conformable the will and affections, and the whole man. And for newe obedience, we muſt be as carefull in minde, will, and affections, as in the outward actions of our life to doe the will of God, and that in all Gods commandements.

III. Vſe. Many there bee that thinke their caſe good, becauſe they liue a ciuill honeſt life without wronging others openly or wittingly which thing indeede is commendable; but yet farre ſhort of that which is required for ſaluation: therefore they muſt not truſt to theſe broken ſtaues of outward and common honeſtie, though they bee good things in their kind: for many there be that ſhall neuer come in heauen, which haue had farre more in them then theſe things are: and therefore whatſoeuer theſe perſons be they muſt not reſt, til they find ſome portion of true grace in their hearts, by vertue whereof they may plainly ſee themſelues gone beyond all hypocrites in the things that concerne ſaluation.

V. 22. Many will ſay unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, haue we not by thy Name propheſied? and by thy Name caſt out deuills? and by thy name done many great works?

23. And then will I profeſſe to them, I neuer knewe you: depart from me ye that worke iniquitie.

In theſe two verſes Chriſt returnes to explane and confirme the firſt concluſion of the former verſe, concerning thoſe profeſſors that ſhall not bee ſaued. The words containe two parts: Firſt, a deſcription of the perſons by their behauiour, v. 22. Secondly, a declaration of their condemnation, v. 23. For the firſt: theſe profeſſors are deſcribed by three arguments: I. by their number, many: II. by the time which they ſhall plead thus for themſelues, and ſtand on their profeſſion of ſeruice done to Chriſt, in that day: that is, in that great and terrible day of the laſt iudgement: III. by their gifts and qualities wherewith they were indued, haue we not in thy name propheſied? and by thy name caſt out deuills, &c.

Of the number that ſhall be condemned.

For the firſt: the number of profeſſors which ſhall not bee ſaued is great: For many (ſaith Chriſt) ſhall ſay vnto me. Indeede wee are not able to ſay how many they bee which ſhal not be ſaued, for that is a thing proper to God: & yet the Scripture teacheth vs that the number of thoſe which ſhall be condemned, is greater then the number of thoſe which ſhall be ſaued: for beſides that the greateſt part of the world in former times did neuer heare of Chriſt, here it is plaine that among the profeſſors of the name of Chriſt, many ſhall be condemned: and v. 13. many walke in the broad way to deſtruction, fewe in the narrowe.

Whereby wee are taught, firſt, that we muſt not frame our liues according to the example of the multitude, to liue and do as the moſt do, becauſe the moſt ſhall be condemned: but wee muſt ſtriue to enter in at the ſtraite gate, and to be of that litle flocke vnto whom the kingdom of heauen is promiſed.

Secondly, hence we learne, not to content our ſelues to liue as moſt men and women doe that profeſſe the name of Chriſt; but we muſt labour to goe beyond the multitude in regard of the truth of our faith and repentance. It was not ſufficient for the wiſe virgins to beare the name of virgins, to haue lampes burning, and to goe forth to meete the bridegroome: for all theſe things did the fooliſh virgins alſo: but one thing more they had, which was the oyle of grace, whereby they were inlightened to go with the bridegroome into his chamber; which the fooliſh virgins lacking were ſhut out of the doores and not admitted to come in, Matth. 25.

The ſecond argument whereby theſe reprobate profeſſors are deſcribed, is the circumſtance of time when they ſhall thus pleade for themſelues, why they ſhould not be condemned, to wit, at the laſt day when they ſhal come to bee araigned at the tribunall ſeate of Gods iudgement. This is a point of great waight and moment worthie all obſeruation; that men not onely in this life and in death, but euen at the laſt day ſhould thus pleade for themſelues.

A dangerous conceit of a good mans eſtate.

Hence we learne, that many profeſſing ſeruice to Chriſt, ſhall conceiue in their minds a perſwaſion that they are the true ſeruants and children of God: they ſhall liue and die in this perſwaſion; and yet for all this at the laſt iudgment they ſhall receiue the ſentence of condemnation. A thing deepely to be waighed of euery one; And the conſideration of it ought to teach vs all to take heed of ſpirituall pride & ſelfe-loue, whereby men flatter and deceiue themſelues in their eſtate, ouerweening the good things they haue, and falſly thinking that they haue that bleſſing of God which indeede they haue not. This muſt moue vs not onely to labour to be purged of this pride, but alſo teach vs to ſuſpect the worſt of our ſelues, & to iudge our ſelues ſeuerely in regard of vnbeleefe and hollowneſſe of heart: for this will be a meanes to make vs eſcape the iudgment of condemnation at the laſt day, which Chriſt ſhall pronounce againſt many of thoſe that think themſelues to be his ſeruants.

Further, obſerue where Chriſt ſaith, in that day, he ſingleth out the day of iudgement as a moſt terrible day. And ſaying, they ſhall ſay vnto me, he makes himſelfe the Iudge of all the world in that day; & further pointing out their particular pleading for thẽſelues, he giues vs to vnderſtand that he is very God, who knows long before not only the ſpeaches and actions, but the very ſecret thoughts and imaginations of all men that haue beene, that are, or ſhall bee from the beginning to the ende of the world.

The terror of the Lord.

Theſe things laid together and wel conſidered, muſt ſtirre vp in our hearts a ſpeciall dutie which the Apoſtle had learned, 2. Cor. 5. 11. Euen to knowe the terror of the Lord: that is, not onely in iudgement to conceiue, but alſo in heart & affection to be perſwaded of the terrible fearefulnes of the laſt iudgment; and in this regard not to content our ſelues with the gift of knowledg and with an outward profeſſion, but to labour for ſoundneſſe and ſinceritie of faith, of repentance, and new obedience, both in heart and life. This was Pauls practiſe, in regard of the reſurrection to this iudgement, he endeauoured himſelfe to haue alwaies a cleare conſcience toward God, and toward man, Act. 24. 16. And this duty is moſt neceſſarie: for ſuch is our ignorance and vnbeleefe that wee little regard the terrour of this day, but either thinke it ſhal not come, or though it doe, wee ſhall eſcape well enough.

The third argument here vſed, is drawne from the gifts and qualities of the perſons which make this plea for themſelues: they are ſuch as haue propheſied in the name of Chriſt, caſt out deuills, and done many great workes in his name. To propheſie here ſignifieth to teach the people of God, by expounding the Scripture, & applying the ſame to the cõſciences for their edification: and this office is called propheſie, to grace and commend the office of a miniſter, becauſe it was the principall duty of the Prophets thẽſelues thus to handle the word of god for the inſtruction & edification of Gods people, howſoeuer at ſome time they did foretell vnto Gods people things to come. And therefore hee which hath this office, and diſchargeth the ſame with good conſcience, doth a worke no leſſe honourable, then did the auncient holy Prophets.

Chriſts

By thy name] The name of Chriſt here ſignifieth two things: I. appointment and commandement from Chriſt: men that preach the word of God beeing rightly called thereunto, teach and preach in the name of Chriſt: for thoſe whome the Church calleth lawfully, Chriſt himſelfe calleth, and they preach by vertue of his name. Secõdly, it ſignifieth to preach in the roome and ſtead of Chriſt, to preach that which Chriſt would preach, and in that manner alſo which Chriſt would vſe: 2. Cor. 5. 20. Wee are embaſſadours for Chriſt, as though God did beſeech you by vs, &c. And here wee may ſee a difference among the kinds of teaching which God requireth of men. Maſters teach their ſeruants; parents teach their children; and one neighbour and friend another: but all theſe differ from the teaching of the Miniſter: for hee teacheth beeing called by Chriſt and in ſtead of Chriſt: but the maſter teacheth not by like vertue, but onely by the right of maſterſhip: the father by vertue of fatherhood, & one fried another by vertue of brotherly charitie. And this ſheweth the dignitie of the calling of a miniſter, and the waight of his office, no maſter, no father, or ordinarie profeſſor hath the like.

Caſt out deuils, and done many great workes] For the better vnderſtanding hereof wee muſt entreat ſomething of the working of miracles:

Math.7. 22.

cles: and first we are to see what a miracle is. A miracle is not onely a strange worke done, but such a work as is aboue the strength of all creatures, and beyond the whole power of created nature; for it is done by the power of God himselfe immediatly, which is aboue the strēgth of all creatures: such a worke was the staying of the sunne, Iosu. 10. 13. and the going backward of the shadowe of the diall, 2. King, 20. 11. Secondly, the Lord God alone is the author of a miracle, who created heauen and earth; as Dauid saith, Thou art great, and doest wondrous things; thou art God alone, Psal. 86. 10. No angel, nor other creature in heauen or earth, no not the manhood of Christ, though exalted aboue all creatures, is able to worke a miracle. How then, will some say, doe these men plead their working of miracles? Ans. Not as authors, but as instruments and ministers whome the Lord vsed in the working of them; for men work miracles by beleeuing, on this manner: First, they receiue a speciall instinct and inward motion, that God will vse them as instruments in the working of a miracle, if they pray vnto him, and command the worke to be done: vpon this instinct, they beleeue that if they pray to God, and command in his name, it shall be done: and lastly, they pray, and command according to this instinct, and so the thing they beleeued is done. And thus is this speech to be vnderstood, Haue we not cast out deuills? &c. that is, thou hast put an extraordinarie instinct into our mindes, that if wee prayed vnto thee, and commanded the deuills in thy name to depart, it should be done: this we haue beleeued and accordingly practised, and so haue cast out deuills, and done many great wonders by thy name. This gift of miracles doth not now befall the Church of God; all that the Church now hath (for ought that I see) is the gift of prayer, ioyned with fasting, which also must bee conditionall, depending on Gods glorie, the good of Gods Church, and of the partie troubled: they may not pray absolutely for this worke of casting out deuils, or for the doing of such like miracles, much lesse may they now giue peremptorie command for the being of them. If it be said, that Gods church hath all needfull gifts, as well now as in former times; I answer, it hath all gifts needefull to their saluation, & therfore praier in the church serues now either to deliuer the partie troubled, or else to procure as good a blessing as deliuerance is, which is patience and repentance. And thus we see what manner of persons they be that shall say, Lord, Lord, and make apologie for themselues at the last day, and yet bee damned; namely, some that haue beene excellent preachers of the word, and some that haue had extraordinarie power to cast out deuills, & lastly, others that haue wrought many strange cures and miracles by faith in Christs name.

Now hence we learne, first, that most excellent gifts will not auaile to the saluation of any A man or woman, vnlesse they haue true faith, sincere repentance, and new obedience, whereby they doe the will of God: for what an excellent gift is it to be able to teach and preach the word of God? what a rare thing is it to haue heard Christ himselfe preach, and to haue giuen him entertainement? and yet neither of these can saue a man: Christ saith here, the apologie of preaching shall doe men no good, and the priuiledge of eating and drinking with Christ, and of hearing him teach in their streets, will nothing auaile; Christ will say I neuer knewe you, Luk. 13. 26, 27. It is likewise an excellent earthly priuiledge to be allied vnto Christ; and yet Christ preferreth spirituall kin- B red by faith and obedience farre before it, saying to one that told him his mother and his brethren stood without, desiring to speake with him, Who (saith he) is my mother? and who are my brethren? and pointing to his Disciples, he said, behold my mother, and my brethren; for whosoeuer shall doe my fathers will, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother. And with reuerence it may be truely said of the virgin Marie, that howsoeuer it was a wonderfull priuiledge vnto her to bee the mother of Christ Iesus, yet if she had not as well borne him in her heart by faith, as shee did in her bodie, she had neuer beene saued: and therefore Paul saith, though wee had knowne Christ after the flesh, yet henceforth knowe we him no more: but if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature, 2. Cor. 5. 16. and in Christ neither circumcision auaileth any thing, nor vncircumcision, but faith which worketh by loue, Gal. 5. 6.

Matt. 12. 47. 48. 49. 50.

August. lib. de virginit.

The consideration whereof, must mooue vs all to labour to become newe creatures, and to get the graces of Gods children who are regenerate, euen true faith, true repentance, and newe obedience, and not to rest in other gifts though they be most excellent.

Againe, students that haue a great measure of knowledge and other excellent parts, as memorie, languages, &c. must learne, not to be puffed vp therwith, (for knowledge puffeth vp, 1. Cor. 8. 1.) but withall to get the sauing graces before named: for without a repentant and beleeuing heart, all the gifts they haue will neuer saue them; nay rather they must be abased thereby, for without true sauing faith, all other gifts bee but as so many mill-stones, to presse them deeper into the pit of destruction.

Secondly, here note, that many learned preachers, who haue soundly handled the word of God for the conuersion of others, shall yet themselues be condemned, like to the Carpenters that built Noahs Ark, and yet were drowned in the flood. The consideration whereof, must teach all Ministers, according to the counsell of the Apostle, Act. 20. 28. to take heede, first, vnto themselues, and then to their flockes; so Paul bids Timothie, Take heede vnto thy selfe, and vnto learning, continue therein; for in doing this thou shalt both saue thy selfe, and them that heare thee, 1. Tim. 4. 16. Secondly, to be followers of Paul in the practiſe of mortification, who did beate downe his bodie, and bring it into ſubiection, leaſt by any meanes after he had preached to others, he himſelfe ſhould bee a reprobate, 2. Cor. 9. 27. Thirdly, the people of God are here alſo taught their dutie; for ſeeing this fearefull iudgement ſhall befall ſome miniſters of the word, that notwithſtanding their preaching they ſhall be condemned; therfore Gods people muſt not reſt vpon the example of their miniſters liues, but cleaue faſt vnto that wholeſome doctrine which they gather ſoundly and directly out of the word of God: his life and practiſe is no ſure rule to follow, further then it agreeth with the word of God: and therefore Paul ſaith, Be ye followers of me, as I follow Chriſt, 1. Cor. 11. 1. But the word is a true rule and ſquare, and as many as walke according to this rule, peace ſhall be vpon them, and mercie, Galat. 6. 16.

Receiue no new doctrine though confirmed by a miracle.

Fourthly, ſeeing ſome workes of miracles muſt alſo be condemned, this teacheth vs not to truſt them which bring vnto vs doctrines, becauſe they are confirmed by wonders; for ſuch as worke wonders may deceiue themſelues in the matters of their owne ſaluation, & therefore much more may they deceiue vs in this or that particular point of doctrine. Wheras therefore ſundrie points of Poperie, as Purgatorie, Pilgrimages, inuocation of Saints, and ſuch like, are auouched to be confirmed by miracles (which no doubt were but forgeries, and lying wonders) yet let it be graunted that they were true miracles, that prooueth not that wee ſhould beleeue them, becauſe the word of God doth not confirme the ſame vnto vs; for beſide that which is reuealed and recorded in Scripture; we muſt receiue no doctrine in religion, be it neuer ſo miraculouſly confirmed.

verſ. 23. And then will I profeſſe to them I neuer knewe you: depart from me ye workers of iniquitie. Here Chriſt ſets downe the iuſt condemnation of thoſe men which make an apologie for themſelues at the day of iudgement, and wonder at their condemnation: and withall he anſwereth them in that wherein they pleade for themſelues. The words containe three parts: I. a profeſſion made by Chriſt to theſe men, that hee neuer knewe them: II. a commandement of Chriſt vnto them, Depart from me: and III. a reaſon of the commandement, Yee workers of iniquitie. For the profeſſion of Chriſt; Then, that is in the day of iudgement, at that time when men ſhall wonder at their condemnation, making apologies of their ſeruice to God; euen then, ſaith Chriſt, will I profeſſe, &c. In this phraſe Chriſt alludeth to the fact of theſe hypocrites; for they profeſſed the name of Chriſt, and did plead ſeruice done vnto him; as if hee ſhould ſay, Many in that day which haue profeſſed my name in the world, ſhall plead their ſeruice done to me: but I will make an other profeſſion vnto them, that is, I will make it cleere and manifeſt vnto all the world, that I neuer knew them, and that their profeſſion of me was in vaine.

Gods knowledge of his creature.

The words of Chriſts profeſſion are of great waight and moment, containing ſome difficultie in regard of the ſenſe, which muſt be ſearched out. The knowledge of God whereby he knowes his creatures is twofold; Generall, and Speciall.

1. Generall.

Gods generall knowledge is that, whereby hee vnderſtands and ſees all things, both paſt, preſent, and to come: and in regard of this it is ſaid, All things are naked and open before his eyes with whome we haue to doe, Heb. 4. 13. And by vertue of this, Chriſt here foretelleth what ſhall bee the apologie of ſome wicked men at the laſt day. And in regard of this generall knowledge, all men are knowne vnto God, and the moſt ſecret actions of wicked wretches: Ier. 32. 19. His eyes are open vnto all the waies of the ſonnes of men, to giue vnto them according to their waies, and according to the fruite of their workes.

2. Speciall.

The ſpeciall knowledge of God, is that whereby hee acknowledgeth, approoueth, and accepteth of his creature to bee his, vouchſafing vnto it his ſpeciall fauour: now this enlargeth not it ſelfe to all and euery man, for ſome there be, on whome hee will ſhewe his fauour, and of them it is ſaid, The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous, Pſal. 1. 6. others there bee on whome he will not ſhewe forth his mercie, and of them it is ſaide, The way of the wicked ſhall periſh. Which oppoſition ſheweth what is meant by Gods knowledge of the godly. So likewiſe, Rom. 11. 2. will the Lord deſtroy his people whome hee knewe before; that is, whom he approoued and loued: and of this ſpeciall knowledge hee ſpeaketh in this place. Neuer] This word excludeth all times, as if he ſhould ſay, I do not now, neither euer did approoue and accept you for mine owne; yea, euen in that time when you profeſſed me, preached, and wrought wonders in my name, euen then I ſay, I did not accept and approoue of you.

Vniuerſall redemption confuted.

From this forme of confeſſion we are to learne ſundrie points of doctrine; Firſt, hereby is plainely confuted and ouerthrowne the opinion of ſome Proteſtants, who hold that Chriſt ſhed his blood for all and euery man without exception, and that in regard of Gods purpoſe and will he died for all men; for Caine as wel as for Abel, for Iudas as well as for Peter, and for them which ſhall be condemned, as well as for them which ſhall bee ſaued. But marke what Chriſt ſaith here to them that ſhall be condemned, I neuer knewe you, nor approoued of you for mine. But if Chriſt died effectually for all and euery man in the world without exception, then he bought all and euery man without exception, with the price of his blood; and if that, then euery one without exception is Chriſts: and thoſe which are truely his, Chriſt will vndoubtedly acknowledge for his owne. But here we ſee Chriſt will not acknowledg all

A and euery man to be his, and therefore vndoubtedly he did not purchaſe by the price of his blood, all and euery man to be his without exception, I denie not, but that Chriſt died for all men in the ſenſe of Scripture; but the word of God neuer ſaith, that on Gods part, and in regard of the purpoſe of his will, Chriſt died for euerie man without exception. And whereas it is thought to bee an hard ſpeech, to ſay that God would haue ſome particular men depriued of grace and redemption by Chriſt, let vs well conſider this one thing, and it will not ſeeme ſtrange, no not in mans reaſon. God created man in his owne image, in righteouſneſſe and true holyneſſe, and he gaue vnto him a bleſſed
B eſtate in an earthly paradiſe, and that not onely for himſelfe, but for all his poſteritie: for whatſoeuer he receiued by creation, he receiued not onely for himſelfe, but for his poſteritie, beeing then a publike man, and bearing the perſon of whole mankinde, both in the ſtate of his innocencie, and in his fall: whereupon Adam falling from that happie eſtate, all mankinde being in him, fell with him, and ſo loſt Gods image, and that good eſtate which they enioyed by creation in Adam. Now conſider this well, if God had neuer indued man with grace, nor giuen him meanes to come by happineſſe, and yet had excluded him from all meanes of grace and happineſſe, this indeede might haue ſeemed hard; but conſidering that by creati-
C on hee gaue man happineſſe, and likewiſe abilitie to perſeuere in the ſame, if he would; is it any maruell, ſeeing all men haue of themſelues loſt their owne felicitie, that ſome ſhould be depriued of it for euer? nay, rather it is a wonder that all are not cõdemned which come of Adam; for God in his iuſtice without all crueltie might haue cõdemned euerie man: and indeede it is his endleſſe mercie, that he hath giuen Chriſt to be a Sauiour vnto ſome, and that any are made partakers of this ſaluation by Ieſus Chriſt.

Secondly, Chriſt here ſaith of ſome, I neuer knew you: yet ſpeaking of others he ſaith, I know my ſheepe, Ioh. 10. 14. and againe, I know whome I haue choſen, Ioh. 13. 18. and Paul ſaith, The D Lord knoweth who are his, 2. Tim. 2. 19. Now from theſe places we may gather, that there is an eternall worke of God, whereby he puts a difference and diſtinction betweene man and man, angel and angel, acknowledging ſome to be his owne, and denying the ſame of others. If God himſelfe had not auouched this in the word, no man might haue taught it; but beeing here plainly propounded, it is with all reuerence to be acknowledged and receiued: and that it may be the better conceiued, two points are here to be handled. Firſt, vpon what ground and reaſon God doth knowe ſome to be his, & doth not know nor acknowledge others for his owne. Secondly, what is the fruite of this knowledge of God in man. For the firſt, why God ſhould knowe ſome to be his, and not o-
A thers, no other reaſon can be giuen, but Gods good pleaſure alone: Matth. 11. 25. Chriſt ſetteth downe this diſtinction betweene man and man, ſaying, that his father hath hidde the myſteries of the kingdome of heauen from ſome, and reuealed the ſame to other: now what is the cauſe hereof? It is euen ſo, O Father (ſaith hee) becauſe it ſo pleaſeth thee. So Rom. 9. ver. 13. and 18 in Iacob and Eſau, Paul ſhewes this diſtinction of mankinde, I haue loued Iacob and hated Eſau, ſaith the Lord: neither did this difference come from their workes, either good or euill, for this difference God put betweene them, before either of them had done good or euill: but it is wholly aſcribed to the will of God, who
B will haue mercie on whom he will haue mercie, and whom he will he hardeneth. This muſt not ſeeme ſtrange vnto vs: wee permit vnto men to vſe their owne diſcretion in their owne affaires, and this is a ſufficient reaſon to ſtoppe any other mans mouth; It is my owne, may I not doe with mine owne what I will? Againe, in Princes Proclamations we ſubmit our ſelues to this clauſe (It is our pleaſure:) ſo likewiſe a man hauing a flocke of ſheepe, may ſende ſome of them to the fatting for the ſlaughter, and others keepe for breede: this God permitteth vnto man, and it is not counted crueltie among men; nowe if wee giue this libertie vnto man ouer the creature, why ſhould wee not much more giue it to the Creator ouer man, ſee-
C ing the baſeſt and leaſt creature is ſomething in regard of man, but man is nothing vnto God? and therefore though theſe myſteries cannot bee comprehended by reaſon, yet euen in reaſon we may ſee ſome reſemblance of the truth and equitie of them, which muſt moue vs with reuerence to ſubmit our ſelues to the ſoueraigne will and pleaſure of God herein.

Foreſeene workes are not the ground of Gods decree.

Vpon this ground of difference and diſtinction betweene man and man, we may well be admoniſhed to beware of the errour of ſome diuines, who thus define of Gods wil touching mans eſtate; they ſay it is the firſt will of God, that euery man in the world ſhould be ſaued, if they would, and therefore (ſay they) he mini-
D niſters vnto them all helpes both of nature and grace, whereby they may repent and beleeue if they will. And hauing laid downe this his firſt will, he then (ſay they) foreſees that ſome men will not beleeue, nor perſeuere in the faith; and hereupon it is (in their conceit) that he will not knowe ſome men for his owne. Againe, foreſeeing that others wil beleeue and perſeuere in faith, them he knowes and acknowledgeth to be his; dealing herein like vnto a good father that hath many ſonnes, who would haue them all to doe well, and to haue each one a good portion; but ſeeing that ſome will not become frugall and obedient, he changeth his minde, and doth diſinherit them: or like vnto a good Prince, who would haue all his ſubiects to doe well: but ſeeing ſome to be rebells, he is of another minde, and willeth their death. Anſw. But this opinion is a meere inuention of mans braine; for whereas they ſay, that God by a ſecond acte of his will acknowledgeth ſome for his owne, and not others, vpon the foreſight of their faith and vnbeleefe, whereas by his firſt will, he would haue all men to be ſaued; it is not true; for the firſt will of God, is to know ſome, & not to know others: the ground whereof is his good pleaſure alone, and no foreſeene workes in them. And therefore it cannot be, that he ſhould will all men to be ſaued equally, Cain as well as Abel, Iudas as well as Peter. Againe, their opinion confutes it ſelfe, for God foreſees mens faith and vnbeleefe, becauſe he hath decreed the ſame, & his decree depends vpon his owne will alone; and therfore vnleſſe we make the ſame thing in the ſame reſpect, both the cauſe and the effect, we cannot make foreſeene workes the ground of difference betweene man and man. Then their compariſons are not fit: a father would haue all his children to doe well, and to enioy his portion: true; and more then that, he would make all his children to doe well, if it lay in his power; neither would he diſinherit any, if it lay in his power to make them good: the change of his purpoſe in diſinheriting his ſonne, ariſeth vpon the impotencie of his will, that cannot do that he would. And the ſame muſt be ſaid of the will of Princes toward their ſubiects: but if there ſhould be ſuch a will in God to haue all men ſaued, if he could ſaue them, then vndoubtedly all men ſhould be ſaued, for who hath reſiſted his will? nay, whatſoeuer the Lord willeth, that doth hee in heauen, in earth, and euerie where, Dan. 4.32.

A ſecond point to be conſidered in the diſtinction of men, wherby God knoweth ſome to be his, and doth not acknowledge ſome others for his, is the fruite of this knowledge of God. It is an effectuall and powerfull knowledge, working mutuall and ſtrange effects in mans heart, towards God; for from this, that God knoweth ſome to be his, there followeth another knowledge in mans heart, whereby he knoweth God to be his God. So Chriſt ſaith, Ioh. 10.14. I knowe my ſheepe, and am knowne of mine. Look as the Sunne caſts down his beams vpon vs, by meanes whereof we againe ſee the bodie of the ſunne; euen ſo the knowledge of God, whereby he knoweth vs for his, worketh in our hearts a knowledge of God in vs, wherby we know him for our God. So Gal. 4.9. Seing ye knowe God, or rather are knowne of God: ſo that the knowledge of God, wherby he knoweth vs to be his, is the ground of our knowledge of him to be our God. Againe, in this knowledge of God, whereby he knoweth his Elect, is contained his loue towards them, for he knoweth and accepteth of man, and therefore loueth him: and this brings forth in man loue to God againe. We loue God, becauſe he hath loued vs firſt, 1. Ioh. 4.19. So likewiſe God by his knowledge chooſeth vs to be his peculiar people; and hence comes our chooſing of God to be our God: for looke as the ſeale ſets a print in the waxe like vnto it ſelfe, ſo the knowledge of God bringeth forth ſuch fruits in vs to God-ward, as therewith God beareth and manifeſteth towards vs.

The effect of Gods knowledge of ſome to be his.

On the other ſide, there be ſome whom God neuer knew, and the fruits hereof in them, be the fruits of iuſtice; God not knowing them, they knowe not God: and the fruits of this knowledge, as loue, and giuing their hearts vnto God, they haue not. Indeede the ſinnes which men commit come not from this, that God knoweth them not, but from the corrupt wil of man: and yet theſe wants of knowledge, of loue, and faith to God, as they are puniſhments, come from this, that God doth not know, nor acknowledge men for his.

Now whereas this knowledge of God is powerfull in his Elect to produce from them true knowledge, affiance, and loue of God againe; we are to be admoniſhed to labour to feele in our hearts theſe graces which are the impreſſions and fruits of Gods knowledge of vs, that by them we may be able to ſay, I know God to be my God, and Chriſt my Redeemer. Let vs therefore labour to knowe God aright, and to loue God in Chriſt, and in his members, by true loue; and to chooſe the true God to be our God, beſtowing our hearts and affections on him: for by theſe graces we ſhall know certainely that God knoweth vs, loueth & choſeth vs for his ſonnes and daughters in Chriſt; becauſe theſe graces in vs are the proper fruits of the knowledge and loue of God towards vs; euen as we may know the Princes broad ſeale by the forme of it in wax, though we neuer ſee the ſeale it ſelfe. And on the contrary, we muſt take heede of that heauie iudgement of God, whereby men go on without knowledge, loue, and affiance in God: for theſe are fearefull tokens of his wrath, befalling thoſe whome hee neuer knewe.

A motiue to know and loue God.

The Vſe. 1. Whereas God knoweth ſome men for his owne, and will not acknowledge the ſame of others, and that onely vpon his will and pleaſure, we may ſee here a wonderfull and vnſearchable myſterie; which firſt of all ought to ſtirre vs vp, not to plead with God, but in an holy reuerence to wonder at, and to admire his vnſpeakeable power and ſoueraignty ouer his creature: Rom. 11.32. God hath ſhut vp all vnder vnbeleefe, that he might haue mercie on all, ſaith the Apoſtle. Now he doth not reaſon the caſe further, but there ſtaies himſelfe with an admiration of Gods wonderfull power and wiſedome, crying out, O the deepeneſſe of the riches both of the wiſedome and knowledge of God, how vnſearcheable are his iudgements, and his wayes paſt finding out? ver. 33. 2. This muſt ſtrike our hearts with feare and trembling towards God in regard of his iudgements: the Apoſtle Paul ſpeaking to the Gentiles of Gods aunancient people, ſaith the Iewes are cut off through vnbeleefe, and thou ſtandeſt by faith: and thereupon makes this vſe vnto the Gentiles, Be not high minded but feare, Rom. 11.20.

3. Hence we are taught, not to ſooth vp our ſelues (as vſually we doe) on hope of mercie in the death of Chriſt, without ſome groũd hereof through true grace; but rather with feare & trembling, ſo long as we haue time, to labour in the means of ſaluatiõ, which is Gods word, prayer, Sacraments, to become true members of Chriſt, becauſe we may deceiue our ſelues with a vaine profeſſion: for though Gods mercie be endleſſe in it ſelfe, yet it admits reſtraint to vs-ward; and indeed it ſhall neuer be extended to all, nay not to many that in their life time made full account thereof in their vaine perſwaſions.

The Reprobate neuer had true faith.

A third point here to be obſerued is this; that ſuch as profeſſed Chriſts name here on earth, and yet after ſhall be condemned, neuer had true faith, nor true repentance, ſound loue, nor hope; they might haue ſome kinde of faith, I confeſſe, and many other excellent gifts: but if they had had true faith, thereby they ſhould haue pleaſed God, & bin approoued of Chriſt, and ſo at ſometime alſo, haue bin accepted and acknowledged of him for his owne. For this wee muſt learne and hold as the truth of God, that where true faith, loue, and hope are truely wrought, there they remaine for euer, at leaſt in the roote: they may ſeeme for a time to be loſt, but yet neuer can be quite extinct, for the gifts and calling of God are without repentance, Rom. 11.29.

Fourthly, here it is plaine, that thoſe whom Chriſt will not ſaue, hee neuer knew; hence it followes, that whom he knowes to be his, thẽ he will know to be his for euer. This point muſt be remembred, becauſe it is the true foundation and ground of the ſaluation of mens ſoules; we are ſaide to be ſaued by faith, and by the word of God, yet onely as by meanes, not as cauſes: but the onely cauſe of our ſaluation, and of the meanes that brings vs thereto, is this knowledge of God, whereby he accepteth and approoueth vs to be his owne.

Elect neuer fall away.

Hence we may gather, that thoſe who are elect vnto ſaluation, ſhall neuer perriſh; for whom God once knowes to be his, them hee knows to be his for euer: and therefore Mat. 24. 24. it is made a thing impoſſible that the elect ſhould perriſh: and the Apoſtle takes it for granted, that the election of God is vnchangeable, Rom. 9. 11. remaining euer, according to his purpoſe. This knowledge of God, is that foundation which remaineth ſure, 2. Tim. 2. 19. The firſt grace of all is Gods fauour, chooſing ſome men to be his of his meere good will; and this firſt grace, to whomſoeuer it is vouchſafed, remaineth for euer, admitting no change nor alteration, nor interruption. This doctrine muſt be remembred, as the ſtaie of our faith, and a ſure foundation of ſound comfort in any diſtreſſe: for true beleeuers in time of affliction finde in themſelues much vnbeleefe and great proneneſſe to fall away frõ God. Yet here they haue a ſure ſtaie whereon to reſt, they muſt goe out of themſelues, & faſten their faith on Gods election, knowing hence, that though they be fraile and ſubiect to fall away of themſelues, yet their ſaluation remaines ſure, grounded on the knowledge and electiõ of God. So the Apoſtle Paul comforts himſelfe and the godly, Rom. 8. 32. 33. It is God that iuſtifies, who ſhall condemne? and verſe 35. Who ſhall ſeuer vs from the Loue of God in Chriſt, whereby he loueth vs? And indeede, if a man haue receiued true aſſurance of Gods fauour, though but once in all his life; yet by that one ſigne he may aſſure himſelfe of his ſaluation, vpon this ground, that Gods loue is vnchangeable, though euer after he liue in temptation; for whome God loueth, he loueth to the ende, Ioh. 13. 1.

Depart from mee] This is Chriſts commandement to thoſe whom he neuer knew, though they profeſſed his name; and it is a moſt fearefull commandement, beeing all one with that, Matth. 25. 41. Goe yee curſed into euerlaſting fire.

Wherein the ſecõd death ſtandeth.

Now hence we may gather, that the ſecond death is properly a ſeparation from the comfortable fellowſhip of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt; and withall, a ſenſe and feeling of Gods wrath in that ſeparation. This appears by the contrarie, for life euerlaſting ſtandes in fellowſhip with God the father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt.

How Chriſt ſuffered the ſecõd death.

Now here a queſtion may be asked, concerning the ſuffering of Chriſt, for our doctrine is, that he ſuffered the ſecond death: whether then was he ſeuered from God in his ſuffering? Anſwer. Chriſt our Sauiour on the croſſe ſtood in our roome and ſtead, hee bare vpon him the ſinnes of his elect, and for ſubſtance, the whole puniſhment due to the ſame, which was both the firſt & ſecond death: but yet concerning the ſuffering of the ſecond death, there remaines ſome difficultie. Touching it therefore we muſt hold this grouud, that our Sauiour Chriſt ſuffered the ſecond death, ſo farre forth as the ſuffering thereof might ſtand with vnion of his two natures, and with the holineſſe and dignitie of his perſon: and here theſe caueats muſt be marked.

I. Caueat. That in his manhood he endured a very true ſeparation from the Godhead, and from his Father; yet not in regard of ſubſiſting and beeing, but of ſenſe and feeling only: and therefore he cried, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken mee? hauing for a time no ſenſe of Gods fauour, but onely the feeling of his wrath and diſpleaſure.

II. Caueat. In his paſſion he did endure the ſorrows of the ſecond death; he did not die the ſecond death, for then he ſhould haue beene ouercome & vtterly ſeparated frõ his father in ſubſiſting and beeing; but he ſuffered the ſecond death, and in ſuffering ouercome it; as a man may be at the point of death, and feele the paines of the firſt death, and yet recouer.

III. Caueat. Chriſt endured the paines of the damned, yet not in that manner which the damned doe; for hee endured them on the croſſe, they in the place of the damned; Chriſt ſuffered them for a while, they endure them for euer; Chriſt ſuffered the ſecond death, yet ſo as it preuailed not againſt him; but the damned are ouerwhelmed of it, it preuailes ouer them, and cauſeth them to blaſpheme God: now their blaſphemie increaſeth their ſinne, and their ſinne cauſeth their torments to be multiplied for euer. This doctrine is ſutable to the word of God, and to reaſon; for in mans reaſon, the death of the bodie could not be a remedie to ſuch perſons as are condemned to a double death both of body and ſoule.

A motiue to get fellowſhip with God.

Vſes. 1. Seeing the ſecond death is a ſeparation of man from God for euer, we muſt labour in this life to haue ſome true fellowſhip with God the Father, the ſonne, and the holy Ghoſt; that hauing it once, we may enioy the ſame for euer. This fellowſhippe we ſhall come vnto in the right vſe of the word and Sacraments, and praier; for in the word and Sacraments God condeſcends to ſpeak vnto vs, and to deale familiarly with vs, and in praier we talke with God.

II. Vſe. Note alſo to whome this commandement is ſpoken, Depart from me; namely, to ſuch as come neere vnto God with their lips but yet keepe their hearts farre from him: in conſideration whereof wee muſt not content our ſelues to profeſſe the name of Chriſt outwardly, but we muſt draw neere to God with all our affections, our loue, ioy, feare, and confidence, and yeild obedience to his commandements; ſo ſhall we eſcape this fearefull commandement of finall departure from him.

How profeſſors of religion may be workers of iniquitie.

Yee workers of iniquitie] This is the reaſon of the commandement: for the better vnderſtanding whereof, this queſtion muſt be handled: How theſe men, that make ſuch profeſſion, can be called workers of iniquitie: many of whom vndoubtedly, liued a ciuill & vnblameable life outwardly, and could not be charged with any horrible capitall ſinnes. Anſw. There be many great ſinnes for which men may be called workers of iniquitie, and be as vile in the ſight of God as the murtherer & adulterer, though for outward life they be vnblameable: as firſt hypocriſie, which is proper to the profeſſors of religion, when as they content themſelues to hold religion outwardly, but yet doe not bring their hearts nor conforme their liues to their outward profeſſion. Secondly, to profeſſe loue and worſhip to God, and yet not to performe duties of loue and mercie vnto men: for we muſt loue and ſerue God in the workes of brotherly loue. Thirdly, to haue the heart addicted to this or that ſinne or ſinnes; whether ſecret or open in regard of the world it skilleth not: for this is to bee a worker of iniquitie in Gods ſight, when the heart taketh a ſetled delight in any ſinne. And they are not ſo called becauſe their iniquitie is alwaies outward and ſeene to the world. Laſtly, all the ſinnes of the firſt table, eſpecially the ſinnes againſt the two firſt commandements, as not to know God, not to loue God, or to truſt in him aboue all, not to worſhip him in heart and life together; theſe are all workes of iniquitie, greater then the ſinnes of the ſecond table in their kind: and in regard of theſe alſo, profeſſors are called workers of iniquitie.

Chriſt marks the moſt ſecret ſinnes.

Vſes. 1. Whereas Chriſt calleth thoſe profeſſors, workers of iniquitie, whoſe profeſſion couered their ſinnes from mens ſight; we may note, that Chriſt is a very ſtrict obſeruer of mens waies, euen of the moſt ſecret ſinnes, which appeare not to the world: though men may be deceiued by profeſſours in this world, yet Chriſt cannot be deceiued, but at the laſt day of iudgement he will finde them out what they be. Many deceiue themſelues with a perſwaſion of mercie, becauſe Chriſt is a Sauiour, and ſo preſume to goe on in ſinne: but they muſt knowe, that Chriſt is alſo a ſeuere iudge, which doth ſtraitly obſerue mens ſinnes, & wil condemne the workers of iniquitie, as well as pardon them that repent: & therefore we muſt not flatter our ſelues to liue in ſinne, becauſe he is a Sauiour; but rather feare to ſinne, becauſe he is a ſeuere iudge againſt all iniquitie.

How Chriſt eſteemes a godly life.

II. This ſhewes that Chriſt preferres an honeſt and godly life aboue moſt worthy gifts, euen before the gifts of Prophecy and Miracles; and therefore our principall care muſt bee, to frame our hearts and liues to true obedience vnto our God in all his commandements.

A ſtrong motiue to repentance.

III. This muſt ſtirre vs vp to true and vnfained repentance. If we haue not yet repented, it muſt mooue vs to beginne it; if we haue repented, we muſt doe it more; for Chriſt will pronounce a fearefull ſentence of condemnation vpon many profeſſours, becauſe they liue in ſin, though they haue prophecied in his name, and caſt out deuills, & done many great works; yet becauſe they haue beene in heart addicted to ſome ſinnes, hee ſhall ſay vnto them at the laſt day, Depart from mee, and, goe yee curſed into euerlaſting fire. The horrour whereof, ſeeing Chriſt hath ſo long before made it knowne vnto vs, ought to mooue vs to humble our ſelues, to turne vnto God, and to breake off the courſe of our ſinnes, euen in the purpoſe of our hearts. And if wee will not now tremble and turne, the day will come when we ſhall heare a fearefull commandement, and obey it, and not be able to turne from it: but if we ſhal now turne to God by true repentance and new obedience, we ſhall in that day heare the bleſſed voice of abſolution vpon our ſelues, when as the fearefull ſentence of condemnation ſhall be pronounced vpon others.

IV. Whereas many men ſhall be condemned, rge the art from ſpite of ned, becauſe in heart they haue beene addicted to ſome open or ſecret ſinnes, wee muſt in the feare of God labour to purge our hearts from all ſinne, ſo as we be not addicted to any one ſinne, with purpoſe to liue therein: yea wee muſt labour to turne our ſelues from euery euil way, from ſinnes in thought, in affections, in behauiour, and actions. The purpoſe of our heart muſt be, not to liue in any one ſinne, ſo as if we fall, we may yet truely ſay, it was againſt our purpoſe and intent: and therefore wee muſt labour to be renued in the ſpirit of our mindes, euen in the moſt ſecret part of our ſoules. It is not enough to leaue ſinne when it leaues vs, by reaſon of weakeneſſe, or want of opportunity: thus doth many an aged man, who hauing liued in lewdneſſe and luſt al his youth, doth at length, by reaſon of weakneſſe in olde age, leaue thoſe ſinnes in practiſe; but yet his heart is ſtill addicted to them, and therefore euen then when he cannot go without a ſtaffe, will hee take great delight in rehearſing and remembring the trickes of his youth. Now this man hath no repentance, for his delight in the remembrance of ſinne paſt, is all one before God, as if he had liued ſtill in the practiſe thereof: our prayer therefore muſt be with David to the Lord continually, that hee would incline our hearts vnto his commandements, and not to couetouſneſſe, or any other ſinne, Pſal. 119.36.

V. 24. Whoſoeuer then heareth of me theſe words, and doth the ſame, I will liken him to a wiſe man which hath builded his houſe on a rocke,

25. And the raine fell, and the floods came, and the windes blew, and beat vpon that houſe, and it fell not; for it was grounded on a rocke.

Concluſion of Chriſts ſermon.

After the deliuery of many notable inſtructions in this ſermon of our Sauiour Chriſt, whereby he hath ſufficiently ſhewed himſelfe to bee the true Prophet and Doctor of his Church: in this verſe, and thoſe which follow, to the 28. he comes to lay downe the concluſion of this excellent ſermon, wherein he doth ſtirre vp his hearers to a notable dutie; namely, that they ſhould not make light account of his doctrine, contenting themſelues barely to heare, reade, or to learne the ſame; but further, to goe about the practiſe thereof in their liues and conuerſations. And for the effecting hereof, hee laies downe here at large, the fruite of true obedience to the word. In this concluſion are theſe points contained: I. A maine dutie to be done of all his hearers; that is, to heare and doe the words of Chriſt. Whoſoeuer heareth theſe my words, and doth the ſame. II. The propertie of this dutie: it is a note of great wiſdome, I will liken him to a wiſe man, &c. III. The fruite of this dutie; Safetie and ſecurit ie againſt all perils of bodie and ſoule, in the 25. verſe: all which are amplified by their contraries, in the 26. and 27. verſes, as we ſhall ſee in their place.

The dutie of euery good hearer.

The firſt point is the maine dutie of euery good hearer, namely, to ioyne practiſe with knowledge of the word of Chriſt. This dutie is oft vrged vpon vs by the holy Ghoſt, Rom. 2. 13. Not the hearers of the Law, but the dooers thereof ſhall bee iuſtified before God: and Saint Iames ſtands long on this dutie, Iam. 1. 22. Be yee doers of the word, and not hearers onely, deceiuing your owne ſoules: which after hee enforceth both by the vanity of hearing without doing, v. 23. 24. & by the bleſſing that accompanies obedient hearing, v. 25. and Luk. 11. 27. 28. when a woman in admiration at Chriſts doctrine, pronounced her bleſſed that bare him; Chriſt anſwered, nay rather bleſſed are they that heare the word of God, and keepe it. And in the parable of the ſower, Matt. 13. there are foure kinds of hearers, three bad, and one only good, who did heare, know, receiue, embrace the word of God, and withall bring forth fruite plentifully. And naturall reaſon may perſwade vs of the weight of this dutie; for the beſt learning that men haue in humane things is to little, or of no vſe, without practiſe: much leſſe can diuine doctrine then profit a man without obedience be ioyned therewith.

Vſe. The conſideration hereof, muſt mooue vs to pray to God the Father, in the name of Chriſt, that he would vouchſafe his ſpirit vnto vs, whereby our hearts might be enclined, diſpoſed, and bent to an vnfained loue and obedience of Gods precepts, deliuered in his holy word, becauſe it is our dutie to liue in the practiſe of that we heare. Yea, wee muſt pray ſo to performe obedience in our life, that our conſciences may not onely not accuſe vs, but alſo excuſe vs before God in regard thereof; or at leaſt, in regard of our true endeauour & deſire to obey. This dutie beeing practiſed, will miniſter true comfort vnto vs in time of diſtreſſe, yea, in the fearefull caſe of death it ſelfe. Hereby did good King Hezekias comfort himſelfe at his death, that hee had walked before the Lord with an vpright and perfect heart, Iſay. 38. And the word of God is plaine for this comfort, If our hearts condemne vs not, then wee haue boldneſſe towards God, 1. Ioh. 3. 21. alwaies prouided, we haue a good vnderſtanding of our dutie to God, for an ignorant conſcience will falſly excuſe.

Obedient hearing is true wiſdome.

II. Point. The propertie of this dutie: It is a part of great wiſedome, for he that heareth & obeyeth, is the onely wiſe man; I will liken him (ſaith Chriſt) vnto a wiſe man. This point is likewiſe with care to be remembred, that the hearing and doing of the word of God, is a ſpeciall part of true wiſdome; this is notably verefied in the 32. Pſalme, which is intituled Dauids learning; and indeed it is a notable Pſalme of learning, containing the ſumme of all religion; which Dauid bringeth to theſe two heads, his repentance and new obedience. So Deut. 4. 6. the peoples obedience to Gods commandements, is counted by Moſes, their wiſedome: and for this cauſe he there ſaith, they ſhall bee counted the wiſeſt people vnder heauen, becauſe they ſerued and obeyed the true God: to which purpoſe it is ſaid, The feare of God is the beginning of wiſdome, a good vnderſtanding haue all they that doe thereafter, Pſal. 111. 10.

Superiours dutie.

Hence we learne theſe inſtructions: 1. all ſuperiours, Magiſtrates, maſters, and parents, are bound to go before their inferiours in wiſdom, as they are aboue them in authoritie; and therfore conſidering obedience is true wiſdome, euery ſuperiour ought to goe before his inferiours in obedience to Gods commandements: for this is onely true wiſdome, without which all other wiſdome is but folly and madnes.

Students dutie.

2. Hence all ſtudents that profeſſe themſelues to ſeeke for wiſedome and learning, are taught eſpecially to giue themſelues to learne and obey the will & commandements of God; for this is true wiſdome, both before God and man. And it is a great blemiſh and diſgrace for any man of knowledge to lead a looſe & diſſolute life; this argues their want of Gods feare, which is the very ground of true wiſedome.

3. This giues a good caueat to ignorant perſons, who perſwade themſelues they may continue in their ignorance, becauſe they are not book-learned; but they deceiue themſelues, for obedience is true wiſdome: and therefore they muſt labour for ſo much knowledge as will bring them to this wiſedome here commended.

The true wiſedome of profeſſors.

Now to come more ſpecially too this true wiſdome, we muſt ſearch out wherein it lieth. This is expreſſed in theſe words, which hath builded his houſe on a rocke: which S. Luke ſetteth downe more largely, ch. 6. 48. ſaying, he digged deepe, and laid his foundation on a rocke. In which words, 3. parts of this wiſdome are propounded: 1. to dig deep: 2. to make choice of a rocke for a foundation; and 3. to build thereon.

1. part of it.

The builder is the profeſſor of the name of Chriſt; and this digging deepe to finde out a fit foundation, ſignifieth thus much; that he that would make ſure his owne ſaluation, muſt come to a deepe ſearch and examination of his owne corrupt heart, that he may know the iniquitie thereof: alſo he muſt renounce himſelfe and his pleaſures; and whatſoeuer may hinder him in this building he muſt caſt out: for without this deepe ſearch and ranſacking of the heart, there can be no ſure foundation laide, nor certaintie of ſaluation attained.

2. part of it.

The ſecond point of this wiſdom, is to chooſe a foundation to lay our ſaluation vpon; & that is the rocke Chriſt Ieſus himſelfe alone, God and man, hee is the cheife corner ſtone, on which the whole building is coupled, Eph. 2. 20. 21. neither is there ſaluation in any other: for among men there is giuen no other name vnder heauen, by which we muſt be ſaued, then Chriſt Ieſus onely, Act. 4. 12. and no other foundation can any man laie, then that which is alreadie laid, which is Ieſus Chriſt, 1. Cor. 3. 11. Chriſt is the rocke and corner ſtone: and true Chriſtians are liuing ſtones built vpon him, 1. Pet. 2. 5. As for our workes, they are fruits, but no part of this foundation, vnleſſe to them that build on the ſand, like fooliſh builders.

3. part. How we built on Chriſt.

Thirdly, hauing found a good foundation we muſt build thereon. Our ſoules and our ſaluation muſt be builded on Chriſt. This is done by our faith in Chriſt: for as mutual loue ioynes one man vnto another; ſo true faith makes vs one with Chriſt: Epheſ. 3. 17. the holy Ghoſt ſaith, that Chriſt doth dwell in our hearts by faith: and Pſalm. 125. 1. Hee that truſts in the Lord is as mount Sion that cannot be remooued. Yet here two caueats muſt be remembred: I. That Chriſt is a rocke; yet not euery way that man frames in his owne heart, but onely ſo as he hath offered himſelfe in the promiſe of the Goſpel, which is the word of the couenant of grace. And for this cauſe we muſt labour that this word of Gods grace may be rooted and grounded in our hearts by faith: for it is all one to beleeue in Chriſt, and to beleeue the Word that reueales Chriſt vnto vs: ſo ſaith our Sauiour, Hee that refuſeth mee and receiueth not my word, hath one that iudgeth him, Ioh. 12. 48. And, If yee abide in mee, and my words abide in you, Ioh. 15. 7. We therefore muſt be like the good ground: for as it receiues and keepes the good ſeede, ſo doth the good heart receiue & keepe the word of grace, which beeing rooted in our hearts keepe vs vnited vnto Chriſt, and therefore it is called the ingraffed word, Iam. 1. 21. which beeing mingled with faith in our hearts is profitable, for it knits vs faſt to Chriſt, and makes vs grow vp in him vnto perfection. II. Caueat. We muſt ſet all the maine affections of our heart on Chriſt: for hereby muſt we ſhew forth our faith. We muſt ſo eſteeme and loue Chriſt, as that in regard of him we count all things loſſe, and dung, with the Apoſtle; yea we muſt ſo delight in Chriſt, that we deſire him wholly, and receiue nothing into our hearts but Chriſt alone. Thomas deſired but to put his finger into his ſide, but we muſt goe further, and deſire to haue our ſoules waſhed in the blood that iſſued thence, and to haue our hearts poſſeſſed by his ſpirit, whome hee giueth to his Church.

Vſe. Seeing Chriſt Ieſus is the rocke of our ſaluation, our dutie is to haue our hearts rooted and founded on Chriſt. They which be as the ſtonie ground, heare and receiue the word, and it takes ſome rooting in them, and brings forth ſome fruit: but as the rooting is not deep, ſo the fruit is neuer ripe, and therefore when heat commeth it withereth: ſo it is with profeſſors: a man may be one in name, and bring forth ſome fruit of the word which hee heares, and yet be deceiued in the matter of his ſaluation, becauſe he is not rooted and founded in Chriſt. This is the point which Paul ſtands much vpon in ſundry of his Epiſtles: for ſhew of grace will not ſerue the turne. Indeede in theſe happie daies of peace any grace makes a man ſeem to be a Chriſtian: but when the parching heate of perſecution comes, vnleſſe we be throughly rooted in Christ, we ſhall neuer continue to the ende, nor bring forth fruite with patience.

III. Point. The fruit of this true obedience in which men by faith build themſelues on Chriſt Ieſus, is Securitie and ſafetie againſt all temptations of the Deuill, the fleſh, and the world: meant by the ſtanding of the houſe that was built vpon the rocke, notwithſtanding the falling of the raine, the beating of the floods, and the blowing of the windes, verſ. 25. A moſt notable fruite which nothing elſe but true obedience can procure vnto vs: wealth cannot miniſter this comfortable ſecuritie; nay the more wealth, oft times the more trouble; and vnto many, riches are the cauſes of a fearefull downfall. No ſtrength of man, nor power of any Prince can procure this ſafetie, and yet Chriſt vouchſafeth the ſame to them that heare his word and keepe it.

The conſideration hereof muſt mooue vs to be moſt willing and readie to performe obedience to that holy word of God which we read and heare: for ſuch a benefit come by it as no creature in the world can procure beſides: and the rather we muſt inure our ſelues hereto, becauſe our ſinnes deſerue an ende of theſe happy daies of peace, and we may iuſtly looke for the blacke daies of perſecution, which when they come will ſurely be our ruine, vnleſſe in theſe daies of peace we heare the word and doe it.

Secondly, from this fruit of true obedience we may gather, that he which once hath true faith in Chriſt rooted in his heart, ſhall neuer looſe the ſame either wholly or finally, but ſhal continue therein vnto the ende, and enioy the fruite thereof for euer. For by faith a man is truly built on Chriſt as on a moſt ſure foundation, ſo as neither temptations nor perſecutions can driue him off: though they may aſſault and ſhake him, yet they can neuer throw him down: but if a man might quite looſe his faith, then might he be beaté down that is built on Chriſt, which thing this text denieth.

Laſtly, this teacheth vs that hee that is built on Chriſt by faith, muſt looke for fearefull trialls and temptations: for he is like an houſe built on the ſea banke, against which winde and raine and waues doe all beate and rage. Gods ſeruants muſt not looke to goe to heauen in eaſe, but they muſt waite for tryalls and temptations comming hand in hand, as winde and raine, and wind and waue commonly doe: and therefore the more carefull and earneſtly muſt we labour to be ſurely grounded on Chriſt, that though they aſſault vs, yet they may not throw vs downe.

v. 26. But whoſoeuer heareth theſe my words, and doth them not, ſhall be likened vnto a fooliſh man, which hath builded his houſe vpon the ſande:

27. And the raine fell, & the floods came, and the windes blew, and beate vpon that houſe, and it fell, and the fall thereof was great.

In theſe verſes our Sauiour Chriſt layeth downe foure other points contrarie to the former, belonging to an euill hearer. The I. is the fault and bad practiſe of an euill hearer; to heare Chriſts words and not to doe the ſame: II. the propertie of this vice: it is a point of extreame follie: III. the practiſe of this follie, in building vpon the ſands: IV. the fruit and iſſue of this building: fearefull ruine and deſtruction. Of theſe in order.

I. Point. The practiſe of a bad hearer from which Chriſt would terrefie all men in this place is, To heare and not to doe. This is no ſmall fault. The ground that receiueth ſeede and raine both in meaſure and ſeaſon, and yet bringeth forth either bad fruite, or none at all, is by all men condemned for bad ground; the Apoſtle ſaith, it is neere vnto curſing, whoſe ende is to be burned, Hebr. 6. 8. The waters that come & iſſue from vnder the threſhold of the Sanctuarie, Ezek. 47. 1. whereby is meant the word of God, when they come into any ground they are of this nature, if they make it not fruitefull they turne it vnto barrennes, verſ. 11. A ſubiect that knowes his Princes will, and doth it not, is indeed no better then a rebel: how much more then is he that heares the word and Doctrine of ſaluation by Chriſt, and yet makes no conſcience to doe the ſame, to be iudged for bad & barren ground, yea for a rebell againſt God himſelfe. 1. Sam. 15. 23. Samuel telleth Saul that rebellion is as the ſinne of witchcraft, and tranſgreſſion is wickedneſſe and Idolatrie. And the reaſon is plaine, for they that ſubmit themſelues to heare Gods word, are ſundry wayes bound to performe obedience: firſt, by the law of creation, as they are Gods creatures: Secondly, by the law of redemption, as they are Chriſts ſeruants bought by his moſt precious blood. Thirdly, in regard of their Adoption, doption, as they are, or at leaſt hold themſelues to be his children in Chriſt: and fourthly, in regard of his mercifull prouidence whereof we haue daily experience; in regard of all theſe we ought by way of thankefulneſſe, to ſhewe our ſelues obedient vnto his word. And therefore he that heares the word of God and will not doe the ſame, ſinneth grieuouſly againſt God, which in it kinde God hateth as the ſinne of witchcraft. Now this ſinne of diſobedience is a common ſinne: We are all hearers, but where almoſt is the man that anſwerably is a doer? Men content themſelues with the bare action of hearing, like vnto the Papiſts who thinke God is well ſerued with the worke done: but the principall thing we omit, which is the treaſuring vp of Gods word in our hearts, that vpon iuſt occaſion wee might practiſe the ſame: yea, which yet is more lamentable, men are ſo farre from yeilding conſcionable obedience to the word, that the endeauour therunto is commonly iudged ſuperfluous niſenes and curious preciſeneſſe: but this ſinne of hearing and not doing wil bring many fearefull iudgements vpon vs, vnles by true repentance it be cut off.

The practiſe of a badde hearer.

How all hearers are bound to obedience.

The follie of profeſſors.

Iam.1.22.23.

II. Point. The propertie of this bad practiſe. It is a point of great follie: hee that heareth and doth not, ſhall bee likened vnto a fooliſh man. This the author of all wiſdome Chriſt himſelfe auoucheth: & the holy Ghoſt by S. Iames doth notably deſcribe this part of follie: They that be hearers and not doers, deceiue themſelues, beeing like vnto a man that beholdeth his naturall face in a glaſſe: either to ſpie out ſome ſpot, or diſcerne his owne countenance; but when hee hath conſidered himſelfe, hee goeth his way, and forgetteth immediatly what manner of one hee was.

Againe, this follie will further appeare in this: if a man ſhould ſhew forth great parts of wiſdom in ſundrie things pertaining to his bodie, and yet faile in the maine point of all, euery man would count his wiſdome but follie: Now ſuch are all they that heare the word of God and doe it not: they ſhew ſome parts of wiſedome in comming to heare, and in ſeeking to vnderſtand; and yet if they come not to practiſe they faile in the maine point of their ſaluation, which indeede ought to be ſought for in the firſt place.

Our common error in iudging men to be wiſe.

I. By this we may ſee how to correct and reforme our fooliſh conceite wee haue of men in the world. Wee thinke of thoſe that haue worldly wiſedome to bee able to goe beyond others in the greater affaires of this life, that they are the onely men, deſeruing beſt place of gouernment both in Church & commonwealth: But we muſt know, that theſe mẽ, though they haue neuer ſo good heads for the things of this life, yet if they faile in the knowledge of this dutie to God, or in the practiſe thereof, are here by our Sauiour Chriſt noted with the brand of follie. The rich man in the Goſpel had notable forecaſt for the augmenting of his wealth: A when his ſubſtance increaſed, hee could pull downe his barnes and make them greater, but yet becauſe hee failed in the maine point of his ſaluation, he is noted for a rich foole, Luk. 12. 20. And therefore in all ſorts and eſtates of men, he is the wiſeſt, who hath grace to know and anſwerably to obey the will of God.

A ... obedience.

II. This muſt excite vs to a carefull endeauour after true obedience to God in all his commãdements. We all deſire to be freed from the reproach of follie among men, and we take it for a great diſgrace to be counted fooles: well if we would auoid this ignominie indeed, let vs be willing to heare, and carefull to obey the word of Chriſt, both in thought, word, and deed: otherwiſe, let men iudge as they liſt, God B will account vs fooles.

VVho build on the ſand. 1. Papiſts. Concil.Trid. ſeſſ.6.cap.9. 10.16.

III. Point. The practiſe of this follie, which conſiſts in this; that hee builds his houſe vpon the ſands; whereby is ſignified another thing concerning the ſoule, namely, to build our ſaluation vpon inſufficient foundation; and that doth euery hearer of Gods word that makes not conſcience of obedience: for profeſſion is as it were the erecting or rearing of an houſe; and the not performing obedience withall, is the ſetting of this houſe vpon the ſands. There be three ſorts of men that thus build vpon the ſands. I. The Papiſt that will be iuſtified and ſaued by Chriſt: but yet withall hee muſt haue works of grace to concurre for the increaſe of C his iuſtification, and for the accompliſhment of his ſaluation. Now this is to build vpon the ſands, when we ioyne workes with Chriſt in the matter of ſaluation: for though Chriſt be a ſure rocke himſelfe, yet if wee will fortifie him by our works, we fall from this rocke into perdition, and our foundation is no better then ſand. Gal. 5. 2. Behold I Paul ſay vnto you, that if you be circumciſed, Chriſt ſhall profit you nothing: and, v. 4. Ye are fallen from Chriſt whoſoeuer will be iuſtified by the law: in which places the Apoſtle labours to ouerthrow the opinion of the Galatians learned of the falſe Apoſtles, which was to ioyne works with Chriſt in the matter of iuſtification: Rom. 9. 32. Chriſt became vnto the Iewes a rocke of offence, when as D they would be ſaued by the workes of the law.

2 Common Proteſtants.

A ſecond ſort that build vpon the ſands, are the common Proteſtants, by whome I meane ſuch as beare the name of Chriſtians, and yet reſt themſelues contented & ſatisfied with their ciuill liues; thinking, that becauſe they abſtaine from outward euill and groſſe ſinnes, and doe no man wrong, therefore God will hold them excuſed: whereupon they profeſſe religion more for obediẽce to the laws of men, then for conſcience to God. But this will not ſerue the turne, theſe men though they profeſſe Chriſt outwardly, yet in deede they denie him: for by their courſe (though it may be they think not ſo) they wil needs become Sauiours, and ſo Chriſts vnto themſelues; which thing they doe, when as they ſtay themſelues on their owne ciuill life. The Scribes and Phariſies for outward actions were very godly, and many of them liued vnblameably: but yet Chriſt ſaith to his Diſciples, Math. 5. 20. Except your righteouſneſſe exceede the righteouſnes of the Scribes and Phariſies, yee cannot enter into the kingdome of heauen. And Paul goes ſomewhat further, ſpeaking of himſelfe when hee was an Apoſtle, 1. Cor. 4. 4. I know nothing by my ſelfe, and yet am I not thereby iuſtified. This was a notable thing, for a man to walke ſo vprightly in his calling, that his own ſanctified conſciēce could not accuſe him of any offence therein, either againſt God or man, and yet this is nothing in the matter of iuſtification, wherein the righteouſnes of the whol law muſt be fulfilled, which cannot be done by the obedience of ſanctification, which is not perfect in this life, and therefore Paul deſires, not to be found of God therein, Phil. 3. 9. much leſſe by ciuill righteouſnes, which conſiſting onely in outward behauiour, may be in thoſe that neuer haue the ſpirit of grace to renue their ſoules, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth of the Gentiles, that ſome of them doe by nature the things contained in the Law: that is, outwardly: But without the ſpirit they are none of Chriſts; for he that hath not the ſpirit of God is none of his, Rom. 8. 9. neither can poſſibly enter into the kingdom of God, for except a man be borne againe of water, and of the holy Spirit, that is, be regenerate by the holy Ghoſt, he cannot enter into the kingdome of God.

The third ſort of thoſe that build vpon the ſand, is the Proteſtant that is more forward in religion then the former; I meane ſuch as doe heare the word of God ordinarily, & receiue it with ioy, bringing forth ſome good fruit thereof. It had beene hard, I muſt confeſſe, to haue called ſuch men fooliſh builders, without good warrant out of the word, but Ieſus Chriſt hath reuealed them to be ſuch, as build vpon the ſand, for in the parable of the Sower, Luk. 8. 13. They that receiue the ſeede in ſtonie ground, are they which heare the word, and incontinently with ioy receiue it: but they haue no rootes, which for a while beleeue, there is ſome fruit, but in time of temptation they goe away: of ſuch S. Iohn ſpeaketh, Ioh. 6. 66. From that time many of his Diſciples went backe, and walked no more with him. They were his followers, and heard him gladly, or elſe they ſhould neuer haue beene called his Diſciples, but their going backe doth plainely diſcouer their ſandy foundation: of ſuch alſo he ſpeaketh in his Epiſtle, They went out from vs, but they were not of vs: for a time they profeſſed Chriſt, and ſo were among the faithfull; but when trouble and perſecution came, becauſe of the word, then they went away, wanting true humilitie and ſound faith, whereby they ſhould haue beene built vpon Chriſt, which want in time of peace they could not eſpie.

Vſes. I. Seeing that men which heare and receiue the word of God with ioy, may build on a ſandie foundation, we muſt not content our ſelues herewith, but further pray to God for this one bleſſing, that hee would write his word in our hearts by the finger of his ſpirit, as hee writ the law on tables of ſtone in Mount Sinai: for our hearts are deceitful, as the prophet ſpeaketh, and in the time of peace will counterfeit grace, which in time of triall will vaniſh away as the myſt before the ſunne. Now God hath promiſed this bleſſing to his church in the new Teſtament, Ier. 31. 33. After thoſe daies, ſaith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and, Chap. 32. 40. I will put my feare in their hearts, that they ſhall not depart from me. This therefore we muſt pray for, that the word which we heare may enable vs to obedience in the time of peace, & arme and ſtrengthen vs againſt temptation in the day of triall, and ſo become the power of God to our ſaluation.

Ier. 17. 9.

II. This muſt mooue vs to looke vnto the deceitfulnes of our hearts. The caſe is waightie, reſpecting the eternall ſtate of our ſoules, and yet through ſpirituall guile may we eaſily deceiue our ſelues herein: for who would not thinke himſelfe to be in a good caſe, when he doth receiue the word with ioy, & bring forth ſome fruits thereof? This indeed is a good ſtep towards grace, but if we goe no further we deceiue our ſelues, this will not ſerue our turne in the time of triall; as yet we are but thoſe who receiue the ſeede on ſtonie ground: the graces which we make ſhew of will be like the graſſe on the houſe top, which withereth in the blade before it ſhoote forth. Wherfore we muſt look well to our ſoules, that in our profeſſion we carie a true heart toward God, and keepe a good conſciēce in our ſelues. And for this cauſe muſt ſee that we be throughly humbled in our ſelues for our ſins, that we truſt not in our ſelues, but in God, & make his mercie in Chriſt to be our chiefe treaſure. Alſo we muſt remember that we are not our own, but Gods: for he hath bought vs, and ſo we muſt not take libertie to diſpoſe of our ſelues as we liſt, but muſt ſubiect our ſelues wholly to his bleſſed will in all things. And becauſe he hath reuealed his wil in his holy word, according to which he would haue vs to frame our liues, we muſt indeauour to proue and trie what is the good will of God, and acceptable, and let the obedience of our liues expreſſe our faith in God, and reuerence towards his word: And if thus we make God in Chriſt our ioy and feare in the daies of peace, we ſhall be ſure to find him the rocke of our ſaluation in the time of triall.

III. Seeing men may receiue the word with ioy, and bring forth ſome fruit, and yet build vpon the ſand, we muſt not content our ſelues with this, that we know Chriſt to be a Sauiour, & do imbrace true religion in profeſſiō: but we muſt labour for the power of this knowledge in our ſelues, that we may know Chriſt to be our Sauiour, and may feele the power of his death to mortifie ſinne in vs, and the vertue of his reſurrection, to raiſe and build vs vp to newneſſe of life: for knowledge in the braine will not ſaue the ſoule; ſauing knowledge in religion is experimentall: & he that is truly founded vpon Chriſt, feeles the powre & efficacie of his death and reſurrection, effectually cauſing the death of ſinne and the life of grace, which both appeare by new obedience.

Fruit of bad hearing.

IV. Point. The effect and fruit of Bad hearing; that is, fearefull ruine, and deſtruction, reſembled by the iſſue of building on the ſands; v. 27. The raine fell, the floods came, and the wind blew, and beate vpon that houſe, &c. where two things are to be noted; Firſt, the cauſe of this fearefull ruine, The falling of the raine, and the beating of the floods and windes: Secondly the qualitie of this ruine; it is great and fearefull, The houſe fell, and the fall thereof was great.

Euery profeſſion muſt be tried.

For the firſt: Floods, and winde, and raine, do here betoken trials and temptations, which are here ſaid to befall the profeſſors of the name of Chriſt. Whence we learne, that euery one that doth profeſſe true religion, muſt look for a day of temptation and triall. It is Gods will that whoſoeuer taketh vpon him that profeſſion of his name, ſhould be tried and prooued what he is. Thus he permitted Adam preſently after his creation, to be tempted and tried by Satan; the ſmart whereof we all feele vnto this day: and God gaue Abraham a commandement of triall, when hee bade him take his onely ſonne Iſaac whome he loued, and offer him vp for a burnt offering in Mount Moriah, Gen. 22. 1. 2. So he left Hezekias to himſelfe to trie him, & to make knowne what was in his heart, when the Embaſſadours of the Princes of Babell came vnto him, to inquire of the wonder which God had done in the land, 2. Chron. 32. 31. And Iohn Baptiſt ſaith of Chriſt, that hee hath his fanne in his hand, to ſift and trie the good corne from chaffe, Matth. 3. 12. And Chriſt tells Peter, that the deuill ſought to winnow the Diſciples as wheat, Luk. 22. 31. And for the triall of his faith and patience, God gaue Iob and all that hee had into Satans hands, except his life, Iob. 1. 12. and 2. 6. And Chriſt tells the Church of Smyrna, Reuel. 1. 10. The deuill ſhall caſt ſome of you into priſon, that ye may be tried, and ye ſhall haue affliction ten daies. And S. Peter makes it a thing requiſite, that the faith of Gods ſeruants ſhould be tried by afflictions, as gold is tried in the fire, 1. Pet. 1. 7.

Our dutie in regard of trialls.

Vſe. We now haue by Gods mercie true religion maintained and profeſſed among vs, and are freed from the bondage of the Turke, Iew, and Papiſts in regard of their Idolatries and ſuperſtitions. Theſe are ineſtimable bleſſings, which we muſt labour to walke worthie of, and therefore muſt ſtand faſt in our profeſſion, and quit our ſelues like men in the maintainance of true religion, not ſuffering our ſelues to be depriued of it by any aduerſarie power: for times wil come whē we muſt be aſſaulted: the floods, winde, and raine of trialls and temptations wil beate vpon the houſe of our profeſſion; for God A hath ſo dealt with his deereſt ſeruants, and we may not looke to goe free. Now without a good foundation we ſhall not keepe our ſtanding: we muſt therefore in this happie time of peace and truth, which is to vs the day of grace and mercie, ſeriouſly labour to haue our hearts indued with ſome good meaſure of laſting grace, as of ſincere loue, ſound hope, and faith vnfained, which as good gold may abide the fierie triall of afflictions. This is Pauls counſell to the Coloſſians, chap. 2. 6, 7. Seeing you haue receiued Chriſt Ieſus the Lord, walke in him: that is, goe on forward in the ſame profeſſion: but how? rooted and built in him, and ſtabliſhed in the faith, as yee haue beene taught, abounding therein with thankeſgiuing. And when he had told the Epheſians B of the mightie ſpirituall enemies that they muſt wreſtle with, for the keeping of faith and a good conſcience: he bids them take vnto themſelues, the whole armour of God, and put it on, that they may be able to reſiſt and ſtand in the euill day, that is, the day of triall. In earthly kingdomes euery prudent and wel-gouerning ſtate wil haue munition in ſtore, and men in readines for their defence againſt an enemy: and ſurely in Gods kingdome euery one that doth profeſſe the truth, ſhould labour to be furniſhed with ſound grace, that they may be able to fight for the maintenance of the faith. If an houſholder knew that theeues would come vpon him, hee would not be taken vnprouided: well, we are C taught that trialls will come, and therefore let vs not be vnprepared.

Eph. 6. 10.

The ſecond point in this effect is the qualitie of this ruine and fall; it is great and fearefull: It fell, and the fall thereof was great. The thing reſembled hereby is moſt fearefull, to wit, that ſuch profeſſours of religion as in the daies of peace did not ioyne practiſe with their profeſſion, ſhall fall away in the time of triall, & come to moſt fearefull perdition: this is the principall point that Chriſt here aimes at, whereby he intends to terrifie men from diſſembled profeſſion. And the conſideration of it muſt worke effectually in our hearts: for we by Gods mercie and bleſſing haue had the light of the Goſpell for many yeares together, in ſuch meaſure as neD uer was in this land before: ſo as in regard of the meanes it may be ſaid of vs, as Chriſt ſaid of Capernaum, that wee are euen lifted vp to heauen, Matth. 11. 23. The true light now ſhineth, and in that regard, bleſſed are our eyes for they ſee, and our eares for they heare. But yet though the moſt among vs be hearers, where is our obedience? we haue indeed the blaſing lampe of outward profeſſion, but where is the oyle of grace? Alas, ſome among vs grow to be peremptorie & flat Atheiſts, denying God that made them, and making but a mocke of Ieſus Chriſt; others not a few, vnder the name of religion, roote their hearts in the world, ſome in profits, and ſom in pleaſures, & none of theſe almoſt regard religion: others profeſſe religion, and yet liue in groſſe ſinnes, as ſwearing, drunkenneſſe, vncleanneſſe, &c. making no conſcience of groſſe impietie in their liues: ſo that if we look into the generall ſtate of our people, we ſhall ſee that religion is profeſſed, but not obeyed: nay, obedience is counted preciſeneſſe, and ſo reproched: but we muſt know that in the end this prophaning of religion will ſoone turne all Gods bleſſings temporall and ſpirituall, into fearefull curſes both of bodie and ſoule. If euer any thing bring ruine vpon vs, it will be the contempt of Gods word profeſſed: and therefore let vs in the feare of God endeauour our ſelues not onely to know & heare the word of God, but to turne vnto God from all ſinne, and eſpecially in regard of this ſinne of diſobedience to the word of God.

Laſtly, Chriſt notes the qualitie of this fall to be exceeding great, to ſhew vnto vs the great danger of hypocriſie: for there is great difference betweene theſe three ſorts of men: a ſinner that makes no profeſſion of religion, an hypocrite that makes a great ſhew of pietie in profeſſion, and a true beleeuer whoſe life and conuerſatiō is anſwerable to his profeſſion. For a true profeſſor may fal into ſinne very fearefully, as Peter and Dauid did, and yet recouer againe. Alſo he that is a moſt notorious ſinner, as Manaſſes was, may be conuerted and repent. But when a profeſſor that is an hypocrite in religion is tried, he falls quite from Chriſt, and makes apoſtacie from his profeſſion: and in this regard his fall is called great. And therfore ſeeing profeſſors may thus fearefully fall away; let vs in the feare of God labour in ſome truth of heart to yeild obedience to that we heare.

V. 28. And it came to paſſe whē Ieſus had ended theſe words, the people were aſtonied at his doctrine.

29. For he taught as one hauing authoritie, and not as the Scribes.

Theſe two verſes containe the iſſue and euent of this ſermon of our Sauiour Chriſt in his hearers. And in them we may obſerue two points: firſt, the good fruit that came of this ſermon, v. 28. ſecondly, the cauſe and reaſon thereof, v. 29. The fruit was the aſtoniſhing of the people; which S. Matthew ſets out by three circumſtances: I. of the time, when it appeared, to wit, after the Sermon was ended: II. of the perſons in whom it was wrought, the people that is, the multitude: III. of the matter whereat they were aſtoniſhed, namely, at the doctrine of Chriſt.

Touching this aſtoniſhing of the people, in it many things are to be obſerued. I. That though the perſon of our Sauiour Chriſt were lowly and baſe, yet his doctrine in preaching was of great force in the mindes of his hearers, for it did amaſe and aſtoniſh them. This cauſed the officers that were ſent to take him to returne without him, alleadging the maieſtie of his doctrine for the reaſon of their fact, Neuer man ſpake as this man did, Ioh. 7. 46. and when the gouernours came with a band of men to apprehend him, ſo ſoone as he did but tell them he was the Chriſt, they went backward, and fell to the ground, Ioh. 18. 6.

This ſheweth vnto vs, that the voice and ſentence of Chriſt giuen at the laſt day of iudgement will be moſt fearefull and terrible. For if his words were thus powrefull in his baſe eſtate of humilitie, what force will they then haue, when hee ſhall come in glorie and maieſtie in the cloudes, accompanied with thouſands of Angels, when as his ſight ſhall be ſo terrible, that men ſhall call to the mountaines to fall vpon them, and to the rockes to grind them in peices, if it were poſſible? well, let the conſideration hereof moue vs to be obedient to his voice in the miniſterie of his word; otherwiſe, will we nill we, we ſhall one day be ſubiect to that fearefull voice of condemnation, Goe ye curſed into euerlaſting fire.

Aſtoniſhment at the word no ſure ſigne of conuerſion.

II. Doctrine. This aſtoniſhment of the people argues ſome feare and reuerence in them towards Chriſt, which is ſome commendation vnto them: and yet it prooues not the truth and ſoundneſſe of their faith and conuerſion (though no doubt many that heard him were hereby conuerted:) for a man may be amazed at Chriſts doctrine, and yet not be conuerted thereby. Luk. 4. 22. the people of Capernaum did marueilouſly affect the Doctrine of our Sauiour Chriſt, admiring it, and yet they beleeued not in him, but tooke exceptions againſt him, becauſe he was ſonne to Ioſeph the Carpenter. Pharaoh, Saul, and Ahab, when they were reprooued by Moſes, Samuel, and Eliah, they were oftentimes much amazed & confounded in themſelues: and yet they did neuer truely turne from their ſinnes: And in this place, I take it, this aſtoniſhment of the people is recorded, rather for the commendation of Chriſts miniſterie, then to note out the faith and conuerſion of the people.

This we are to obſerue for ſpeciall cauſe: for it is the ordinarie manner of the moſt of our hearers to marke more or leſſe what is ſpoken, to approoue the doctrine, and to ſpeake well of the Miniſter, which be good things in their kind: but yet this is not enough: we muſt further labour to receiue the word by faith, to repent of our ſinnes, and to conforme our hearts and liues vnto the word: Luk. 11. 27. when a woman, thorough admiration at Chriſts doctrine, pronounced her bleſſed that bare him, and the paps that gaue him ſucke: Chriſt tooke occaſion thence to giue vnto her and the reſt of the hearers this leſſon: nay, rather bleſſed are they that heare the word of God, and doe it. Act. 2. 37.

at the firſt ſermon of Peter after the giuing of the holy ghoſt, the people were greatly amaſed at his doctrine, and beeing pricked in conſcience, cried, Men and brethren, what ſhall wee doe? now Peter ſuffers them not to ſtand ſtill in this aſtoniſhment, but labours further to bring thē to true faith and repentance, and to haue the ſame by baptiſme confirmed vnto them, ſaying Amend your liues, and be baptized, v. 38. And ſo dealt Paul with the Iaylor that would haue killed himſelfe vpon the ſuddaine ſight of the priſon doore beeing open; for after he was truely humbled he brought him to beleeue.

Act.16.27-31.

Queſt. Why Chriſt conuerted ſo few. Act.2.41.

It may be here demanded, why our Sauiour Chriſt at this Sermon did no more to the moſt of his hearers, but cauſed them to wonder, when as the Apoſtles cōuerted many thouſands at ſome one Sermon: and after brought the whole bodie of the Gentiles to the faith. Anſ. No doubt he was able to haue conuerted them all, and we may perſwade our ſelues here were many conuerted, though it be not recorded, and though indeede the moſt were onely aſtoniſhed. But this came ſo to paſſe that his promiſe made to his Diſciples might be verified, Ioh. 14. 12. which was, that they ſhould doe greater workes then Chriſt did; whereof this queſtionleſſe was one, to conuert moe in their miniſtery then Chriſt did. And the cauſes hereof were two: I. that our Sauiour Chriſt might ſhewe himſelfe willing to vndergo that baſe eſtate of a Seruant wherein hee was borne and continued till his exaltation; therefore he was content to reſtraine the powre of his Godhead euen from his miniſterie, vntill he were exalted into glorie: II. that he might make it manifeſt in his Apoſtles times, that beeing aſcended he did not onely ſit at the right hand of his father, that is, rule as a King ouer all in his princely office; but alſo that he did indeede gouerne his Church by his word and ſpirit: and this reaſon Chriſt addeth, Ioh. 14. v. 12. to prooue that his Diſciples ſhould do greater works then he did, becauſe he went vnto his father, there to rule and gouerne his Church.

It may yet further be asked, why Chriſt did not conuert them all, ſeeing he was able being true and very God? Anſ. No doubt (as hath beene ſaid) many were here conuerted, yet not all, becauſe Chriſt was now the miniſter of circumciſion, (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) that is, though in regard of his perſon he were the prophet of the whole Catholike church; yet at this time in this action he was preacher only to the Church of the Iewes: in which regard he performed this dutie as man onely, and ſo could doe no more but deliuer his Fathers will vnto them, and ſhewe himſelfe willing to conuert them. And in this manner he ſpeaks vnto Ieruſalem, Matth. 23. 37. O Ieruſalem, Ieruſalem, —— how often would I haue gathered thy children, as a henne gathereth her chickens, I would, but yee would not: that is, as the miniſter of circumciſion in mine owne perſon, and as God in the miniſtery of my Prophets. Thus much of the aſtoniſhment it ſelfe. Now follow the circumſtances whereby it is amplified and ſet out, and they are three.

Rom.15.8.

Silence i the holy ſemblies the Chu

The firſt circumſtance is the time when they were aſtoniſhed, namely, when the ſermon was ended. No doubt they were amaſed in the time of his deliuerie: but yet they were ſilent all that while, and ſhewed no ſignes of their affection til the ſermon was ended. And this good order ought to be obſerued of all Gods people in the publike miniſtery of the word. In the building of the materiall temple, there was no noiſe or knocking heard ſo much as of an hammer: whereby was ſignified that in the aſſemblies of the Saints where Gods ſpiritual temple is building, there ſhould be the like heauenly order obſerued; men ſhould heare with quietnes & ſilence, and ſhew their affections afterward.

Secondly, we are here taught to labour not onely to be affected in the Act of hearing while the doctrine is deliuered, but to treaſure it vp in our hearts, that we may afterward be affected with it as this multitude was.

Chriſt p ched pla

The ſecond circumſtance here noted, is the perſons who were thus aſtonied: to wit, the people or the multitude: for after the ſermon was ended they gathered themſelues into companies, and make knowne one to another the affections of their hearts toward Chriſts doctrin. Hence we may gather, that our Sauiour Chriſt deliuered his doctrine plainly, vnto the conſcience of the meaneſt, and to the capacitie of the ſimpleſt; elſe they could not thereby haue bin brought to wonder. And this is a preſident for all Miniſters to follow in their diſpenſation of the word: ſo did Paul, 2. Cor. 4. 2. 3. in ſuch plaineneſſe deliuer the word of God, that if it were hid, hee ſaith, it was hid to them which periſh.

Carnall preachi

The third circumſtance, is the obiect of their aſtoniſhment; that is, his doctrine: They were aſtonied at his Doctrine. This teacheth vs, that the word of God muſt be ſo deliuered that the Doctrine it ſelfe may affect the hearers. It is a carnal thing for a man ſo to preach, as the conſideration of his wit, of his memorie, of his eloquence, of his great reading, may affect the hearers; many worthy parts (no doubt) were in our Sauiour Chriſt, for which he might well be admired; and yet in the diſpenſation of his word, he labours by his doctrin onely to affect his hearers: and ſo muſt all they do that will be followers of Chriſt.

The auth ry of Ch miniſter

II. Point. Thus much for the fruite of Chriſts ſermon: Now followes the cauſe thereof, which is Chriſts authoritie in teaching, v. 29. for he taught as one hauing authoritie, not as the Scribes. This authoritie in Chriſts miniſterie was cauſed from three things; I. From the matter of his ſermon. II. From the manner of his deliuerie. III. From the things that accompanied his teaching.

Cauſes o

1. The m cing.

I. The matter of his ſermon was the incomparable excellencie of heauenly doctrine; thus much his enemies the Scribes that came to tempt him did confeſſe, Matt. 12. 14. Maſter, thou art true, and teacheſt the way of God truely. And this was long before confirmed by Moſes, who deliuered the promiſe of Chriſt vnto the people, into whoſe mouth God would put his word, Deut. 18. 18. and Ioh. 7. 16. Chriſt confeſſeth that his doctrine was not his owne, but his Fathers that ſent him.

II. The manner of his teaching was heauenly, and this ſhewed it ſelfe in ſundry things: for, I. Chriſt taught in his owne name as a Lord of his doctrine, and not as a meſſenger or interpreter thereof, as the Prophets were. II. His ſpeach and deliuerie was with ſpeciall grace: Luk. 4. 22. The people wondered at the gratious words that proceeded out of his mouth, wherein he expreſſed his humilitie, his meekeneſſe, loue, mercie, and compaſſion, plainely ſhewing by his ſpeach that he was indued with all gifts of the ſpirit aboue meaſure: in this regard it is ſaid, Iſai. 50. 4. God gaue him (that is, Chriſt) the tongue of the learned, to bee able to ſpeake a word in due ſeaſon, for the comfort and appeaſing of a diſtreſſed conſcience; which no man but Chriſt is able to doe. III. As he deliuered the word vocally vnto the outward eare, ſo he was able by the powre of his Godhead, to make his hearers giue attendance, and to receiue and beleeue that which hee taught. And laſtly, his zeale for his fathers glorie, and his earneſt deſire to bring the ſoules of men vnto ſaluation, which were principall endes of his miniſterie, did alſo adde grace and authoritie thereto.

III. The things that went with his doctrin did alſo cauſe authoritie in his miniſterie; and theſe were two: I Miracles; as curing the ſicke, and caſting out deuills; which did greatly confirme his doctrine vnto his hearers: Mark. 7. 37. when he had cured one that was both deafe and dumbe, the people were beyond meaſure aſtoniſhed. II. An vnblameable life; for he was Ieſus Chriſt the righteous, who performed all things that the law required, fulfilling the will of God in ſuffering, and ſuffering in his obedience.

Further, note the phraſe, in the originall it is ſaid here, Hee was teaching; that is, it was his vſuall manner and cuſtome, thus to preach with authoritie. Herein Chriſt is a notable preſident vnto vs for ſundry duties.

Firſt, hereby euery miniſter of Gods word is taught to maintaine the credit of his miniſtrie, and to preſerue the ſame from contempt; eſpecially in his owne place, and in his own perſon: though Chriſt were here in a meane and baſe eſtate, yet he would not ſuffer his calling to be contemned, but gets grace thereunto. And Paul chargeth Timothie, to ſee that no man deſpiſe his youth, 1. Tim. 4. 12. and to Titus he giues the like commandement, Tit. 2. 15. Theſe things ſpeake, and exhort and rebuke with all authoritie. See that no man deſpiſe thee. Now in the exãple of Chriſt, we ſhall ſee how this is done, not by outward pompe & eſtate, or by earthly meanes: but by truth and ſoundnes of doctrine, by zeale for Gods glorie, & for the good of mens ſoules and by an vnblameable life.

Right manner of preaching.

Secondly, hence all Gods miniſters (if they will be followers of Chriſt) muſt learne not onely to teach ſound and heauenly doctrine, but to obſerue therein a diuine and ſpirituall manner of teaching: 1. Cor. 2. v. 4. and 13. Paul ſaith, his preaching was not in humane wiſedome, but in the plaine euidence of the ſpirit; comparing ſpirituall things with ſpirituall things: which is then done, when the people may acknowledge the grace of God in the teacher. As it is ſaid of the ignorant man who is rebuked of the Prophets, 1. Cor. 14. 25. Hee falls downe on his face, and ſaith plainely, God is in you indeede. There is great difference to be made betweene diſcourſing in Philoſophie, which may be done by humane wit, and preaching in diuinitie. He that can diſcourſe well in Philoſophie, cannot therupon preſently preach and diſpenſe the word of God aright; for preaching is a ſpirituall dutie, which cannot be performed by naturall gifts only. The Prophet Iſay muſt haue his tongue touched with a cole from Gods altar, before he could ſpeake and vtter Gods word vnto the people: and Paul the moſt famous of the Apoſtles, deſireth in all his Epiſtles, to be praied for, that his mouth might bee opened: whereby he doth ſignifie, that to deliuer wholſome doctrine in ſpirituall manner, for the glorie of God, and the good of his people, is a great matter, and cannot by naturall gifts be attained vnto. And indeed this is that teaching which ſaues the ſoule, and affects the heart of him that belongs to God; which is the thing that euery miniſter of Gods word ought to labour for.

Iſa. 6. 6. 7.

We muſt maintain the dignitie of our profeſſion.

Thirdly, ſeeing Chriſt in his preaching doth maintaine the authoritie of his miniſterie, euery man in his place is taught to maintaine and preſerue the dignitie of his profeſſion. We are all of vs by our profeſſion Chriſtians, and by baptiſme the ſonnes & daughters of God, now our dutie is to walke worthie this our calling, & to take heed we bring it not into contempt. It is a moſt heinous wickedneſſe for any man to bring a ſlaunder vpon the name and religion of God; and yet nothing is more frequent in this our age: for men wil needs be chriſtians in profeſſion, and therefore will receiue the Sacraments which be the higheſt top ſailes of al profeſſion: and yet in their liues they are profane, and liue as they liſt; yea, and if others will not ioyne with them in their wickednes, they will not ſpare to ſcorne and reuile them. But herein they ſinne fearefully, in diſhonouring their profeſſiõ; and though they charge others with hypocriſie, that endeauour in ſome truth to be anſwerable to their profeſſion, yet they thẽſelues practiſe moſt groſſe hypocriſie, when as they will beare the name of Chriſtians in profeſſi-

[illegible] communicate with vs in the Lords holy ordinances, & yet make no conſcience of ſinne, but ſcorne thoſe that doe. Epheſ. 4.1. Paul prai-ed for the Epheſians, that they might walke wor-thie the vocation whereunto they were called: and Titus 2.7. he exhorts Titus hereunto, that in all things he ſhould ſhew himſelfe an enſample of good workes, with vncorrupt doctrine, with grauitie and integritie, &c. Yea verſe 10. he requires ſer-uants to ſhew ſuch faithfulnes in their ſeruice, that they may adorne the doctrine of God.

Right man-ner of prea-ching.

(And not as the Scribes.) For firſt, they failed in the matter; they deliuered not the doctrine of God, but the traditions of men about waſh-ings and ſuch things. Secondly, they failed in the manner, they taught coldly, and without zeale. Thirdly, they failed in the end, they taught in pride and ambition, ſeeking themſelues, & not Gods glorie. But Chriſt, as we haue ſeene, taught farre otherwiſe: and although he miſli-ked their preaching, both for matter, manner, and end, yet he vouchſafed to heare them, or elſe how could he haue reprooued theſe things in them? Which ſhewes that Chriſt would not ſeparate himſelfe from their aſſemblies, whoſe doctrine he diſliked, with the deliuerie thereof. And therefore no man ought to ſeuer himſelfe from the Church of England, for ſome wants that be therein: We haue the true doctrine of Chriſt preached among vs by Gods bleſſing, and though there be corruptions in manners a-mong vs, yea, and though they could iuſtly find fault with our doctrine; yet ſo long as wee hold Chriſt, no man ought to ſeuer himſelfe from our Church. And thus much for this Ser-mon.

Separation from our Church is vnlawfull.

TO THE NOBLE AND VERTVOVS GENTLEMEN,

Sir IOHN SHEAFFIELD, Knight, and M. OLIVER S. IOHN: Sonnes and Heires to the Right Honourable EDMVND Lord Sheaffield, Lord Preſident of the North, and OLIVER Lord S. IOHN, Baron of Bletſho: Grace, and peace.

THe gracious promiſes of God (Honourable and moſt worthy Gentlemen), made to the holy Patriarks, touching the Land of Canaan, were ſingular comfort to the beleeuing Iſraelites, in their bondage of Egypt. And the renewing of the ſame by the hand of Moſes (whoſe words God confirmed by ſo many miracles) muſt needes augment their ioy abundantly, although their bonds at that time encreaſed. But, the pledge of Gods preſence in the cloudie pillar, whereby he led them in the wilderneſſe both night and day, did ſo farre exceede all the promiſes for the matter of conſolation, that euen Moſes himſelfe deſired rather to be detained from the promiſed Land, then depriued of the comfort of that his preſence in the way: If thy preſence (ſaith hee) goe not before vs, bid vs not depart hence. Exod. 33. 15. Now, theſe things beeing enſamples vnto vs, and euident types of our eſtate who liue 1. Cor. 10. 6. vnder the Goſpel, ſhewe apparantly, that howſoeuer Beleeuers be greatly cheered in their ſpirituall trauell, by the gratious promiſes which God in Chriſt hath made vnto them; yet this their ioy is much encreaſed, by the view of thoſe that haue gone before them in the way of faith; who are vnto them as a Cloud of Witneſſes, or a cloudie Pillar. For, howſoeuer the truth of God be the onely ground of ſound conſolation: yet becauſe wee are a kinne to Thomas, and will not beleeue vnleſſe we ſee, and ſeele; therefore it is, that by the example of Beleeuers (wherein is ſome ſenſible euidence of the comfort of Gods truth) we are farre more cheered, then by the promiſe it ſelfe alone.

Here then beholde what great cauſe we haue to caſt our eyes vpon this Cloude of Witneſſes, which the holy Ghoſt hath erected as a pledge of his preſence, and a direction to all thoſe that ſhall followe their ſteps in the practiſe of faith, till the worlds ende. Shall Moſes affect that cloude ſo much, which led them onely the way to a temporall inheritance: and ſhall not we much more be rauiſhed with delight in this Cloud, which leades vs to the kingdome of heauen: In all eſtates the iuſt muſt liue by faith: For, We Heb. 10. 38. walke by faith, and not by ſight. And what is the hope and happineſſe of a Chriſtian 2. A COMMENTARIE VPON THE 11. CHAPTER OF the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes.

VERSE 1.

Now Faith is the ground of things which are hoped for: and the euidence of things not ſeene.

CONcerning Faith, two points are neceſſarie to be knowne of euery Chriſtian; the doctrine, and the practiſe of it: the whole doctrine of faith (beeing grounded and gathered out of the word of God) is compriſed in the Creede, commonly called the Apoſtles Creede: which beeing alreadie by vs expounded, it followeth in order (next after the doctrine) to lay downe alſo the practiſe of faith: for which purpoſe we haue choſen this 11. chap. to the Hebrewes, as beeing a portion of Scripture, wherein the ſaid practiſe of faith is moſt excellently and at large ſet downe.

This Chapter depends on the former, thus: We may read in the former chapter, that many Iewes hauing receiued the faith, & giuen their names to Chriſt, did afterward fall away; therefore towards the ende of the Chapter, there is added a notable exhortation tending to perſwade the Hebrewes to perſeuere in faith vnto the ende, as alſo to ſuffer patiently what euer ſhall befall them in the profeſſion of it: and to vrge the exhortation, there are diuers reaſons, not needefull to be alleadged: for they concerne not the preſent purpoſe.

Now, in this chapter he continues the ſame exhortation: and the whole Chapter (as I take it) is nothing elſe in ſubſtance, but one reaſon to vrge the former exhortation to perſeuerance in faith; and the reaſon is drawne from the excellencie of faith: for this chapter doth diuerſe waies ſet downe what an excellent gift of God faith is: his whole ſcope therefore is manifeſt to be nothing elſe, but to vrge them to perſeuere & continue in that faith, prooued at large to be ſo excellent a thing: and indeede he could not bring a better argument to mooue them to loue and hold faſt their faith, then by perſwading them of the excellencie of it. For common reaſon bids vs not onely chuſe, but A hold faſt that that is excellent.

Out of this coherence we may learne in a word, that perſeuerance in faith is a matter not of ordinarie neceſſitie, nor of meane excellencie, to the vrging whereof the author of this Epiſtle vſeth ſo large and ſo forcible an exhortation; in ſo much as, whereas ordinarie exhortations occupie the roome of one or ſome fewe verſes, this is continued through diuerſe chapters.

The parts of this whole chapter are two;

1. A generall deſcription of Faith, from the 1. v. to the 4.

2. An illuſtration or declaration of that deſcription, by a large rehearſall of manifold examples of auncient and worthy men in the olde Teſtament, from the 4. v. to the end. Of theſe
B two in order.

The deſcription of Faith conſiſts of three actions or effects of faith, ſet downe in three ſeuerall verſes.

The firſt effect in the firſt verſ. Faith makes things which are not (but onely are hoped for) after a ſort to ſubſiſt and to be preſent with the beleeuer.

The ſecond is in the 2. v. Faith makes a beleeuer approoued of God.

The third in the 3. v. Faith makes a man vnderſtand and beleeue things incredible to ſenſe and reaſon.

C Of theſe in order.

Now Faith is the ground of things which are hoped for: and the euidence of things which are not ſeene.

This firſt ver. containes the firſt effect in the deſcription of faith, wherein firſt let vs ſee the true meaning of the words: ſecondly, what inſtructions they doe naturally yeeld vnto vs. For the meaning, we muſt examine the words ſeuerally. Now faith

Faith in the word of God, is ſpecially of three ſorts; Hiſtoricall, Miraculous, Iuſtifying or ſauing faith.

A 1. Hiſtoricall faith; is not onely a knowledge of the word, but an aſſent of the heart to the truth of it: and this faith is generall not onely to all men, good and bad, but euen to the deuills themſelues: Iam. 2.19. Thou beleeueſt there is one God, thou doſt well: the deuills alſo beleeue it and tremble. Now he that will beleeue out of the Scripture there is one God, hee will beleeue hiſtorically any thing in the Scripture.

2. Miraculous, or the faith of miracles: which is, An inward perſwaſion of the heart, wrought by ſome ſpeciall inſtinct of the holy Ghoſt in ſome man, whereby he is truely perſwaded, that God wil vſe him as his inſtrument for the working of ſome miracles: this alſo is
B generall, both to elect and reprobate, Iudas had it with the reſt of the Apoſtles.

3. Sauing (commonly called Iuſtifying) faith, which is, A ſpeciall perſwaſion wrought by the holy Ghoſt in the heart, of thoſe that are effectually called, concerning their reconciliation and ſaluation by Chriſt.

Of theſe three ſorts of faith, the third is principally meant, in this place. And although in the deſcription, & ouer all the chapter, there are ſome things that agree to other faith then it; yet I ſay the generall ſcope in this chapter, is principally of that faith that ſaues a man. It becomes vs therefore to learne carefully the inſtructions that concerne the practiſe of this faith, for it is no leſſe then a ſauing faith.

Secondly, it is ſaid; This faith is the ground
C or ſubſtance; for the word ſignifieth both. The meaning is: things hoped for, as yet are not, and ſo haue no beeing nor ſubſtence: Now faith that beleeues the promiſes, and applyeth them, that faith giues to thoſe things which yet are not (after a ſort) a ſubſtance or ſubſiſtence in the heart of the beleeuer: ſo that that thing which neuer had, nor yet hath a beeing in it ſelfe, by this faith hath a beeing in the heart of the beleeuer; this I take to bee the true meaning.

Thirdly, it followeth of what things this faith is the ground or ſubſtance: namely, of things hoped for, and things not ſeene. And theſe bee of two ſorts: either in regard of the Fathers of the old teſtament alone, or of them & vs both.

D Of the firſt ſort were theſe two: 1. The incarnation of Chriſt. 2. The publiſhing of the Goſpel, both to Iewe and Gentile in a glorious manner: both theſe were hoped for of them, but we haue ſeene them: to them they had a beeing onely in faith, to vs a beeing in themſelues.

Now vnto the Fathers of the old teſtament, their faith gaue theſe two things a beeing in their hearts and ſoules, though they came not to paſſe many hundreth yeares after.

There are other things which wee hope for as well as they, which are to come, & not ſeene in reſpect of vs both: and they be ſixe.

1. Iuſtification, ſtanding in the remiſſion of ſinnes.

2. Sanctification in this life.

3. The perfection and accompliſhment of our ſanctification after this life.

4. The Reſurrection of the bodie, and reuniting it with the ſoule.

5. Glorification of bodie and ſoule.

6. Life euerlaſting, and glorie with God in heauen.

Theſe they ſaw not with the eye of the bodie, neither doe we; yet they hoped for them, and ſo doe we: they had no beeing in themſelues to them, neither haue they as yet to vs: but this true ſauing faith gaue to them, giues to vs, and will giue to euery beleeuer, whilſt the world laſteth, ſuch a certaine aſſurance of them that they ſeeme preſent vnto vs, and we ſeeme preſently to enioy them: we cannot enioy any of them fully; but ſauing Faith hath this power, to giue them all a preſent beeing in our hearts, and vs ſuch a reall poſſeſſion of them, as greatly delighteth a Chriſtian ſoule: inſomuch as the feeling of the ſweetneſſe of this glorie, though it be to come, ouerwhelmeth the feeling of a worldly miſerie, though it be preſent.

Fourthly, it is added, And the euidence.

This word ſignifieth and teacheth vs two things concerning faith.

1. Faith is an euidence, &c. that is, Faith ſo conuinceth the mind, vnderſtanding, & iudgement, as that it cannot but muſt needes, yea it compelleth it by force of reaſons vnanſwerable, to beleeue the promiſes of God certenly.

2. It is an euidence: that is, whereas life euerlaſting and all other things hoped for, are inuiſible, and were neuer ſeene of any beleeuer ſince the world beganne: this ſauing faith hath this power and propertie, to take that thing in it ſelfe inuiſible, and neuer yet ſeene, and ſo liuely to repreſent it to the heart of the beleeuer, and to the eye of his minde, as that after a ſort he preſently ſeeth and enioyeth that inuiſible thing, and reioyceth in that ſight, and enioying of it: and ſo the iudgement is not onely conuinced, that ſuch a thing ſhal come to paſſe, though it be yet to come: but the mind (as farre as Gods word hath reuealed, and as it is able,) conceiues of that thing, as beeing really preſent to the view of it.

Let one example ſerue for all: Life euerlaſting is a thing hoped for: now Faith, not onely by infallible arguments grounded vpon the word and promiſe of God, conuinceth a mans iudgement, that it ſhall come to paſſe, (inſomuch as hee dare ſay; that he knoweth certainely, there is a life euerlaſting, as that hee liueth and mooueth,) but this Faith alſo (as much as Gods word hath reuealed, and as farre forth as the minde of man is able to conceiue of it,) ſo repreſenteth this life euerlaſting to the eye of the ſoule, as that the ſoule ſeemeth to apprehend and enioy this life euerlaſting: yea, and often in ſuch meaſure, as that he contemneth the world, & all the preſent felicity of it, in compariſon of that meaſure of the ioyes thereof, which faith repreſenteth to his ſoule: and thus faith makes that preſent which is abſent: and makes that manifeſt and viſible, which in it ſelfe is inuiſible: Inuiſible to the eyes of the bodie, it makes viſible to the eye of the ſoule; the ſight of which eie is both giuen and continued, and daily ſharpened by ſauing faith. And thus faith is a moſt excellent euidence of things not ſeene. So then the whole ſumme of this firſt effect, is briefly thus much; whereas things to be beleeued, as perfection of ſanctification, reſurrection, glorification, &c. are not yet ſeene, neither can be, in that they are not yet come to paſſe; yet if a man haue grace certainly to beleeue the promiſes of God, theſe things ſhall haue a beeing to his ſoule: in that both his iudgement knoweth aſſuredly they ſhall come to paſſe, and his ſoule inmoſt liuely and ioyfull repreſentations, ſeemeth to enioy them.

Hitherto of the meaning of the firſt effect.

Now in the ſecond place, let vs ſee what inſtructions this firſt effect thus vnfolded doth miniſter vnto vs.

Firſt, whereas faith giues a ſubſtance, & beeing to things that are not, we learne that the fathers in the old Teſtament that liued before the incarnation of Chriſt, were truely partakers of the bodie and blood of Chriſt.

If any alleadge that this is ſtrange, conſidering that Chriſt had then no bodie and blood, neither had he any vntill the Incarnation; and how then could they receiue that which then was not?

I graunt it is true, they then had no beeing, and yet the Fathers receiued them: but how can this be? I anſwer by the wonderfull power of ſauing faith, which makes things that are not in nature, to haue in ſome ſort a beeing and ſubſiſtence: and ſo was Chriſt (though he was to come) preſent to the beleeuers of the olde time. For, Apoc. 13. 8. Chriſt is a Lambe ſlaine from the beginning of the world: that is, ſlaine as well then as now: and that not onely in the counſell and decree of God, whereby hee is borne and ſlaine in all times and places: not onely in regard of the eternall power, efficacie, and merit of his death, but alſo euen in reſpect of the heart of the beleeuer, whoſe faith makes that, that is locally abſent, after a ſort truely and really preſent: euen ſo alſo is Chriſt a Lambe ſlaine from the beginning of the world.

See a plaine demonſtration hereof in Ioh. 8. 56. Abraham ſawe me (ſaith Chriſt) and reioyced: How could this be, when as Chriſt was not borne of a thouſand yeares after. Anſ. This could not be in reaſon, but it was indeede to Abrahams faith: whereby he ſawe Chriſt more liuely, and more to his ioy and conſolation, ſo many 100. yeares afore he was; then many which liued in Chriſts time, and ſaw him, and heard him, and conuerſed with him: for they liuing with him, yet were as good as abſent from him, becauſe they beleeue not in him. And Abraham, though Chriſt was ſo far from him, yet by his faith was preſent with him. Againe, 1. Cor. 10. 3. the auncient beleeuing Iſraelites ate the ſame ſpirituall bread, and dranke the ſame ſpirituall rocke, and that rocke was Chriſt: How could they eate and drinke Chriſt ſo long before he was? I anſwer, they did it by reaſon of that wonderfull power of faith, which makes a thing abſent, preſent to the beleeuer: by that faith they receiued Chriſt, as liuely, as effectually, as much to their profit and comfort, as we doe ſince his comming.

If any man aske how could their faith apprehend that, that then was not; I anſwer, by giuing them intereſt and title to it: and ſo the fathers are ſaid by faith to haue receiued Chriſt, becauſe their faith gaue them right and title in Chriſt, and in their hearts they felt the efficacie of his death and reſurrection, whereby they died to ſinne, and were renewed in holyneſſe, as well as we are now by the ſame efficacie.

Secondly, whereas faith makes things abſent, preſent;

Here they are confuted that teach that the Lords ſupper is no Sacrament, vnleſſe the body and blood of Chriſt be either truely turned into the bread and wine, or at leaſt be in or about the bread; and that ſo he is locally preſent, and muſt locally and ſubſtantially be receiued: and this (ſay they) is the moſt comfortable receiuing of Chriſt: for what comfort is it to receiue one abſent? but theſe men knowe not this notable prerogatiue of true faith, Faith giues beeing to things which are not, and makes things preſent which are abſent: they therefore that will haue Chriſt locally preſent, they take this noble prerogatiue from faith: for here is nothing abſent, which faith ſhould make preſent: we neede not goe in this Sacrament to require a corporall preſence: it is ſufficient if we haue true faith; for that makes him preſent much more comfortably, then it might be his bodily preſence would be vnto vs.

If any man aske how this can be? I anſwer, The faith of the receiuer knoweth beſt; and yet reaſon can ſay ſomething in this caſe: for ſuppoſe a man looke earneſtly vpon a ſtarre; there are many thouſand miles betwixt his eye and the ſtarre, yet the ſtar and his eye are ſo vnited together, as that the ſtarre is after a ſort preſent to his eye. So if we regard local diſtance, we are as farre from Chriſt as earth is from heauen: but if wee regard the nature of Faith, which is to reach it ſelfe to Chriſt, where euer he be, in that regard Chriſt is preſent: & why ſhould not this be ſo? for if the bodily eye, ſo feeble and weak, can reach ſo farre as to a ſtarre, and ioyne it to it ſelfe, and ſo make it preſent; why ſhould not much more the piercing eye of the ſoule reach vp to Chriſt, and make him preſent to the comfortable feeling of it ſelfe?

Thirdly, here we learne how to behaue our ſelues in a ſtrange temptation, whereby God vſeth to exerciſe his children. The Lord after that he hath receiued his children into his fauour, continueth not alwaies to manifeſt that fauour vnto them; but oftentimes puls backe the feeling of it for a time; that afterward, hee may ſhewe it againe in more comfortable manner vnto them; and that they may afterward more ſenſibly feele it, and more earneſtly loue it, and more carefully labour to keepe it, when they haue it.

Now for the time of this eclipſe of the fauour of God, he not onely darkeneth his loue, but makes them feele alſo ſuch a meaſure of his wrath, as that they will often thinke themſelues caſtawayes from the fauour of God. Dauid and Iob were often exerciſed with this temptation, as appeareth by their moſt lamentable and bitter complaints; yea Dauid doubts not, Pſal. 77. 9. to chalenge the Lord, that hee hath forgotten to be gratious, and hath ſhut vp his louing kindneſſe in diſpleaſure. And Iob, chap. 13, 26, complaines to the Lord, that hee writeth bitter things againſt him, and makes him to poſſeſſe the ſinnes of his youth; words, as it may ſeeme, of men forſaken of God: and indeede ſo for that time they thought of themſelues. If it pleaſe the Lord thus to deale with vs, ſo as wee feele nothing elſe but his wrath wraſtling with our conſciences, neither can thinke otherwiſe by preſent feeling, but that God hath forſaken vs; what ſhould wee doe in this pitifull caſe? ſhould we deſpaire, as reaſon would bid vs? no, but take this courſe; Call to minde Gods mercifull promiſes, and his auncient former loue; and caſt thy ſelfe vpon that loue, though thou canſt not feele it: when thou haſt moſt cauſe to deſpaire, then labour againſt it: when thou haſt no reaſon to beleeue, then beleeue with all thy power. For, remember the power and prerogatiue of thy faith: it beleeues not things that are, and manifeſtly appeare, ſo much as ſuch things that are not, and haue no beeing. So then, when Gods fauour ſeemes to be loſt, and to haue no beeing to thee, then is Gods fauour a fit obiect for thy faith, which beleeues thoſe things that are not. Let all the deuils in hell ſet themſelues againſt thy poore ſoule, and if thou holdeſt faſt this faith, they cannot al make thee ſinke vnder it: for when the deuill ſaith, Thou haſt loſt Gods fauour; by faith a man anſwereth, though Gods fauour be loſt vnto my feeling, yet to my faith it is not: My faith giues it a beeing, and ſo long (ſay what thou wilt) I will neuer feare that it is loſt. When God pulls backe his fauour and fights againſt thee with his wrath; doe as Iacob did, Gen. 32. 27. 29. wreſtle with God, though thou haue but one legge: that is, though thou haue but one little ſparke of faith, fight with that little faith, lay hold by it on God, and let him not goe vntill hee hath bleſſed thee, in turning againe vnto thee his fauourable countenance: and ſay with Iob, 13. euen in the very heate of thy temptation, O Lord, though thou kill this bodie and fleſh of mine, yet will I truſt in thee for euerlaſting life: yea, and though Gods anger ſhould ſeeme to encreaſe, yet for all that take faſter hold, and faint not; for faith will neuer faile thee: it will reſtore Gods loue when it ſeemes loſt, it will ſet it before thine eyes, when it ſeemes to be hid. For marke well but this one reaſon; if faith will giue life euerlaſting a beeing, and make it preſent to thy ſoule, which indeede yet neuer had beeing to thee: how much more can it giue a beeing to Gods fauour, and make it preſent to thy ſoule, which once had, and indeede hath ſtill a beeing, and was neuer loſt indeede, but onely to a mans feeling? Thus, true faith is able to anſwer this temptation, whether it come in life, or in the pangs of death.

Fourthly, whereas faith is called an euidence; hence we learne, that the nature of faith ſtands not in doubting, but in certentie and aſſurance. The Romiſh doubting of the eſſence of faith, is as contrarie to true faith, as darkeneſſe to light: for faith is an euidence of things hoped for, that is, it conuinceth the iudgement by vnfallible arguments; knowing as certainly the truth of the promiſes, and of the things hoped for, as that God is God. But Rome will needs ioyne faith and doubting, which indeede fight like fire and water, and can neuer agree together in euerie reſpect, but one will in the ende deſtroy the other.

Obiect. But it ſeemeth, doubting is a part, or at leaſt a companion of faith, for we doubt as well as beleeue: and who is ſo faithfull as doubteth not? Anſ. We do ſo: but what then? we ſhould not; for God commands vs to beleeue, and not to doubt: therefore to beleeue, becauſe it is commanded of God, is a vertue: and if it be a vertue, then to doubt is a vice; faith and doubting are both in a good man, but faith is a worke of grace and of the ſpirit; doubting is a worke of the fleſh, and a peice of the corruption of the old man.

Fiftly, if faith be a ſubſtance of things hoped for, much more is it a ſubſtance to the beleeuer: if it giue thoſe things a beeing which are out of him, much more doth it giue a permanent beeing vnto the beleeuer himſelfe, ſtrengthening him to ſtand, and continue in all aſſaults. So, Heb. 3. 14. Faith is that, whereby a beleeuer is ſuſtained and vpholden: ſo that indeede we may fitly ſay, Faith is the ſpirituall ſubſtance, and the ſpirituall ſtrength of a Chriſtian man: and according to the meaſure of his faith, ſuch is the meaſure of his ſpirituall ſtrength.

This conſideration hath diuers comfortable vſes; but eſpecially two: 1. When any of vs are out of the reach of a temptation, ſo long are we confident of our owne ſtrength: but when we are aſſaulted by the Deuill, the world, and our owne fleſh, then we ſhall finde, that to reſiſt is an harder matter then we dreamed of: for, as poſſible as it is for wa-

A ter to burne, or fire to put out it ſelfe: ſo poſſible is it for vs of our ſelues to reſiſt ſinne, inſomuch, as it is a thouſand to one, but that at euery aſſault our nature yeelds. Now if it be ſo hard to reſiſt ouer one ſinne, how ſhall we doe againſt that ſea of temptations, that ouerwhelmeth a Chriſtian life? this doctrine teacheth thee how; namely, to ſticke to thy faith, and it will doe it for thee: for if it be the ſubſtance of the things thou hopeſt for, which yet neuer were, much more will it yeeld vnto thee ſpirituall ſtrength and ſubſtance, to make thee ſtand in all temptations. When thou art tempted, then call to minde Gods promiſes, beleeue them, that is, applie them to thy ſelfe, and be reſolued that they were made, and ſhall be performed euen to thee: then though thou haue B no more power of thy ſelfe, then fire hath to ceaſe to burne; yet whileſt thou doeſt thus, thou ſhalt feele thy ſoule ſpiritually ſtrengthened againſt all temptations: and, feeling the experience of this, denie then thine owne ſtrength, and magnifie the power that God hath giuen vnto true faith.

Againe, though now we are moſt of vs quiet vnder our owne vines and figgetrees; yet we know not how ſoone the hand of the Lord may be vpon any of vs, in pouertie, ſickeneſſe, impriſonment, baniſhment, loſſes, famine, or how it pleaſeth him: how ſhall a poore Chriſtian ſtand and buckle himſelfe to beare theſe? I anſwer, true ſauing faith reſting on the word of God, and beleeuing the promiſes, not formally, but truly, will put ſuch ſubſtantiall ſpirituall ſtrength into him, as that at firſt, though C he bow vnder it, yet ſhall hee be able to recouer himſelfe againe, and buckle himſelfe to goe forward in his profeſſion, and ſhall follow Chriſt manfully with this his croſſe. This wonderfull power hath God giuen to ſauing faith, both to reſiſt temptations, and to vndergoe all croſſes.

And thus much of the firſt action or effect of faith: the ſecond followeth.

VERSE. 2

For by it our Elders were well reported of.

D This verſe containeth the ſecond effect of ſauing faith: wich is, that faith is a meanes whereby a beleeuer is approoued of God. This verſe hath ſpecial relation to the fifth verſe: for that, that is ſaide here of all the Elders in generall, is there affirmed ſpecially of Enoch: namely, that hee was reported of to haue pleaſed God.

Let vs firſt ſearch the true meaning of the words.

Elders] That is, all ſuch men as liuing vnder the old Teſtament, beleeued in Chriſt: amongſt which (though all be vnderſtood) yet ſome were more excellent in faith and obedience then others, and ſo more honourable, and of higher eſtimation with God and men: and of

A them it is ſpecially to be vnderſtood.

Now concerning theſe Elders, it is further ſaid, that they were well reported of: hereby are meant three things:

1. That God approoued, & allowed of them.

2. That God did approoue of them, becauſe of their faith in the Meſſias.

3. That God gaue a teſtimonie, and declared that hee approoued of them.

For the firſt, it may be asked, How were they approoued of God?

Anſ. Chriſt the ſonne of God is he, in whom the Father is well pleaſed. Now they beleeuing in Chriſt, their ſinnes were laid on him, and made his by imputation: and contrariwiſe his holineſſe, obedience, and ſatiſfaction, were imputed to them, and by the ſame imputation B made theirs: Now that beeing theirs, God beeing ſo well pleaſed with Chriſt, could not but alſo for Chriſts ſake approoue of them. If this ſeeme hard vnto any, I make it plaine by this compariſon. Looke as Iacob a yonger brother, puts on Eſaus garment, the elder brother, and in it was taken for Eſau, and obtained his fathers bleſſing and patrimonie, which by himſelfe he could not haue got; euen ſo we are as yonger brethren, Chriſt is our elder brother; we haue no right nor title to our fathers bleſſing, nor to the kingdome of heauen: we muſt put on the robe of perfect righteouſneſſe, which is the garment of Chriſt, our elder brother: we, ſtanding clothed with it, purchaſe our fathers fauour, and with his fauour his bleſſing, and his bleſſing is the right and title to euer- C laſting life. And thus by Chriſt they were approoued.

Math. 3.17.

Secondly, for what were they approoued? The text ſaith, By faith; not becauſe faith is an action of a ſanctified minde and a good grace of God: for ſo are humilitie, loue, feare of God (all which are graces of the ſanctifying ſpirit, as faith is): but becauſe it is a worthy inſtrument in the heart of the beleeuer, which apprehends, and applieth to the ſoule that righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, by which he is iuſtified; thus it being the hand and inſtrument of their iuſtification, by it (it is ſaid) they were appooued.

3. The text addeth, that God did not onely approoue of them, but that he teſtified and made it manifeſt to all the world that he did ſo.

D And this teſtimonie God gaue of them
1. In his word.
2. In their owne conſciences.

The truth of the firſt is manifeſt, in that not onely in this chapter, but often alſo in the old teſtament, God hath made ſuch honourable mention, and giuen ſuch honourable titles vnto many of theſe Elders, calling Abraham the freind of God, 2. Chron. 20. 7. and Dauid, a man after Gods owne heart; 1. Sam. 13. 14. and them all, his annointed and deare choſen children, Pſal. 105. 15. Thus God hath teſtified of them in his word.

2. God teſtified it to their own conſciences, in that hee gaue them his ſpirit, inwardly to aſſure their conſciences that he did accept them in the Meſſias to come: and thus theſe Elders receiued a teſtimonie both outward to all the world, and inward to their conſciences, that God in Chriſt approoued and loued them: ſo the ſenſe is plaine, the vſe hereof manifold.

1. In that it is ſaid theſe Elders were approoued by faith: here wee learne what is the olde and auncient way, the right and ſtraight way (that hath no by-wayes) to life euerlaſting: namely, this onely, To relie on the mercie of God in Chriſt for pardon of ſinne; this is the way wherein all the auncient Elders walked to heauen; this is the way that God hath opened and made vnto his Court: it is the Kings high way, the beaten way, common to euery one that knowes how to walke in it; and deceiued none that euer went in it; and beſide which, there is no other. Seeing then, God hath conſecrated, and our Elders haue trode this way before vs, let vs follow them; that ſo we may attaine that kingdom whereto it hath brought them.

If any yet doubt whether this be the way or no: the ſpirit of God puts it out of doubt, Eſay 30. 21; Firſt, affirming peremptorily This is the way: Secondly, bidding vs therefore walke in the ſame: This is the way, walke in it. Our Elders obeyed this commandement of the ſpirit: and, walking in this way, found the end of it, euerlaſting life. If we would attaine the ſame end of the iourney, wee muſt walke the ſame way.

But the world will ſay, this is a needleſſe exhortation; for we walke this way, we deny our ſelues, and looke to be approoued of God onely by Chriſt: but it is ſtrange to ſee how men deceiue themſelues. Can a man walke in a way, and not leaue marks and ſteps behind him; euen ſo he that walks in this way, follow him, and you ſhall ſee ſteps of his continuall dying vnto ſinne, and liuing vnto holineſſe; inſomuch that a man that followeth him, and marketh the courſe of his life in this way, may euidently ſay, See where he hath caſt off, and left behind him this and that ſinne; ſee where he hath taken vp, and caried with him theſe and thoſe vertues and graces of God: Marke, here is a print of his faith, here is a print of his hope, here are prints of his loue. And may a child of God be followed and traced all the way to heauen, euen vntill he come to his death, which is the gate of heauen. How mightily then are they deceiued, which thinke they haue walked all their liues in this way, and yet there is not one ſtep to be ſeene: for aſſuredly this way is ſo beaten and troden, that no man euer trode in it ſince the world began; but he left behind him manifeſt and viſible ſteps, that all men that would looke at him, might ſee hee had gone that way. As therefore we all deſire to come to heauen, and as we profeſſe we walke in the way thither: ſo let vs be as carefull to leaue behind vs our ſteps; namely, tokens and prints of our faith, our hope and loue: which if we doe, then mark the excellent vſe of thoſe ſteps. 1. They teſtifie vnto all that ſee them, that wee walked the right way to heauen: and ſecondly, they will ſerue for markes and directions for them that ſhall walke in the ſame way after vs. By the 1. we ſhall leaue an honourable teſtimonie of our ſelues behind vs; by the 2. wee ſhall mooue others to magnifie Gods name, to whome our ſteps haue beene markes and directions, helps, and furtherances in the way to heauen.

Secondly, for what were theſe Elders approoued? for their faith; for nothing elſe. Amongſt theſe Elders Sampſon was wonderfull in ſtrength; Salomon in wiſedome; Ioſhua in courage; Moſes in learning; many of them, in the honour and pompe of the world, in beauty, riches, and other externall gifts; and the moſt of them all in long life; yet not for one or all of theſe are any of them ſaid to be regarded of God: but it is plainely ſaide, that for their faith God did approoue them. Here then learne what is the thing amongſt all things that muſt make vs acceptable vnto God: euen this, To denie our ſelues, and to reſt vpon the mercie of God in Chriſt; this will doe it and nothing elſe. Haſt thou ſtrength? ſo had Golias as well as Sampſon: haſt thou beautie? ſo had Abſalom as well or more then Dauid: haſt thou wiſedome? ſo had Achitophel (though not like Salomon, yet) aboue ordinarie men: haſt thou riches? Eſau was richer then Iacob: haſt thou liued long? ſo did Caine, and Iſmael as well as Iſaac: haſt thou many children? ſo had Ahab as well as Gedeon: haſt thou learning (the glorie of nature?) ſo had the Egyptians as well as Moſes; for there Moſes learned it. All theſe thou maiſt haue, and yet be a vile perſon in the ſight of God: ſo farre from beeing approoued of God, as that he will not vouchſafe (vnleſſe it be in his anger) once to regard or looke at thee: haſt thou therefore any of thoſe outward gifts? it is not to be contemned, it hath his vſe; thanke God for it, and vſe it well; and vſe it ſo as by it thou maiſt be approued amongſt men: but ſtand not to it before God: for though it bee wiſedome, or learning, or neuer ſo excellent a gift; it cannot purchaſe the fauour & acceptation of God; but true faith is able to pleaſe God both in this life, and eſpecially at the day of Iudgement.

This doctrine firſt confuteth the errour of ſome groſſe Papiſts, who hold and write that many Philoſophers for their good vſe of the light of Nature, for their deepneſſe in learning, and for their ciuill liues, are now Saints in heauen: a moſt manifeſt and ſhamefull vntruth, and here as manifeſtly confuted: for was Salomon not accepted, for all his wiſedome, and ſhall Socrates? was Moſes not accepted for all his learning, how then ſhould Ariſtotle? if faith made all of them accepted, and nothing but faith; how is it poſſible they ſhould be accep-

ed which neuer heard of faith? nay I ſay more: If many a man which liueth in the Church, as deepe (it may be) in humane learning as they, and of great knowledge alſo in the whole doctrine of Religion (which they neuer knew) and yet could not, nor euer ſhall be accepted of God, onely for want of this ſauing faith; How abſurd is it to imagine ſaluatiō for them, which neither had ſparke of faith, nor knowledge of Chriſt? Let vs then hold, that as there is no name whereby to be ſaued, but onely the name of Chriſt: ſo no meanes to be ſaued by that Chriſt, but onely faith, euen that faith, for which theſe Elders were accepted of God.

Secondly, this excellencie of faith aboue all other gifts, ſhewes the vanitie of the world; ſo carefull and earneſt in ſeeking honour, riches, credit, wiſedome, learning, (all which can but make them eſteemed and approoued to the world) and ſo careleſſe and negligent in getting true faith, which will both approoue a man vnto the world, and make him honourable in the eyes of the Lord God.

Thirdly, by this doctrine, the Popiſh doctrine is iuſtly condemned, which teacheth that a man is iuſtified by his works, and that faith is not the moſt excellent of Gods graces. Here we are taught other diuinitie: for, that for which a man is accepted, by that he is iuſtified: but for their faith only were they accepted: therfore iuſtification is onely by faith. Againe, that which makes a man accepted of God, that muſt needs be the moſt excellent thing of all. For God which is goodneſſe it ſelfe, regardeth that that is the beſt: but God eſteemed them onely for their faith; therefore it is the cheife of all graces of God, in regard of making a man accepted of God.

Fourthly, here is a patterne and preſident for Gods children, how to beſtowe and meaſure out their loue and eſtimation in the world. God loued Salomon more for his faith, then for all his glorie and wſedome; and eſteemed more of Moſes for his faith, then for all his learning. So deale thou with thy wife, thy child, thy ſeruant, thy friend, and with all men. Haſt thou a wife neuer ſo beautifull, louing, honeſt, and thrifty; neuer ſo toward and obedient a child; a moſt wiſe and truſty ſeruant; a friend for faithfulnes like thine owne ſoule? theſe are indeede much to be eſteemed; yet think not thy ſelfe in a paradiſe, when thou haſt ſuch: for there is a greater matter behind, then all theſe. Looke therefore further: Is thy wife, thy child, thy ſeruant, thy friend endued with ſauing faith? that is worth more then all the reſt: that is it that makes them beloued of God. Let that therefore make them beſt beloued of thee: and that which makes thē ſo honourable before God, let that make them moſt honourable and moſt eſteemed of thee: So in all man, loue that in a man beſt which God loueth; and ſo thou ſhalt bee ſure not to looſe thy loue. Eſteeme of a man, not as the world eſteemeth, not according to his ſtrēgth, beautie, high place, or outward gifts: but as God eſteemeth him, namely, according to the meaſure of ſauing faith, which thou ſeeſt in him; for is not that worthy of thy loue, which hath purchaſed the loue of the Lord God himſelfe?

Fiftly, here is comfort for all ſuch ſeruants of God, as hauing true faith, yet are in baſe eſtimation for worldly reſpects: ſome are poore, ſome in baſe callings, ſome deformed in body, ſome of meane gifts, many in great diſtreſſe & miſerie all their liues; moſt of them ſome way or other contemptible in the world: Yet let not this diſcomfort any child of God: but let them conſider what it is that makes them approued of God: not beautie, ſtrength, riches, wiſdome, learning (all theſe periſh in the vſing) but true faith: if then thou haſt that, thou haſt more then all the reſt. If thou haſt all them, they could but make thee eſteemed in the world: but hauing true faith, thou art eſteemed of God; and what matter then who eſteemes thee, and who not? This croſſeth the corrupt cenſure of the world, who more eſteme a man for his outward gifts and glorie of riches or learning, then for ſauing graces. Let Gods children when they are abaſed, contemned, mocked, and kept from all place & preferment in the world, let them I ſay, appeale from their vniuſt iudgment to the iudgement of God; and bee comforted in this, that though they want all things (without them) that ſhould make them eſteemed in the world, yet they haue that (within them) for which God will eſteeme, approoue, and acknowledge them both in this world, and in the world to come. And they haue that that will ſtand by them, when ſtrength and beautie are vaniſhed, when learning, and riches, and honour are all ended with the world.

Thus much of the ſecond doctrine.

3. In that our Elders by faith obtained a good report. Here wee learne the readieſt and ſureſt way to get a good name. A good name is a good gift of God; Eccles. 7. 3. It is a pretious ointment: it is a thing that all men would haue: Theſe Elders had it, and they haue laide vs downe a platforme how to get it, and it is this; 1. Get into fauour with God, pleaſe him, that is, confeſſe thy ſinnes, bewaile them, get pardon, ſet the promiſes of God in Chriſt before thee, beleeue them, apply them to thy ſelfe as thine owne, be perſwaded in thy conſcience that Chriſt did al for thee, and that he hath purchaſed thy acceptation with God.

Thus when thou art aſſured that God approoues of thee, God can eaſily giue thee a comfortable teſtimonie in thine owne conſcience, and he can mooue the hearts of all men to thinke well, and open their mouthes to ſpeake well of thee; for he hath the hearts of all men in his hand. And therefore thoſe that are in his fauour, he can bend the hearts of all men, to approoue them; yet this muſt be vnderſtood with ſome cautions.

1. God will not procure his children a good name amongſt all men: for then they ſhould be curſed: for, Luk. 6. 26. Curſed are yee when all men ſpeake well of you. But the Lord meaneth, that they ſhall bee accepted, and haue a good name with the moſt and with the beſt. For indeede, a good name (as all other graces of God) cannot bee perfect in this life: but they ſhall haue ſuch a good name, as in this world ſhall continue and increaſe, and in the world to come be without all blot: for ſinne is the diſgrace of a man; therefore when ſinne is aboliſhed, good name is perfect.

2. God will not procure all his children a good name, nor alwaies: for, a good name is of the ſame nature with other externall gifts of God: ſometime they are good to a man, ſometime hurtfull: to ſome men good, to others hurtfull. Euery one therefore that hath true faith, may not abſolutely aſſure himſelfe of a good name: but as farre forth as God ſhall ſee it beſt for his owne glorie, and his good.

3. The good name that God will giue his children, ſtands not ſo much in outward commendation, and ſpeaking well of a man; as in the inward approbation of the conſciences of men. They muſt therefore be content ſometime to be abuſed, mocked, ſlandered, and yet notwithſtanding they haue a good name in the chiefe reſpect: for they whoſe mouthes doe abuſe and condemne them, their very conſciences doe approoue them.

Out of all theſe the point is manifeſt, that God will procure his children a good name in this world, as farre forth as it is a bleſſing, and not a curſe: & that becauſe they are approoued of him, and by faith iuſtified in his ſight: for ſo to be is the onely way to get a good name. For in reaſon it ſtands thus; that thoſe who are in eſtimation, and good name with the Lord himſelfe: much more will God make them eſteemed, and giue them a good name with men like themſelues. Hence we learne; firſt, that the common courſe of the world to get a good name, is fond, and wicked, and to no purpoſe: They labour for riches, preferments, honour, wiſedome, and learning; by them to get eſtimation in the world: yea, many abuſe theſe bleſſings in vaine oſtentation, to encreaſe their credit and name with men: and in the meane time ſauing faith is neuer remembred, which muſt procure them a good name with God. This is a wrong courſe: firſt, we muſt labour to bee approoued of God; and then after the good name with God, followeth the good name in the world. Hee therefore that labours for fauour with men, and neglects the fauour of God; he may get a good name, but it ſhall prooue a rotten name in the ende. Prou. 10. 7. The memoriall of the iuſt ſhall be bleſſed, but the name of the wicked ſhall rot. The good name of the wicked is rotten: 1. Becauſe it is loathſome and ſtinking in the face of God, though it be neuer ſo glorious in the world. 2. Becauſe it will not laſt the wearing out, but in the ende vaniſheth and comes to nothing, vnleſſe (as a rotting thing leaues ſome corruptiō behind it, ſo) their good name in the ende beeing vaniſhed, leaues infamie behind it. And this is the name which commonly is gotten in the world, becauſe men firſt ſeeke not a good name with God: but that good name which is obtained by faith, will ſtand and continue all a mans life, and at his death leaue behind it a ſweete perfume, and abideth for euer in the world to come.

Secondly, this maintaines the excellencie of our religion againſt Atheiſts, and all enemies of it, which eſteeme and call it a baſe and contemptible religion, and of which can followe no credit nor eſtimatiō. But ſee, their malice is here controlled: our religion is a moſt glorious and excellent profeſſion, it is the high way to get true credit and eſtimation: it makes a man honourable in the ſight of God and men: for by it our Elders obtained a good report, which continueth freſh to this day.

In the fourth place, Were they well reported of for their faith? therefore their faith was not hid in their hearts; but manifeſted in their liues: for, the world cannot ſee nor commend them for their faith; but for the practiſe of faith. Here it is plaine that men muſt not be content to keepe their faith cloſe in their hearts, but they muſt exerciſe the fruites of it in the world; and then both theſe together will make a man truely commendable. Thy faith approoues thee vnto God; but the practiſe of it is that that honours thee and thy profeſſion in the world.

Laſtly, in that faith was that which approoued our Elders vnto God; here is a ſtorehouſe of comforts, for all true profeſſors of this faith.

Art thou poore? thy faith doth make thee rich in God.

Art thou ſimple and of meane reach? thy faith is true wiſedome before God.

Art thou any way deformed? faith makes thee beautifull vnto God.

Art thou weake, feeble, or ſicke? thy faith doth make thee ſtrong in God.

Art thou baſe in the world, and of no account? thy faith makes thee honourable in the ſight of God and his holy Angels. Thus thou art poore, and fooliſh, and deformed, and ſicke, and baſe in the world, but marke how God hath recompenſed thee: he hath giuē thee faith, whereby thou art rich, and beautifull, and wiſe and ſtrong, and honourable in heauen with God: ſay therefore with Dauid, the lot is fallen vnto thee in a faire ground, and thou haſt a goodly heritage, namely, thy faith which thou wouldeſt not change for all the glorie of the world. Faith is the true riches, the ſound ſtrength, the laſting beautie, the true wiſedome, the true honour of a Chriſtian man: therefore take thy ſelfe 10000. times more beholden vnto God, then if hee had giuen thee vncertaine riches, the crafty (and yet fooliſh) wiſedome, the decaying ſtrength, the vaniſhing beauty, the tranſitorie honour of this world.

If thou haſt true faith, thou art ſure to haue enemies: 1. The wicked of the world will neuer brooke thee, but openly or priuatly hate & hurt thee. Then the deuill is thy ſworne enemy: how canſt thou deale with ſo powerfull an enemie, and all his wicked inſtruments? Here is ſound comfort: if thou haſt faith, thou haſt God thy friend: labour therefore for this true faith, and then care not for the deuil, and all his power. Night and day, ſleeping and waking, by land and ſea thou art ſafe and ſecure, the deuill cannot hurt thee, thy faith makes thee accepted of God, and brings thee within the compaſſe of his protection. The ſame little ſparke of faith, which is in ſo narrow a compaſſe as thy heart, is ſtronger then all the power and malice of Satan. As for the malice which his inſtruments, wicked men in this world, ſhew againſt thee in mocks and abuſes, much leſſe care for them: for their nature is to ſpeake euill, and cannot doe otherwiſe: looke not therefore at them, but looke vp into heauen by the eye of thy ſoule, where thy faith makes thee beloued & approoued of God himſelfe, and honourable in the preſence of his holy Angels.

And thus much of the ſecond action or effect of faith, the third followeth.

VERSE 3.

Through faith wee vnderſtand that the world was ordained by the word of God, ſo that the things which wee ſee, are not made of things which did appeare.

IN this verſe is contained the third action or effect of faith, namely this; Faith makes a man to vnderſtand things beyond the reach of mans reaſon. This third effect is ſet out in theſe words, by the inſtance of a notable example; namely, of the Creation of the world; 1. By the word of God. 2. Of nothing: both which, that we may the better vnderſtand, let vs conſider of the words as they lie in order.

Through faith

1. By faith, in this place (as I take it) is not meant that ſauing faith, which iuſtifies a man before God; but a generall faith, whereby a man imbraceth Chriſtian religion: or wherby a man beleeueth the word of God in the doctrine of the Law and the Goſpel, to be true. My reaſon is, becauſe a man that neuer had iuſtifying and ſauing faith, and is no member of the catholike Church, nor child of God, may haue this gift, To beleeue that God by his word made the world of nothing. Therefore, I thinke that this is an action of a generall, and not of ſauing faith.

We vnderſtand

That is, whereas there are many things beyond the reach of reaſon, and therefore by reaſon cannot be apprehended or vnderſtood, yet by vertue of this faith a man is brought to vnderſtand them, and to beleeue them to bee true.

Now then whereas generall faith brings vnderſtanding of many things which reaſon cannot reach vnto; here, ſuch as be ſtudents in humane learning, and which labour to attaine to the deepeneſſe and perfection of it, are taught, with their trauell in humane ſtudies, to haue care to ioyne faith and knowledge of religion. For there are many things which our vnderſtanding by reaſon cannot conceiue; and may truthes which Philoſophy cannot reach vnto; nay, many alſo which it denies: but faith is able to perſwade and demonſtrate them all, and it inlightens the minde, and rectifies the iudgement, when as Philoſophy hath left the mind in darkneſſe, and the iudgement in error. Now, in whom ſound knowledge in Philoſophy, and this faith in religion doe concurre together, hee is a man of a moſt rectified iudgement, and of a deepe reach in the greateſt matters: but, ſeparate faith from humane knowledge, and hee will ſtumble at many truthes, though hee had the wit of all the Philoſophers in his owne head: For example, that God ſhould make the world of nothing: that it ſhould haue beginning and ending: that God ſhould be eternall, and not the world: that mans ſoule beeing created, is immortall: Theſe and many other truthes, reaſon cannot ſee, and therefore Philoſophy will not admit: but ioyne faith to it, and then that crooked vnderſtanding is rectified and made to beleeue it. It is therefore good counſell, to ioyne both theſe together. Religion hinders not humane learning, as ſome fondly thinke; but is a furtherance and helpe, or rather the perfection of humane learning, perſwading, and prooouing, and conuincing that, which humane learning cannot. And thus we ſee how faith makes vs to vnderſtand.

But what doth it make vs to vnderſtand? the text ſaith, That the world was ordained, &c. Amongſt many Expoſitions we may moſt ſafely ſet downe and approoue this; God by his word or commandement hath ordained, that is, made in good order; the ages, that is, the world and all in it; and all this he did by his word; and (which is more ſtrange then that) made them all of nothing. This is a wonderfull thing: reaſon conceiues it not, but diſputes againſt it: Philoſophie grants it not, but writes againſt it; but marke the priuiledge of this faith; it makes a man beleeue it, and ſhewes him alſo how it is.

Now for our better perceiuing the excellencie of this power of faith, here are foure points ſet downe: 1. What was created: The worlds.

2. In what manner: Ordained. 3. By what meanes: By Gods word. 4. Of what matter: Of nothing. Of theſe in order.

The firſt point is, What was made? The text anſwereth, The worlds. The word ſignifieth in the originall, Ages: and ſo it is alſo taken, Heb. 1. 2. God made the worlds or ages by Chriſt: by this word thē he meaneth theſe two things; Firſt, times and ſeaſons, which are ordinarie creatures of God, as well as other; for amongſt other creatures (Gen. 1.) are recorded alſo times and ſeaſons to bee Gods creatures. Secondly, he vnderſtandeth the world alſo, and all in it: and ſo it is truely tranſlated. For with good reaſon may the word ages ſignifie the world, becauſe the world and all in it had their beginning in time, haue their continuance in time, and ſhall haue their ende in time againe. Time begunne them, time continues them, and time ſhall end them: and ſo the world is euery way meaſured by the compaſſe of time: and therefore it pleaſeth the holy Ghoſt to tearme the world, and all in it, Ages, or times.

Now whereas it is ſaid, Ages, that is, times and ſeaſons were ordained of God; we learne, that if time bee a creature or an ordinance of God (created for ſo great purpoſes, as to be the meaſure of all things) to take heed of abuſing ſo excellent an ordinance: if thou haſt ſpent it well, ſpēd it ſtil better. Time is ſo good a thing, it cannot be ſpent well enough. But haſt thou miſſpent time (that is, abuſed it) take Saint Pauls counſell, Epheſ. 5. 16. Redeeme the time: that is, ſeeing what is paſt cannot be recall'd, then recompence the loſſe of it, by the well beſtowing of time to come. Spend euery houre well, and that thou maiſt doe ſo, bee alwaies either doing good to other, or receiuing good from other; doe either, and time is well ſpent. And take heed thou bee not of the number of thoſe that often ſay, they cannot tell how to driue away time: and therefore they deuiſe many toyes, and conceits, and vaine pleaſures, yea, many wicked and vnlawfull delights: and all to ſhift off (as they ſay) and deceiue the time. It is wonderfull to ſee, that the wicked, whoſe time of ioy is only in this world, ſhould ſeeke to haſten it, and make it ſeeme ſhorter; yet ſo it is, the deuill blinding them: but howeuer it is, ſeeme it ſhorter or longer, that ſame one ſinne of miſſpending their time, ſhall condemne them, if they had no more; for if account muſt be giuen for euery idle word, a fearefull account remaines to be made for ſo many idle houres. Let vs then be very carefull in the vſe of this good ordinance of God, and neuer deuiſe how to paſſe away time: for there is no man that is a profitable member in the place where he is, that can finde one houre ſo idle, that he knowes not how to imploy it, either in receiuing or doing ſome good.

Were ordained

The ſecond point, in this example, is the manner. Did God make a perfect or an imperfect world? A The text anſwereth, it was ordained. The word ſignifieth thus much; God framed the Ages, that is, all creatures, viſible and inuiſible, in a moſt excellent, perfect, and abſolute order. As in a campe euery man keepes his ranke and order, and no man goeth out of his ſtanding appointed him: So euery creature hath his due place, and his proper vſe aſſigned him of God: ſo that the workemanſhip of the world in euery creature, and in euery reſpect was abſolute: and thus (ordained) is as much as perfectly made. And the whole world was as the perfect body of a man, where euery member, bone, ioynt, veine, and ſinew, is in his proper place, and nothing out of ſquare.

B Obiect. Was euery thing created in his order and due place? Whence then come ſo many diſorders in the world? The deuill hath his kingdome, authoritie, lawes, and ſubiects; hee rules in the wicked. Now can there be any order in Satans kingdome? Againe, whence are ſo many alterations and ſubuerſions of kingdomes; ſo many warres, ſo much effuſion of blood? The Goſpel is tranſported from Country to Country; ciuill diſſentions in Cities and priuate families; betwixt man and man; betwixt man and ſome creatures: betwixt creature and creatures; yea, hatred often vnto the death; yea, often hatred betwixt creaturs of the ſame kind. All theſe being ſo, where then is that excellent order wherein they were created?

C I anſwer: the ſtate of all creatures is changed, from that wherein they were created, by the fall of our firſt parents. God made no diſorder, He ſaw euery thing that he had made, and loe it was very good: therefore it was in a moſt perfect order: For, orderly comelineſſe is a part of the goodneſſe of a thing: but diſorder is the effect of ſinne: it entred with ſinne; and it is both a companion and a reward of ſinne. Had we continued in our innocence, all creatures had continued in their excellent order: but when wee had broken the perfect order, that God had appointed vs; immediately all creatures broke that order wherein they were afore both towards vs, and one amongſt another. Whil'ſt wee obeyed God, all creatures obeyed D vs: but when we ſhooke off the yoke of obedience vnto God, and rebelled againſt him, thē they became diſobedient vnto vs. Whil'ſt wee loued God, all creatures loued and reuerenced vs: but when we fell to hate the Lord, then began they to hate vs, and not before. If therfore thou ſeeſt any diſobedience and hatred in the creatures towards thee, any diſorder and vanity amongſt themſelues, thanke thy ſelfe for it, thou broughteſt it into the world with thy ſinne.

Gen. 1. 31.

2. This beeing ſo, wee are hence taught when wee ſee any diſorder in any creature, not to blame the Lord nor the creature, but to turne backe to our ſelues, to take notice of our own ſinnes and corruptions, and to acknowledge this was not ſo at the firſt, but our ſinne was the cauſe of it, and therefore be humbled and aſhamed of our ſelues, that we ſhould confound that excellent order which God made, and all creatures (but for vs) would haue kept all this day: but the common practiſe is contrarie, as I will proue in particulars.

God made mans bodie pure and holy, and therefore it had no neede to be couered: but with ſinne came ſhame, and thence came it that God gaue vs apparell to couer that ſhame that ſinne had brought vpon vs: ſo oft therefore as a man puts on his apparel, he ſhould be humbled and aſhamed by it: and thinke thus with himſelfe, This was not ſo at the firſt; Adams bodie was glorious: whence came this ignominie & ſhame, which we muſt couer with apparell? it came from my ſinne; therefore ſo often as a man puts it on, ſo oft ſhould he be quite aſhamed of himſelfe, which hath brought this ſhame vpon himſelfe: ſo as now hee muſt needes haue a cloake to couer his ſhame. But doe men make this ende of their apparell? nay, rather they make it a banner to diſplay their pride and vanity; and ſo farre are many from beeing aſhamed of it, as that they are contrariwiſe proud of it. But this is as abominable, and curſed, and ſenſeleſſe a pride, as if the priſoner ſhould be proud of his bolts and fetters, which are ſignes of his miſdemenour: for, what is thy apparell (make the beſt of it) it is but a beautifull cloak of thy filthie ſhame: then, as bolts and fetters are burdenous, and ſhamefull, though they be of gold: ſo is the cloake of thy ſhame, thy apparell, though it be ſilke, ſiluer, or gold; for we ſhould not be aſhamed onely of ordinarie apparell, or baſe, but euen of the moſt gorgeous; knowing that once we had a glorie of our owne, farre aboue all the glorie of apparell: & the ignominy that ſinne hath brought vpon vs, is greater then this glorie of apparell can take away.

Here I denie not the vſe of gorgeous apparell, to thoſe to whom it belongs: But I ſay to the rich men (who, by their abilitie) to men in authoritie, who (by their place and calling) may weare coſtly apparell; yea, and to Princes, who may lawfully weare ſilke, ſiluer, gold, and the moſt excellent ornaments of pretious ſtones, or whatſoeuer: to all them, I ſay, God hath granted you the vſe of theſe; but withall, bee not proud of them, for you once had a glorie greater then theſe, but loſt it by ſinne: and ſinne brought a ſhame, which theſe cannot hide. For though thy apparell hide it from the world, yet can it not from God: onely faith can couer it from God: therefore glorie in nothing but thy faith, bee aſhamed of thy apparell: yea, of thy robes and coſtly ornaments. And know further that whereas thy bodie by ſinne is become ſo vile, a meaner couer and baſer apparell were fit for it. And therefore know, that whereas God hath giuen thee vſe of coſtly apparell, and pretious ornaments, he giues them not to honour thy bodie, but the place thou art in: and to adorne that part of his owne image, which hee hath ſet in thee by thy calling. And know fully, that if thou hadſt kept that order, wherein God at thy creation (as the text ſaith) ordained thee; thy naturall glorie would more haue adorned thee and the place thou beareſt, then all this accidentall and artificiall glorie can: and therefore glorie not ſo much for the one, as be aſhamed for the loſſe of the other; and let thy apparell teach thee this leſſon.

Thirdly, many men take much delight in ſome kinde of meate; ſome in varietie of meats; and ſome ſo loue their bellie, as they care not how many creatures, or kind of creatures doe die, for their belly ſake: this is to be conſidered; For I take it a great fault, for men either to be too lauiſh and careleſſe, how many creatures they cauſe to die, or (though they eate but one kinde) to doe it without all vſe or further conſideration. For, marke whence comes this, that man cannot now liue, or not ſo well; but his life muſt be the death of other creatures, his nouriſhment and preſeruation, the deſtruction of other creatures. At the beginning before ſinne was, this was not ſo: no creature did either ſerue to cloath or feede Adam: but this came with ſinne; ſinne brought this vanitie vpon creatures, to die for the feeding and clothing of man: and had we ſtood without ſinne, no creature ſhould haue loſt his life to bee our meate. I take it therefore the dutie of a man to make great vſe of his meate in this regard. And firſt, for the meate that he loues beſt, let him be humbled for his ſinne: knowing that if he had not ſinned, hee ſhould haue had much more ſweetneſſe in other meate, which notwithſtanding ſhould not haue coſt any creature his life. And ſecondly, for variety be not too lauiſh, nor too riotous: conſider euery diſh is the death of a creature of Gods creation: conſider againe whence comes this, that creatures muſt die to feed thee; not from the creation, creatures were not made to that end: Innocencie would haue preſerued all creatures to more excellent ends.

Sinne it was, and thy ſinne that deſtroyes ſo many creatures for the belly of man; it is a vanitie come vpon creatures for mans ſinne, that they muſt die for mans meate. The death therefore of euery creature, ſhould be a coraſiue to a mans heart: when he ſeeth it, it ſhould touch him to the quicke, and make him ſay, This creature dieth not for it ſelfe, but for me; not for it owne fault, but for mine. Miſerable ſinner that I am, if I had right, I ſhould rather die then it. God made it once for a better end, but my ſinn hath brought it to this corruption. If this conſideration tooke place, men would not eate their ordinarie fare with ſo little vſe; nor at extraordinarie occaſions be ſo careleſſe how much they ſpend, & how many creatures they cauſe to die.

But you will ſay, God hath giuen vs libertie in meates: differences of meats are taken away

A in Chriſt, and God hath giuen vs vſe of his creatures, not onely for neceſſitie, but more liberall vſe euen for greater delight and comfort. I anſwer, I grant all this and more too, to a man that hath faith. I grant, feaſts and bankets are lawfull for ſome men on ſome occaſions. I take not away any mans liberty in meats: God hath granted it, and man ought not to take it away. I onely wiſh that when we eate, wee alſo would make this vſe of it: and that we would not too riotouſly abuſe that libertie that God hath giuen vs for diuerſity of meats: faith giues leaue and libertie to eate; yet faith denies not a man to make a holy vſe of his eating, for his owne humiliation, but rather commands it.

C Fourthly, we ſee in the world, that creatures not onely die for mans feeding, but one creature feedes on another, and one creature deſtroyeth another to eate him. The Hawke preyeth on diuerſe kindes of birds: the Fox feedeth on tame birds: the Wolfe on the Lambe: greater fiſhes deuoure the leſſe: Dogs will eate diuerſe kindes of creatures, if they can come by them. Theſe things are manifeſt, and ſome of them be common ſports in the world.

Now whence comes this fearefull diſorder in nature, that one creature ſhould deuoure another? came it from the creation? was the world ordained in this ſtate, that one creature ſhould eate vp another? the greater feede vpon the leſſe? no: but ſinne brought this confuſion, C our ſinne cauſed this pitifull maſſacre of all creatures one by another. Let vs therefore at theſe ſights be humbled for our ſinne, which cauſed ſo fearefull a diſorder: when thou ſeeſt thy Hawke flie ſo fiercely and ſo cruelly murder a ſilly birde: thy Hound, the Hart, Hare, or Connie; then, as God hath giuen thee leaue in good order, meaſure, and manner, thus to deale with the creatures, and therefore thou maiſt take delight in it: ſo, withall make this vſe of it; whence comes this? it was not ſo from the beginning: When ſinne was not in the world, theſe would all haue lodged in one cage and cabbin, and one neuer haue offered to haue eaten another: my ſinne cauſed this iarre, and this diſorder betwixt theſe two creatures. This D ſhould humble a man, becauſe of his ſinne, and reſtraine his life from too much libertie, and his affection from too much delight in theſe kind of paſtimes.

Againe, when we ſee the cruelty of the Fox, the Wolfe, the Beare, toward the ſheepe and other creatures; Blame not too much the crueltie of the beaſts: for this was not in them at their creation; but thy ſinne made them thus cruel one againſt another. Turne then into thy ſelfe, and be aſhamed of it; and blame not ſo much the crueltie in them, as thine owne ſinne which cauſed it in them.

Againe, ſome creatures are vnperfect, ſome in parts of their bodie, ſome in ſome ſenſes: & ſome are loathſome and vgly to behold; and ſome are venomous, and hurtfull to the world. When thou ſeeſt it, conſider whence is this. They were not thus created: for God [ordained] that is, made all creatures in perfect order: but this comes from thy ſinne; enter into thy ſelfe, and acknowledge this, and be humbled for it: and doe not ſo much contemne this creature for his imperfection, nor loath him for his deformitie, nor hate him for his venome; as contemne, and loath, and hate thine owne ſinnes which were the cauſe of all theſe.

Laſtly, ſome take great delight in faire buildings, and make no vſe of them but for delight and pleaſure: but if they conſider well, they haue no ſuch cauſe: it was not ſo at the creation: Adam in his innocencie had a more ſumptuous Palace ordained for him; namely, the Paradiſe of heauen and earth: and yet trees were not cut in pieces, nor the earth had her ſtones rent out of her bowels, for the building of it. Thy ſinn it was that deſtroied this Palace; and ſinne hath cauſed the neceſſitie of theſe buildings: How then canſt thou glorie in thy buildings? Wilt thou glorie in thy ſhame? Canſt thou be proud of theſe, when thy ſinne bereft thee of a better? As therefore thy houſe is a comfort, ſtrength, ſecuritie, and delight vnto thee: ſo adde this one vſe alſo; let it in this conſideration be a cauſe to humble the for thy ſinne.

The diſorder that ſinne hath brought into the world, might be ſhewed in more particulars: but theſe may ſuffice, beeing thoſe of whom we haue moſt common vſe, and therefore doe moſt commonly abuſe.

To conclude this point, I ſay vnto all men: Doeſt thou ſee what diſorder is now in the world, in thy apparell, meate, recreations, buildings? Seeſt thou the confuſion, vanity, corruption of all creatures: the variance, diſſenſion, and hatred of creatures amongſt themſelues? Canſt thou ſee all this, and either not regard it at all, or elſe take delight in it? This is a curſed and abhominable delight. If a rich man ſhould conſume all his wealth, or throw it all on heapes, and then deſperately ſet his houſe on fire, hath he any cauſe of ioy to ſee this? If he ſit ſtill at this, you will ſay hee is ſenſeleſſe: but if hee laugh at it, he is madde: So God created man rich in all bleſſings, put him into the palace of the world: garniſhed this houſe of the world with exceeding beauty: his meate, his apparell, his recreation, his houſe were all excellent and glorious; hee made all other creatures, amongſt which there was nothing but concord, loue, agreement, vniformity, comelineſſe, and good order: now man by ſinne fell; and by his fall, not onely ſpent all his riches (that is, defaced the glorie of his owne eſtate:) but alſo ſet his houſe (that is the world) on fire: that is, defaced the beauty of heauen and earth: brought confuſion, corruption, vanitie, deformity, imperfection, and monſtrous diſorder on all creatures: ſet all the world together by the eares,

all creatures; set all the world together by the eares, and one creature at variance and deadly hate with other; so that one creature doth fight, teare, wound, destroy, and eate vp another. O cursed and damnable sinne of man, that hath so shamefully disordered that heauenly order, wherein God created all things at the beginning! and miserable then are we, which can sit still vnder this, and not be moued: but if we reioyce and delight in it, certainely, then a spirituall madnesse hath bewitched our soules. Let vs therefore stirre vp our selues, and looke about vs, and seeing all the world on a fire about vs: namely, flaming in contention, hatred, and all disorder; let vs for our parts seeke to quench it: which because we cannot, therefore lament and bewaile it: but much more lament and be humbled for our sinnes, which kindled this fire of disorder in the world.

Thus much of the manner of the Creation.

By the word of God.

The third point is, by what meanes? The text answereth, the world was ordained in that excellent order, by the word of God. By this word is meant, not any vocall word, as if the Lord should speake vnto the creatures; nor secondly, the substantiall word of the Father, the second person; although I confesse it be by him he made all things: Yet, I take it, it is not so meant in this place: but rather as Moses doth, Gen. 1. when he saith, that in the creation God said: it is in both places a comparison taken from a Prince, who bids his seruants doe this, and they doe it presently. The Lord in this place is like a Prince, he hath his word, whereby he commanded the world to be made. That word, I take it, is his will: for Gods willing of any thing, is an effectuall commanding of it to be done: yea, it is the doing of it: for his willing of a thing to be, is more then all the commandements of all men in the world. For if he doe but will it, the thing is done: what else it be, whereas all the world may command, and yet it is no neerer. From hence, I take it, this is manifest to be the surest sense for this place; God willed the beeing of all creatures, and according as he willed, they presently were: and that his will was his word here mentioned.

Now then first marke a speciall point, that sets out the glorie of the Creator: hee vsed no labour, no motion, no paines, no seruants, no instruments, no meanes: He onely spake the word, and they were made: he commanded, and they were created, Psal. 148.5. This shewes how glorious a God he is, and his power how omnipotent it is, who by his owne will and word produced such a glorious frame of heauen and earth, so many thousand sorts and kinds of creatures in their order and due places. Dauid most seriously considered of this, when he made the 104. Psalme; as appeareth if we read it. We ought also so deeply to meditate of this his glorious power manifested in this miraculous creation, as that we (seeing it) may acknowledge with the Psalmist, Psal. 115.3. Our God is in heauen, and doth whatsoeuer he will.

Did the Lord make all things by his word? learne we then for our instruction thus much: Euer when we see what is Gods will concerning our selues in any crosse or affliction whatsoeuer, let vs subiect our selues to it and beare it, because it comes from so mightie a God, as whom there is no resisting. For see, he that commanded all the world to be, and it presently was so, and nothing could disobey; then if he command any crosse to seaze vpon thee, wilt thou resist him? nay, rather take Saint Peters holy counsell, 1. Pet. 5.6. Humble thy selfe vnder this so mightie hand of God, that hee may exalt thee in due time. If thou then see his crosse comming towards thee, meete it, receiue it with both hands, beare it with both shoulders: if his will humble thee, resist not thou: for when againe he pleaseth to exalt thee, all the diuels in hell are not able to resist him.

So that the things which we see, are not made of things which did appeare.

The fourth and last point is, the matter whereof the world was made: The text saith, The things that we see, that is, all the world, were made of things that were not, that is, of nothing, which here is said not to appeare, (not to appeare, because that can not appeare or be seene, which is not:) So the meaning is, when there was nothing in the world, then God made the world of nothing. This is the strangest thing of all in this fourth point. For it is not so strange that the world should be created in excellent order; or that God should make it by his word; as that he should make it of nothing. Reason denies it, Philosophie disputes against it as absurd, and neuer will yeeld vnto it: but here is the power of faith manifest, for it makes vs beleeue and know it is so.

Hence we learne, that if he created the world of nothing, then he can preserue vs also by nothing, that is, without meanes, or by weake meanes, or contrarie to meanes: he that did the one, can doe the other, for the same reason is of both. This is a speciall point of our religion, Not to tie Gods prouidence vnto meanes. Men vse neuer to acknowledge it but with meanes, but that is no worke of faith. But we ought not onely to see Gods prouidence, when we see no meanes; but euen when other meanes are against vs, then to see it, is a point of faith: and that is our dutie, though it be hard. Giue men health, wealth, libertie, peace, let them be guarded about with Gods blessings; then they will magnifie the prouidence of God: but take those away, and lay vpon them pouertie, sicknesse, or any trouble, then they rage and raile, murmure, and blaspheme, and say, No prouidence, no God: and thus God is beholding to the meanes, for else men would flatly denie him. But this argues the want of faith. For had we that faith in vs, whereby we beleeue stedfastly, that God made all the world without meanes, this faith would also perſwade vs that he can preſerue vs beeing made, though meanes be wanting, or though they be againſt vs. This we may make vſe of, whether we be in neceſſitie, and would be releeued; or in any perill, and would be ſuccoured; or in what extremitie ſoeuer, when meanes doe faile vs.

Secondly, if he made all things of nothing, then he is able alſo, in reſpect of his promiſes made in Chriſt, To call ſuch things that are not, as though they were, Rom. 4. 17. As a man by nature is the child of wrath, and of the deuill, he is able to make him a ſeruant of God, and child of grace.

This may teach vs, 1. Not to deſpaire of any mans ſaluation, though he ſeeme almoſt paſt all grace: for God can make any thing of nothing, and therefore can put grace into that heart wherein afore was none.

And 2. this is a comfort to all them which through weakneſſe of faith, cannot perſwade themſelues of their election. For, ſuppoſe thou be full of wants and imperfections, and haſt a rebellious and froward heart: What then? Remember God made thee once a creature of nothing; he can now againe make thee a new creature, of nothing: hee created thee without meanes; hee can ſaue thee, though neuer ſo many meanes doe ſeeme to be againſt thee.

And thus much of theſe three effects of faith, and conſequently

Of the firſt part of this Chapter, containing a deſcription of faith in generall.

* * *

Abels faith.

Verse 4.

By faith, Abel offered vnto God a greater ſacrifice then Caine: by which hee obtained witneſſe that hee was righteous: God teſtifying of his gifts: by which faith he alſo beeing dead yet ſpeaketh.

THe ſecond part of the Chapter, containeth an illuſtration and proofe of the former deſcription, by a rehearſall of the moſt excellent patternes & enſamples of faith, which flouriſhed in the Church of the old Teſtament.

Theſe examples be of two ſorts: 1. ſuch as are ſet downe ſeuerally one by one, from the 4. verſe to the 32. 2. Such as are ſet downe ioyntly many together, from thence to the end.

The examples ſet downe ſeuerally, are of two ſorts: 1. Such as were naturall Iſraelites, and borne members of the Church viſible. 2. Such as were not naturally members, but ſtrangers from the Church of God, till they were called extraordinarily.

Examples of ſuch as were members of the viſible Church, are alſo of two ſorts: 1. Such as liued about the flood: 2. or, as after the flood.

Firſt, of ſuch as liued afore, or about the time of the flood, there be three faithfull men, whoſe faith is here recorded: 1. Abel, and 2. Enoch before: 3. Noe, both before and after. All theſe three in order.

Theſe excellent and moſt worthy examples, are all grounded on ſome place of the old Teſtament, and are continued from the beginning of the world almoſt to Chriſts incarnation: for it beginneth with Abel, which is ſo neere the beginning, that he was the ſecond good man that liued in the world; yea, and the firſt of all that had this true faith, as the onely meanes of his ſaluation. For, as for Adam, he afore his fall had not this faith, neither ſhould it haue ſaued him: but when the firſt meanes failed him, then came this faith as the ſecond and more effectuall meanes of his ſaluation: but Abel was neuer in poſſibilitie to be ſaued by any thing, but by this faith. And therefore Abels faith hath the firſt place of commendation, and that in this verſe.

Abels faith is here commended for three things: 1. In that hee offered by it a greater ſacrifice then Cain. 2. By it hee obtained teſtimonie with God. 3. By it being dead, Abel yet ſpeaketh.

The firſt effect of Abels faith, is thus ſet downe by the holy Ghoſt; By faith, Abel offered vnto God a greater ſacrifice then Cain.

The ordinarie Expoſition of theſe words, is this: That Cain and Abel comming to offer, there was no difference in the matter of their ſacrifice, but onely in the manner of offering, in that Abel offered by faith, and ſo did not Cain.

This expoſition though it be good, yet it fits not the ſcope of this place, nor the fourth of Gen. The right ſenſe therefore ſeemeth to be this; Abel hauing faith, this faith mooued him to teſtifie his thankefull heart to God. This he did by offering vnto God the beſt and coſtlieſt ſacrifice that he could, namely, the firſt, fatteſt and faireſt of his ſheepe. Whereas vnbeleeuing Cain, hauing no loue to teſtifie vnto God, brought onely of the fruite of his ground, not of the beſt as Abel did, but whatſoeuer came firſt to hand. This beeing the true meaning of the whole: let vs come to the particular points laid downe in this effect, and they are three.

1. That Cain and Abel offered, that is, ſerued God.

2. That they offered Sacrifices.

3. That Abel offered a better then Cain.

The firſt point containes their ſeruice in generall: the ſecond, their ſeruice in particular: the third, the difference of their ſeruice; wherein eſpecially will appeare the excellencie of Abels faith.

Firſt, Abel and Cain, the two firſt brethren in the world, offered ſacrifice to the true God. How learned they this? for they had no Scripture, it was penned many yeares after; namely by Moſes firſt of all. I anſwer; when their Parents Adam and Eue had fallen, God gaue them (of his infinite goodneſſe) a couenant of grace that the ſeede of the woman ſhould breake the ſerpents head, Gen. 3. 15. wee doubt not but our firſt parents receiued this couenant, and beleeued the promiſe; and this their faith, taught them how to worſhip the true God aright.

You will ſay; thus Adam and Eue learned of God; but how came this to Cain and Abel? I anſwer, when they had beene thus inſtructed of God, Adam as a faithfull ſeruant of God, taught the ſame religion, and deliuered the ſame doctrine to his children: and by it they were taught, what, to whome, and in what manner to offer ſacrifice. And thus they did it neither by Scripture, nor reuelation, nor their owne inuention, but by the inſtruction of their Parents.

Hence let all Parents learne a leſſon of Adam, the firſt Parent that was in the world; namely, to procure the good of their children: he nourtered his children excellently: 1. Hee prouided for them till they came to age. 2. Then hee left them not, but appointed them their callings: for one was an husbandman, and the other a ſhepheard. 3. Not thus onely, but he taught them to worſhip the true God, both in their callings, and in the practiſe of religion, and therefore he taught them to offer ſacrifice in way of thankefulneſſe vnto God: all this did Adam.

So muſt thou doe with the children which God hath giuen thee. 1. Prouide for them carefully till they be of age, take heede they miſcarrie not any way for want of things needfull. 2. So bring them vp as that they may bee apt to liue in ſome godly calling whereby to do good in his Church; and that calling thou muſt appoint them, according to the fitnes of their gifts. Adam appointed them not both one calling, but diuers callings according to the diuerſitie of their gifts: and thou muſt ſee it be a lawfull and honeſt calling, for ſo are both theſe. Then 3. (the greateſt matter of all theſe) teach them religion, and the true manner of fearing and worſhipping God; that as by the two firſt, thy child may liue well in this world, ſo by this he may bee made an heire of the kingdome of heauen.

Adam was the firſt father, and father of vs all; let all then follow him in this practiſe; and if we followe him in one, followe him in both. Diuers will bee as carefull for their bodies and for their callings as Adam was, but how fewe are as carefull to teach them religion for the preferment of their ſoules to life eternall? but parents muſt haue care of both theſe: elſe they ſhall anſwer for their child at the day of iudgement: and though he periſh in his owne ſinne, yet his blood will God require at the Fathers hands. For God made him a father in his roome, and he diſcharged not the dutie of a father vnto their child.

Secondly, in that Cain offered, as well as Abel; hence we learne diuers inſtructions.

1. It is a common opinion, that if a man walke duly and truely in his calling, doing no man harme, but giuing euery man his owne, and ſo doe all his life long, God will receiue him, and ſaue his ſoule: but the truth is this: If men doe thus, it is good and commendable and they muſt be exhorted to continue: but if they ſtand vpon this for ſaluation, they caſt away their ſoules. For marke here; Cain was a man that walked in an honeſt calling, and more then that, hee tooke paines, and laboured in it (which all men doe not that haue honeſt callings!) And more then all theſe, when Abel offered, he came and worſhipped God alſo; and he did outwardly in ſuch ſort, as no man could blame him, but onely God that ſawe his heart, And for all this, yet is he a wicked Cain, and that is all that the word of God giues him, 1. Ioh. 3. 12. Then it is manifeſt, that to walke in a mans calling iuſtly & vprightly, doing no man harme will not ſerue the turne: Cain did it, and yet was accurſed: wee muſt then goe further then Cain, els wee ſhall goe with Cain to the place where he is.

Reaſon not with thy ſelfe, I worke hard and followe my calling, I hurt no man: thus could Caine reaſon, and yet but curſed Cain. Thou muſt then beſide theſe, get that that Cain did not; Learne in thy conſcience to ſee and feele thy ſinne, to be grieued for it, ſo as thou maiſt ſay; My ſickeneſſe, my pouertie, my croſſes grieue me, but nothing ſo much as my owne ſinnes, theſe trouble me aboue all, and this griefe ſwalloweth vp all the reſt. And there is another thing which I ſeek aboue all; not gold, ſiluer, or promotion; but reconciliation with my God, and his fauour in Ieſus Chriſt; If thou haſt theſe two, then thou goeſt beyond Caine, then ſhalt thou ſtand before God with Abel, and be accepted. Remember theſe two; humiliation for ſinne, and deſire of reconciliation: theſe two is the ſumme of religion. If thou haſt theſe, thou art bleſſed with Abel, if not, curſed with Cain, howſoeuer thou liueſt in the world. If thou ſay, Caine killed his brother, and ſo would not I doe for all the world, I wil doe no man hurt in bodie or goods; This will not ſerue: for it is ſaid that God had no reſpect to Cain afore he killed his brother, euen when he offered his ſacrifice: and therefore this dutie is moſt neceſſarie, and there is no ſhifting it off.

2. Cain offered as well as Abel; yea, Cain offered afore Abel, as it is manifeſt in Gen. 4. 3. And yet Abels ſacrifice was better when it came to the proofe, and was accepted, and not Cains which came firſt. Hence we learne, that a man may be more forward then many other in many outward duties of religion, and yet not be accepted of God: another may not be ſo forward to the dutie, and yet when he comes, be better accepted. Whence comes this? what? is forwardneſſe in good duties a fault? Nothing leſſe: but hence it is, he that outwardly is moſt forward, may come in hypocriſie and without faith; the want whereof makes his forwardnes nothing worth. Many ſuch haue we in our Church: great frequenters of places and exerciſes of religion; and yet they come but as Cain did, or it may be in worſe intents. Thy forwardneſſe is to be commended, but take this with thee alſo; Care not ſo much to be firſt at the Sermon, or to be there oftner then other, as to go with true faith, repentance, and a heart hungring for grace; if not, boſt not in thy forwardnes; Cain offered afore Abel, and yet not accepted; and ſo there may come an Abel after thee, and bring faith with him, and be accepted, when thou with thy hypocritical forwardnes ſhalt be reiected, as Cain was.

Thirdly, did Cain offer as well as Abel? Hence we learne, that the Church-militant is a mixt and compounded companie of men: not of one ſort, but true beleeuers and hypocrites mingled together: as here in the very infancie of the Church, there was Cain worſhipping in ſhew, as well as Abel that worſhipped in truth. So was it in the infancie, ſo in her perpetuall growth, and ſo ſhall it be in the laſt age of the Church: the good ſhall neuer be quite ſeparated from the bad, vntill Chriſt himſelfe doe it at the laſt iudgement. Goates ſhall alwaies be mingled among the ſheepe, til' Chriſt the great ſheepheard doe ſeparate them himſelfe, Matth. 25. 34. And he that imagineth a perfect ſeparation till then, imagineth a fancie in his braine, and ſuch a Church, as cannot be found vpon the earth.

This beeing ſo, let no man therfore be afraid to ioyne himſelfe to the viſible Church, neither let any that are in it goe out of it, becauſe the bad are mingled with the good; for ſo it hath beene alwaies and euer will be: he then that will goe out of a Church, becauſe there be hypocrites in it, muſt goe out of the world: for ſuch a Church is not found, but tryumphant in heauen.

Fourthly, in that Caine and Abel offered, hence we learne, that the church of God which truly profeſſeth his name, hath beene euer ſince the beginning of the world. For this Church was in the houſhold of Adam; when there was A no more but it in the world; for ſacrifice to God is a ſigne of the Church: yea, and beſide the ſacrifice, they had a place appointed where Adam and his familie came together to worſhip God; For, ſo much Cain intimateth, Gen. 4. 14. and 16. Caine went out from the preſence of the Lord, that is, not onely out of his fauour and protection, but from the place of his ſolemne ſeruice, and where he wonted to manifeſt his ſpeciall preſence to his children ſeruing him: and therefore Cain, as beeing excommunicate, complaines (verſ. 14.) becauſe he muſt leaue it. Thus the Church hath beene from the beginning; and therefore is truely called Catholike.

The Papiſts abuſe this place notoriouſly; for B whereas the Church hath beene ſo auncient, they argue therefore it is aboue the Scripture: yea, and that we could not know it to be Scripture, but by the auncient teſtimonie of the Church.

Wee muſt knowe the Scripture is two waies to be conſidered: firſt, as it was written and penned by holy men, and ſo it is later then the Church: for Moſes was the firſt penman of Scripture: but ſecondly, as it is the word of God, the ſubſtance, ſenſe, and truth thereof is much more auncient then the Church: yea, without the word of God, there can be no Church. For, without faith is no Church (becauſe the church is a companie of beleeuers) and without the C word is no faith; therefore no word, no faith, no faith, no Church. So then the Scripture was afore the Church, but penned after.

Thus we ſee that Cain and Abel offered.

Now ſecondly, what offered they? ſacrifices. Sacrifices were vſed in the worſhip of God for two ends. 1. When a ſacrifice was offered, eſpecially of beaſts, when a man ſaw the blood of the beaſts powred out, it put him in mind of his owne ſinnes and the deſert of them, & taught him to ſay thus: But as this creature is here ſlain and his blood diſtills and drops away; ſo my ſinnes deſerue that my blood ſhould be ſhed, and my ſoule be drenched in hell for euer. This creature can die but one death, for it ſinneth not; but my ſinnes deſerue both the firſt and D ſecond death.

Secondly, ſacrifices ſerued to put them in minde of the Meſſias to come; and the ſlaying of the beaſts ſhewed them how the Meſſias ſhould ſhed his blood, and giue his life for the ſinnes of the people. Theſe are the two principall endes of ſacrifices, and for theſe two ends did Cain and Abel offer; Cain in hypocriſie and for faſhion ſake; Abel in truth, conſcience, and ſinceritie.

As it was in the old ſacrifices, ſo is it in our Sacraments of the newe Teſtament: whereof, the ſacrifices were all types: in baptiſme; ſprinkling of the water ſerues to ſhewe vs how filthily we are defiled with our owne ſinnes.

2. It ſignifies the ſprinkling of the blood of vpon the heart of a ſinner, for his ſanctification from ſinne.

2. In the ſupper, the breaking of the bread ſignifies, 1. how we ſhould be broken in humiliation for our ſinne; and the pouring out of the wine, how our blood and life ſhould bee ſhed, and poured out for our ſinnes, if wee had that that we deſerue. And ſecondly, they repreſent vnto vs how the bodie of Chriſt was broken, and his blood powred out for our ſinnes; which he was content to ſuffer vnder the wrath of his Father, for our ſakes: ſo that we ſee, both the ſacrifices and ſacraments of the old, as alſo of the newe Teſtament, all aymed at theſe two endes; to ſhewe vs our ſinnes, and our miſery by ſinne: and to foretell, or repreſent our reconciliation by Chriſt. Which beeing ſo, our leſſon is this;

We haue all receiued thoſe two Sacraments; the firſt once, the ſecond often. Now if they haue beene duly receiued of vs, they ought to haue this double vſe vnto vs; 1. To cauſe vs to make a ſearch of our owne ſinnes, and of our miſerie by ſinne: and ſeeing it, to be caſt downe and humbled, conſidering how corrupt our hearts are, and how wicked our liues. And ſecondly, when this is ſo, then to make vs ſeeke for reconciliation with God by faith in Chriſt, to make vs deſire it, loue it, and pray for it, aboue all things in the world. Abel not onely offred, but offred ſo, as that it put him in minde of his ſinne, and of his redemption by the death of the Meſſias to come. So wee muſt not onely outwardly receiue the Sacraments; but ſo receiue, as that wee may ſee and be humbled for our ſinne, and ſeeke to be reconciled to God in Chriſt.

Such vſe alſo ought wee to make of hearing the word, and not to be content with bare hearing of it, or to get a generall knowledge out of it: but it muſt giue vs a ſpeciall ſight of our owne eſtate by ſinne: and vrge vs forward to ſeeke the fauour of God in Chriſt. Religion ſtands not in hearing the word, and receiuing the Sacraments with the congregation, though it be done neuer ſo often, and neuer ſo formally; But ſo to heare and ſo to receiue, as that they may worke in vs thoſe two things; and that is the pith and life of religion. And whoſoeuer he bee that profeſſeth religion, & ſheweth not the fruit of it in theſe two, that mans profeſſion is in vaine, and it will goe for no paiment at the day of iudgement.

Thus we ſee they offered, and what they offred. It followeth; A greater ſacrifice then Caine.

The third and laſt point, is the difference of theſe ſacrifices. For although Caine offred as well as Abel; and offered ſacrifice as well as Abel: yet was there a difference in their ſacrifices; for Abels was better then Caines. This is the cheife point; for this ſets downe what was that excellencie of his faith, for which hee is here commended. Abel is not commended for offring by his faith; for ſo did Cain that had no faith: nor for offering ſacrifice by his faith; for ſo did Cain that had no faith; but becauſe that by his faith he offred a better ſacrifice then Cain could.

The holy Ghoſt calls Abels a better or greater ſacrifice, becauſe Abel brought the beſt and fatteſt of his ſheepe, and ſo beſtowed the moſt coſt he could; as ſignifying that he would haue beſtowed more coſt, had hee knowne how to haue don it. For he that giues as he hath, would giue more if he had it. And hee that doth the beſt he can in any thing, it is certaine he would doe better if he could. Caine contrariwiſe brought not the beſt of his fruits, but either the worſt, or whatſoeuer came firſt to hand, as thinking that whatſoeuer hee brought, was good enough: therefore worthily is Abell ſaid to haue offered a better ſacrifice then Caine.

And further, this holy practiſe of Abel, came to be a law written, euen one of the commaundements of the Ceremoniall law; namely, that the firſt borne ſhould bee offered to God, Exod. 34. 19. And the firſt fruites of the corne, Leuit. 23. 10. &c. And that nothing that was lame, blinde, maymed, or had any blemiſh in it ſhould bee offered to the Lord; Deut. 15. 21. Abel here did euen that which theſe lawes commaunded: and theſe lawes commaunded the ſame that he did. Thus God vouchſafed to honour his ſeruant Abel, for his obedient and honeſt heart; euen to make his practiſe the ground and beginning of one of his owne lawes, that ſo the Iſraelites in all their generations, might in their daily practiſes, remember this worthie deed of holy Abel to his perpetuall honour.

Now for vs the truth is, this lawe bindes vs not: for it was a ceremony, & is ended in Chriſt: Yet the equitie and vſe of it reacheth euen to vs: namely it teacheth vs when wee will giue any thing vnto God, to giue the beſt wee haue. This is the equitie of thoſe lawes ceremoniall, which commanded them to giue to the Lord their firſt borne, and their firſt fruites, and the fatteſt of their cattell; and ſo much of them do ſtill binde vs. Now from this rule, are taught diuerſe duties.

1. To the Parent. Haſt thou many children, and wilt giue ſome to the Lord? namely, to ſerue him in the miniſterie? The practiſe of the world, is to make the eldeſt a Gentleman, the next a Lawyer, the next a Merchant: he that is the youngeſt, or leaſt regarded, or that hath ſome infirmitie in wit, or deformitie in bodie, ſet him to ſchoole, let him bee a Miniſter. But Abels ſacrifice controlles this profane courſe of the world. Learne therefore by him, whomſoeuer of all thy children thou findeſt fitteſt in gifts and graces of bodie and minde, whom thou loueſt beſt, and moſt eſteemeſt; he is fitteſt for the Lord, & the Lord is moſt worthy of him: conſecrate him to the Lord, for his ſeruice in the miniſterie.

2. To the young man. Hee beeing in the ſtrength and ripeneſſe of wit, ſenſes, memorie, capacitie; and in the beſt of his age: he ſaith, I will take my pleaſure now I am fitteſt for it: I will repent at the ende of my dayes, and that is a fitter time. This is a vile policie of the deuill, to diſhonour God, and to caſt away their ſoules. What a griefe is it to giue the deuill his young yeares, the ſtrength of his bodie and wit, and to bring his withered olde age vnto God? nay, be ſure, God will not accept thy rotten ſacrifice of old age, but rather giue thee vp to the deuill, that he may haue thee altogether, which hath had the beſt: then followe rather Salomons counſell, Eccles. 12. 1. who bids thee remember thy Creator in the daies of thy youth. Remember Abels ſacrifice, it was of the beſt. So, thou haſt no ſacrifice but thy ſelfe to offer: offer then the beſt: thy young yeares is the beſt time, giue them vnto God.

3. To all Chriſtians. Abell offered the beſt: it teacheth vs all, if wee will profeſſe and ſerue God, not to doe it by the halfes; or for ſhew and faſhion ſake, or negligently, as not caring how. Thus to doe, is but to offer the ſacrifice of Caine, and that makes the moſt profeſſors go away with their ſeruice vnaccepted as Caines was: for God will haue all or none, he is worthy to haue no partner: he muſt be ſerued with all the heart, with ſoule and body, ſo that a man muſt conſecrate himſelfe wholly vnto him, 2. King. 23. 25. It is the ſpeciall commendation of good King Ioſias, that hee turned vnto the Lord with all his heart, and ſoule, and might: and for that, he is preferred afore all Kings afore or after him: not that Ioſias could fulfill the law perfectly, as it required; but it is meant of the endeuour of his heart and life, by which hee ſtraue with all his might to ſerue God as well as hee could: his example is ours.

We profeſſe religion, we muſt looke that our hearts affect it: wee profeſſe a turning from ſinne, we muſt take heed it be not formall, and from the lippes, but from the heart. So, when we practiſe any dutie of religion, whether we pray or heare the word, or receiue the Sacraments (this is the ſacrifice that we can offer) we muſt not do them coldly and careleſly, but with zealous affection & reſolution from the heart. Otherwiſe, if we ſerue God for faſhion ſake, and our hearts are on the world, and our own luſts, we offer the ſacrifice of curſed Caine, and wee with our formall religion ſhall goe to him. But let vs offer the ſacrifice of Abel: that is, though it bee neuer ſo little, yet let it bee the beſt we can, and all wee can, and God will accept vs as hee did Abel. And thus the Parent ſhould giue God his beſt childe: the young man his beſt yeares: euerie man his beſt part, which is his heart. And thus wee followe the ſteps of holy Abel, who offered to God the beſt ſacrifice he had. This was the fruite of his faith: euen ſo that Parent, that young man, that profeſſor that hath true faith, will doe ſo likewiſe.

A Hitherto of the firſt effect of Abels faith: It followeth, By the which he obtained witneſſe that he was righteous.

This is the ſecond effect of Abells faith, whereby it is commended. 1. For the meaning. By faith hee meanes ſauing faith, which makes a man iuſt before God, and no other. For wheras he had ſaid before, that by faith our Elders had obtained a good report: He prooues that generall, by this example of Abell; therefore that ſauing faith which was meant there, is alſo meant here.

These words ſet downe two benefits which Abel had by his ſauing faith: Firſt, he was iuſt by it. Secondly, God teſtified that he was ſo.

B For the firſt; Abels faith made him iuſt and righteous, not becauſe his faith was an excellent qualitie of that vertue in it ſelfe, as to make him iuſt; but becauſe it was an inſtrument whereby hee apprehended and applyed to himſelfe the righteouſneſſe of the Meſſias to come, wherby he might ſtand iuſt before God. This was his righteouſneſſe, which he had by faith: for he truſted not to any holineſſe of his own, though (it is out of queſtion) he knewe hee was the ſonne of that man who once was perfectly righteous: but the truſt and confidence of his heart was in the righteouſneſſe of that bleſſed ſeede, which, God had promiſed, ſhould breake the ſerpents head. This promiſe he knowing, beleeued it, applyed it to himſelfe, and this faith made him righteous.

C Here we learne a worthy leſſon of Chriſtianitie; namely, that the true and the vndoubted way to heauen, is a holy and liuely faith in Ieſus Chriſt: for, this faith makes a man righteous, and that righteouſneſſe opens him the gate of heauen. To this ende (ſaith the Apoſtle) Beeing iuſtified by faith, wee haue peace with God: but by whome; through our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Rom. 5. 1.

For the vſe of this doctrine, wee muſt renue our former exhortation, which indeede cannot be too often preſſed to the conſcience. There is none of vs ſo vile, none ſo profane, but we deſire ſaluation. If we doe, then we muſt tread the beaten way to it. For, we are not borne D heires of it: neither can wee come thither by chaunce: but there is a way that muſt be taken, and that way is but one: all other are miſleading by-wayes. Againe, that way muſt be taken in this life; elſe, it is too late. Now, this way is to bee a iuſt and righteous man. With this, neuer man failed: and without this, neuer man attained to ſaluation; for, No vncleane thing can come into the kingdome of heauen. Neuer was man iuſtified there, which was not iuſt before: and that muſt here bee begunne, which in heauen is to be perfected. In this life therefore we muſt ſeeke to bee iuſt. Nowe, our good works will not ſerue to make vs iuſt: for they are all vnable to indure the triall of Gods iuſtice. And if we ſtand to them, and they prooue not able to ſatisfie Gods iuſtice; then, in ſtead of ſauing vs they will condemne vs. Therefore with Abell, let vs goe out of our ſelues, denie our ſelues, and cleaue onely to Chriſts righteouſneſſe, in life and death: this is the way that neuer will deceiue vs.

But ſome will ſay, We walke in this waie. I anſwer, He, that walketh in a way, may be traced by his ſteps: ſo then, ſhew your ſteps of holineſſe, of deuotion, of charitie, &c. thoſe muſt ſhew your faith: leaue theſe ſteps behind you and then your faith is good. Thus did holy Abel: beleeue thou it, acknowledge it, and follow thou after him & renounce all by-paths which the Papiſts, or thy owne braine imagineth. Let this one doctrin ſinke into thy heart in ſtead of many, and let not the deuill ſtrike it out. For, if thou walke in this way, my ſoule for thine it will bring thee to heauen: if not, at the laſt day this doctrine will condemne thee, becauſe it ſhewed thee this way, and thou wouldeſt not walke in it.

Secondly, obſerue: He ſaith, Abell was approued and accepted of God. How prooues he that? Becauſe his worke pleaſed God: as who ſay, his workes cannot pleaſe God, vnleſſe his perſon doe: therefore in that his workes doe, thence he concludeth that his perſon did: it is the reaſon of the holy Ghoſt, and therefore infallible.

In the framing of this reaſon, the holy Ghoſt teacheth vs a great point of our religion: namely, that firſt a mans perſon muſt pleaſe God afore his actions can. And after the perſon, then the actions. This is plaine in theſe words: for it is ſaid, hee firſt obtained witneſſe that hee was righteous himſelfe, and then God teſtified of his gifts. So likewiſe more plainely, Gen. 4.4. God had reſpect firſt to Abell, and then to his offering. So that the truth is manifeſt, No work pleaſeth God afore the worker doe. This beeing ſo, hath excellent vſes.

Firſt, it ouerthroweth a maine piller of Romiſh religion, Iuſtification by workes. For how can a man be iuſtified by his workes, when he himſelfe muſt be iuſt afore the workes can bee? Vnleſſe he be iuſt, his works be wicked: if they be wicked afore his perſon be iuſt, how can they then iuſtifie him. And if the perſon be once iuſt, what needs it then to be againe iuſtified by works? Good works make not a man good, but a good man makes a worke good: and ſhal that worke that a man made good, returne againe and make the man good? 1. That is abſurd in reaſon: And 2. It is needleſſe. For, the man is good alreadie: elſe the worke could not haue beene good. We may therefore ſay, workes are rather iuſtified by the perſon of a man, then his perſon by the workes: and it is a moſt vaine thing to looke for Iuſtification from that which thou thy ſelfe muſt firſt iuſtifie afore it be iuſt: if we had no other reaſons againſt iuſtification by workes but this, this were ſufficient.

A Secondly, hence we learne, that till a man bee called, and his perſon iuſtified and ſanctified, all that euer he doth is ſinne: 1. His common actions, his eating, drinking, ſleeping, walking, talking, are all ſinnes. Yea 2. the workes of his calling, and his labour in the ſame, though neuer ſo iuſt, equall and vpright. 3. Further, his ciuill actions, namely, the practiſe of ciuill vertues; his outward grauitie, meekeneſſe, ſobrietie, temperance, quietneſſe, vprightneſſe, and all outward conformity, are all ſinnes. Yea, more then all this, his beſt actions, namely, his practiſing of the parts of Gods worſhip, or his deedes of charitie, his prayer, his hearing the word, his receiuing of the ſacramēts, his giuing of almes, they are all ſinnes vnto him, if he haue B not a beleeuing and penitent heart: yea ſuch ſinnes as ſhall condemne him, if he had no other. Obiect. This ſhould ſeeme ſtrange diuinitie, that the moſt holy actions, as prayer, &c. ſhould be damnable ſinnes. I anſwer, they are in themſelues holy and good, and as farre forth as God hath commanded them; yet in the doer they are ſinnes, becauſe he doth them from a foule and vnholy heart: for the ſame action may be holy in it ſelfe, and in regard of God the author of it, and yet a ſinne in him that is the doer of it. As cleere water, pure in the fountain, is corrupted or poiſoned by running thorough a filthie and polluted channell; ſo are euen the beſt actions, ſinnes: as euen the preaching of the word to a miniſter, whoſe heart is not clenſed by faith, and his perſon accep- C ted of God; it is a ſinne vnto him, and (if he repent not) ſhall be his condemnation. Caine ſinned not onely in hating and murthering his brother, in lying and diſſembling with God; but Caine ſinned alſo euen in offring ſacrifice. And Abels ſacrifice had bene a damnable ſinne, but that his perſon was iuſtified before God. And the reaſon of all this is good: for nothing in the worke is able to make an action acceptable to God, but onely the acceptation of the perſon by Chriſt. This beeing ſo, it ſtands vs euery one in hand to looke to our ſelues, and to labour aboue all things for faith and repentance, that ſo our perſons may be accepted righteous before God, and thereby our actions ac- D cepted alſo. If it be a miſerable thing, that all thy actions, euen holy actions ſhould be ſinns, then labour to be iuſtified; for that onely can make thy workes accepted: if not, then though thou labour neuer ſo much to be approoued in the world, and ſet neuer ſo glorious a ſhew vpon thy workes to the eyes of men, they are all abhominable ſinnes in the ſight of God: and at the day of iudgement they ſhall goe for no better. Preach and teach all thy life long; nay, giue thy life to die for religion: giue all thy goods to the poore, depriue thy ſelfe of all delights: build Churches, Colledges, bridges, highwaies, &c. and there may come a poore ſhepheard, and for his keeping of his ſheepe be accepted, when thou with all thy pompe of out-

A ward holineſſe, muſt bee reiected. And why this? only becauſe hee had faith, and thou haſt none; his perſon was iuſtified before God, and thine is not. Therefore let this be my counſell, from Abell: Labour not ſo much to worke glorious workes; as that which thou doeſt, doe it in faith. Faith makes the meaneſt worke accepted; and want of faith makes the moſt glorious worke reiected: for ſo ſaith the text, Abell muſt be accepted, elſe his ſacrifice is not. Thus we ſee Abel was iuſt, and God ſo accounted him. The ſecond point is, That God gaue teſtimony he was ſo: In theſe words,

God giuing teſtimonie.

What teſtimonie it was that God gaue of Abel and his gift, it is not expreſſed in the word; and ſo it is not certaine: but it is very likely, B that when he and Cain offred, God in ſpeciall mercy ſent fire from heauen, and burnt vp Abels ſacrifice, but not Caines: for ſo it pleaſed the Lord often afterward when hee would ſhewe that hee accepted any man, or his work, he anſwered them by fire from heauen. So hee burnt vp the ſacrifice that Aaron offred, Leuit. 9.24. So he anſwered Salomon, 2. Chron. 7.1. And ſo Eliah, 1. Kings 18.38. And ſo it is likely that he gaue this teſtimonie that he accepted Abel and his offering. This was a great prerogatiue that Abel and the Fathers in the old teſtament had. We haue not this, but we haue a greater: for we haue that that is the ſubſtãce, and truth, and bodie of this. For we haue alſo the fire of God, that is, his ſpirit comes downe into our C hearts euery day, not viſibly, but ſpiritually, & burnes vp in the heart of a beleeuer his ſinnes and corruptions; and lights the light of true faith, that ſhall neuer be put out.

The vſe hereof is this; As no ſacrifice in the old law pleaſed God, but ſuch as was burnt by fire from heauen, ſent downe either then, or afore; ſo our ſacrifices of the new Teſtament (that is, our inuocation of Gods name, our ſacrifices of praiſe, our duties of religion, our workes of mercie and loue,) neuer pleaſe God, vnleſſe they proceede from a heart purged by the fire of Gods ſpirit, that is, from a beleeuing and repentant heart: both which are kindled and lighted, and daily continued by that fire D of Gods ſpirit. Therefore it is, that Paul ſaith, 1. Tim. 1.5. That loue muſt come out of a pure heart, and good conſcience, and faith vnfained. The duties of religion, and workes of loue comming from this purged heart, aſcend vnto the preſence of God, as a ſmoake of moſt acceptable ſacrifices, and are as a ſweet perfume in the noſethrils of the Lord.

Now, of what did God thus teſtifie? Of his gifts.

It may here bee asked at the firſt, how can Abel giue a gift to God; hath the Lord neede of any thing? & are not all things his? I anſwer, God is ſoueraigne Lord of heauen and earth, and all creatures: yet hath he ſo giuen his creatures vnto man to vſe, as that they become his

A owne, and ſo he may eſteeme and vſe them: and beeing his, a man may in token of his thankfulneſſe, returne them againe to God, eſpecially ſeeing God accepts them beeing ſo offred, as moſt free gifts.

This ſheweth vs, firſt, the wonderfull mercie of God, that whereas we can offer him nothing but his owne, he will of his free grace accept a gift offered of his owne, euen as though we had of our owne to offer.

2. See here a difference betwixt the ſacrifices of the old, and ſacraments of the newe Teſtament. In their ſacrifices they gaue ſomething to God, and therefore they are called gifts: in our ſacraments we receiue daily grace from God.

B 3. In that the ſacrifices of the old Law are called gifts, we muſt know that it is typicall, & hath excellent ſignifications vnto vs.

1. It ſignifieth, that the Meſſias ſhould be giuen of God freely, for the ſaluation of his elect: and that Chriſt the Meſſias ſhould willingly giue himſelfe to be a redeemer.

2. It ſignifieth, that euery man that lookes for ſaluation by Chriſt, muſt giue himſelfe to God, and all that is in him. So Paul exhorteth, Rom. 6.13. Giue your ſelues vnto God, and your members weapons of righteouſneſſe. When we giue any thing to a man, we make him Lord of it. If we then giue our ſoules and bodies to the Lord, we muſt giue them ſo, as that they may obey and ſerue him, and be ruled by him, and ſerue for his glorie, howſoeuer he ſhall vſe C them. We profeſſe religion, and make great ſhewes; but to giue our ſelues in obedience to God, is the life of religion: But contrary is the courſe of the world. For, moſt profeſſors are giuen vp to ſinne and Satan: their bodies giuen to drinking, gaming, vncleanneſſe, iniuſtice; their ſoules to enuying, hatred, malice, reuenge, luſt, pride, ſelfe-loue: God hath nothing except it be a face: but that will not ſerue the turne: hee will haue all, bodie and ſoule; for he made all, and he redeemed all. We goe againſt equitie: Chriſt gaue his bodie and ſoule for vs: why ſhould we not giue ours againe to him? Again, this gift is not as other gifts; for here all the D profit redounds to the giuer: the glorie indeed is his; but the gaine and profit is our own. Why then ſhould we withhold our ſelues from god? it argueth, we know not, feele not, what Chriſt hath giuen vs; for if we did, if we had 10000. liues, we would thinke them all too little for him.

And thus much of the firſt and ſecond effect of Abels faith; the third followeth;

By which Abel beeing dead, yet ſpeaketh.

The 3. effect, whereby Abels faith is commended, is laid downe in thoſe words. Concerning the meaning whereof there is ſome difference, which is briefly to be examined. Some thinke the words ſhould be thus tranſlated, By which alſo Abel beeing dead, is yet ſpoke of; making the meaning to be, that by his faith he obtained a good name to all poſteritie: but it ſeemes this cannot ſtand, for two cauſes: Firſt, becauſe that is alreadie affirmed of Abel and all the reſt, in the ſecond verſe, that through faith they had obtained a good report: which therefore might ſeeme needleſſe ſo ſoone to be repeated againe. Secondly, for that afterward Chriſts blood & Abels beeing compared together, it is not ſaid that Chriſts blood is better ſpoken of thē Abels, but that it ſpeaketh better things then Abels did. Therefore the words are rightly tranſlated.

Now for the true ſenſe of them, it is likely the holy Ghoſt here hath relation to the ſtorie whence it is taken; where, vpon Cains murther God ſaith to him, The voice of thy brothers blood crieth to mee from the earth; & why crieth it? Namely, for vengeance againſt ſo monſtrous a murder: and crieth to all men to behold it, & to abhor the like: & ſo after a ſort he continueth to ſpeake, to this day. So that the words, in the true and ful ſenſe of them, do import theſe two points:

1. That Abel ſpake when he was dead.
2. That in a ſort Abel ſtill ſpeaketh.

For the Firſt: Abel ſpake and cried when he was dead: but how? not with a vocall ſpeach; but the phraſe is figuratiue, and imports thus much, as if the Lord had ſaid to Caine: thou haſt killed thy brother cloſely, and it may be haſt hid him in the ſand, or buried him, and thinkeſt no man knoweth of it: but thou muſt know Caine, this thy fact is euident to me, as if Abel had told me; I know thou killedſt him; & if thou wonder how I know, I tell thee his blood told me; for it cried in my eares, and yet it crieth out againſt thee: for though Abel be dead, his blood yet ſpeaketh. As this is true of Abels, ſo of all mens blood: and as of blood, ſo of all other oppreſſions, though done by neuer ſo great men. Murders, oppreſſions, and all wrongs done to Gods children, they crie to God againſt the oppreſſors, though the poore oppreſſed men dare ſcarce name them; they neede not, for their blood doth: yea euen their very teares cannot be ſhed, but God takes them vp, and puts them in his bottle, and will knowe who ſhed them. Thus blood crieth againſt thē that ſhed it, yea teares crie againſt them that cauſe them. This affordeth vs a double inſtruction. Firſt, here it is apparent that God ſeeth & knoweth the ſinnes of men, though the men be neuer ſo mightie, or their ſinns neuer ſo ſecret. For though men conuaie them neuer ſo cloſly, and labour to hide them with all the meanes that the wit of man cā deuiſe: yet the very dead creatures crie out, and do proclaime the ſinnes and ſinners in the eares of God, as fully as the voices of liuing men, can diſcouer any thing vnto men. Priuy oppreſſions, and goods gotten by deepe deceipt, lie hidde to the world: But the ſtone out of the wall ſhall crie, and the beame out of the timber ſhall anſwere it. Woe bee to him that buildeth his houſe with blood: and erecteth a Citie by iniquitie: as though he had ſaide, God knoweth euery ſtone and euery peece of timber in their ſtately houſes, which they haue gotten by deceite or oppreſſing of the poore. Priuy conſpiracies, and plots of treaſon are laid againſt Princes and Magiſtrates; and often in ſo ſecret manner, as in mans reaſon is not poſſible to bee diſcouered: But God hath many waies to find them out, and they neuer ſcape his priuie ſearch: and therefore the holy Ghoſt adviſeth, Curſe not the King, no not in thy thought, nor the great ones in thy bedchamber: for the fowle of the heauen ſhall carrie thy voice, and that which hath wings ſhall declare the matter. So that whatſoeuer is plotted neuer ſo priuily or conſpired in the ſecret cloſets of vngodly men, God knowes it, and hath meanes how to diſcloſe it to the world. And in our daily experience God magnifieth himſelfe mightily in reuealing murders. For, bring the murtherer before the dead corps, and vſually it bleedeth, or giueth ſome other teſtimonie, whereby it ſpeaketh euen as Abels blood did, This is the murtherer. Nay more: for, Abels blood ſpake to God, but here euen to men alſo.

And of this it is hard to giue any reaſon at all, but the ſecret and immediate hand of God, thereby ſhewing himſelfe to know all ſecret ſinns, and to be able to diſcloſe them by ſtrange meanes.

The vſe of this doctrine is, to feare all men from ſinning, though they thinke it poſſible to conceale their ſinnes from the world: for this is one of the ſtrongeſt & commoneſt encouragements that men take, to liue in a ſinne, If they thinke it likely to be concealed. But here they ſee how falſe a ground that is. For if they can conceale it from men, yet can they not from God: and if God know it, then can he reueale it to the world when it pleaſeth him.

Againe, whereas Abels blood cried when hee was dead: It teacheth vs, that God hath a care of Abel both liuing and dead: for it were nothing to ſay his blood cried, if God heard not that cry. But it is apparant he heard it; for he reuenged it, and puniſhed Cain when Abel was dead, and could not reuenge it himſelfe. And this care God had not ouer Abel alone, but ouer all his children: and as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, Pſal.116.15. Pretious in the ſight of the Lord is the death of his Saints; that which is vile & of no regard in the world, is pretious with God. Tyrants make hauocke of the Church, and kill them vp by heaps: but God records vp euery one, and will not faile to reuenge it, when they are dead: For if God haue bottles for the teares of his ſeruants, ſurely much more hath he bottles for their blood.

The vſe whereof is to teach vs in all extremities of danger or diſtreſſe, to learne patience: yea though, we be ſure to die, yet (as Chriſt Luk.21.19. ſaith) To poſſeſſe our ſoules with patience: For we haue one, will here the cauſe, and reuenge our quarrell when we are gone: So that if we be patient we looſe nothing: but if we be impatient we get nothing. Let vs therefore hold our tongues: for, the wrong done to vs crieth loud enough to God for reuenge, who wil here it as aſſuredly as he did Abels. And thus we ſee how Abel ſpake then, euen after he was dead.

The ſecond point is, Hee ſpeakes alſo yet; and that three waies.

Firſt, his faith yet ſpeaketh, becauſe it admoniſheth all men euery where, who either heare or reade this ſtorie, to become ſuch as Abel was, namely, true worſhippers of the true God; for, in Abels example, it prouokes all men to be like him; becauſe it aſſureth them of the ſame regard and reward with God that Abel had: and ſo Abels faith is a neuer dying Preacher to all ages of the Church.

Here we learne, that the holy Examples of Gods children are reall teaching, and loude preaching to other men.

For there is a double teaching, namely, in { word, or deede.

It belongs to the Miniſter to teach in word; and to all men to teach by their deedes, and good exãples. And if the miniſter teach not thus alſo, it is the worſe both for him & his hearers.

It ſufficeth not for him to teach by vocall Sermons, that is, by good doctrine; but withall by reall Sermons, that is, by good life; His faith, his zeale, his patience, his mercie, and all other his vertues muſt ſpeake, and crie, and call to other men to be like to him; which if hee practiſe carefully in his life as Abel did, then ſhall his vertues ſpeak for him to poſterities when he is dead.

Againe, Abel though dead, may be ſaid to ſpeake, becauſe howſoeuer his bodie be dead, yet in ſoule and ſpirit hee liueth with God in heauen. And thus the word ſpeaketh may bee vnderſtood, becauſe it is here oppoſed to death: by which hee beeing dead, yet ſpeaketh: that is, beeing dead in bodie, yet liueth in ſoule; which life with God, was obtained vnto by his true and ſauing faith.

Thirdly, he may be ſaid to ſpeake yet, as all other Gods Martyrs are ſaid to crie in the Reuelation, from vnder the altar, How long Lord holy and true doeſt thou not auenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? Reu.6.10. As this is true of all Martyrs, ſo ſpecially of Abel the firſt Martyr of all: which words are not ſpoken, neither by him nor them vocally with vtterance of voice: but it is ſo ſaid, to ſignifie what feruent deſire the ſeruants of God haue in heauen, of the full manifeſtation of Gods glorie in their bodies, and of an vtter aboliſhment of ſinne in the whole world. Which their deſire, they doubtleſſe vtter to God in a more excellent manner, then in this world we can vtter any thing with our voice; and thus Abel ſpeakes yet, & ſhal ſpeak till the worlds end.

Hitherto of the firſt Example, the Example of Abel.

Henoch faith.

A The ſecond is of Henoch in theſe words,

2. Examp Henoch.

verſ.5. By faith Henoch was tranſlated, that hee ſhould not ſee death, neither was he found, for God tooke him away: for, before hee was tranſlated, hee was reported of that hee had pleaſed God, &c.

B THe ſecond example of faith, is taken alſo out of the olde world, before the flood; and it is of Henoch the ſeauenth from Adam: to whom, ſtrange and miraculous things befell by reaſon of his faith. Let the meaning of the words be firſt examined.

By faith,

That is, by his confidence in the Meſſias, or his ſauing faith, he was taken away.

Taken away,

That is, from earth to heauen, not by an ordinarie worke, but miraculouſly; it is euident by the next words,

That hee ſhould not ſee death,

That is, that he ſhould not feele death, nor any diſſolution of ſoule and bodie: and therefore his taking away was miraculous. For to be taken away by death is an ordinarie worke; but C to be taken away, and yet not die, that is miraculous and extraordinary: & ſuch was Henochs.

So then the ſubſtance of theſe words is this much; Henoch hauing this grace from God, to beleeue ſtedfaſtly in the Meſſias to come, was likewiſe honoured with this high prerogatiue, To be taken into heauen without taſting of death, and to the end that hee might not die. Thus we haue the meaning.

Now concerning this tranſlation of Henoch: there are two opinions.

Some thinke hee was tranſlated in ſoule onely, and not in bodie; and they ſay he died in the tranſlation, ſo as his ſoule onely was taken vp into heauen, and his bodie ſlept in the earth. Though this appeares falſe at the firſt ſight, yet D let vs ſee their reaſons, and what they can ſay for themſelues.

Their firſt reaſon is this, No mortall bodie vnglorified can enter into heauen; but there is no mention of his glorification: therefore his bodie could not come in heauen.

Anſwer. It is certaine it was glorified ere it came in heauen. If they replie, it is not mentioned: I anſwer it followeth not, that therefore it was not: for euery circumſtance of euery action is not mentioned. For many circumſtances of actions muſt neceſſarily be ſuppoſed, & ſuch a one was this. Againe, the glorification of his bodie is here plainely enough implied where it is ſaid, he was tranſlated, that he ſhould not ſee death. Now if his bodie ſaw not death, it was made immortall, which is a ſpeciall part of glorification.

Their ſecond reaſon. Chriſt was the firſt that euer entred into heauen both in bodie and ſoule, and for proofe thereof, they bring S. Paul where he ſaith, Chriſt is the firſt fruits of them that ſleepe.

Anſw. True indeed, of them that ſleepe, that is, of all that die: Chriſt entred into heauen both in bodie and ſoule firſt of all them; but Henoch neuer died, as the text here auoucheth: therefore that place hinders not, but Henoch might be in heauen in his bodie, before Chriſts humane fleſh aſcended thither.

Thirdly, they argue out of Saint Iohn: No man hath aſcended into heauen, but he that deſcended, the ſonne of man which is in heauen. But, ſay they, this ſonne of man is not Henoch, but Chriſt: therefore none but Chriſt aſcended bodily into heauen.

Anſw. That place is not meant of corporall aſcending, but of vnderſtanding myſticall and heauenly things: no man aſcendeth to the full knowledge of heauenly myſteries, but Chriſt alone, who deſcended from the boſome of his father.

And thus we ſee, this opinion hath no ſtrength of argument to reſt vpon: but we may ſafely hold (notwithſtanding any thing that can be ſaid againſt it) that Henoch was tranſlated both in bodie and ſoule. And if any man yet doubt, how he could be taken vp in bodie before he was glorified; We are to know, though he died not, yet his bodie was changed, as thoſe men ſhall be, which ſhall be found aliue at the laſt day.

The ſecond opinion is, that Henoch was taken vp in ſoule and bodie into Paradiſe (ſome ſay, the heauenly, but the moſt the earthly Paradiſe) and there liues in his mortall and corruptible body, and muſt afore the laſt day come againe in his bodie with Elias, and fight againſt Antichriſt: and when by their doctrine they haue ouercome him, he ſhall by violence kill them, and ſo they ſhall die Martyrs: And this is the generall receiued opinion of the moſt Papiſts. But it is a meere conceit, and a dreame, and there is no ground for it: but good argument againſt it.

For firſt, as for the earthly Paradiſe, it was defaced by the flood; nor doe we read that euer man was in it but Adam. And ſome of their owne fables tell vs that Seth went to the gates of Paradiſe, when his father Adam was ſicke, to get ſome Phyſicke out of Paradiſe for his father, but he could not get in: Nor doe we finde any mention of it afterwards. So that it is likely in all reaſon, that it was defaced by the vniuerſall flood.

And if they mean, he was tranſlated into the heauenly Paradiſe: I anſwer, thither can no vncleane thing come: but a mortall bodie is vncleane: and themſelues ſay, he was taken away in his mortall bodie, and in it ſhall come againe and die. Therefore Henoch hauing a mortall and vnglorified body, cannot be in the higheſt heauens; into which nothing can enter which is not glorified and made immortall.

If they alleadge Eccleſiaſt. 44. 16. Enoch pleaſed God, & was tranſlated into Paradiſe, &c.

I anſwer, we neede not call in queſtion the authoritie of the booke, nor anſwer that it is not in the Canon of faith. For the text is corrupted wilfully by ſome that ſhewed themſelues in the Latine too bold with the text, both there and elſewhere: for in the Greeke originall there is no ſuch matter as Paradiſe, but the words are theſe: Enoch pleaſed God, and was tranſlated for an example of repentance to the generations. And thus we ſee, this opinion is euery way erroneous, and hath no ſhadow of reaſon in it, nor for it.

Seeing therefore both theſe opinions are to bee refuſed, let vs in fewe words ſet down the true & Orthodoxall iudgement of the Church out of the Scriptures in the olde and newe Teſtament. And it is this: That this holy man, by Gods ſpeciall fauour to him, was aſſumed into heauen both bodie and ſoule; his ſoule beeing perfectly ſanctified, and his bodie glorified in the inſtant of his tranſlation; and there he remaineth in glorie, expecting the generall reſurrection, and the full glorificatiō of all Gods elect.

Out of this tranſlation of Henoch, wee may learne,

Firſt, that there is a life euerlaſting prepared of God for his children, wherein they ſhall liue for euer both in ſoule and bodie; for hereof hath God giuen vs moſt euident teſtimonies, both here in Enoch, and afterward in Elias: Elias a Iewe, Enoch none; Enoch in the firſt world, Elias in the ſecond; Enoch before the flood, Elias after; Enoch vncircumciſed, Elias circumciſed; Enoch married, Elias vnmarried, and both were aſſumed into heauen in ſoule & bodie, and are there to this day, and tarrie for vs till the end of the world, aſſuring vs that our ſoules liue for euer: and that our bodies, though they die, ſhall riſe againe to life. Here therefore wee haue a notable ground for that laſt (but not leaſt) article of our faith, where we profeſſe to beleeue life euerlaſting.

2.King.

Secondly, in this example wee learne, that God is not tied to the order of Nature. The order which God eſtabliſhed and ſet downe concerning all men after Adams fall is this: Duſt thou art, and to duſt ſhalt thou returne. By vertue of this decree, all men are to die, as ſure as they once liued; and when that time appointed by God is come, all the world cannot ſaue one man, but accordingly die he muſt. But here notwithſtanding we ſee, God that tied man to this order, is not tied himſelfe. Enoch and Elias are exempted, they die not, their bodies neuer turned to duſt: ſuch is the power of God ouer the order of nature, in all naturall actions.

Gen.3.19.

Thirdly, whereas the Papiſts holde, that all the Fathers who died before Chriſt, were in Limbus (a place out of heauen) and came not in heauen till Chriſt fetcht them thence, & carried them with him at his aſcenſion: Here wee learne it is moſt falſe and forged. For here wee ſee, Henoch, and afterwards Elias were in heauen both in bodie and ſoule, many hundred yeares before Chriſts Incarnation: whereby (as alſo by many other euidences that might bee brought) it is apparent, that Limbus Patrum is nothing but a deuiſe of that hereticall Church of Rome.

Hitherto hath the holy Ghoſt auouched the tranſlation of Henoch. Now hee prooueth ſubſtantially, that he was taken away.

Neither was he found, for God had taken him away.

And for his proofe, he firſt laieth downe his ground: then hee thereupon frameth his argument, conſiſting of diuerſe degrees of demonſtration.

The ground is, the plaine and euident teſtimonie of the old Teſtament in Geneſis; where the words are theſe: Henoch was not found, or not ſeene, for God tooke him away. Againſt this ground, beeing the very words of the old Teſtament, no man can take exception. And here in a word, let vs all marke the high and ſoueraigne authoritie of Gods word, which euen the holy Ghoſt himſelfe vouchſafeth to alleadge for the confirmation of his owne words. It had beene ſufficient that the holy Ghoſt here affirmed Enoch to be taken away: but wee ſee hee prooues it out of the old Teſtament, ſo alſo did the Apoſtles, and Chriſt himſelfe all their doctrine.

Gen.5.24.

Let this teach all men to giue due reuerence to the holy Scriptures: let teachers alleadge them, let hearers receiue them farre aboue all humane teſtimonies; ſeeing the holy Ghoſt himſelfe vouchſafeth to confirme his own words by the authoritie thereof.

Secondly, hauing laid this ground, the holy Ghoſt frames his argument, to prooue that Henoch was taken away by faith: and it conſiſteth of many degrees of euidence.

Verſ.6.

For before he was taken away he was reported of that he had pleaſed God.

But without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God.

The degrees of the argument are theſe;
1. God himſelfe tooke Henoch away.
2. Before he was taken away, he pleaſed God.
3. But without faith no man can pleaſe God.
Therefore Henoch by faith was taken away.

The firſt degree, That Henoch was taken away, and was not found any more in this world hath beene ſufficiently ſpoken of alreadie.

The ſecond degree is, that before he was taken away, he pleaſed God: which is not barely affirmed, but it is further added, that he was reported of, or hee receiued teſtimonie, that hee pleaſed God.

Now, this report or teſtimonie is taken out of the ſtorie of Geneſis; where it is affirmed of Enoch, that he walked with God: which walking with God, is an aſſured teſtimonie that he pleaſed God: for (as the Prophet Amos ſaith) Can two walke together vnleſſe they be agreed? therefore in as much as Henoch walked with God, it is proofe ſufficient, that he pleaſed God: and becauſe hee pleaſed God, therefore God tooke him away. So that here are two diſtinct points in the ſecond degree: Firſt, that Henoch pleaſed God: Secondly, that there is a report or a teſtimonie giuen of him, that he did pleaſe God.

In the firſt let vs obſerue three ſpeciall points of inſtruction.

Firſt, in that Henoch, before he was taken away pleaſed God: let vs learne, that whoſoeuer lookes to haue his ſoule tranſlated into heauen at his death, and both bodie and ſoule in the reſurrection, muſt before hand in this life learne to pleaſe God: they muſt ſeek to pleaſe God, not when the time of tranſlation is come, but before, as here it is ſaid Henoch did.

If any man demaund, How ſhall I pleaſe God? My anſwer is this: Adam pleaſed God by keeping the Law: but now that is paſt, that power is loſt: wee muſt now pleaſe God by direction from the Goſpel, namely, by faith in Chriſt and true repentance, together with a holy life (which muſt neceſſarily accompanie true faith and repentance) thus God is pleaſed. And this muſt we not deferre till our death; but doe it in our liues, nor can we looke to be inheritours of the kingdome of glorie as now Henoch is, vnleſſe before hand we bee in the kingdome of grace, by pleaſing God as Henoch did. It is lamentable to ſee men not care for ſaluation till death, and then they begin to pleaſe God: but alas, God will not be ſo pleaſed. They begin to learne how to pleaſe God, when they haue ſo long diſpleaſed him, as there is then leaſt they can doe to pleaſe him; but that man liueth and dieth with his comfort, of whom it may be ſaid as here of Henoch, before he was taken away he pleaſed God.

Againe, whereas he came not in heauen till he pleaſed God; this diſcouers the madneſſe of ſinnefull men, who will looke for heauen, and yet will leaue no ſinne, but flatter themſelues therein. But, let all impenitent men here take knowledge that they come not in heauen till they pleaſe God. Let them therefore ceaſe pleaſing themſelues and their corruptions, by liuing in ſinne, and learne to pleaſe God by a holy life.

And further: In this point marke how nothing brought Henoch to heauen, but his pleaſing of God. He was rich, for he was one of the greateſt on the earth: he was royallie deſcended, for he was the ſeauenth from Adam in the bleſſed line: he was learned, for he had the ſix firſt Patriarkes to teach him, ſixe ſuch Tutors as neuer man had; and it is likely he had a comly, ſtrong, and actiue bodie. But ſee, all theſe brought him not to heauen: no, he pleaſed God, and was therefore taken away.

Let this teach vs not to reſt in wealth, beautie, ſtrength, honour, humane learning, nor all theſe put together without the feare of God; for ſome of them may pleaſe thy ſelfe, and ſome may pleaſe other men; but God muſt be pleaſed afore thou come in heauen, if thou wert as good as Henoch. Therefore vnto all thy outward bleſsings adde this, To pleaſe God by faith and repentance. Then as thy pleaſing of men may make thee happie in this world: ſo thy pleaſing of God, ſhall tranſlate thee from earth to heauen.

Thus we ſee, Henoch before he was tranſlated pleaſed God.

Secondly, as he pleaſed God, and elſe could not haue beene tranſlated; ſo it is added, he was ſo reported of, or there was ſuch a teſtimonie of him. That proofe or teſtimonie is here concealed; but it is recorded in the ſtorie of Geneſis, where it is ſaid, Henoch walked with God: which, as we heard before, was an aſſured teſtimonie that God was well pleaſed with him.

But what is this, he walked with God: how can a man bee ſaid to walke with God? The meaning is, That Henoch liued a godly, righteous, and innocent life in this world: for to liue in holyneſſe and righteouſneſſe, is to walke with God. And further, his heart was poſſeſſed of two perſwaſions or reſolutions, which were the inducements drawing him to this holy life.

Firſt, that he is alwaies in Gods preſence, and that God is alwaies readie to diſpoſe of all things to his good.

Againe, that God did ſee, trie, and diſcerne all his words and deedes, yea his cogitations and thoughts, & the whole courſe of his life. Theſe were the holy reſolutions of Henoch, and theſe made him lead a holy life.

This leſſon is worth learning, and this example worthy to be followed of vs all: our dutie is with Henoch, to walke with God in this life, if we purpoſe to liue with God in heauen: and we walke with God by leading holy and vnblameable liues, in holineſſe towards God, and righteouſneſſe towards man. But if wee thinke this hard to doe, we muſt labour to bee reſolued on theſe grounds: Firſt, that God and his prouidence is euer preſent with vs, to diſpoſe of vs alwaies to his glorie; & of all other things to our good.

Secondly, that as we are in Gods preſence; ſo God ſeeth vs, and all our thoughts, words and workes, bargaines and dealings, and will iudge them all.

When theſe two perſwaſions poſſeſſe our hearts, it cannot be, but wee ſhall liue godly, and feare to offend God: for, as a childe is dutifull and obedient in his Fathers preſence, ſo when a man is perſwaded hee is in Gods preſence, it cannot but make him dutifull. When a man is perſwaded that God ſeeth him, he will take heed what he doth: and that God heareth him, he will temper his tongue; and that God beholdeth all his dealings in the world he will take heed how he borroweth, lendeth, buieth, or ſelleth, and what he doth in all his actions: and the verie cauſe of all careleſneſſe in theſe and all other duties in the world, is; becauſe men are perſwaded God ſeeth them not.

To vrge vs therefore to this excellent dutie; we haue, Firſt, Gods commandement: Walke before me and be vpright (ſaith God) to Abraham; and in him to all the children of his faith.

Gen.17.1.

Againe, we haue the examples of Gods children, who are renowned for the obedience of this Commandement; Henoch here, after him Abraham, and after him Dauid, who teſtifieth of himſelfe, I will walke before God in the land of the liuing.

Pſal.116.9.

Thirdly, as it is both commanded by precept, and practiſed by example: ſo the proofe of it is moſt comfortable to all that practiſe it; for it wil make them proſper in all they go about. For, as hee that is alwaies in the Kings preſence and companie cannot but bee in his fauour, and therefore cannot but ſucceede well in all his affaires: ſo he that walkes with God, cannot but proſper in whatſoeuer he ſets his heart & hand vnto. Bleſſed Abraham found this moſt true, when he aſſured his ſeruant whom hee ſent to prouide Iſaac a wife, in a long, and doubtfull, and dangerous iourney; The Lord before whom I walke, will ſend his Angel with thee, and proſper thy iourney: and euen ſo may euery child of God ſay with confidence: The Lord, before whome I walke, will ſend his Angel with me, and proſper me in my proceedings.

Gen.25.40.

Fourthly, this walking with God is a good meanes to make a man beare the croſſe with patience: For if he bee perſwaded that God ſeeth how wrongfully he is perſecuted or oppreſſed, and that Gods prouidence is alwaies preſent, ſo as no afflictiō can come vnto him, but by his appointment: and againe, that his prouidence diſpoſeth of all things to his good, how can he but receiue with patience that portion of afflictions which God ſhall lay vpon him? For as he that walkes with the King, who dare offer him wrong? ſo he that walkes with God what euill can touch him? This is Ioſephs argument to his brethren, when they were diſcomforted, and feared hee would puniſh them after their Fathers death: Feare not (ſaith he) for am not I vnder God? as though he had ſaide, Doe not I walke in Gods preſence? and acknowledge my ſelfe vnder his power? and that God, when you thought euill againſt mee, diſpoſed it to good: where the groūd of Ioſephs reaſon is, that he walking with God, his affliction turned to his good.

Laſtly, this is a meanes to bring a man to make conſcience of all ſinne in thought, word, and deed, and in all his dealings, when he perſwades himſelfe to walk in the preſence of god: When Ioſeph was allured to ſin by his miſtreſſe, his anſwer was, How ſhall I commit this great

Gen.39.9. wickedneſſe, and ſo ſinne againſt God? The bridle that reſtrained him, was the feare of that God in whoſe preſence hee walked: And becauſe hee walked with God, he would not walke with her in her wicked way: and becauſe hee kept a holy companie with God, therefore he would not keepe her companie, nor be allured by her temptations.

So then ſeeing this way of walking with God, is euerie way ſo excellent and ſo profitable, let vs learne it not in iudgement and knowledge onely, to be able to talke of it (which is ſoone learned); but in conſcience and practiſe (as dutifull children doe before their parents, ſo) let vs in a heauenly awe and a child-like reuerence walke before God, labouring for a true perſwaſion of his preſence and prouidence, to be alwaies ouer vs and our whole liues. The want hereof is the cauſe of all ſinne: And if we doe thus walke with God, and ſo pleaſe him, as Henoch here did, then ſhall we be ſure (though not after the ſame manner that Henoch was, yet) in ſoule firſt, and afterwards in ſoule and bodie both, to bee tranſlated into eternall life. But if we will not walke this way with Henoch in this life, let vs neuer looke to liue in heauen with him; but aſſure our ſelues, that as the way of holineſſe is the way to glorie, ſo the way of wickedneſſe is the way to eternall perdition. And thus much of the ſecond degree.

But without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God.

Theſe words containe the third degree, or the third part of the reaſon. And this degree conſiſts of a generall Maxime or Canon of Diuinitie: and the holy Ghoſt firſt laieth it down; and then, becauſe it is one of the waightieſt principles in religion, he proueth it ſubſtantially, in the words following. In the Canon it ſelfe let vs firſt examine the meaning, and then vnfold the manifold vſe of it.

Without faith

By faith, is meant here the ſame faith as afore: namely, true ſauing faith in the Meſſias. And without this ſauing faith,

It is impoſſible to pleaſe God.

Impoſſible how? not in regard of the abſolute, infinite, and indeterminable power of God, which hath no limits, but his owne will: but in regard of that order of the cauſes and meanes of ſaluation ſet downe by God in his word; which is this;

1. Man by ſinne hath diſpleaſed God.
2. God muſt be pleaſed againe, elſe a man cannot be ſaued.
3. He that will pleaſe God, muſt pleaſe him in Chriſt the Mediator, els he cannot: therefore hee that will pleaſe God and bee ſaued, muſt needes beleeue in Chriſt. And thus by this order it is impoſſible. Wee denie not, but in regard of Gods abſolute power, he could ſaue a man without faith; as he can lighten the world without the Sunne. But as (if he keepe that order of nature, which his owne wiſedome hath appointed) Henochs faith A it is impoſſible to giue light to the world without the Sunne: ſo if he keepe that order for ſaluation, which his owne iuſtice hath appointed) it is impoſſible to pleaſe God without faith in Chriſt. So thē the meaning is laid down; and now appeares the ſtrength and force of the holy Ghoſts argument;

He that will be ſaued and come to heauen, muſt firſt pleaſe god: But without faith, it is impoſſible to pleaſe god: Therefore without faith no man can be ſaued nor come in heauen: and by conſequent, therefore Henoch beeing taken into heauen, muſt needs be taken away by faith.

Now the vſe of this Canon, righly vnderſtood, is manifold and of great profit.

Firſt, here we learne that faith is ſimply and B abſolutely neceſſarie to ſaluation, and moſt neceſſarie of all other gifts and graces of God whatſoeuer. And though many bee required, yet amongſt all holy graces, this is the principall, and more neceſſarie in ſome reſpects then any other. For howſoeuer hope, and loue, and zeale, and many other graces of God are required, to make the ſtate of a Chriſtian complete: and though they all haue their ſeuerall commendations in the world: yet of none of them all is it ſaid in the whole Scripture, as it is here ſaid of faith, that without it it is impoſſible to pleaſe God. And no meruaile, for it is the roote and ground of all other graces, and giues them their life and beeing: for therefore doth a man feare God, therefore doth he loue God, therefore is he zealous for Gods glorie, becauſe hee C beleeueth that God loueth him in Chriſt the redeemer.

Now then if faith be thus neceſſarie, then it followeth that thoſe that liue in ignorance, and ſo haue no ſound faith, but a fooliſh preſumption, are in a miſerable caſe: for how euer they may flatter themſelues with conceits of their deuotions and good meanings, and good intents: it is faith, with which they muſt pleaſe God, and nothing can without it. It ſtands them therefore in hand to lay off ignorance and preſumption, and labour for a ſound and ſauing faith, and that will bring them to the fauour of God.

And againe, as for ſuch as haue receiued D grace to beleeue, ſeeing faith is of ſuch neceſſitie, and that they hauing faith muſt needs haue knowledge, they therefore muſt looke and examine by their knowledge, whether their faith bee a ſound faith or no: for herein many that haue knowledge deceiue themſelues, & thinke they haue true faith when they haue not. Now if any man would know, whether his faith bee ſound and ſauing, or no; it is knowne by this; If it purifie the heart: for ſo ſaith S. Peter, That God by faith did purifie the hearts of the profane and filthie Gentiles. Act.15.9. If then thy faith doe not purifie thy heart, and cleanſe thy life, and cauſe thee to abound in good workes, it is no ſound nor ſauing faith, it is but a generall faith, it is but an hiſtoricall knowledge, & cannot ſaue the ſoule: hee therefore that vpon examination of his heart and life, findeth his faith to bee ſuch, let him not content himſelfe, but turne his generall faith into a ſauing faith, which in this world will purifie his heart, and at the laſt day will ſaue his ſoule. And this muſt euery man the rather doe, becauſe what knowledge, or what other gifts of God ſoeuer any man hath, without faith in Chriſt all are nothing: for it is faith that ſeaſoneth them all, and makes both them and the perſon himſelfe to pleaſe God.

Secondly, if it be impoſſible without faith to pleaſe God, then here we ſee the fond and fooliſh hypocriſie of the world, who will pleaſe God by other meanes; ſome thinke if they be glorious in the world, either for their wealth, or their wit, or their honour, or their authority, or their learning, they preſently bring themſelues into a fooles Paradiſe; and becauſe the world makes account of them, and they pleaſe themſelues, therefore they thinke it certaine they muſt needs pleaſe God. But alas, though all the world admire them, and they be neuer ſo farre in loue with themſelues, He that ſits in heauen, laugheth them to ſcorne. For, not all the pompe and glorie, nor all the millions and mountaines of gold in the world, can pleaſe the Lord for one of the leaſt of their many thouſand ſinnes, wherewith they haue prouoked him. Let these men aske Nebuchadnezzar if his pompous pride: or Achitophel if his actiue head and craſty wit: or Abſalom if his golden lockes: or Iezabel if her painted face and courtly attire: or Nabal if his flockes of ſheepe: or the Philoſophers, if their naturall learning: if all of theſe, or any of theſe did euer pleaſe God. Nay alas, they all haue found and felt, that without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God.

Thirdly, it is the opinion not of the Turke alone in his Alcaron, but of many other as ill, that euery man ſhall be ſaued by his owne religion, if he be deuout therein; be hee Turke, Iew, Chriſtian, Papiſt or Proteſtant. But this is a ground and rule of Atheiſme, and appeares here to be moſt falſe; for, no ſaluation without pleaſing of God, and without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God: therefore no religion can ſaue a man, but that which teacheth a man rightly to beleeue in Chriſt, and conſequently to pleaſe God. But euery religion teacheth not to beleeue in Chriſt, ſome not at all, and ſome not aright; and therefore it is impoſſible for ſuch a religion to ſaue a man. Againe, bee a man what he can be, vnleſſe he be within the couenant of grace, he cannot be ſaued: But he cannot bee within the couenant, but by faith; therefore no man can be ſaued by any meanes, but by true faith, nor in any religion, but that which teacheth true faith.

Here therefore not onely Turkes and Iewes are excluded: but this alſo ſheweth many Papiſts, and many carnall goſpellers in our Church, how ſhort they come of that religion which muſt ſaue their ſoules. For this is the conceite of the moſt men, that if they doe ſome good workes, which carie a faire ſhew to the world, as liberalitie to learning, or charitie to the poore; ſtraight they thinke they haue leaue to liue as they liſt, and God is bound to forgiue their ſinnes, and to giue them heauen: and this they imagine, though they knowe not what it is to beleeue in Chriſt, nor to repent of their ſinnes. One of this religion came to the Prophet Micha in his dayes, and asked him this queſtion, (vttering that plainely which all ſuch men thinke in their hearts) Wherewith ſhall I come before the Lord, and bowe my ſelfe before the high God? ſhall I come before him with thouſands of Rams, and ten thouſand riuers of oyle? He makes the queſtion, and would faine make anſwer himſelfe, but he goeth further, and offers more; Shall I giue my firſt borne for my Tranſgreſſion, and the fruit of my bodie for the ſinne of my ſoule? But the Prophet anſwers him, ſhewing him his follie, and how little God regards ſuch worſhip without a contrite heart: He hath ſhewed thee, O man what is good, and what the Lord requireth of thee; ſurely to doe iuſtly, and loue mercie, to humble thy ſelfe, and walke with thy God. Marke how that anſwer fits the example of Henoch: He pleaſed God, he walked with God, and was taken away. So anſwereth the Prophet, if thou wouldeſt pleaſe thy God, and come to heauen by his fauour; neuer ſtand vpon thouſands of Rammes, and Riuers of oyle, vpon thy gay and glorious workes: but humble thy ſelfe, and walke with thy God. No walking with God (ſaith Micha) no pleaſing of God: what is it but all one, as if he had ſaid, Without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God? Here then is no diſallowance of good workes, but of workes without faith and true repentance; which though they bee neuer ſo faire and flouriſhing; yet it is impoſſible, that without faith they ſhould pleaſe God.

Micha.6.7,8.

Hereby it is alſo manifeſt, that all the vertues of the heathen, and the workes of ſuch men as either know not Chriſt: or, knowing him, acknowledge him not their onely Sauiour: or acknowledging him, do not truely beleeue in him with ſuch a faith as purifieth their hearts; are nothing elſe, but as the Fathers called them ſplendida peccata, gilded and glittering droſſe, and beautifull deformities. And how-euer this ſeemes harſh, yet it muſt needes be true, ſeeing without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God.

And here alſo the vanity of ſome Popiſh Writers appeares, who preſumptuouſly make ſome Philoſophers Saints; whereas they ſhould firſt haue ſhewed that they beleeued in Chriſt; and then we would beleeue and teach it as willingly as they; but elſe if they had had all the learning, and all the morall vertues in the world, this muſt ſtand for a truth, Without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God.

Laſtly, here we learne, that the word of God regiſtred in the holy Scriptures, doth containe in it ſufficient direction for all the actions and duties of a mans life: for without faith no man can pleaſe God. And if no man, then no mans actions can pleaſe God which are not of faith: for whatſoeuer is not of faith, is ſinne, Rom. 14. 23.

¶ If therefore mens actions muſt proceede from faith, then conſequently muſt they haue their ground and warrant from the word: for faith and the word are relatiues, and the one dependes vpon the other: No faith, no word to binde vnto word, nor faith to beleeue. But all actions that pleaſe God, muſt be done in faith; therefore all actiõs that pleaſe God, haue ſome ground and direction in the word of God, without which word of God there can be no faith. And this is true, not onely in holy actions, but euen in the common actions of mens liues and lawfull callings. This is a principle, which wee muſt firmely beleeue and receiue. And beſide this argument here, it is alſo proued by the euident teſtimonies of the holy Ghoſt. S. Paul to Timothie, All Scripture is giuen by inſpiration of God, and is profitable to teach, improoue, correct, and inſtruct in righteouſneſſe, that the man of God may be abſolute, and made perfect vnto all good workes. How can the ſufficiencie of Scripture bee more ſufficiently in words expreſſed? Againe, Euery creature and ordinance of God is good, &c. For it is ſanctified by the word of God and prayer. Now if the Scriptures make a Chriſtian perfect in all good workes, how can it be, but it giues him ſufficient direction for all his workes? And if euery action be ſanctified by the word; how can that be but the word hath warrant & direction for euery action and duty, which may fall out in the courſe of a Chriſtian life? And vpon theſe grounds we haue good reaſon to be reſolued of this truth.

2.Tim.3.16, 17.

1.Tim.4.4,5.

But now if any man aske how this can bee, for the Scriptures were written long agoe, and the ſtories are of particular men, nations, and times, and the Commandements are knowne to be but tenne; how then can the Scriptures yeild ſufficient directions for euery mans particular actions? I anſwer, the Scripture giues directions for all actions two wayes. Either by Rules or by Examples: Rules are of two ſorts, Generall, or Particular. Particular rules for particular callings are many: for Kings, they muſt read Gods booke, and not haue many wiues, nor gather too much ſiluer and gold: They muſt be wiſe and learned; and kiſſe the ſonne of God Chriſt Ieſus, and many other: for Miniſters, they muſt bee apt to teach, watching, ſober, not young ſchollers, and many other: and ſo conſequently the moſt of the callings that are in the common wealth, haue their particular directions in plaine rules.

Deut.17.17, 18,19.

Pſal.2.

1.Tim.3.2, &c.

Generall rules, are firſt the tenne Commandements, which are directions for all ſorts of men in all times, what is to be done, what not to bee done in all actions towards God and men; and beſides, in the newe teſtament there are ſome fewe rules, which are generall directions for all men in all ages: As, Whatſoeuer you would that men ſhould doe to you, doe you the ſame vnto them. Againe, Whether you eate or drinke, or whatſoeuer you doe, doe all to the glorie of God. Againe, Let all things bee done to edification, and without offence of thy brother. Againe, Let all your workes be done in loue. Laſtly, Let no man ſeeke his owne (alone) but euery man anothers wealth. Now there is no action in the world, nor any duty to be done of a Chriſtian man, bee he publike or priuate perſon, be it a publike or priuate action, be it towards God or man: but if he haue not a particular direction, yet it falls within the compaſſe of ſome of theſe rules: and by the tenour of ſome of theſe, he may frame his work in ſuch manner, as ſhal be pleaſing to God, and comfortable to himſelfe.

Exod.20.

Matth.7.12.

1.Cor.10.31.

1.Cor.14.40.

1.Cor.10.24.

Secondly, beſides rules there are Examples, which are ſpeciall directions: and they are either of God, or good men. Extraordinarie examples of God, namely ſuch as he did in extraordinarie times, or vpon extraordinarie occaſions, they concerne not vs: for theſe he did by the power and prerogatiue of the Godhead: as, bidding of Abraham ſacrifice his ſonne, bidding the Iſraelites ſpoyle the Egyptians, and ſuch like. But the ordinarie workes of Gods wiſedome in his creatures, of his iuſtice towards ſinners, of his mercie towards his children, of his care and prouidence towards all, are excellent rules of direction for vs. Hence we haue theſe rules: Be ye holy, for I am holy. Be ye mercifull, as your Father in heauen is mercifull, Luke 6. 36.

Gen.22.

Exod.11.2.

So for the actions of Chriſt, who was God and man: the miraculous actiõs of his power, which argued his Godhead, as his walking vpon the water, and ſuch like, are no directions for vs. Nor againe, his actions and workes done as he was Mediator, as his faſting fortie dayes, his paſſion, & his merits, theſe are no directions for vs to doe the like: But, as he firſt giues vs inſtruction, ſo theſe procure vs iuſtification.

But the third ſort of his actions done by him as a man, or as a Iewe borne, they are both our inſtruction and imitation; and they are good directions for our actions: as, his obedience, his zeale, his patience, his humilitie, and all other vertues. Concerning all which he ſaith himſelfe to vs, Learne of me, for I am humble and lowely. And againe, when he had waſhed his Apoſtles feete, he bad them learne of him to loue one another: For (ſaith he) I haue giuen you example that you ſhould doe euen as I haue done to you. Theſe his examples are rules of direction to all men in the like caſe.

Matth.11.29.

Ioh.13.15, 14,15.

Now as for the examples of men, as the examples of wicked men are euery way to be eſchewed, ſo good mens are to be followed: for whatſoeuer is written, is written for our learning, Rom. 15. 4. And ſo for them we are to knowe, that their examples or actions, contrary to the word, are therefore to bee auoided, becauſe they be contrarie to it, Noahs drunkenneſſe, Lots inceſt, Dauids adulterie, and many other his infirmities, and ſuch like. Such as are directly agreeable with the word of God, are to be embraced and receiued as directions for our liues, not for their owne ſake, but becauſe they are agreeable to the word. But as for ſuch as are neither commaunded nor forbidden; and beeing done, were neither allowed nor diſallowed: theſe beeing done by godly men, and ſuch who for their faith were approoued of God, againſt which no exception can be taken in the word, they beare rules and directions for vs in the like caſes. Now there is no action that can fall out in the life of a Chriſtian man, for the which he hath not out of Scripture either a rule generall or particular, or elſe ſome example to followe; which is as good as a rule vnto him. And thus wee ſee how the Scripture affoards directions for all our actions. In the demonſtration whereof, wee haue ſtood the longer, becauſe it is a principle of great moment. The vſe hereof is double. Firſt, wee muſt therefore in all the actions of our liues and callings, take conſultation with the word of God: and for our direction therein, we muſt ſearch for either generall or particular rules, or at leaſt for examples of godly men in like caſes. And without the warrant and direction of ſome of theſe, we are by no meanes to enter into any thing, or to doe any worke. If we doe, then we cannot cleare our ſelues from ſinne in ſo doing: for we ſinne becauſe we pleaſe not God in doing that action: we pleaſe not God, becauſe wee haue no faith for the doing of it: we haue no faith, becauſe we haue no warrant nor ground in the word for it. Therefore what-euer a man preſumeth to doe without ſome warrant in the word for his direction, he ſinnes in ſo doing.

Secondly, here Miniſters muſt learne their dutie: for if no action can poſſibly pleaſe God that is done without faith, nor can be done in faith without warrant from the word, then muſt they be Gods mouth vnto the people, to be able to tell them what is lawfull, what is vnlawfull by the word; that ſo their people may performe their actions in faith, and conſequently pleaſe God.

Now hauing laid downe this Rule; becauſe it is a principle of ſo great moment, the holy Ghoſt in the next words proceedes to the proofe of it.

For he, that commeth to God, muſt beleeue that God is, and that he is a rewarder of them that ſeek him. Theſe words are a proofe of the former rule, and the reaſon ſtands thus;

He that commeth to God, muſt needes beleeue: But He that pleaſeth God, commeth to God. Therfore He that pleaſeth God, muſt needes beleeue; and ſo, without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God.

He that commeth to God,

To come to God in the Scriptures, but eſpecially in this Example, is to labour to haue fellowſhip with God in Chriſt: as is manifeſt in three places more. In the fourth Chapter, we are bid to goe boldly to the throne of grace: and in the ſeauenth, Chriſt is ſaid to bee able perfectly to ſaue them that come vnto God by him: And in the tenth, we are called to drawe neere with a true heart in aſſurance of faith. Out of all which places it appeares, that to come to God, is to haue fellowſhip with God by Chriſt. And the reaſon why that phraſe is ſo often vſed to the Hebrewes, is, for that many of them hauing receiued the profeſſiō of Chriſt, afterward forſooke him againe, and fell from his religion, and by renouncing Chriſt, fell away from God. Therefore he exhorteth them to take heede leaſt there be in any of them an euill heart, and vnfaithfull to depart from the liuing God, Chap. 3. 12. Now, by the contrarie; If to renounce Chriſt be to fall or goe away from God: then we may gather, that to come to God is to cleaue to Chriſt, and to God by Chriſt. So then the meaning is, He that will haue any fellowſhip with God in Chriſt, He muſt beleeue.

Heb. 4. 16. & 7. 25. & 10. 22.

What muſt He beleeue? Two things.

1. That God is. 2. That he is a rewarder of them that ſeeke him.

He muſt firſt beleeue that God is.

That is, not ſo much that there is a God, for that we are taught by the verie light of Nature: But that this God, whome in Chriſt he labours to know, & come nere, is the true and onely God.

This is a notable point in Chriſtian religion to beleeue, that God is God indeed: not a fiction, a ſhadow, or imaginarie God, but God indeede; For it is the ſcope of the firſt commaundement, that God gaue mankind. If any man obiect, There is no man that knowes God, but confeſſeth God to be God, no man was ſo mad as euer to thinke otherwiſe:

I anſwer, to beleeue the true God to be God indeed, is a matter of great difficulty. For though a man by nature thinke there is a God, yet doe wee not by nature thinke the true God to bee God. Nay, by nature euery man is an Atheiſt, and denieth in his heart the true God to be God, and doth impugne the firſt commandement aboue all other. And this may truely & ſafely be affirmed of all men that euer came of Adam (Chriſt alone excepted) that they are Atheiſts, and it may be prooued thus.

By nature, though we knowe and beleeue there is a God, yet the corruption of our nature is ſuch, as we frame and faine him to our ſelues to be ſuch a one as we pleaſe; for we denie in our hearts his power, his preſence, and his iuſtice, But to take away theſe three from him, is to denie the true God to be God indeede.

Firſt, men by nature denie Gods preſence. For men would be aſhamed to doe many things in the preſence of any man, euen the baſeſt in the world; which when they are out of mens ſights, and yet in Gods preſence, they commit careleſly and boldly. I ſpeake not of naturall actions, which are lawfull; & yet in many whereof there is none ſo great ſhame, as men naturally refuſe to doe them before others: But I meane ſinnefull actions, which not for any naturall vnſeemelines, but euen for their foulenesse and vglineſſe, because they are hainous ſinnes, men would feare to doe, if any man were preſent. Seeing then men feare not, nor ſhame not to doe them, though they be in Gods preſence; it followeth, that therefore they naturally imagine, that God is not preſent: for, if they were ſo perſwaded, they would not commit them, though they eſteemed God no better then a man.

Secondly, men by nature denie Gods power, thus; When a man offendes a Magiſtrate by breaking any law which may deſerue death, or ſome great puniſhment, he is ſore afraid; and all his care is, how hee may eſcape his puniſhing hand. But, let a man offend God neuer ſo much by breaking careleſly all his holy commaundements, he neuer fears at all, nor trembles at the puniſhment belonging vnto them. How can this be? but that howſoeuer he grants there is a God, yet hee is not perſwaded that God hath power to reuenge the contempt of his laws, and therefore he neuer feares nor ſhrinks at the remembrance of him, nor flieth at all from his reuenging hand, but ploddeth on in ſinn without feare.

Thirdly, man by nature denieth Gods iuſtice: for the iuſtice of God is to winke at ſinne in no man, but to condemne & puniſh it wherſoeuer he findes it, by inflicting the curſes of the lawe vpon it. But man denieth this iuſtice: for though he ſinne againſt Gods lawe, and his conſcience tell him of it; yet he perſwades himſelfe there is no curſe nor puniſhment due for it, at leaſt that he ſhall eſcape it: nay though he ſee neuer ſo many before him puniſhed for the ſame ſinne, yet (our nature is ſo blinde and ſo corrupt) hee thinkes for all that, it ſhall not light on him. And it is lamẽtable, yet moſt true, that the God of the ignorant men is a meere Idol, a God made all of mercie, and which hath no iuſtice in him at all, & their ſinnes they careleſly lay all on Chriſt, and ſay God is mercifull: and in this conceit they care not how ignorãtly, how looſely, how profanely they liue; and their hearts neuer haue a reuerent and awefull thought of the iuſtice of God.

These are the pitifull imaginations that all men by Nature haue of God. All theſe may be prooued by euident Scripture: The firſt in the Pſalme, where Dauid brings in the wicked ſaying, to themſelues. God hath forgotten, he hides his face, he will not ſee, he will not regard. The ſecond, by the blaſphemie of Rabſekeh, who vttered with his tongue that which all mens hearts thinke by nature, What God can deliuer you out of my hand? The third Eſay prooues apparently, where he tels vs that the wicked ſay; We haue made a couenant with death, and with hel are we at agreement, though a ſcourge runne ouer and paſſe through, it ſhall not come at vs.

Pſal.10.11, 12,13.

Eſa 36.18, 19,&c.

Eſa.28.15.

Thus both Scripture and plaine demonſtrations prooue this to bee true, that euery man by A nature denieth Gods preſence, power, and iuſtice; and therefore is by nature a plaine Atheiſt, not beleeuing that God is God indeed. Now furthermore, there are foure ſorts of people that put in practiſe this Atheiſme.

Firſt, ſuch as are not aſhamed to ſay openly, Is there a God or no? and dare diſpute the queſtion, and at laſt auouch there is none; but that all matters concerning God and his worſhip, are nothing but deuiſes of politique men, to keepe ſimple men in awe, and to make fooles faine; but theſe themſelues are fooles of all fooles, & the deuill deuiſed that impious conceit, to keep them in miſerable blindneſſe. There haue been ſuch fooles in all ages, yet in olde time Dauid ſaith, Theſe fooles did but ſay in their hearts; But now the fooles of theſe laſt and rotten ages, are B ripe in their follie, and they dare ſay with their mouthes: There is no God. Theſe are Monſters in nature, and deuills incarnate, worſe then the deuill himſelfe; for he in iudgement neuer was an Atheiſt. Theſe are to be marked and hated worſe then Toads & Adders: and if ſuch a one can be conuicted by any lawfull euidence, if euer Heretike or Traytor deſerued death, ſuch a one deſerues tenne deaths; as beeing a Traytor to God, to mankind, and to nature her ſelfe. And though theſe wretches ſay there is no God, yet make they a God of themſelues, ſacrificing all their affections to their pleaſure, and profit.

Pſal.14.1.

The ſecond ſort are ſuch, as acknowledge & worſhip a God, but a falſe God. Theſe haue been C in all Countries, and in moſt ages, as Hiſtories doe ſhewe: ſome worſhipping the Sunne, ſome the Moone, ſome ſtarres, ſome beaſts, birds, fiſhes; ſome dead Idols, of wood, or ſtone, or mettall. And of this ſort, and no better, are ſome in theſe Churches where the true God is worſhipped: the Apoſtle ſaith, Couetouſneſſe is idolatrie; for if a mans heart be ſet wholly on riches, then the wedge of gold is his God. And to other, whoſe affections are all on pleaſure, their bellie is their God. Let theſe men hold in iudgement as they can, their practiſe I am ſure proclaimes Atheiſme.

The third ſort are ſuch as acknowledge and worſhip the true God, but in a falſe manner: and of theſe there are 3. principall ſorts; Firſt, Turks: D Secondly, Iewes; who hold the true God, but denie the Trinitie of perſons, and the deitie of Chriſt. Thirdly, the true Papiſt holds in word one God, & the Trinitie of perſons as we doe; but looke at their doctrine, and (if their words haue any naturall meaning) they denie it: for, if the ſecond perſon be true Chriſt, then hath hee two natures, Godhead and Manhood: but by their fained Tranſubſtantiation, they quite take away the truth of the Manhood. And againe, Chriſt hath three offices; he is the True King, Prieſt, and Prophet of his Church: and if he be not ſo, hee is not Chriſt: But the Papiſts doctrine in plaine words, and neceſſarie conſequence denieth them all, as hath beene often prooued vnto their ſhame, and publiſhed to the world: and they neuer yet to this day could or durſt anſwer it: for if they doe, they ſhall ſoone either heare vs againe, or elſe we will recant it. But till then, it appeares, that their God is by their doctrine not the true God, but an Idol: for, he that denieth the Sonne, denieth the Father alſo, as ſaith S. Iohn.

The fourth ſort of Atheiſts, are ſuch, as acknowledge and worſhip the true God, and worſhip him in true manner, for the outward worſhip; but in their liues and deeds deny him. And theſe are not to be ſought for in Turkie, or Iurie, or Italy: for all Churches are full of ſuch Proteſtant Atheiſts. Italy may haue more Atheiſts in iudgement then we: but theſe hypocrites and Atheiſts in life, are here alſo; thoſe tares we haue amongſt our corne. Of theſe ſpeakes the Apoſtle, that they profeſſe to knowe God, but denie him in their workes. Let this ſeeme no wonder, that ſuch men be called Atheiſts: for, the Apoſtle ſaith plainely; He that careth not for his family is worſe then an Infidell. Whereby it appeares, a man may be a profeſſour of the Goſpel, or a Christian in profeſſion; and an Infidell or Atheiſt in his practiſe: and it is certaine: let any man profeſſe what he will, if his life be nought, his religion is a falſe religion in him.

Now then, to ſhut vp this point with the vſe thereof: If this be true, that there are ſo many ſorts of Atheiſts, that almoſt the world is full, and that we are all ſo by nature: then, firſt let vs ſee how hard a matter it is to beleeue in God aright, and if no man come to God, but he that beleeueth God aright, then we ſee it is no maruell, though ſo fewe come to God. Let vs therefore goe to God by earneſt praier, to giue vs his ſpirit to worke true faith in our hearts, and to make vs of a true beleefe. And ſecondly, ſeeing men may bee Chriſtians in profeſſion, and Atheiſts in practiſe; let vs all look narrowly to our ſelues, and ioyne with our profeſſion, Conſcience and obedience: for elſe the more we know God, the worſe we are. It may pleaſe God after to giue vs better mindes; but as yet we are no better then deniers of God: and though we come neere God in profeſſion and in his outward ſeruice, yet indeede we are farre from him, becauſe wee want that true faith, which muſt profeſſe God, not in iudgement alone, but in practiſe; and that will bring vs neere vnto God: for hee that commeth to God muſt beleeue that God is. And thus much for the firſt thing to be beleeued, by him that will come to God and pleaſe him.

The ſecond is,

And that He is a rewarder of them that ſeeke him.

It is a notable ſentence, and one of the moſt comfortable in the booke of God: and containes the ſecond thing to be beleeued. The parts are naturally two:

1. How a man doth ſeeke God.
2. How God rewardeth them that ſeeke him.

For the firſt: A man truely ſeeketh God, by doing foure actions.

Firſt, a man muſt forſake himſelfe, goe out of himſelfe, and as it were looſe himſelfe in his owne iudgement, when hee intends to ſeeke God. If any aske how that may be? I anſwer; Thus; A man muſt labour to ſee his ſinne fully and diſtinctly, and in ſight thereof be caſt down in himſelfe, as a man is, when he ſeeth his debts: then let him looke into himſelfe, and ſee if hee can find in himſelfe any inabillitie to pay thoſe debts, or any meanes in the world to ſatisfie Gods iuſtice, & purchaſe pardon. And if vpon due examination hee finde none at all, no not the leaſt, nor any thing in himſelfe, but an accuſing, and raging conſcience: Let him then fall out of all loue with himſelfe, nay hate and abhorre himſelfe and his owne baſeneſſe: and laſtly, let him deſpaire of his owne ſaluation in or from himſelfe: and thus doing, he forſakes himſelfe, denieth himſelfe, and euen looſeth himſelfe. And thus neceſſarily muſt he doe to himſelfe, that will ſet his heart to ſeeke the Lord. For, God will be found of none that hope to finde helpe at any hand but his: they therefore that ſeeke God, but will ſeeke themſelues too, do iuſtly looſe both God and themſelues.

Secondly, hee that will ſeeke God aright (when hee hath loſt himſelfe) muſt hunger in his heart and ſoule, not after wealth and honours, eaſe, or pleaſures; but after the fauour and mercie of God in Chriſt: for the forgiueneſſe of his ſinnes: and one drop of Chriſts blood, to waſh away the guilt and ſtaine of his defiled and ſinnfull ſoule, muſt be dearer to him then all the pomp and glorie of tenne worlds. Look how a hungry ſoule hungers after meat, and a faintie ſoule thirſteth after drinke; ſo muſt his ſoule hunger after Gods mercie, and thirſt for Chriſts blood: and theſe are neceſſary: For, as a man that vndertakes a long iourney, muſt be prouided of meate and drinke: ſo he that vndertakes the iourney to goe ſeeke the Lord, muſt haue this prouiſion for the diet of his poore ſoule, Gods mercies, and Chriſts merits: and he that ſeekes, without a ſoule hungring after theſe, may ſeeke long and find nothing.

Thirdly, if he will truly ſeeke God, he muſt not goe in euery path: but take the true and liuing way, which Chriſt hath conſecrated by his blood: nor take any guide, but truſt to Chriſts ſpirit alone to be his guide: nor make many mediators or meſſengers to God, but make Chriſt alone to God the Father. Wee muſt therefore goe to him, and yeeld vp our ſelues to be taught and guided by him, and leaue our ſute to be preferred by him: we muſt not looke to come to God, by running on pilgrimages to this or that Saints picture, or bones: or to our Lady of Loreto. Many haue ſought God in theſe, but who euer found him?

Nay, alas thou maiſt lodge in her forged tabernacle at Loreto all thy life, and lie in hell for all that when thou art dead; and maiſt kiſſe all the Saints pictures, and bones, and haire, and all their reliques in Spaine and Italie; and all cannot get thee one ſight of Gods fauourable countenance. Nor againe, muſt we looke to come to God by our good workes, though we are to doe them: they are good markes in the way, and good euidences of a right way; but they cannot open heauen, and let thee in. And therefore when thou haſt done all thou canſt, thou muſt forſake them all in matter of iuſtification and comming to God. Onely thou muſt goe to God by Chriſt, and cleaue to him alone; he is the doore, the way, the truth, the life, and certenly neuer man found God, that ſought him not in Chriſt alone. And when Popiſh deuiſes and diſtinctions haue done all they can, men will be found liers, and Chriſt to ſpeake truth, ſaying, No man commeth to the Father but by mee.

Laſtly, when all theſe are done, then muſt thou beleeue that God is become thy mercifull Father in Chriſt, and is reconciled vnto thee in him: for there is no feare, but if thou ſeeke God in Chriſt, thou ſhalt finde him: and when thou haſt done the three former things, thou maieſt ſafely and aſſuredly beleeue, that thou haſt truly ſought God. And after all theſe, if thou haue not firme and liuely faith, thou doeſt not ſeeke God. For, as it is impoſſible without faith to pleaſe God; ſo it is impoſſible without faith to finde God. Thus if a man loſe himſelfe, long after Gods mercie, take Chriſt alone for his guide and mediator, and ſteadfaſtly beleeue his reconciliation with God by Chriſt, then hee ſeekes God aright: and to this ſeeking, belongs a reward and bleſſing. Now then if this bee to ſeeke God, here is ſome light giuen to a great queſtion, Whether the Church of Rome be a true Church, and their doctrine truly Catholique, or erroneous & failing in foundamental points? For anſwer; Can that be a true Church, which doth not bring her children to ſeeke God? or that, Catholique doctrine, which teacheth not her children to ſeeke God, the right way? but ſends them into 1000. by-waies? Surely if this be to ſeeke God, then ſearch all the Popiſh doctors, and almoſt all their writers, and ſee whether a man be not taught to ſeeke God quite in another walke. Which way of theirs, whether it ordinarily bring the ſeekers to God or no, we leaue to Gods mercifull iudgement. But for our ſelues, as we ſee we haue the true and liuing way, the ſure and infallible way, by Chriſt to God, by the ſonne to the Father; let vs reioyce in the comfort of ſo rich a mercie, and be thankefull to the Lord for reuealing himſelfe vnto vs, and opening vnto vs the true way to him, and to his glorie. And thus much for the firſt point. How we muſt ſeeke God.

The ſecond is, How he is a rewarder of them that ſeeke him: I anſwer, God rewards them that ſeeke him.

Firſt, by offering himſelfe graciouſly to be found of them that ſeeke him: for hee neuer hides himſelfe, nor turnes away from the ſoule that ſeeketh him; but rather turnes to him, and meetes him that comes to him: hee is that good Father, which ſaw the prodigall ſonne a farre off, and met him, and receiued him, Luk. 16. Yea, rather is it true, that hee is found of them that ſought him not, then euer ſought by any that found him not. And hereby God much magnifieth his grace and mercie to mankinde, in beeing ſo aſſuredly found when men ſeeke him. For in this world it is not ſo. All men ſeeke the face of the Prince, ſaith Salomon: true, but all men finde it not. No. Acceſſe to great men is not ſo eaſie: they and their fauour are ſo incloſed, that men may long ſeeke afore they finde either them or it: but God here is not ſo incloſed, as he will not be ſeene nor ſpoke to, he is found of them that ſeeke him. And as hereby he honoureth himſelfe, ſo he highly rewardeth his ſeruants: for there is no greater contentment to a ſubiect, then to perceiue his ſeruice pleaſeth his Prince; nor greater ioy then to finde his gratious fauour when they ſeeke it.

Let then this practiſe of the great God of heauen, Firſt of all, teach the great ones of this world to be willing to be found when they are ſought vnto: thereby ſhall they honour themſelues, and cheere vp the hearts of their people, who ſeeke vnto them. And againe, it may be a rich comfort to the poore ones of this earth; who, when they ſee they muſt long looke, and waite, and pray, and pay, and ſeeke the face and fauour of great men, and cannot finde; may then remember, yet they haue a God, who will not ſhut the doore vpon them, will not turne away, will not keepe ſecret, will not feare them away with a rough anſwer, or a ſower looke, but hath this honourable and princely grace, He will be found of them that ſeeke him.

Secondly, hee rewardeth them that ſeeke him, by beſtowing his loue and fauour on them: not onely he, but his fauour ſhall be found of all that ſeeke him. It is Gods fauour that Gods children ſeeke, and his fauour they ſhall be ſure to finde. This is no ſmall reward vnto them: for in this world a man thinkes he hath enough if he haue the Princes fauour: and therefore it was the common phraſe in old time, Let mee finde grace or fauour in the eyes of my Lord the King. So ſpeake Gods children vnto the Lord. It is not wealth, nor honours we ſeeke for at Gods hand; but let vs finde fauour in the eyes of the Lord our God: and ſo they doe, what euer they finde in this world.

Thirdly, he rewardeth them not with his naked fauour, but with the moſt gracious teſtimonies thereof that can be: which are two: Forgiueneſſe of their ſinnes; and eternall life and glorie with himſelfe. This is all a Prince can doe to his ſubiect, who hath offended him; To forgiue him the fault, and remit the puniſhment: and to aduance him to honour. This doth the Lord to all that ſeeke him: he forgiues them the debt they owe him, whereby life, and ſoule, and all was forfaited to him, and giues them alſo life euerlaſting: So plentifull a reward is giuen them from that God, vnder whoſe wings they are come to truſt.

Fourthly, hee rewardeth them with the beginnings of heauen and happineſſe euen in this world; A good conſcience, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt: the comfort whereof is more, euen in the bittereſt affliction, then all the pleaſures and contentments in the world.

Laſtly, with the appurtenances of heauen, and of eternall life: namely, the good bleſſings of this life, a competent portion whereof God giueth his children in this world, as tokens of his fauour, and as rewards of their ſeruice, and ſeeking him.

Now as this place doth ayme at all theſe rewards; ſo principally and directly the holy Ghoſt meaneth eternall life: as though hee had ſaid: Hee that commeth to God, muſt ſteadfaſtly beleeue that God is able, and moſt willing to reward all that come to him with a better reward then this world can yeeld, euen with eternall life and glorie for his ſonnes ſake.

But then will ſome obiect: God rewardeth vs, therefore we merit; therefore good workes deſerue.

I anſwer, this place indeede is groſly abuſed by the Papiſts for that purpoſe; but we are to know, the truth is farre otherwiſe; for God rewardeth men for two cauſes: Firſt, for his promiſe ſake, and that is for his owne ſake, for it was his owne goodneſſe that made him promiſe, and no former debt hee owed to man. Againe, he rewardeth our good workes, not for our merits (for they are nothing, but of death and curſes) but for Chriſt and his merits: for their worthineſſe, are our good workes rewarded. So then here are two cauſes of Gods rewarding, and yet mans merit are neither of both: and ſo the argument is nought, That God rewardeth, therefore wee merit; for God doth it for other cauſes. Thus theſe ſpiders gather poiſon out of this flower, but let vs ſucke the honey: for this notable ſentence hath excellent vſe.

Firſt, if God be a rewarder of them that ſeeke him, then not of them that ſeeke him not. Who ſeeke not God? wicked and vngodly men, ſeeke him not, but rather ſeeke to auoide him, and his ſeruice: this ſentence therefore is heauie againſt them. For, when they heare it, their conſcience anſwereth, But we ſeeke not God: Therefore we can looke for no reward from him. Doſt thou ſeeke the world? then muſt the world be thy rewarder: Doeſt thou ſeeke to pleaſe thy ſelfe? then muſt thou reward thy ſelfe. And if thou wilt pleaſe the deuill by liuing in ſinne, then muſt he be thy paimaſter: alas! pitifull and fearefull will theſe rewards be.

A Againe, if God reward none but them that ſeeke him: here appeares the reaſon why ſo many Papiſts die in our religion, and (with vs) cleaue to Chriſts merits alone, when they come to die; becauſe their conſcience then tels them, that by their pilgrimages, reliques, will-worſhips, and many more of their courſes (ordinarie in Poperie) they did neuer ſeeke God, but themſelues and their owne honour, gaine, and credit; and full well know they that there is no reward due for ſuch ſeruice: and therefore by their practiſe they make it a true ſaying, that It is good liuing a Papiſt, but dying a Proteſtant.

Secondly, if God be a rewarder of them that ſeeke him, then we ſee it is moſt true which B the Apoſtle ſaith; It is not in vaine to ſerue God, 1. Cor. 15.58. For God is a rewarder of them that ſeeke and ſerue him. Therefore the Atheiſt and profane men of the world (who ſay: It is in vain to ſerue God; and what profit is there that we haue kept his Commandements?) are here conuinced to be liers againſt the truth. Malach.3.14.

Then ſeeing it is ſo, let this admoniſh vs all to ſeeke and ſerue God, in all truth and ſinceritie, knowing we ſerue him who will reward it. Nothing more encourageth a man to ſerue his Lord and King, then to ſee that his paines are regarded, and his ſeruice rewarded; nor more diſcourageth a man thẽ the cõtrary. If therefore God did euer forget any that ſerued him, let vs beſtowe ſeruice elſewhere, and thinke him vnworthie to be ſought to: but if, contrariwiſe, he C neuer forgot, nor deceiued, nor diſappointed any that ſerued him; then is he moſt worthy to haue the ſeruice both of our ſoules and bodies. Dauid indeede once ſaid; In vain haue I cleanſed my heart, and waſhed my hands in innocencie. Psal.73.13, &c. But he was then in a ſtrong temptation, as himſelfe there confeſſeth: but afterwards when he went into the ſanctuarie of God, vers.17. and ſearched the truth of the matter, hee confeſſeth he was deceiued. And therefore as in the firſt verſe he had acknowledged, that God was good to Iſrael: vers.1. ſo in the laſt he concludeth, that it is good for him to drawe neere vnto God: vers.28. and ſo though the temptation was very vehement, yet as faith appeared in the beginning, ſo it had victory in D the ende, and teſtified, that God is good to all that ſeeke him. Another time alſo (for he was a man of many ſorrowes and temptations) beeing in ſome great diſtreſſe, his corruption ſo preuailed, that he ſaid All men are liers: Psal.116.11. Whatſoeuer Samuel, or God, or Nathan, and other Prophets haue told me of Gods loue, and mercie, and of the promiſes, and prouidence, and fatherly care; I ſee it is all falſe, and nothing ſo. Now ſurely if Dauid, or all the Kings in the world can prooue this, then God is not worthie to be ſought after: but great men thinke they may ſay any thing, eſpecially when they are mooued, as Dauid here was. But when Dauid entred into himſelfe, and conſidered the words he had ſo preſumptuouſly vttered; vpon better aduiſe he confeſſeth, and writes it vp for all poſterities to Gods glorie and his owne ſhame, that it was in paſſion, I ſaide in my feare (verſ 11.) all men are liers; This he ſaid in his haſt, or in his feare: but vpon aduiſe, in the next verſe, he (v.rſ.12.) confeſſeth Gods benefits were ſo many, and ſo great to him, as he cannot tell what to render to the Lord for them. And in another place he crieth out in admiration; O how great is thy goodneſſe which thou haſt laid vp for them that feare thee, and put their truſt in thee, euen before the (Pſal.31.19.) ſonnes of men.

We ſee then, that merciful promiſe of Chriſt is euer made good, Seeke and yee ſhall finde, Matth. 7.7. None euer ſought God, but found: We may ſeeke our owne pleaſures & liue looſely, and be deceiued, and heare that fearefull queſtion, What profit haue yee of theſe things? Rom. 6.21. What reward but ſhame & ſorrow? but if we ſeeke God aright, we neuer looſe our labour. Let vs therefore ſeeke God, let the hand of our hearts knocke at Gods mercie gate in Chriſt, and we ſhall not goe away without a reward. The prodigall child fled from his father, ſpent al, and loſt his fauour: but he no ſooner ſaid, I will returne and humble my ſelfe to my (Luk.15.) Father; but he found him, and wan his Fathers fauour againe. So, let vs but offer our ſelues to God (God vnderſtandeth our thoughts long before) (Pſal.139.2.) he will meete vs, and receiue vs, and giue vs a reward.

Thirdly, as God rewardeth them that ſeeke him, ſo all that ſeeke him: None miſſe him, all finde that ſeeke. Great ones haue not acceſſe, & the poore kept out; but all receiued as they come: no difference; but the more carefully any ſeeke, the more welcome are they. Here let Princes and great men learn their duties at God, by whoſe grace and permiſſion they are what they are.

Firſt, let them thinke it vnbeſeeming their greatneſſe, to let any ſerue them without a reward; and a ſtaine to their honour, not to let well deſeruing ſubiects finde their fauour. Let them not daunt their hearts by not regarding them and their paines: but let them encourage them to ſerue them, by looking at them, by good countenances, and good ſpeeches, and by rewarding euery one according to his worth. All great men ſhould eſteeme this, as one of the pearles of their Crownes, to haue it ſaid of them, Such a one is a rewarder of them that ſerue him.

Againe, let them learne to diſpenſe their fauour, according to reaſon, and not affection onely. God is indifferent and equall to all that ſeeke him, ſo let Princes be: for that is true honour and iuſtice to reward each one as he deſerues. And that he may finde the beſt, who doth beſt, this will make euery one ſtriue, who ſhould be firſt, and forwardeſt, in all ſeruiceable duties.

Further, this muſt teach them not to deſpiſe them that are vnder them in this world: for, howſoeuer the ſtate of this world requires that difference of perſons, elſe it cannot ſtand; it is nothing ſo with God, nor in the world to come. For there the ſubiect, the ſeruant, the poore man, may challenge his part in Gods fauour as well as the beſt: nay, whoſoeuer ſeeketh the moſt carefully, ſhall finde the beſt reward.

Moreouer, here is a comfort to the poore, and the meaner ſort of men, who are appointed by God to be vnderlings in this world; Seeke they fauour here and finde it not? work they here and doe their duties, and are not rewarded? Let them learne to ſeek God, who wil aſſuredly both regard what they do, and abundantly reward it.

Fourthly, ſeeing God is a rewarder of them that ſeeke him: here is a comfortable incouragement againſt two great impediments, which hinder many a man from ſeruing God.

First, to ſeeke God is but a matter of mockerie to profane men; for, let a man ſet his face to Ieruſalem, there are preſently Samaritanes, which for that cauſe will hate and mocke him; Let a man ſet his heart to ſeeke God, by hearing the word more carefully, praying to God, inſtructing his familie, or keeping the Sabbath more carefully then afore, and forthwith he is the laughing ſtocke, and the by-word to profane men: but loe, here is comfort; The God whom thou ſeekeſt will reward thee, and that ſo richly, that thou wilt thinke thy ſelfe wel recompenſed, both for thy ſeruice, and their mocks. In this world men care not who think or ſpeak euill of them, ſo the Prince like them: and ſhal it not encourage vs to ſeeke God, though the world mock vs? ſeeing ſo doing we pleaſe God, and ſo farre doe pleaſe him, as he will highly reward vs? Thoſe therefore, that fall from religion for thoſe mockers, it appeares they ſeeke not to pleaſe God, but men.

Secondly, for a man that is a Magiſtrate or a Miniſter, to doe his dutie carefully, is the high way to vndergoe a burthen of contempt and hatred. Inſomuch as many good men are afraid to be either Magiſtrates or Miniſters: for firſt, wicked men muſt needes hate them, becauſe the one is to rebuke, and the other to puniſh their faults. And againe, euen good men are too reſpectles of them that are in theſe places, and for the moſt part neither yeeld them that reuerence, nor reward, that is due vnto them; but oftentimes a man for all his paines and care taken for church or common wealth, is recompenced with hatred, enuy, grudges, euil words, and ſlanderous reports. In this caſe, the comfort is this, that though a man be in the world neither regarded, nor rewarded, as his deſert is, yet the Lord ſeeth what he doth, and is a plentifull rewarder of all that ſeeke and ſerue him: and therefore eſpecially of them, who not onely themſelues ſerue him in his cheife places of ſeruice, but alſo doe winne many other to ſeek and ſerue God.

Fiftly, if God be a rewarder of them that ſeeke

A him, then doubtleſſe he is a reuenger of them that hate him: for he, that can mightily reward his followers, can alſo mightily be reuenged of his enemies. Theſe two are the two parts of a Kings power, To be able highly to aduance his friends, and mightily to puniſh his enemies. Therefore principally this belongs to the King of Kings. This ſentence therefore is a thunder-bolt of a moſt fearefull threatning againſt all impenitent ſinners; aſſuring them, that if they perſiſt to profan gods holy name by their careleſſe ſinning againſt him, they ſhall be ſure to finde and feele him a powrefull reuenger of them that hate him. Thus hee promiſeth himſelfe, Deut. 32.40.41.42, I lift vp my hand to heauen, and I ſay, I liue for euer. If I whet my glittering ſword, and my hand take hold on iudgement, B I will execute vengeance on my enemies, & reward them that hate mee. Where note alſo how the ſame phraſe is vſed: for here the Apoſtle ſaith, God is a rewarder of them that ſeeke him: So in Deuter. A rewarder of them that hate him. If any obiect how theſe two can ſtand together; for, a man had as good hate him, as ſeeke him, if the ſame reward belongs to both: I anſwer; A reward, but not the ſame belongs vnto them. Theeues and murtherers are iuſtly rewarded, when they die for their facts: and the King rewards a good ſeruant, when hee aduanceth him to honour. They that ſeeke God, are rewarded with mercies and fauors aboue their deſert: they that hate God, are rewarded with vengeance & torments, according to their de- C ſert: and this ſhall all wicked men, and enemies of God, be as ſure to finde, as euer any that ſought God, obtained mercie.

But wordly men will ſay, we hate not God, we are no Iewes nor Turkes, we are chriſtened, and come to the Church, according to the law, as good ſubiects ſhould doe. I anſwer, neither doe Turkes nor Iewes hate God, if this be all: for, they denie not the Godhead, but acknowledge it, and are circumciſed, and liue more ſtrictly in their deuotions thẽ moſt Chriſtians. Here is therefore more required, or elſe we ſhall make them alſo good freinds with God: But a man may hate God, and be neither Turke nor Iew; hee may acknowledge Chriſt and the Trinitie, and yet hate God. For, as Chriſt ſaith, D He that is not with me, is againſt mee, and he that gathereth not with me, ſcattereth: So is it here; He that ſeeketh not, ſerueth not, and loueth not God, hateth God: for there is no man can know God, but muſt needes either for his mercies loue him, or elſe hate him for his iuſtice againſt ſinne and ſinners. Againe, Chriſt bids vs, If you loue me keepe my commandements. If then to keepe Gods commandements be a ſigne of one that loues God, it is a ſigne that one loues not God, when he hath no care to keepe them. By which two places, it appeares, that whoſoeuer makes not conſcience of ſinne, is Gods enemie, and that God ſo reputes him: therefore let this feare euery man from liuing careleſly in his ſinne, and driue him to true repentance: for elſe let him aſſure himſelfe, God is not ſo plentifull a rewarder of them that ſeeke him, but he is as powerfull a reuenger vpon thoſe that hate him.

Laſtly; If God bee a rewarder of them that ſeeke him, we learne the great difference betwixt Gods ſeruice and the deuills. The deuills ſeruants are fed with faire words, but get nothing, the deuill is able to giue them nothing: but Gods ſeruants (as we ſee here) are plentifully rewarded. God is a rewarder of them that ſeek him: but the deuil is a deceiuer of them that ſerue him. But will ſome ſay, There is none ſo madde to be the deuills ſeruants. I anſwer: He that doth any mans worke, is either his ſeruant or his ſlaue: but euery ſinfull wicked man doth the deuills worke: for ſinne is the deuils worke; therefore all impenitent ſinners are the deuills ſeruants. It is Chriſts argument to the Iewes: You are of your father the Deuill, for the workes of your father you will doe: murthers and lies are his workes, you liue in theſe ſinnes, and doe theſe workes; therefore you are his ſeruants.

Ioh.8.41.44.

Again, the holy Ghoſt teacheth vs, that whoſoeuer committeth ſinne (and liueth therein without repentance) the ſame is the ſeruant of ſinne. Now ſinne is but the bawde or broker to the deuill: they that are the ſeruants of ſinne, ſinne preferres them to the deuill, and ſo they become his ſeruants; therefore whoſoeuer is the ſeruant of ſinne, is by that meanes the ſlaue and ſeruant of the deuill alſo. Which if it bee true, it will fall out vpon the reckoning, that the deuill hath more ſeruants in the world then God hath: which is ſo much the more lamentable, in as much as he deludeth all his ſeruants, & is not able to reward them, nor to giue them any good thing.

Rom.6.16.

But ſome will ſay, this is nothing ſo: for contrariwiſe, who haue the honours, pleaſures, and wealth of this life, who haue hearts eaſe and the world at will, but ſuch men? I anſwer: True, it is commonly ſo: but haue they thoſe from Satan? No, not the leaſt of them all, but all from God: for euery man is Gods child by creation, and ſome by grace, to euery one of his children he ordaines and giues a portion: but to his children by grace a double portion, both here, and in heauen. The wicked men, they will not feare nor ſerue him; therefore they haue no part nor portion in heauen, but here they haue it: So ſaith Dauid; there are ſome men, which are men of this world, and haue their portion in this life: theſe mens bellies God filleth with his hidden treaſures, they and their children haue enough, and leaue the reſt for their children after them. Where it is manifeſt, that wicked men haue their parts and portions of Gods bleſſings in this world, and that all their wealth and pleaſures are graunted them by and from God, as their portion; reſeruing the principall part of the portion of his children for a better life. Therefore all the good things of this life, which Diues receiued, and all wicked men doe receiue in this life, are not any rewards of Satan, but gifts of God; ſo vnworthy a maſter is the deuill to ſerue. Indeede he will promiſe his poore ſlaues any thing, but can performe nothing, but will lie vnto them and deceiue them. He told Chriſt confidently, when he let him ſee the glorie and greatneſſe of this world, All this is mine, and I giue it to whome I will: but he was a lier from the beginning, and ſo he is here. He lied to the firſt Adam, and no maruell, that he dare auouch ſo fond and loude a lie in the preſence of the ſecond Adam, Ieſus Chriſt. He promiſed the firſt Adam, to make him God, and here the ſecond Adam to make him King and Lord of all the world, and the glorie of it: but he performed both alike, he deceiued the firſt, and ſo had the ſecond alſo, if he had truſted him. Nor did euer any truſt him, but he deceiued him (I meane euen for the baſe things of this life): witneſſe elſe all his witches (his moſt deuoted and profeſſed ſeruants of all other) if euer he made any one of them wealthie: all ages are not able to ſhew one. Whereas, on the other ſide, there was neuer man that ſerued God, but had a competent meaſure of comforts for this life (and ſome, abundance) & yet all that, is but the firſt fruits and beginnings of that reward, which is laid vp for them in another world. Which beeing true, is it not a ſtrange and lamentable caſe, to ſee men (for all this) debaſe themſelues to this baſe and ſlauiſh ſeruice of Satan, and to refuſe this high & honourable ſeruice of almighty God? A common ſeruant in this world hath more wit: he, if he can here of a better ſeruice, a Maſter who giues better wages, and who better preferres his ſeruants, will leaue his old maſter, and make meanes to get the other. And ſhall not we be as wiſe for both ſoule and bodie, as they for the bodie alone? Shall they leaue a man for a man, and ſhall not we leaue the deuill for God?

Luk.4.6,7.
Ioh 8.44.
Gen.3.4,5.

Let vs therefore abandon the baſe ſeruice of Satan, who neither can, nor will reward them that ſerue him; put away ſo ill a Maſter, who hath not ſo much as meate and drinke to giue vs (for we haue euen that from God: but of his owne, he hath nothing to giue vs, ſaue in this world ſorrow, and ſhame, and an ill conſcience; and in the world to come, the torments of hell with himſelfe:) And let vs all ſeeke the bleſſed ſeruice of God. If we know not how to attaine it, goe to Chriſt by hearty confeſſion of thy ſinnes, and earneſt prayer, and he will preferre thee to God his Father: for neuer was any denied, that with a good and true heart, offered himſelfe to Gods ſeruice. Then ſhall we feele and finde what a bleſſed thing it is to be Gods ſeruant: of whom, it was euer true, which the holy Ghoſt here ſaith, and is and euer ſhall be, that Hee is an honourable rewarder of them that ſeeke him.

And thus we haue (in ſome part) the mea-
A ning and vſe of this notable ſentence: wherein we haue ſtood the longer, because it is one of the moſt excellent principles of all Practical diuinitie.

Hen faith.

Now put all together, and we ſhall ſee how it prooues Henoch to bee taken away by faith; which is the firſt ground, and the maine matter of all this example, and of theſe two verſes.

God is a rewarder of all his children that ſeeke him by faith: therefore it is faith by which Gods children pleaſe God: and therefore holy Henoch who was taken up by God from earth to heauen, both pleaſed God by faith, and by faith was taken away.

And thus much for the commendation of B Henochs faith, and conſequently the examples of ſuch, as liued in the firſt world before the flood.

Now followeth the example of Noah, who liued in both worlds, both before and after the flood.

Noahs faith.

VERSE 7.

C By Faith, Noah beeing warned of God of the things which were as yet not ſeene, mooued with reuerence, prepared the Arke to the ſauing of his houſhold: through the which Arke he condemned the world, and was made heire of the righteouſneſſe which is by D faith.

IN this verſe is contained the third example, and the laſt in order of thoſe who liued afore the flood, in the firſt and old world; namely, of the renowned Patriarke Noah, the tenth from Adam.

3. Exampl of Noah.

Of whom and whoſe faith, great and glorious things are ſpoken in this verſe; & that in a high and excellent ſtile, full of maieſtie, and diuine eloquence.

Concerning Noahs faith, two points are laid down; firſt, the ground of his faith: ſecondly, the commendation of it.

The ground of his faith was a ſpeciall reuelation from God, in theſe words; Noah beeing warned of God. The things reuealed, whereof God warned him, are laid downe two wayes: firſt, generally, to be things as yet not ſeene; then particularly three in number.

1. Gods Iudgement vpon the ſinfull world, that hee was purpoſed to deſtroy it by water.

2. Gods mercie on Noah, that he would ſaue him, and his family.

3. That he would ſaue him by an Arke, and therefore he muſt make one: and theſe be the things whereof Noah was warned of God.

His faith is commended by three worthy effects or operations in him. 1. It mooued in him reuerence, or a reuerent regard of the warning ſent him from God. 2. It made him prepare the Arke: of which Arke there are ſet downe two ends; 1. It ſaued his houſhold. 2. It condemned the world. 3. It made him heire of the righteouſneſſe, which is by faith.

This, I take it, is the true reſolution of theſe words: & they containe many excellent things concerning his faith.

By faith Noah beeing warned of God, of the things which were as yet not ſeene;

By faith, that is, by a generall and hiſtoricall Faith, and alſo by a true and ſauing faith in the Meſſias to come, Noah beeing warned of God of the iuſt Iudgement hee purpoſed to bring vpon the world, by an vniuerſall flood; and of his mercifull prouidence, to him and his family, that hee would ſaue them by an Arke (all which things were then to come, and therefore vnſeene) he beleeued theſe forewarnings of God: and therefore, in reuerence to this meſſage from God, hee prepared the Arke, and thereby ſaued his houſhold, and condemned the wicked world. And ſo his faith, by all theſe appearing to be a true & liuely faith; did make him a iuſt and righteous man in Gods ſight. This is the ſumme and ſubſtance of Noahs example: let vs ſpeake of the ſeuerall parts in order.

The firſt point is, the ground of his faith, a warning or an anſwer from God. For, he beeing a righteous man in that wicked age; wherein all the world weltred in wickedneſſe, and walking before God in great holineſſe; when no man cared for religion, he had this ſpeciall fauour from God, that when hee purpoſed to deſtroy the world for their ſinne, he firſt of all reuealed to righteous Noah that purpoſe of his. So that theſe words haue reference to the reuelation which Noah had from God, in the 6. of Geneſis. For, this meſſage came not from God by any Prophet (for we know none in thoſe euill dayes, except Noah himſelfe) but either by the miniſterie of an Angell, or elſe by immediate reuelation from God himſelfe; and this fauour he receiued from God, not for any cauſe in the world, but becauſe he was a holy and righteous man.

From hence, we may learne diuers excellent inſtructions.

A First, whereas God maketh choiſe of Noah, to reueale vnto him his counſell, and his iudgements to come; we learne that this is a prerogatiue which God beſtowed on ſuch as feare him, he reuealeth his counſels to them in a ſpeciall manner, whether they be purpoſes of Iudgements vpon his enemies, or of mercies vnto his Church. Thus dealt he with Abraham, Gen. 18. 19. Shall I (ſaith God) hide from Abraham the thing that I will doe? which thing was, the deſtruction of Sodome, and her ſiſters. And ſo when the Sodomites liued in wanton careleſneſſe; and put farre from them the euil day, then Abraham knew from God their deſtruction was at hand. And as in that, ſo it is generally true in all his great workes: that the B Lord God will doe nothing, but hee reuealeth his ſecrets to his ſeruants the Prophets, Amos 3. 7. Now this is not a prerogatiue of Prophets alone, or of ſuch as were extraordinarie men as Abraham was: but the ſecrets of the Lord are amongeſt ſuch as feare him, Pſalm. 25. 14. All that feare the holy name of God, are Gods freinds, and of his counſaile: and therefore not Abraham onely is called the freind of God, Iames 2. 23. But of all true beleeuers, ſaith Chriſt, Iohn 15. 14. 15. You are my freinds, If you doe what I commaunde you: henceforth I call you not ſeruants, but freinds; for the ſeruant knoweth not what his Maſter doth; but all
C things that I haue heard of my Father, haue I made knowne vnto you: As if he had ſaid, I will communicate and impart my ſecrets vnto you, as one freind doth vnto another, as farre as ſhal be fit for you to know. And the Apoſtle ſaith, 1. Cor. 2. 15. A faithfull and a holy man diſcerneth into the deepe counſailes of God; which are reuealed vnto them, as much as concerneth their ſaluations, and ſometimes more; as here, vnto Noah, who was fore-warned of God, of things then not ſeene.

This prerogatiue of Gods children, is to be vnderſtood with ſome cautions.

Firſt, that this is more proper to Prophets, and holy Miniſters of God, then to ordinarie Chriſtians.

Secondly, that it was more ordinarie in the D old teſtament, then now in the dayes of the Goſpell. If any obiect, Then the ſtate of the church afore Chriſt, was better then it is now vnder Chriſt; I anſwer, not ſo; for firſt, we are recompenſed by hauing the Scriptures perfect, and compleate, which they had not: and by hauing the ſubſtance of their ſhadowes, and the performance of their promiſes: in which reſpects our ſtate is farre more excellent then theirs. And ſecondly, for this particular, I anſwer, they indeed had more ordinarie reuelation of matters perſonall and priuate, and not directly touching ſaluation: but of ſuch things as are generall, and doe neceſſarily concerne ſaluation; we in the time of the new Teſtament, haue more euident demonſtration, and more full reuelation, then they had afore Chriſt. For example, particular mercies to ſome faithfull men, or particular iudgements on Gods enemies, whether particular men or whole kingdomes, were after reuealed to godly men, in thoſe daies (as here to Noah:) but ſaluation by the Meſſias, & the manner how the Meſſias ſhould ſaue his Church, is more fully & plainly reuealed now, then in thoſe daies.

Out of which conſideration ariſeth the third caution; which is, that reuelations of Gods wil, to be expected now vnder the Goſpel, are ordinarily nothing elſe, but theſe; the true meaning of Scripture, & a diſcerning of true Scripture from forged, of true Sacraments from ſuppoſed, of true doctrine from falſe, of true Paſtors from falſe Prophets. Theſe and ſuch like, as farre forth as they are neceſſarie to ſaluation, all true and faithfull beleeuers (which out of an humble heart, by deuout prayer doe ſeeke it at Gods hand) are ſure to haue reuealed vnto them from God. But as for other purpoſes of God, of perſonall and particular matters, or what ſhall be his bleſſings, or what his iudgements to theſe and theſe men, families, cities, or kingdomes; or when, or how he will change ſtates, or tranſlate kingdomes; or by what extraordinarie meanes hee will haue his Goſpel propagated, or a declining Church or State vpholden; theſe we are not to expect, nor eaſily to beleeue any that ſhall ſay, ſuch things are reuealed vnto them. And yet we tie not the Lord in ſuch ſtrait bonds, but that he may ſometime extraordinarily reueale his purpoſe therein, to ſome his ſelected ſeruants: yet prouided, that this reuelation be examined and allowed of the Church. But as for ſuch things as concerne immediately the ſaluation of our ſoules, gods ſpirit doth moſt comfortably reueale them vnto vs, in our prayers, in his word, and in his Sacraments: of all which, it is moſt true, that the ſecrets of God are amongſt them that feare him.

The vſe of this doctrine is double; for inſtruction, and for exhortation. For our inſtruction, here we learn how to anſwer the church of Rome: they aske vs, how doe we know true religion from erroneous; or true Scripture, or Sacraments from forged? We anſwer, firſt, by it ſelfe, by ſight and ſenſe of the excellencie thereof; as we know gold from braſſe, or ſiluer from lead. But what if the braſſe or tinne be guilded ouer? I anſwer ſecondly, we can know gold from braſſe, and ſiluer from tinne by the ſound and ſmell, and hardneſſe to endure, and by the operation: ſo there is a ſpirituall ſound of the Scriptures in the eares of a Chriſtian, a ſpirituall comfort and taſte in true religion, a ſpirituall operation (in holy mens hearts) of the true Sacraments. But what if falſe Prophets come in ſheepes clothing, and by lying wonders, ſo ſeeme to giue the ſame ſound, taſte, ſmell, vertue, and operation vnto their forgeries, or at leaſt challenge it, and ſay, that theirs is true? I anſwer laſtly, that we know true Religion, true Scripture, true Sacraments, true Prophets, true Doctrines from falſe, by a holy and ſupernaturall reuelation from Gods ſpirit; which, by euident and powerfull demonſtration, aſſureth vs what is true, and what is falſe, for the ſubſtance of ſaluation. And this ſpirit is giuen to all, that in true humility doe ſeeke it, in holy praier, and in a holy & frequent vſe of Gods word and ſacraments; and to none els. And ſurely if the Papiſts were as well acquainted with the ſpirit of God, as they are with their owne forged reuelations, they would neuer denie it. By force of this teſtimonie a Chriſtian man knoweth, as aſſuredly as that God is God, that the Pope, as now he is, and as he exerciſeth his place and power, cannot be the true Vicar of Chriſt: and that Poperie, as it is now eſtabliſhed by the Counſell of Trent, and taught by the moſt learned of their ſide, cannot be the true religion, nor the ſafeſt way to heauen. And when queſtion is, what is the meaning of this place, there is one God and one Mediatour betwixt God and man, the man Chriſt Ieſus; if all the world ſhould ſay the contrarie, a Chriſtian man will know and beleeue there are no more mediatours to God but Chriſt: or of that place, that Chriſt was offered for our ſinnes once for all; that there is no ſacrifice can purchaſe vs pardon, but his: let Papiſts colour the matter by vnſound diſtinctions as much as they can: and the ſame might be ſhewed in diuers other points and places. And if any aske how this can be? I anſwer, Noah was warned of God of things not ſeene; So Gods children are warned and aſſured of God, of ſuch things as concerne their ſaluation, though they be things beyond ſenſe and reaſon, Gods ſecrets doe belong vnto them.

The vſe of exhortation is, that if God warne his children of his will, and reueale his ſecrets to them, this ſhould moue & excite vs to become truly and indeede Gods ſeruants: for we ſerue not a Lord that is ſtrange and auſtere vnto vs; that will not giue vs a good looke, or a faire word: nay, he is ſo farre from that, that he calls vs to his holy Counſel, and makes vs know his ſecrets, and communicates his owne ſelfe vnto vs by his bleſſed Spirit, and by that ſpirit reuealeth vnto vs many excellent myſteries of ſaluation, which the carnall and profane men of the world neuer dreame of.

In the ſecond place, let vs obſerue, that Noah being thus warned of God in this particular matter (as he hath beene formerly warned and taught of ſaluation by a Meſſias to come) beleeueth not onely the generall promiſe of ſaluation; but alſo this particular promiſe of his preſeruation and deliuerance. Out of which his practiſe we may learne two things.

Firſt, that faith is a ſupernaturall worke of God in thoſe that haue it. That it is a worke of God, it appeareth in that it alwaies acknowledgeth and beleeueth Gods word: that it is ſupernaturall, it appeareth in that it apprehendeth and beleeueth whatſoeuer Gods word deliuereth, be it neuer ſo incredible to reaſon or ſenſe. But how doth God worke this faith? By his word: for as God is the author & worker of faith, ſo God hath appointed a meanes whereby he workes it, and that is his Word; which word of God is the onely ordinarie outward meanes to worke faith. And that word of God is two waies to be conſidered: either as reuealed by God himſelfe (as to Noah here); or elſe, beeing written by God, is either preached by his Miniſters, or read by a mans ſelfe in want of preaching: and theſe are all one, and are all meanes ordained of God to worke faith; and that not onely to begin it where it is wanting, but to augment it where it is begun.

Which beeing ſo, it muſt teach vs all, not onely with ſpeciall care and reuerence to heare the word, by whomſoeuer it is preached; but alſo to heare it read; yea, to reade it our ſelues with all diligence. So doing, it will worke out, and make perfect in vs that holy faith, which will make vs bleſſed in our ſelues, and accepted of God, as it did Noah in this place.

Secondly, here we learne what is the whole Obiect of faith, or what is all that that faith beleeueth; namely, nothing but Gods word, and all and euery word of God. So that faith hath two obiects, differing not in nature, but in degree, principall, and inferiour. The principall obiect of true faith, is the promiſe of ſaluation by Chriſt. The inferiour obiect thereof, are all other particular promiſes, of ſafety, deliuerance, prouidence; helpe, aſſiſtance, comfort, or what other benefit ſoeuer is made either to the whole Church, and ſo incluſiuely to any particular man; or which are perſonally made vnto him. For, ſauing faith beleeueth not only the grand promiſe of ſaluation, but all other promiſes either of ſpirituall or corporall bleſſings, which are ſubordinate to the great Promiſe, and doe depend of it, and are therefore apprehended by the ſame faith. So, Noah here had alreadie apprehended the maine Promiſe of ſaluatiō by the Meſſiah, and had laid it in his heart: and afterward when this particular promiſe of his deliuerance was made, by the ſame faith he laid hold on it alſo. And it is good reaſon that faith ſhould doe ſo: for if it apprehend the greater promiſe, then no maruell though it take hold of all other inferiour promiſes, which are but dependances vpon the principall.

By this that hath beene ſaide, it appeareth, that we are wrongfully charged by them, who ſay, we teach that ſauing faith beleeueth onely ſaluation by Chriſt, or apprehendeth onely the promiſe of ſaluation in Chriſt: for, we ſay and teach, It apprehendeth alſo other particular promiſes, & euen the promiſes of outward and temporall bleſſings; as appeareth in this example of Noah.

Laſtly, in that Noah a faithfull man is here warned of God of the dangers enſuing, that ſo he may auoid them; wee may learne the louing care that God hath ouer them, who haue a care to feare and ſerue him. Thus dealt hee with his children in all ages, for their comfort and preſeruation, to encourage all men to ſerue God in truth and vprightneſſe, as here Noah did: for, ſo doing, they may aſſure themſelues of Gods care and prouidence ouer them; euen then, when his wrath ſmokes againſt the ſinners of the world: and that furthermore in all exigents and extremities, hee will teach them, either from his word, or by the counſell of ſome others of his children, or elſe by his owne ſecret inſpiration, what they are to doe, and what courſe to take, for their ſafetie and deliuerance.

How often ſhall a Chriſtian man finde in the courſe of his life, that God put into his minde, to anſwer thus or thus, or to foreſee this or that; by which his ſo doing, he eſcaped ſome great danger: ſo that (though not in the ſame manner as Noah was) all faithfull men doe daiely finde, that they are warned by God of ſuch things as doe concerne them.

But what were thoſe things whereof Noah was warned from God? The text ſaith: Of the things which were as yet not ſeene.

This hath not relation to the time, when the holy Ghoſt wrote theſe words, but when God gaue the warning to Noah; for then they were not ſeene, but were to come: for they were not performed for many yeares after, as ſhall appeare in the particulars.

Particularly they were theſe three: Firſt, the great and iuſt wrath, which God had conceiued againſt the ſinnefull world, for the vniuerſall corruption and generall ſinfulneſſe thereof. Noah was a Preacher of righteouſneſſe to that wicked age; and as S. Peter ſaith (1. Epiſtle 3.21.) The very ſpirit of Chriſt preached in him: but they contemned both him, and the ſpirit by which he ſpake; and made a mocke of him, and all his holy admonitions, and ſolaced themſelues in all their ſinnefull pleaſures, without feare or reſpect of God or man, pleaſing themſelues in their owne defiled wayes, & promiſing to themſelues, ſafety and ſecurity. But behold, this Noah, whom they eſteemed a baſe and contemptible man, vnworthy of their company; to him is reuealed, how ſhort their times, and that they muſt be cut off in the midſt of their iollity. Gods children, whome wicked men doe thinke and ſpeake of with great contempt, doe know full well the miſerable ſtate of ſuch men, and the fearefull dangers hanging ouer them, when the wicked men themſelues are farre frō thinking of any ſuch matter.

The ſecond thing, which God reuealed to Noah, was, that he would ſaue him & his family frō periſhing by the waters, which he would bring vpon the world. His faith was not in vaine: God rewarded it with a ſingular preſeruation. Thus dealt he alwaies with his children, deliuering Lot out of Sodome (Gen. 19.), Rahab out of Hierico: Ioſhua 6. 21. The Kenites from the Amalekits, 1. Sam. 15. and here Noah out of that generall deſtruction. And this God aforehand reueales vnto him, for his greater comfort and ſecuritie: that when ſignes and ſtrange tokens did foretell and ſhew, that ſtill the deſtruction was nearer and nearer; ſtill Noah might comfort himſelfe in the aſſurance of that mercifull promiſe which God had made him of his deliuerance, and of his family alſo for his ſake.

The third thing reuealed to him, was the meanes whereby he ſhould be ſaued from the vniuerſall flood; namely, by an Arke; which for his more aſſurance he is bid to make himſelfe; that ſo at euery ſtroke he gaue, he might remember this mercifull promiſe of his God vnto him. For as euery ſtroke in the making of the Arke, was a loud ſounding Sermon vnto that ſinfull generation, to call them to repentance: ſo was it alſo an aſſurance vnto Noah of his deliuerance. Of which Ark, and of Noahs obedience in making it, wee ſhall hereafter ſpeake at large. And thus much concerning the ground of Noahs faith, which was a warning or reuelation from God.

Now followeth a ſecond point, namely, the commendation of his faith, or a deſcription of the excellencie thereof, by diuers and ſingular effects.

Mooued with reuerence.

The firſt effect of his faith is, It mooued in him a reuerence, or a reuerent feare of that God that ſpake to him, and of his iuſtice towards ſinne & ſinners, and of his mercie towards him.

In this effect we are to conſider two points: 1. The ground of this reuerence. 2. The occaſions or motiues of it.

The ground whence this reuerence ſprang, was his true & ſauing faith; for the holy Ghoſt firſt tells vs of Noahs faith, and afterwards of this reuerent feare he had of God, and his great workes.

Where we learne, that whoſoeuer is endued with ſauing faith, is alſo touched with feare & reuerence at the conſideration of God, and his glorious workes, whether they be works of his power, his wiſdome, his mercie, or his iuſtice, or of all together.

For the firſt: Dauid could not ſee the works of Gods power in the creation, Pſalm. 8. But when hee looked vp and beheld the heauens, the workes of Gods hands, the moone and the ſtarres which he had ordained; he forthwith fell into a reuerence and admiration of Gods mercie to man, for whom and whoſe vſe he made them all.

For the ſecond, the ſame Dauid could not enter into conſideration of Gods wiſdome, in the admirable frame of mans bodie, Pſal. 139. 13. &c. but he preſently falls into a reuerence & admiration thereof in moſt excellent and paſsionate words: Thou poſſeſſeſt my reines, thou coueredſt mee in my mothers wombe: I will praiſe thee, for I am fearefully and wonderfully made: Meruailous are thy workes, and that my ſoule knoweth right well: My bones are not hid from thee, though I was made in a ſecret place, yet thy eyes did ſee my ſubſtance when I was without forme, and in thy booke were all my members written, which in continuance were faſhioned, though there were none of them before. How deere therefore are thy counſells to mee, O God! Thus we ſee how this holy King, cannot content himſelfe with any tearmes, to expreſſe his religious & reuerent conceite of Gods maieſty.

For the third, Gods mercifull workes to his Church and children, haue alwaies beene conſidered of by good men with great reuerence. And, What ſhall I giue vnto the Lord, ſaith Dauid, for all his benefits poured on mee? (Pſalm. 116. 12.)

But eſpecially, the Iudgements of God haue beene alwaies entertained of Gods children with much reuerence and admiration. Bleſſed Dauid ſaith, My fleſh trembleth for feare of thee, and I am afraid of thy Iudgements, Pſal. 119. 120. How would this noble King haue trembled and beene afraid, if he had beene a priuate man? And how glorious is God, and his workes of Iudgements, whereat euen Kings themſelues doe tremble? And the Prophet Habbacuk ſaith, that when hee but heard of Gods iudgements to come, his belly trembled, his lips ſhooke, rottenneſſe entred into his bones, Habba. 3. 16. And thus Noah here, hearing of Gods iuſt wrath againſt the ſinfull world, & of his purpoſe to ouerthrow all liuing fleſh by water, was mooued with great feare and reuerence at this mighty worke of God: and from the view of this his great and iuſt iudgement, his faith made him ariſe to a more earneſt conſideration of the maieſtie of God. By all which, it is more then apparant, that true faith (whereſoeuer it is) worketh a holy feare and reuerent eſtimation of God, and of his workes, and of God in and by his workes: whereby on the contrarie ſide, it followeth, that therefore to thinke baſely or ordinarily of God, to thinke ſcornefully of his works, or to denie his power and his hand, in the great works, either of mercy or iudgement done in the world, is an argument of a profane heart, & wāting true faith.

The vſe of this doctrine diſcouers the profaneneſſe, and the great want of faith that ordinarily is in the world. And that appeares by two euidences: the firſt, is to mens owne conſcience: the other, is to the viewe and ſight of all the world.

Firſt, men may ſee in themſelues a profane heart, and voide of faith, by this euidence. For, doth a man in his heart thinke baſely of God, his power, his iuſtice, or his mercies? Doth he either doubt of them? or, granting them, doth he thinke of them without feare and amazement? Then aſſuredly his heart is voide of true faith, and farre from the life and power of religion. For aſſuredly, where God is knowne and beleeued, there that mans heart (though he be a King) cannot once thinke of God, without a reuerence of his Maieſtie, and an admiration at his greatneſſe, and his owne baſeneſſe: therefore the want of this, argueth a want of true religion and true faith in mens hearts.

Secondly, this profaneneſſe diſcouers it ſelfe to the world, by want of reuerence to Gods workes. Let the Lord ſend vnſeaſonable weather, or famines, or plagues, or any ſtrange ſignes in heauen or in earth; forthwith they are but fooles that crie out, Behold the finger of God, the hand of God: No, this is nature, and is produced by naturall cauſes. Ill weather comes from the ſtarres: famines from ill weather, and mens couetouſneſſe: Plagues from famines, or from ill aires, or elſe by apparant infection from another place. But cannot nature and naturall means haue their place, vnleſſe they haue Gods place; God ouerthroweth not them; why ſhould they ouerthrowe God? Yet thus it is in the world, and thus God is robbed of his glory: and he is but a ſimple fellowe, which is mooued with reuerence at ſight of ſuch things, or begins to magnifie Gods power and iuſtice in the. This is too apparant to be denied, for, haue wee not now as great cauſes of feare as can be? Noah heard of water, and we heare that fire is to deſtroy the world: and yet where is he that is mooued with reuerence, as Noah was; and yet Noah could ſay, The flood ſhall not be, theſe 120. yeares: but who can ſay and prooue that this world ſhall not be deſtroyed by fire within theſe 120. yeares? And till the flood came, they had doubtleſſe many other plagues, which were fore-runners of the generall deſtruction; all which as they came, Mooued Noah vnto reuerence: and ſo wee, in this age, doe ſee the great workes of Gods Iudgements, vpon men, vpon families, vpon townes, vpon countries, and whole kingdomes, and we feele his heauie hand in many ſharpe ſtrokes; but who and where are they whoſe hearts feare God the more, and doe tremble in the conſideration of his Iudgements. Nay, alas, amongſt many it is but a matter of mockerie ſo to doe. This is not the fault of our religion, but the want of it: for if men truely knowe and beleeued in God, they could not thinke nor ſpeake of God, nor looke at his workes, but with feare and reuerence. For as our feare of God is, ſo is our faith: little feare of God, little faith: and no feare at all, no faith at all. Let therefore all men ſhewe their religion by their feare of God, and let euerie Chriſtian acknowledge God in his workes: England hath beene faulty herein in one point eſpecially. We haue had great plagues, which haue takē away many thouſands in ſhort time, wherein God hath ſhewed himſelfe mightie againſt our ſinnes: but Gods hand would not be ſeene nor acknowledged, but onely nature and naturall cauſes. But let England take heed, that God ſend not a plague ſo generall and ſo grieuous, that euen the moſt profane men, (euen the ſorcerers of Egypt if they were here) doe A acknowledge that it is the finger of God; and ſo giue God that due reuerence, which in his ordinarie viſitation hee hath not. Thus wee ſee the ground whence this reuerence in Noah ſprang; namely, his faith.

Now let vs ſee the occaſions or conſiderations in Noahs heart, that made him feare. The ground whereupon hee feared, was true faith; for elſe he had not beene capable of any feare or reuerence of God; but the occaſions which ſtirred vp this feare in him, were ſom things els.

Now if we looke to humane reaſons, Noah had no cauſe at all to feare as he did. For firſt, the Iudgement was farre off; 120. yeares after: and common reaſon ſaith, it is folly to feare any thing ſo far off; but it is time enough to feare, B when it is neere at hand. Againe, hee was one ſingle man, and the world was full of wiſe and mightie men: they all heard of it, yet none of them feared; therefore their example might preuaile with him, to keepe him from feare, and to make him ſecure and careleſſe with the reſt: for examples are ſtrong, eſpecially when they are ſo generall.

Thirdly, the ſtrangeneſſe of the Iudgement threatened, was ſuch, as might driue any man (in reaſon) from fearing it at all. For firſt, who would euer beleeue, that God would drowne all the world with water? ſuch a thing neuer had beene, and therefore, how could it be? And againe, If all ſhould be drowned, who would think that Noah ſhould eſcape, and none but he?

Theſe three conſiderations, beeing wayed C in the ballance of mans reaſon, would haue kept Noah from fearing, or beleeuing this word of God. But, behold the power of faith: it goeth beyond all humane reach, fixeth it ſelfe faſt on Gods word; and therefore he not onely beleeueth it, but hath furthermore his heart poſſeſſed with a great reuerence of Gods Maieſtie vpon this meſſage. And there were three motiues ſtirring him vp vnto this Reuerence.

Firſt, the conſideration of Gods ſtrange Iudgement vpon the ſinful world; to ſee that his wrath was ſo prouoked, that hee ſhould bring ſo vnwonted a plague: ſo ſtrange both for the nature of it; a flood of water to drowne men: whereas generally all men can auoide the D violence of that element; and for the meaſure of it, ſo great, as it ſhould drowne all the world, and deſtroy all men.

Now, that which this Iudgement of God wrought in Noah, the ſame effect ſhould Gods Iudgements worke in vs; namely, they ſhould mooue vs with reuerence. For, as Chriſt ſaith, Our dayes are like Noahs: As it was in the dayes of Noah, ſo ſhall the dayes bee before the comming of Chriſt, (Matthew. 24. 37.) Theſe daies are as wicked, men are as couetous, as cruell, as malitious, as voluptuous, and yet as ſecure, as they then were; as full of ſinne, and yet as dead in ſinne as they were then. Therefore Noah looked for a flood 120. yeares after: & who can tell whether our world ſhall laſt ſo long a time or no? at leſt we may ſafly ſay (whatſoeuer the world doth) there is no man liueth, but within far leſſe time then 120. yeares, is aſſured to be throwne to hell by a flood of Gods wrath at his death, vnles in the meane time he repent: and yet alas where is hee that is mooued with reuerence at conſideration hereof? The wicked man may eſcape the water of a flood: but he can not ſcape the fire of hel, he cānot eſcape death, he cannot eſcape the laſt Iudgement. Theſe are to come, yet they are ſure: why then doe not men feare as Noah did? hee feared 120. yeares afore it came. We can indeede tremble a little at a preſent Iudgement: as, when fire breakes out, when waters ouerflowe, when the plague deſtroyeth, or when famine conſumes: but to tremble at a Iudgement threatened, though it be a farre off, this is the worke of true faith. This was in Noah, and wrought in him a reuerence: and ſo would in vs, if it were in vs. When men crie fire, fire: we ſtirre, wee runne, we tremble; but God crieth in his word, the fire of hell, the fire of his wrath; and we care not, we ſtirre not, we leaue not our ſinne, wee are not mooued with reuerence, as Noah was: therefore it is more then manifeſt, that holy faith is wanting in the world, which Noah had.

The ſecond motiue, ſtirring vp this reuerēce in him, was the conſideratiō of Gods wonderfull mercie to him and his familie, in ſauing them. This mercy ſeemed ſo wonderful to him, both for that he knew it was vndeſerued (knowing himſelfe a ſinnefull man, and therefore not able to merit Gods fauour, and beeing priuie to himſelfe of his owne manifold imperfections) & alſo vnexpected, for he neuer thought to haue beene ſpared alone in an vniuerſall deſtruction: therefore he wondred with reuerence at ſo great a mercie. Thus Gods mercies doe not onely winne a mans heart to loue God, but euen to feare him with much reuerence: this Dauid prooueth (Pſalm. 130. 4.) There is mercie with thee, O Lord, that thou maieſt be feared: as though he had ſaid; thy great mercies to thy children, O Lord, doe make them conceiue a reuerent eſtimation of thee. This made Dauid crie out in a holy paſſion: How excellent are thy mercies, O Lord!

And as Gods children wonder at the excellencies of Gods mercies vnto them, ſo alſo at their owne baſeneſſe and vnworthineſſe. Thus doth holy Dauid, 2. Sam. 7. 18. (who as hee was a man of much faith, ſo was he full of excellent meditations, and reuerent ſpeeches of God, which are the true effects of faith) when God had ſet him in his kingdom, he ſaith, Who am I, O Lord, and what is my houſe, that thou haſt brought me hither? And 1. Chron. 29. 14. But who am I, ſaith he, and what is my people, that we ſhould offer thus vnto the Lord? And doubtleſſe euen ſo ſaid Noahs bleſſed ſoule often vnto the Lord, and to it ſelfe, Who am I, O Lord, and what is my family, that we ſhould be choſen out of ſo many thouſands, and be ſaued when all the A world periſheth?

Let vs apply this to our Church and State. If any Nation haue cauſe to ſay thus, it is England. God hath deliuered vs out of the thraldome of Spirituall Egypt, and led vs out; not by a Moſes, but firſt by a childe, then by a woman, and giuen vs his Goſpel, more fully, and freely, & quietly, then any kingdome ſo great in the world; and ſtill deliuereth vs from the curſed plots of the Pope, and tyranous inuaſions of the Spaniard, who thought to haue marked vs in the foreheads with the brand of infamie, and to haue done to vs as they haue done to other nations whome they haue conquered: but God from heauen fought for vs, & ouerthrew them B in their owne deuiſes; yea, the Lord put his hooke in his noſtrells, and his bridle in his lippes, and carried him backe againe with ſhame and reproach. We are vnworthie of ſuch a mercie, if our ſoules doe not often ſay vnto God: O Lord, what are we, and what is our people, that thou ſhouldeſt be ſo wonderfull in thy mercyes vnto vs.

And particularly this muſt teach euery Chriſtian to be a carefull obſeruer of the fauours and mercies that God vouchſafeth to his ſoule and bodie, to him or his: and the conſideration of them muſt make him daily be mooued with reuerence, and reuerent thoughts of Gods Maieſty; and ſtill as the Lord is more & more mercifull vnto him, to beare ſtill the more feare and reue- C rence vnto him for the ſame.

The laſt motiue of this Reuerence in Noah, was the conſideration of Gods power and wiſedome, both in the Iudgement, vpon the world, and in the mercie vpon him: for firſt, in the Iudgement it was wonderfull, that God would chooſe ſo weake an element as water to deſtroy and vanquiſh the huge Giants of thoſe dayes: but therein appeared firſt Gods power, that by ſo weake meanes can caſt downe his enemies; And againe, his wiſedome, that as an vniuerſall wickedneſſe had polluted the whole world; ſo a flood of water ſhould waſh the whole world. Secondly, the mercie was alſo wonderfull, that God ſhould chooſe to ſaue Noah by ſo ſtrange a meanes as an Arke, which ſhould ſwimme on D the waters. For Noah thought, if the Lord will ſaue me, he will either take me vp into heauen (as he did Henoch a litle before) or elſe make me builde a houſe vpon the top of the higheſt mountaine. But, the Lord will ſaue him by no ſuch meanes, but by an Arke: wherein appeared, firſt Gods power that would ſaue him by ſo weake a meanes, as might ſeeme rather to deſtroy him. For Noah muſt lie and ſwim in the middeſt of the waters, and yet be ſaued from the waters: and the Arke muſt ſaue him; which, in all reaſon, if the tempeſts had caſt it againſt the hard rockes & mountaines, or vpon the ſtrong Caſtles and houſes of the mighty giants, would haue beene broken in peices: and ſo it had, but that God himſelfe was the Maſter and Pilot in that voyage.

And ſecondly, Gods wiſedome ſhone clearely in this meanes; becauſe God would haue him ſaued not in ſuch ſort, as the world might not ſee it (as it would haue beene, if he had bin taken vp into heauen, or into the aire:) but would haue him ſaued in an Arke; that ſo all the wicked mē, as they were a dying in the water, or expecting death vpon the tops of the hills, might ſee him liue and be ſaued, to their more torment, and to their greater ſhame, who would not beleeue Gods word, as he did. For, as the wicked in hell are more tormented to ſee the godly in the ioyes of heauen: ſo doubtleſſe were the wicked of that age, to ſee Noah ſaued before their eyes. The view of this power and wiſedome of God herein, made Noah giue great reuerence to Gods Maieſtie.

And no leſſe ought it to worke in the hearts of all true hearted Engliſh men, and faithfull Chriſtians. For, did not the Lord reſtore and eſtabliſh the Goſpel to our nation, by a childe, and by a woman: and in her time when all other Princes were againſt her (contrarie to the rules of policie) and did not God in our late deliuerance, ouerthrowe our enemies, not ſo much by the power of man, as by his owne hand? Did not hee fight from heauen? Did not the ſtarres and the windes in their courſes fight againſt that Siſera of Spaine? Let vs therefore with bleſſed Noah ſtand amazed to ſee Gods mercies, and with reuerence and feare magnifie his great & glorious name.

And thus wee haue the three motiues that mooued in Noah this Reuerence of God: the conſideration firſt of his great Iudgement on the ſinnefull world: 2. Of his great mercie in ſauing him: 3. Of his admirable power and wiſdome, ſhewed both in the iudgement and in the mercie.

Hitherto of the firſt effect. It followeth;

Prepared the Arke.

The 2. effect of Noahs faith, whereby it is commended, is, that hee vpon a commandement receiued from God (as we heard before) doth make and build an Arke, wherein to ſaue himſelfe and his family. Concerning this Ark, much might be ſpoken out of the booke of Gen. but it is not to our purpoſe: which is no more in this Chapter, but to ſhew the obedience and practiſe of faith, and therein the excellencie of it. Now the point here to be ſpoken of, is not the matter, nor the meaſure, nor the proportion, nor the faſhion, nor the uſes of the Ark; all which in the 6. Chapter of Geneſis, are fully deſcribed: but the action and obedience of Noah in preparing it, as God bad him: whereof the holy Ghoſt (in Gen. 6. 22.) ſaith, Noah did according to all that God had commanded him, euen ſo did hee.

Now in this action of Noahs faith, diuerſe points of great moment are to bee conſidered.

Firſt, why did God bid Noah make an Arke 120. yeares before the flood, when hee might haue built it in three or foure yeares?

The anſwer is, God did ſo for diuerſe cauſes: ſome reſpecting the ſinnefull world, as that they might haue longer time, and more warnings to repent; euery ſtroke of the Arke, during theſe 120. yeares, beeing a loud Sermon of repentance vnto them. Againe, that they might be without excuſe, if they amended not: and laſtly, that their iniquities might be full, and their ſinnes ripe for vengeance. But of all theſe, we will not ſpeak, becauſe they cōcerne not Noah, of whoſe faith we are onely to ſpeake: let vs therefore touch onely thoſe cauſes which concerne Noah. And in regard of him, the Lord did thus, that he might trie his faith and patience, and exerciſe other graces of holineſſe in him. Thus God dealeth with his ſeruants alwaies: hee exerciſeth them many and ſtrange waies in this world. He led the Iſraelites in the deſerts of Arabia fortie yeares; whereas a man may trauell from Rameſes in Egypt, to any part of Canaan, in fortie daies: and this God did to humble them, and try them, & to know what was in their heart (Deut. 8. 2.)

God promiſed Abraham a ſonne, in whom all the nations of the earth ſhould be bleſſed (Gen. 12. 3.) But he performed it not of 30. yeares after (Gen. 21. 2.) He gaue Dauid the kingdome of Iſrael, and anointed him by Samuel, 1. Sam. 16. 13. But he attained it not of many yeares after; and in the meane time, was perſecuted and hunted by Saul, as a flea in a mans boſome: or as a Patridge in the mountaines, 1. Sam. 24. 15. and 26. 20. And thus God exerciſed him both in that and other his promiſes: as he ſaith, Pſal. 40. 1. In wayting I wayted on the Lord: and Pſal. 119. 82. Mine eyes faile for wayting for thy promiſe: O when wilt thou comfort me? Thus God dealt with them, and thus in ſome meaſure hee deales with all his children, to humble and to try them, and to know what is in their hearts; ſo that, in theſe caſes, men doe alwaies ſhew themſelues, and their diſpoſitions. When men enioye all things at their will and wiſh; who cannot make a faire profeſſion? but where men are long deferred, & kept from that is promiſed, and they expect, and are ſo long croſſed in their expectations, then they appeare in their owne colours.

And as God dealt with them, ſo wil he one way or other do with vs: if we be his ſeruāts, he will at ſome time of our life or other, lay ſome ſuch affliction vpon vs, as may trie vs, and our faith, and our patience, and our humilitie. For if we be hypocrites, and haue no true graces, but onely a ſhew; this will diſcouer it, and if we haue true and ſound faith, and patience, this wil make them ſhine like orient pearles in their true and perfect beauty.

Secondly, as God bad Noah build an Arke ſo long time before any neede of it; ſo he did, without denying or gaineſaying. So ſaith the ſtorie (in Geneſis) He did according to all that God commanded him. And thus the holy Ghoſt ſaith here, Hee beeing warned of God, by faith prepared the Arke: Where we learne, That where true faith is, there followeth true obedience to euery commandement of God: inſomuch as a godly beleeuing man no ſooner heareth any dutie to be commanded of God, but he thinkes his ſoule and conſcience is tied to obedience; and this is the nature of true faith. And it is as impoſſible to be otherwiſe, as it is for fire hauing fewell not to burne. Acts. 15.9. Faith purifieth the heart; namely, from careleſſe diſobedience to Gods word: for if from any corruption at all, then from it eſpecially, becauſe it is moſt contrarie to the pureneſſe of true faith.

This beeing ſo, ſheweth vs, not any fault in our religion (as the Papiſts ſlander vs) but the want of our religion, and the want of true faith in the world; for there is almoſt no obedience to Gods commandement. For firſt, Turkes and Iewes acknowledge not the Scriptures: and the Papiſts haue ſet aſide Gods commaundements to ſet vp their owne. And few Proteſtants haue the feeling of the power of true religion, and nothing indeede but a bare profeſſion; but it muſt be a feeling of the power of it, which produceth due obedience. And alas, we ſee men obey not Gods commandements. God ſaith, Sweare not by my name vainely: keepe my Sabbath. Where is there a man of many that feareth to breake theſe; Alas there are more mockers of ſuch as would keepe them, then carefull and conſcionable keepers of them. How truly ſaith Chriſt, When the ſonne of man commeth, ſhall hee finde faith on the earth? It is likely, therefore, theſe be the dayes, wherein we may wait for the comming of Chriſt; for the generall want of obedience, ſheweth the generall want of faith.

Commandements 3, 4.

But this obedience of Noah is better to bee conſidered of: for it was very excellent and extraordinarie; there beeing many hinderances that might haue ſtopped him in the courſe of his obedience, and haue perſwaded him neuer to haue gone about the making of the Arke.

As firſt, the great quantity of the Ark, amounting to many thouſand cubits; a worke of huge labour, and great charge.

Againe, the length of his labour, to laſt 120. yeares. It is a tedious thing, and troubleſome to mans nature, to be euer in doing, and neuer to haue done.

Thirdly, the building of it was a matter of much mockery to the world: for, it ſignifieth; 1. the deſtroying of the whole world; 2. the ſauing of him and his. Theſe things were taunted at by the worldly wiſe men of that ſinnfull age, and he was loudly laught at by many a man, to thinke all the world ſhould periſh; but much more, if all periſhed, to imagine, that he and his ſhould be deliuered.

Laſtly, the building of the Arke was a harſh thing to nature, and naturall reaſon, in many reſpects; for,

A First, that all the world ſhould be deſtroyed, ſeemed not poſſible to be, becauſe it neuer had beene.

Secondly, it ſeemed not likely that Gods mercy ſhould be ſo wholly ſwallowed vp of his iuſtice.

Thirdly, they muſt liue in the Arke, as in a cloſe priſon, without comfort of light or freſh aire, and amongſt beaſts of all ſorts, and that for a long time, he knew not how long. Now reaſon would tell him, he had better die with men, then liue with beaſts: and better die a free man and at libertie, then liue a priſoner; and better die with companie, then liue alone. And that if God had purpoſed to ſaue him, he could haue C vſed other meanes, and more eaſie, more direct, and more ſafe then this: that therefore his deliuerance was to be doubted of. And laſtly, reaſon would ſay: I may make my ſelfe a gazing and mocking ſtocke to the world for 120. yeares: and it may be then Gods purpoſe will be altred, and no flood will come: or if it come, I goe into the Arke, and it chance to breake againſt the mountaines, ſo that I periſh with the reſt, then am I worſt of all, who periſh notwithſtanding all my labour: therefore I had better let it alone, and take my venture with the reſt of the world.

Theſe doubtleſſe, and many ſuch naturall conſiderations came into his minde, and ſtood vp as ſo many impediments of his faith. But, C behold the power of true faith, in the heart of a holy man. It ouergoeth all doubts, it breaketh through all difficulties; to obey the will and word of God. Yea, it giues a man wings, with which to flie ouer all carnall obiections. Thus wee ſee it here in Noah, and afterward ſhall as cleerely ſee it in Abraham, and other holy men.

The vſe of this doctrine diſcouereth the weakeneſſe of many mens faith: for if the doctrin of the Goſpel go currāt with our natural affections, or ſeeme plauſible to our natures, we doe formally obey it: But if it croſſe our affections, or goe beyond our reaſon, or controll our naturall diſpoſitions, then we ſpurne againſt it, we call it into queſtion, we are offen-D ded at it, and denie our obedience. Here wants the faith of Noah, which carried him beyond the compaſſe of nature, and reach of reaſon, and made him beleeue and doe that which neither nature could allowe, nor reaſon like of, and which would be diſpleaſing to his naturall affections. Let vs therefore learne to practiſe true faith, by beleeuing forthwith what God ſhall ſay vnto vs, without asking aduiſe, or hearing the obiections of fleſh and blood. God threatned in times paſt the ouerthrow of the great Monarchies of the Aſſyrians, Chaldeans, Perſians, Grecians, Romanes: reaſon did make doubts how it could be, but faith beleeued it, and it is done. God in latter times threatned the fall of Abbies, and diſperſing of Monkes, for their wickedneſſe. It ſeemed impoſſible to reason: yet faith in some beleeued it, and it came to paſſe.

God now threatneth the ruine of Babylon, and the full reuelation of Antichriſt, and the ouerthrow of the new found Hierarchie of the Ieſuits, which glitter ſo in wordly glory, and in outward ſtrength: this ſeemes hard to bring to paſſe; but let faith beleeue it, for it is Gods word, and ſhall be fulfilled in his ſeaſon. God hath ſaid, that our bodies ſhall riſe againe, euen theſe bodies which are burned to aſhes, or eaten of beaſts, or fiſhes, or turned to duſt in the earth. This is a wonder to nature, an amazement to reaſon: but faith will beleeue it, and ſhall finde it true, for God hath ſaid it.

God ſaith, Chriſt is in the Sacrament truely and really preſent to the ſoule of a Chriſtian. Carnall ſenſes denie this, and naturall reaſon knoweth not how, but aſk with the Capernaits, How can he giue vs fleſh to eate? But faith beleeueth it, and knoweth how; though to outward ſenſe it cannot be expreſſed. And it was a holy and diuine ſpeech vſed by holy Martyrs; who beeing asked how Chriſt could be eaten in the Sacrament, and not with the teeth, anſwered; My ſoule knoweth how. God ſaith, Wicked men though they flouriſh neuer ſo, are miſerable; and good men are bleſſed aboue all other. Reaſon and worldly experience ſay this is falſe: but true faith beleeues it, and findes it true; for neuer did any child of God deſire to change his eſtate with the mightieſt or wealthieſt wicked man in the world. God ſaith, Hee that will followe Chriſt muſt denie himſelfe, and his owne deſires, and followe Chriſt in bitterneſſe and affliction. Nature ſaith, This is a hard leſſon: who can beare it? But faith beleeues it, yeelds to it, and endeauours the practiſe of it, becauſe God hath ſo commanded. Such is the power and excellencie of true faith.

Fourthly and laſtly, out of this action and obedience of Noah, marke a ſpeciall leſſon. God had reuealed to him, that he would ſaue him and his family, and aſſured him he ſhould not periſh. Yet for all this, he makes an Arke: whereupon it followeth, that Noah, though he knew God would ſaue him, yet was perſwaded he muſt vſe the meanes, or elſe ſhould not bee ſaued. Hee might haue ſaid to himſelfe, God hath ſaid, and bound himſelfe by couenant, he will ſaue me; now if I make not the Arke, yet his word is his word, and hee will ſtand to it: His will cannot be altred: though I be falſe, he will be true; though I do not that I ſhould do, yet he will doe what belongs to him: therefore I will ſpare my labour and coſt of making the Arke; eſpecially ſeeing it is a matter of ſo much mockerie, and ſo ridiculous to reaſon. But Noah is of an other minde: he will not ſeuer Gods word from his meanes; he dependeth on Gods word for his ſafetie, but not on his bare word without the meanes.

Whence we learne, that though a man bee certaine of his ſaluation, yet he is to vſe the A meanes of ſaluation; and that not onely, though he bee certaine in the certaintie of faith, but though he could be aſſured from God himſelfe by immediate reuelation. For if God ſhould ſay to a man by his name, thou ſhalt be ſaued; It is no more, then here was ſaid to Noah for his deliuerance. For to him ſaid God, I will deſtroy all fleſh: but with thee I will make my couenant, & thou ſhalt be deliuered: yet, for all that, Noah iudgeth, that if he vſe not the means, if he make not an Arke, he is to looke for no deliuerance: this was Noahs diuinitie.

Contrary both to the diuinitie and practiſe of ſome in this age: who ſay, If I ſhall be ſaued, I may liue as I liſt: and though I liue as I liſt, yet if in the ende I can ſay, Lord haue mercie on me, B I am ſafe enough. But Noah would not truſt his bodie on ſuch conditions, though they bee ſo preſumptuous as to truſt their ſoules. Let ſuch men be aſſured, God in his decree hath tied the ende and the meanes together. Let not therefore man ſeparate what God hath ioyned together: hee that doth, let him looke for no more ſaluation if he vſe not the means, then Noah would haue done for ſafetie, if he had made no Arke. And thus we ſee the ſecond effect of his faith. It followeth;

To the ſauing of his houſhold.

Now this ſecond effect of preparing, is further enlarged by a particular enumeration of the Ends or purpoſes, why the Arke was made; namely, both of Gods commandement, and his obedience in making it.

C 1. By it he ſaued his houſhold.
2. Hereby he condemned the world.

The firſt ende which both God had in commaunding, and Noah in making the Arke, was the ſauing of his houſhold: that is, himſelfe, and all that belonged to him; which were his wife, his three ſonnes, and their wiues, Gen. 7. 7.

But firſt of all it may ſeeme wonderfull, how this Arke ſhould ſaue him and his houſhold in this generall deſtruction. For it was a great & huge veſſell reſembling a ſhip: yet ſo farre vnlike, as it is rather called an Arke. It muſt flote aboue the water, It muſt bee laden with a heauie burthen; and yet without Ancher to ſtay her, without maſt to poiſe her, without ſterne D to guide and mooue her, without Maſter to gouerne her. For Noah was partly a husbandman, and partly a Preacher: and though he had much learning, yet the vſe of ſayling was not then found out: and therefore in all reaſon this Arke would be carried on hills and rockes, by the violence of the Tempeſts, and ſo ſlit in pieces. Yet, for all this, it ſaued him, euen when heauen and earth ſeemed to runne together (ſo vehement was the raine) euen then it ſaued him and his. How came this to paſſe? Euen becauſe Gods prouidence and his hand was with it. He was the Maſter, & the Steeres-man. For as God himſelfe ſhut the doore of the Arke vpon him, when he was in, and made it faſt after him that no water might enter? which was impoſſible for Noah himſelfe to haue done.) Gen. 7.16. So doubtleſſe the ſame God that had vouchſafed to be his Porter, was alſo his keeper and preſeruer, and the Maſter of the Arke during that voyage. And from hence came it to paſſe, that the Arke ſaued him, which otherwiſe in reaſon it could neuer haue done.

Here we learne, firſt, the ſpeciall and extraordinary preſence and prouidence of God ouer his children in great diſtreſſes and extremities. His prouidence is ouer all his workes, for hee forgets nothing that he hath made: but the ſpeciall eye of his prouidence watcheth ouer his childrē; as a Maſter of a familie hath an eie ouer his meaneſt ſeruants, yea ouer his verie cattell: but his care night and day is for his children. And as God ouerlooketh all his children alwaies: ſo principally his prouidence ſheweth it ſelfe, when they are in the deepeſt dangers, or in the greateſt want of naturall helps. When Daniel was caſt into the Lyons denne, God was there with him, and ſhut their mouthes, Dan. 6.22. When the three children were caſt into the fierie fornace, God was with them, and tooke away the naturall force from the fire: Dan. 3.27. When the Iſraelites were to paſſe through the ſea or elſe die (a hard ſhift) God was with thē and made the ſea giue place to his children, and ſtand like two wals on either ſide them, Exod. 14.22. When they were to wander through the wide wilderneſſe, through ſo many dangers & diſcomforts as Deſerts doe afford, Chriſt was with them, and waited vpon them with his continuall comfort and aſſiſtance, 1. Corin. 10.4. And ſo when Noah was to goe into the Arke, and (beeing in) muſt haue the dore ſhut, and cloſed vpon him; his caſe was pitifull. For, doe it himſelfe he could not; it both beeing ſo bigge, that Elephants and Camels muſt enter in at it: and though he could haue pulled it to; yet being within, hee could neuer haue ſufficiently cloſed it from the water: Nor would any other of that wicked world doe it for him: they did not owe him ſo much loue or ſeruice, but rather mockt him, and laught at him: as firſt, for making the Arke; ſo now for entring in, when he knew not how to haue it cloſed. How ſhold he doe? himſelfe could not, others would not, God himſelfe with his owne hand ſhutte it for him, And after, when he was in, and was in danger to be throwne vpon the rockes, and to be ſplit in peices on the hills, and no Anchor, no ſterne, no Pilot, no Maſter,; God himſelfe was with him, and was all in all vnto him. The eie of his loue, and the hand of his power was ouer him, and ſo the Arke ſaued him and his houſhold. Such is the prouidence of God ouer his, when they are in the deepeſt diſtreſſes, and moſt deſtitute of all worldly comforts.

The vſe of this doctrine miniſtreth comfort vnto Gods children: who as they are ſure of ſtrange calamities to fall vpon them; ſo are they ſure alſo of a ſpeciall care of God ouer them, euen in their greateſt extremities. And this may

A Gods children (who ſerue him in the true obediēce of faith) euen aſſure themſelues of, that the Lord doth neuer forget, nor forſake them in any of their troubles; but will bee euer readie with his mercifull hand, to defend them from dangers, to prouide for them in neceſſities, and to comfort them in diſtreſſes, when they know not in the world how to doe. Eliſha had an army of men ſent againſt him, to take him: How ſhould one man eſcape from a whole army? His man cried, Alas Maſter, what ſhall we doe? Hee anſwered his man, and bad him, feare not, there were more for him then againſt him; that is, more Angels (though they were vnſeene) for him, then there were men in the Armie againſt him. 2 King. 6.16. B And ſo when no man would ſhut the doore for Noah, there were Angels enough readie ſent from God to do it for him: and when all wicked men wiſhed he might periſh with the Ark he had made, and aſſured themſelues he would periſh, hauing no ſuch helps as ſhips require; then the holy Angels, or rather God himſelfe ſupplyed all ſuch wants vnto him; and ſo when themſelues periſhed, they ſawe him and his houſhold ſaued by that Arke. And no leſſe care hath God ouer his Church and children to this day. And though he worketh not viſible miracles for them, yet they feele and finde that he is oftentimes mighty & wonderful in preſeruing them, in prouiding for them, in aſſiſting them, and in comforting them, when elſe without that prouidence of his, they know they had miſcaried.

C Againe, whereas God himſelfe vouchſafeth in Noahs danger to be the Maſter and Pilot of this Arke, that ſo it may ſaue him and his houſhold; we learne the auncientie and dignitie of the trade of Mariners, Saylers, and Maſters of ſhips. The auncientie: For we ſee it is as olde as Noah, as old as this ſecond world, euen 4000. years old. The dignity is great; for God himſelfe was both the firſt author, and the firſt practiſer of it. The author and firſt deuiſer: For Noah made not this Arke of his owne head, but (as we heard before) he was warned of God to doe it. And he was the firſt practiſer; for God himſelfe performed all thoſe ſeruices vnto Noah in the Arke: elſe it had neuer ſaued him.

D This beeing ſo, It is the more griefe to ſee that worthie calling ſo abuſed, and debaſed as it is; the moſt of them that practiſe it beeing profane, vngodly and diſſolute men. Such men ſhould remember, God made the firſt ſhip, and God was the firſt Maſter, and the firſt Mariner, and firſt Pilot, the firſt gouernour of a ſhip: and they ſhould labour to be like him. This is one of thoſe fewe callings, which may ſay, God himſelfe was the firſt deuiſer and practiſer of it. Al callings cannot ſay ſo; why the ſhould they ſo farre forget whom they ſucceede? Indeede vpon the ſeas and in diſtreſſes, they will make ſome profeſſion of religion; but let them come a ſhore; what ſwearing, what whoring, what drunkenneſſe amongſt them? But let them bee afraid to be ſo profane, which hold the place, which once God himſelfe held: or els let them know they are vnworthie of ſo good a calling.

And thus we ſee the reaſon and the meanes how the Arke could ſaue him and his houſhold; namely, becauſe God did gouerne it.

In the next place, obſerue the end and vſe of the Arke. It was to ſaue this holy man and his houſhold. Learne here that Gods ſeruants in common calamities haue ſafetie. For, God himſelfe giueth them ſecuritie, and prouideth deliuerance. Thus was it euer. When God proceedeth in judgement againſt Hieruſalem, for the ſinnes thereof: he marketh the godly in their foreheads: namely, ſuch as mourne and crie for the abhominations which are done againſt God, Ezech. 9. 4.

When Sodome muſt be deſtroyed, righteous Lot and his family, muſt be drawne out; nay, the Angel can doe nothing till he be ſafe, Gen. 19. 16. 22. When the deſtroying Angel went ouer the land of Egypt, and deſtroyed the firſt borne in euerie houſe of the Egyptians (the Iſraelites dwelling amongſt them) he paſt ouer all the Iſraelites, whoſe doores were ſprinkled with the blood of the Paſchall Lambe, Exod. 12. 13: And euen ſo he whoſe heart and ſoule is ſprinkled with the blood of Ieſus Chriſt the lambe of God, no calamitie can doe him hurt; nay, when others are ſmitten he ſhall be deliuered.

The vſe of this doctrine is to our Church and State: We haue by Gods mercie long enioyed Peace and the Goſpell; and both, vnder a gracious gouernment; and with theſe many other bleſſings. Yet ſpeake truth, and the ſinnes of our times call for a flood, as in Noahs time; and ſure a flood of tribulation muſt come one way or other. For this was alwaies the ſtate of Gods Church; now peace, now perſecution. Peace abuſed, cauſeth troubles and calamities. Therefore as we haue ſo long had peace and eaſe; ſo aſſuredly looke for a flood: what it will bee or when, knoweth no man; onely he who will ſend it, the righteous and almighty God. How then ſhall we doe, when the flood of tribulation is vpon vs? There is no way but one. Beleeue in Chriſt Ieſus; ſettle thy heart in true faith: repent of thy ſinnes: get Gods fauour and forgiueneſſe: and then when the flood comes, Gods prouidence ſhall afford thee (one way or other) an Arke of ſafetie and deliuerance. Sprinkle thy ſoule now with Chriſts blood by faith and true repentance: and the deſtroying Angell of Gods wrath, ſhall paſſe ouer thee & thy houſhold.

Thirdly, obſerue the largeneſſe of Gods bountie. Not only Noah ſhall be ſaued, but with him his houſhold alſo. Why the Lord did ſo, there be diuers reaſons.

Firſt, for the Propagation and multiplication of the world after the flood. If any obiect, Noah and his wife might haue ſerued for that end: I anſwere, they were older; for hee was 600. yeares olde, when the flood came: and though hee liued 300. yeares after the flood (Gen. 9. 28.) Yet reade wee not of any children that he had. If any further obiect; The firſt world was begun, and multiplied by two alone, Adam and Eue, and no more; why then ſhould there be ſo many for the beginning of the ſecond world? I anſwere; God did ſo in the beginning, to ſhew that all mankind came of one blood, (Act. 17. 26.) and that in regard of bodie or birth, there is no difference originally betwixt man and man; which alſo was obſerued euen in the ſecond beginning. For though the world was multiplied by three brethren, Shem, Cham, and Iapheth: Yet thoſe three were not ſtrangers, but all ſonnes to one man Noah; ſo that as at firſt by Adam and Eue, ſo after from Noah and his wife came all men in the world. But in the beginning of the ſecond world, there muſt needes bee more lines then one: becauſe now the bleſſed ſeede was promiſed, whoſe line and kinred muſt needes bee kept diſtinct from all other, vntill his incarnation. Againe, there was more cauſe now why the world ſhould be ſpeedily repleniſhed then at the beginning. For, firſt the earth had ſome glorie and beautie left it after the firſt curſe; ſo that it was ſtill a moſt pleaſant and delightfull habitation to Adam and Eue. But now by the ſecond curſe in the flood, all her beautie was gone, ſhee and all her glory was ouerrunne, ſpoyled, and defaced: ſo that it had beene a miſerable habitation for Noah and his wife, if they had been without companie. Secondly, the earth being much defaced, and the vertue of it almoſt quite periſhed by the flood, had now more neede to bee recouered, by the hands and helpes of many mens labours. And to this purpoſe the Scripture ſaith, Gen. 9. 19. and 10. 32. that the earth was deuided amongſt the three ſonnes of Noah. And they liued not all together, but ouerſpread the earth. And leaſt the beaſts, which then were many, ſhould ouergrowe the world, therefore God would haue the world ſpeedily repleniſhed; and to that ende Noah and his wife had neuer a ſeruant in the Arke; but onely ſuch as ſhould haue children: to wit their three ſonnes & their wiues. And thus the multiplication of mankind is the firſt cauſe, why God ſaued Noahs children.

The ſecond cauſe: It is likely that as himſelfe was a righteous man, ſo they of his family were more orderly and religious, then others of that wicked Age; for good men make conſcience of teaching their familyes: as Abraham, Gen. 18. 18. And ſeeing Noah is commended for a iuſt and good man, doubtleſſe hee did carefully inſtruct his houſhold, and therefore it is to bee ſuppoſed, that all, or the moſt of them were holy and righteous perſons fearing God.

Thirdly, though all of them were not righteous, yet they were all of the family of righteous Noah: and therefore for his ſake they were ſaued; all beeing his children, or his childrens wiues. For, the righteous man procureth bleſſings not on himſelfe alone, but on all that belong vnto him, dwell with him, or are in his companie. At Abrahams requeſt, had there bin but tenne righteous men in Sodome, all had beene ſpared for their ſakes, (Gen. 18. 32.) When Ioſeph dwelt in Egypt, all Potiphars houſe, and all in it (though he were a heathen man) were bleſſed for Ioſephs ſake; Gen. 39. 5. When Lot was deliuered out of Sodomes deſtruction, the Angels asked him, Haſt thou any ſonne in lawe? that they might haue beene ſaued for his ſake, Gen. 19. 12. When Paul and 276. ſoules with him ſuffered ſhipwrack, and were all in preſent danger of drowning, God ſaued Paul, and for his ſake all the reſt; God gaue him the liues of all that were with him in the ſhip, Act. 27. 24. And ſo here Noahs children, and their wiues, are ſpared for Noahs ſake.

Let this encourage all men to ſerue God in truth and vprightnes; ſeeing thereby they ſhall not make themſelues alone bleſſed, but bring downe Gods bleſſing euen on their houſes, children, and poſterities: yea, the very places where, and the people with whom they dwell, ſhall fare the better for them. And thus we ſee the cauſes and reaſons, why not Noah alone, but euen his houſhould were alſo ſaued.

In the fourth place, let vs obſerue how the holy Ghoſt ſaith, that Noah built the Arke; not for the ſauing of himſelfe, but of his houſhold; and it is ſaid for two cauſes.

Firſt, to ſhew that Noah, though he were the head and gouernour, yet was but of the houſhold; for in the word houſhold, himſelfe is comprehended. Maſters and Fathers, though they be gouernours, yet muſt thinke themſelues members of the houſhold; ſo will they haue more care thereof, when they eſteeme themſelues members of the bodie, and parts of the whole.

Secondly, to teach vs what care Noah had for his family; euen ſo great, as he prepared the Arke to ſaue them withall. Here is an example of a worthie maſter of a houſhold; and yet all this was but for a temporall deliuerance. Now if he was ſo careful for their bodily ſafetie, how much more was he to ſaue them from hel and damnation, which he knewe to be an eternall deſtruction of both ſoule & bodie. Therefore doubtles as he was a diligent Preacher of righteouſnes, to that ſinnefull world: ſo principally a diligent Preacher, and Prayer, and Chatechiſer of his family; that ſo he might make them Gods ſeruants, and deliuer them from the eternall fire of hell.

Noahs example is to be a patterne to all Parents and Fathers of families, to teach them care not onely for the bodies, and bodily welfare of their families, but eſpecially for their ſoules and ſpirituall welfare. And if they be bound by all bonds of nature and religion, to prouide for the bodies of their children; let reaſon iudge, how much more ſtraightly they are tied to looke to their ſoules. But S. Paul ſaith, He that prouideth not temporall things neceſſarie for his family, is worſe then an Infidel, 1. Tim. 5. 8. Then what is he who prouideth nothing for their ſoules? Surely, his caſe is extreamely fearefull. Therefore when thou haſt prouided meat, apparell, a calling, and mariage, houſe and liuing for thy childe; thinke not thou haſt done, and ſo maiſt thou turne them off. The world may take them thus: But God will not take them ſo at thy hands. No, the greater dutie remaines behind; thou muſt prouide for their ſoules, that they may know God, and feare his name. Thou muſt with Abraham (Gen. 18. 19.) Teach thy family, that they may walke in the wayes of God. I knowe Abraham, ſaith God, that hee will doe it. And ſurely God will knowe all ſuch as doe ſo. By doing thus, men ſhall make their houſes Churches of God, as here Noahs was: and it would be farre better with our Church and State, if men did ſo: Miniſters in the Church, and Iuſtices in the Country ſhould haue much leſſe to doe, if Maſters of familyes would doe their duties.

But to go further; let vs ſee more particularly what this houſhold was, that was thus ſaued by the Arke.

Firſt, it was a familie of foure men and foure women; not men or women alone; but both, & conſiſting of as many women as men. Thus God would haue one ſexe to loue an other, and one to think themſelues beholden to the other: the beginning of the firſt world was by one man & one woman. Of the ſecond, by foure men, and foure women; but alwaies equall. And here alſo God would teach men not to contemne the other, though the weaker ſexe: for God ſaued as many of them from the vniuerſall flood, as hee did men.

Secondly, how many were they in all? but eight perſons. Of the whol world no more were ſaued. A miſerable ſpectacle. See what ſinne can do. It can bring many millions to eight perſons in a ſhort time. See what it is to offend God. Let vs not then glorie in our multitudes, but glorie in this that we knowe and ſerue God: for otherwiſe, if our ſinnes crie out to him againſt vs, he can eaſily make vs fewe enough.

Thirdly, what were theſe eight perſons? not one ſeruant amongſt them all; there were none but Noah and his wife, his three ſonnes and their wiues. It is meruailous, that here were none of Noahs ſeruants. Som think he had none and that the ſimplicitie of thoſe dayes required no attendance, but that each one was ſeruant to himſelfe. And they ſeeme to gather it out of Gen. 7. 1. where God biddeth Noah, Enter thou and all thine houſe into the Arke. And when they entred, they are recounted in the ſeuenth verſe, to be none but himſelfe, his wife, and his children, therefore ſay they, in Noahs houſe there were no ſeruants. But why might not Noah haue ſeruants, as well as Abraham and Lot had? doubtleſſe hee had. But, behold a wonderfull matter: Noahs owne ſeruants would not beleeue his preaching, but choſe rather to liue looſely with the world, and periſh with it, then to liue godly with their Maſter, and bee ſaued with him. This was and will be true in all Ages that in a wicked age, or in a wicked towne, a Maſter ſhall not be able to gouerne his owne ſeruants; but the ſtreame of common wickedneſſe, and ill examples of other men doth draw them from the obediēce of their Maſters. They can readily alleadge for themſelues, wee will not be vſed more hardly then other men are; we will not be tied to our houres, and bound to ſo many exerciſes, we will doe as others do. Thus would Noahs ſeruants doe, and periſhed with the world. So hard a thing is it for a good man to haue good ſeruants in ſuch times or places where wickednes raigneth.

And thus we haue ſeene in ſome ſort, How the Arke ſaued Noah and his houſhold, and what this houſhold of his was.

Now beſides this ende and vſe of the Arke, we are further to knowe; that whereas this ſauing of them was but a corporall deliuerance from a temporall death, this Arke hath alſo a ſpirituall vſe, which we may not omit: for as many of Noahs family as were true beleeuers, it was a meanes to ſaue them an other way, euen to ſaue their ſoules: for it taught them many things.

Firſt, it was an aſſurance of Gods loue vnto their ſoules: for if hee were ſo carefull to ſaue their bodies from the flood, they thereby aſſured themſelues, he would be as good vnto their ſoules, which they knewe to be farre more pretious and excellent.

Secondly, it ſhewed them how to be ſaued. For, as they ſawe no ſafetie, nothing but preſent death out of the Arke: So it taught them, that out of Gods Church, and out of Gods fauour, no ſaluation could be expected; & ſo it taught them to labour to be in Gods fauour, and members of his true Church.

Thirdly, they ſaw they were ſaued from the flood, by faith and obedience. For firſt, Noah beleeued Gods word, that the flood ſhould come; then he obeyed Gods commaundement, and made the Arke, as he was commanded. And thus he and his, by beleeuing & obeying, were ſaued through the Arke: and without theſe, the Arke could not haue ſaued them. This taught them more particularly how to be ſaued; namely, by beleeuing God, and obeying God, and elſe no ſaluation. For, when they ſaw their bodies could not be ſaued without them; it aſſured them much leſſe could their ſoules bee ſaued without faith and obedience.

Laſtly, this deliuerance by the Arke was a pawne vnto them from God, aſſuring them of ſaluation, if they beleeued in the Meſſias. For, ſeeing God ſo fully performed his promiſe vnto them for their bodily deliuerance vpon their beleeuing: they thereby might aſſure thēſelues, he would performe his promiſe of ſaluatiō vnto them, vpon their faith and true obedience. Moreouer, it ſtrengthened their faith. For, wheneuer after any promiſe of God was made vnto them, or any word of God came vnto them, they then remembred Gods mercie and faithfulneſſe vnto them in their deliuerance by the Arke: and therefore beleeued.

Vnto theſe and many other ſpiritual vſes, did the Arke ſerue vnto Noah, and to his houſhold, as many of them as were beleeuers.

But what is this to vs? Indeede, the Arke ſerued them for a temporall deliuerance; it ſaued their liues; therefore they alſo had reaſon to make ſpirituall vſe of it: But it ſaued not vs, it ſerued vs to no vſe corporall; therefore how can we make any ſpirituall vſe of it.

I anſwer; though we had no corporall vſe of the Arke, yet there ariſeth an excellent ſpirituall vſe out of the conſideration of it.

The Arke of Noah and our baptiſme, are figures correſpondent one to the other: that, that Noahs Arke was to them, Baptiſme is to vs. Thus teacheth S. Peter, 1.3.20.21. To the Arke of Noah the figure which nowe ſaueth vs, euen Baptiſme agreeth. The ſame that S. Paul here aſcribeth to the Arke, S. Peter aſcribeth to Baptiſme. The Arke ſaued them, Baptiſme ſaueth vs. Now the reſemblance betwixt theſe two figures, hath two branches.

Firſt, as it was neceſſary for them that ſhould bee ſaued in the flood, to bee in the Arke; and out of the Arke no poſſibilitie to eſcape: So is it for them that will haue their ſoules ſaued, to be in Chriſt, and of his Church; they muſt bee myſticall members of Chriſt, and viſible members of his Church: and out of Chriſt and his Church, no poſſibilitie of ſaluation. That this is true (for Chriſt) S. Peter prooueth apparantly, Acts. 4.12. Among men there is no name giuen vnder heauen, whereby to bee ſaued, but the name of Ieſus Chriſt; neither is there ſaluation in any other.

And that this is true, for the Church, hee prooueth, Acts, 2.47. The Lord added to the Church daily ſuch as ſhould bee ſaued. See how ſuch as are to be ſaued muſt ioyne thēſelues to the Church, when they ſee where it is: and all this is ſignified and taught in Baptiſme. For the outward vſe of Baptiſme makes vs members of the viſible Church, and the inward and powerfull vſe of Baptiſme makes vs members of Chriſt himſelfe.

The vſe and conſideration hereof, ſhould make vs all more carefull to be true members of Chriſt, and of his Church, by making not onely a bare profeſſion of religion; but by ſeeking to be incorporate into Chriſt by faith and true repentance: for this muſt ſaue vs when nothing can. As they that were out of the Arke, no gold nor ſiluer could buy out their ſafetie, no lands nor liuing, no houſes nor buildings, no hilles nor mountaines, nothing in the world, nor the whole world it ſelfe could ſaue them; but being out of the Arke they they all periſhed: So if a man be out of Chriſt, and out of his Church, no gold nor ſiluer, no honour nor glorie, no wit nor policie, no eſtimation nor authoritie, no friends nor fauour, no wiſedome nor learning, no hills of happineſſe, nor mountaines of gold cã ſaue his ſoule; but he muſt periſh in the flood of gods eternall wrath. For as it proued folly to them that truſted to their high houſes, or catcht hold on the hills, if they were out of the Arke: ſo will it prooue much greater folly to them that ſhall truſt to any meanes of ſaluation, if they be out of Chriſt. And contrariwiſe, as they that were in the Arke were ſure to be ſaued, doe the waters, winds, and weathers, ſtormes and tempeſts all they could; and ſo that ſtill, the more the waters roſe, the Arke roſe alſo, and was euer higher then they; & the higher it was carried by the violence of the waters, the ſafer it was from the danger of hils & rocks: and ſo in the middeſt of danger they were out of danger; and were ſaued in the midſt of the water: So he that is once truely in Chriſt, is ſure of ſaluation, nothing can hinder it; floods of calamities may aſſault him and humble him, but they hurt not his ſaluation; he is in the Arke, he is in Chriſt: nay the gates of hell ſhall not ouerthrowe him: but through all the waues of the deuils malice, & through all tempeſts of temptations, the bleſſed Arke of Chriſts loue and merits ſhall carrie him vp, and at laſt ſhall conuay him to ſaluation; this is the bleſſed aſſurance of all them that are truely baptized into Chriſt. But as for ſuch, as out of their prophaneſſe, either care not to bee in Chriſt, or contemne Baptiſme: let them aſſure themſelues, they be out of the Arke, and they periſh certenly. This is the firſt part of the reſemblance.

The ſecond is this: Noahs bodie going into the Arke, he ſeemed therein a dead man, going into a graue or tombe to be buried; for he was buried in the Arke, and the Arke in the waters, and he depriued of the freſh aire and gladſome light; yet by Gods appointment, it was the meanes to ſaue Noah, which, in all reaſon, ſeemed to be his graue; and if Noah will be ſaued he muſt goe into this graue. So they that will eſcape hell and damnation by Chriſt, the true Arke of holyneſſe, muſt be buried and mortified in their fleſh, and fleſhly luſts; and there is no way to come to life euerlaſting but this. For thy ſoule cannot liue, whilſt thy ſinnes, the old man, that is, thy corruptions doe liue; but they muſt die, and be buried, and thẽ thy ſoule liueth: and whilſt they liue, thy ſoule is dead, and farre from the life of grace, which is in Chriſt Ieſus. All this is affirmed at large, in Rom. 6. 2. 3. 4. where we may ſee apparantly, that we muſt by baptiſme die with Chriſt and be buried with him, elſe we cannot be ſaued by him: our corruptions, (our ſinnes) which are the olde man muſt die and be buried, that the new man, that is, the grace and holineſſe of Chriſt, may liue in vs and our ſoules by it: and he that thus dies not, neuer liues; and he that thus is not buried, ne-

A uer riſeth to true life. Thus mortification of ſinne is the way to heauen, and death the way of life eternall: and he that is not thus mortified in his corruption, let him neuer looke to be quickened to grace or glorie.

If this be ſo, we may then ſee what a miſerable world we now liue in, wherein mortification of ſinne is a thing vnknowne: not a man of many that can tell what it is: nay, grace is dead, and holineſſe is mortified, and I feare buried alſo: but the olde man raignes, Corruption liues, and ſinne flouriſheth. Mortifying of Chriſt by our ſinnes is common; but mortifying of ſinne is ſildome ſeene. For, Chriſt is betraied, crucified, and killed in a ſort by the ſinnes of men. What a fearefull change is this? Chriſt ſhould liue in
B vs, and wee endeauour to crucifie him againe: ſinne ſhould be crucified, but it liueth in vs. But if we will haue Chriſt to ſaue vs, then muſt we mortifie the bodie of our ſinne. For, he that will liue when he is dead, muſt die while hee is aliue. And he that will be ſaued by his baptiſme, muſt looke that baptiſme worke this effect in him, To make him die, and bee buried with Chriſt, that afterwards hee may riſe and raigne with Chriſt. And then ſhall Baptiſme ſaue vs, as the Arke ſaued faithfull Noah, and his houſhold. And thus much for the firſt end and vſe of the Arke: the ſecond followeth.

By the which he condemned the world.

Here is the ſecond end, why Noah prepared the Arke; To the condemnation of the world that then was. For, by it (not by his faith, as C ſome would reade it) he condemned that wicked generation, both to a temporall deſtruction of their bodies, and to an eternall Iudgement in hell.

In the words, there are two points to bee conſidered. 1. Who are condemned; The world. 2. Whereby? By Noahs Arke.

For the firſt, it may be asked, what is meant by the world? S. Peter anſwereth (2. Ep. 2. 5.) The world of the vngodly: that is, that generation of ſinnefull men, who liued in the dayes of Noah, whom alſo in the 1. Epiſt. 3. 20. he calleth diſobedient: and their more particular ſinns are diſcloſed and recorded by Moſes, Gen. 6. 4. 5. to be, monſtrous abuſe of holy marriage, D vnnaturall luſts, cruelties, and oppreſſions: an vtter neglect of Gods ſeruice, and Sabbath: and an extreame prophaneneſſe, and diſſolutenes in euerie kinde. And this corruption was not priuate or perſonall: but vniuerſall, thorough all eſtates, ſexes, and ages. This world of the vngodly, this whole race of wicked and diſobedient men were condemned: but how was that world condemned by Noah? Thus: God vouchſafed them 120 yeares to repent in, & appointed Noah to preach vnto thẽ, during that time, to cal them to repentance. But they beleeued not God, nor Noah, but continued in their diſobedience, & grew in their vngodlines: therfore when that time was expired, God performed his word ſpoken by Noah, brought the flood vpon them, deſtroied them all, and condemned in hell as many of them as died in impenitencie & vnbeleefe. And thus that wicked world was condemned, according as Noah in his Miniſterie had foretold them.

Here we may learne:

Firſt, what the world of this age is to looke for, vnleſſe there be repentance. For, to ſpeake but of our ſelues in this Nation; Haue not we had the Goſpel 30. yeares and more? and with peace, and much proſperitie? Haue not we had a goodly time giuen vs to repent? What is our dutie, but with reuerence to ſee and acknowledge this goodneſſe of God, to take hold of this mercifull opportunitie, this time of grace, and this day of ſaluation? If we doe not, and make no account of the Goſpel, what can we looke for, but to be condemned, as that world was? Looke at the meanes and opportunities, which theſe daies affoord; & they be as golden dayes, as euer were ſince Chriſt, or as euer can be expected, till his comming againe. But looke at the profaneneſſe, and carnalitie, and ſecuritie of this age (euen ouer all Chriſtendome) and this is the Iron age, theſe be the euill daies; and ſo euill that nothing can be expected, but a riuer of brimſtone, and a flood of fire to purge it.

The dayes of the comming of the ſonne of Man (which I take to be theſe dayes) ſhall bee like (ſaith Chriſt, Matth. 24. 37.) vnto the dayes of Noah; And ſurely in ſecuritie and profaneneſſe, they are like; and therefore in all reaſon they muſt be like in puniſhment. Wee muſt therefore take warning by them, and ſhake off this ſecuritie which poſſeſſeth all mens hearts, and waite for the Lord in watching and prayer, and thinke euery day may be the laſt day of this world; at leaſt, the laſt day of our liues: and let vs prepare for it, and liue in the expectation of it. Otherwiſe, if our ſinfulneſſe growe on a little further; nothing can we looke for, but to be condemned in an vniuerſall iudgement, as that world was. Let vs therefore betake our ſelues to a more ſerious ſeruing of God: that the Lord when he commeth, may find vs ſo doing.

Secondly, in that the whole world that then was, was thus deſtroyed and condemned, and (as we heard afore) onely Noah and his houſhold ſaued; we learne, that it is not good, nor ſafe to followe the multitude. Noah was here a man alone, he held and beleeued againſt all the world, and yet his iudgement and his beleefe was true, and all the worlds falſe: and (accordingly) he ſaued, when they were all condemned.

It is meruaile therefore the Church of Rome ſhould ſo much ſtand vpon numbers and multitudes, for the gracing of their religion: For, it euer was, and euer will be a weake argument. If multitudes might euer haue beene alleadged; then vnto Noah eſpecially, to whom it might haue beene ſaid, Who art thou that pretendeſt to be wiſer then all men? & to know more thẽ al the world? Thou that haſt a faith by

A thy ſelfe, and haſt no man to beare thee company; thinke not that all Adams poſteritie, all the children of holy Henoch, and Methuſalem are all deceiued, but thy ſelfe alone? Would not theſe & ſuch like obiections, haue diſcouraged any man? Yet behold the force of faith; Noah had Gods word for it, and therefore beleeueth againſt all the world, and is commended to all ages for this faith. It is therefore but a vaine flouriſh of the Papiſts, to preſſe vs ſo much with their multitudes, and vniuerſalitie, and conſent, and vnitie, and ſucceſſion, and continuance: for all this is worth nothing, as long as they firſt prooue not, that that doctrine or opinion which theſe multitudes hold, hath his ground
B from Gods word, till then, all the other is vanitie. For it is better with Noah, to haue Gods plaine word of his ſide, then to beleeue otherwiſe with all the world; which was here deceiued and condemned, when Noah alone beleeued Gods word, and was ſaued.
